THE AMERICAN FORESTRY PROBLEM

It is True that Trees Grow, but They Also Decay; is Net Result Increase or Decrease?

TREES grow, of course; but they also decay, and are destroyed by fires and felled by wind. Is the net result, over a long period of years, an increase or a decrease in forests as we know them today in the United States and Canada? In other words, if we should take no lumber for commercial and industrial purposes, would our forests grow in size and extent? Such growth has generally been assumed by writers on the subject, but Frank J. D. Barnjum, of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, asserts the contrary. Writing on "The Delusion of a Net Annual Growth in Our Forests," in the Boston Post, an article that has now been reprinted in pamphlet form, Mr. Barnjum says that, even aside from the woodcutter's ax, our forests are diminishing, instead of growing; that is, if we take into account a period long enough to smooth out minor irregularities in the record. Writes Mr. Barnjum:

"In considering this question of growth in our natural, or rather unnatural, forests, as they exist on this continent today, we have to figure not on some individual stand or township, where conditions may be abnormal or unusually favorable, but on a state or the country as a whole, and in cycles of one hundred years, as the average spruce-tree as harvested will run but little short of the century mark. I am perfectly willing to acknowledge that there is a growth to every living tree that has not passed maturity, has not blown down, or has not been killed by fire or some species of the hundred and one different bugs. I also admit that there is a combined net growth in some sections of a township and, in rare instances, in possibly a whole township. But to offset this growth, as there must be a debit as well as a credit side, we must charge off the wastage.

Tree Damage by Wind and Fire

"We will take the state of Maine, for one example, as it is the most important wood-producing section in the eastern United States. Now, if you will refer to the cruiser's map of almost any township, you will find a dotted path, in many instances running clear across the town, of varying widths up to a mile or more, marked with the significant and familiar words 'Blow-down' or 'Wind-fall,' which means that the timber in that designated section has been destroyed by wind.

"The next most familiar word is 'Burn,' and quite often there may be two or three or more sections of a township that have been burned, running in size all the way from fifty acres up to four thousand or five thousand, and, in some cases, half or three-quarters of the township, to even, in the case of the Miramichi fire which swept across Maine, a burned area of more than three million acres. I can think of at least one fire in Maine, which occurred about 1903, which burned one hundred thousand acres, while another fire, in 1909, in the same state, burned over forty-five thousand acres, and these are merely two examples.

"In addition to the large, well-defined areas of fire and wind destruction, there is a continual dropping by wind of a tree here and a tree there. This is going on all the time, and when you realize that it is only necessary to lose one tree per acre per year, varying in size from five inches to twelve inches in diameter, according to location and consequent rate of growth, to wipe out the entire growth by this one source of loss alone, and then when you add to this the heavy losses from the large wind-falls, fire, and bugs, you do not have to stretch the imagination very much to realize that not only is your growth increment wiped out, but also quite a little of your principal as well. For this reason, the thought uppermost in my mind is to try to arrive at a figure that will approximate what this net loss really is.

Spruce Budworm an Expensive Pest

"When I attempt to estimate the wastage caused by the spruce budworm, I am somewhat staggered. The most conservative figure I have heard for Maine is that 25 percent, with a high figure of 60 percent, of all the fir growth in the state has been killed, with considerable spruce destruction as well, and New Brunswick's loss runs up to 75 percent, and Quebec's up to 40 percent. And when we realize that this is at least the third attack within the past century that we have had by this one pest, we can form some slight idea of what the wastage from this source must be.

"In British Columbia, 665,000,000,000 feet of timber have been burned, and this amount very nearly equals the total stand of saw timber remaining in Canada today.

"In Maine, in the gale of 1883, a billion feet of soft wood were blown down, in addition to a very large amount of hardwood, in the two counties of Oxford and Franklin alone, and the loss in the whole state was incalculable. I know of one township, which I afterward bought, where one-third of the entire stand of timber was destroyed in this same gale.

"I have in mind a windfall in Wisconsin, between Prentice Junction and Ladysmith, that covers a strip five miles wide and fifty miles long, where the timber was laid as flat as if traversed by a steam-roller. All of this timber, the result of more than two hundred years' accretion, was destroyed in an hour. I cannot help thinking of an experience of my own in my earlier days, in this connection. I had been planting ten thousand trees per year for two or three years, when a fire came in on an adjoining lot and burned up more trees in two hours than I had planted in the three years, which discouraged any more planting by me at that time."

But the final and most convincing figures, Mr. Barnjum thinks, are contained in a report of the Society of American Foresters, which says that of all the total forest area in the United States (500,000,000 acres) one hundred million acres and more are so devastated as to be almost wholly non-productive: Over 250,000,000 acres have been cut and more or less damaged by fire, but are producing new timber in small amounts, and 150,000,000 acres are in standing timber where growth merely balances decay. On a large part of this area the virgin timber is of poor quality and very inaccessible. He continues:

"In Canada, the Canadian Forestry association states, one-half of the forested area has been burned over within the past hundred years. That this enormous wastage by fire is still with us is in evidence by the loss of 1,000,000,000 feet of timber in Montana and the 540,000 acres destroyed in Alberta, which are only two of the larger burns of last summer.

"Now, with all this wastage above enumerated, it does not take a forester or a woodsman, but any man of ordinary intelligence to figure out that there is not only no annual growth to be counted on in the country or a state as a whole, but that there must be quite a net annual loss in addition. We have been simply fooling ourselves with regard to this question of annual accretion. I was myself a victim of this delusion up to three years ago, when I found a very large area which we had made preparations to log had all been logged for us by the wind overnight. This so

AND REMINDER

Vol. XVIII | Manchester, Mass., Friday, June 4, 1920 | No. 23

SOCIETY NOTES

MR. AND MRS. EZRA C. FITCH expect to have with them for part of the summer at "Riverhouse," their residence on Norton's Point, Manchester, their son-in-law and daughter, Captain and Mrs. Frank Northen, O. B. E. (May Fitch), and their grandson, Charles Fitch Northen, who attends Eton college. Because of the war, Captain Northen has been unable to visit America for some years, so that his holiday this summer will be a most welcome one. Mr. and Mrs. Fitch's other son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Julian P. Fairchild (Helen Fitch) and children, from Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y., will also visit Manchester this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill are spending a few weeks at one of their cottages on Smith's Point, Manchester, though they do not intend to spend the summer here. Their son, John, who is now engaged in foreign commerce, came home Tuesday night for a stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Jeanes and family, of Philadelphia, are soon to arrive at Magnolia, where they will again occupy the James Lee cottage on Shore rd.

Mrs. J. Harrington Walker, of Detroit, Mich., whose late husband, so much beloved at Magnolia, passed away last winter, will spend the summer at "Rockledge," on Shore rd., Magnolia, as usual. Members of her family will spend the summer with her.

Mrs. George G. Snowden and family, of Rosemont, Pa., will not come to the North Shore this year. Last season they occupied the Carnegie place at Manchester Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Cutler (Rosalind Fish) and their two children, of 449 Park ave., New York, will spend the summer at their country estate, at Beaver Pond, Beverly, as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Blodgett and family, of Grand Rapids, Mich., will not have a house on the North Shore this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Eben Richards and family, of New York city, plan to come to their place at Pride's Crossing for July and August.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Sears, of "Warren Farm," Brookline, will not come to their estate at Pride's Crossing this season, but will spend the summer in Europe.

SOCIETY NOTES

COL. AND MRS. EDWARD M. HOUSE, of New York, who planned to spend a quiet summer at Manchester, where they had the Coolidge Farmhouse at Coolidge Point, have made a change in their plans the past week. They will not come to Manchester, having given up the house. F. C. Dumaine and family, of Concord, will probably occupy the house.

E. K. Arnold and family, of Boston, have arrived at their summer home, 38 Sea st., Manchester, this week.

Mrs. Thomas H. Howard (Rose Post), of Hyde Park, N. Y., who had a cottage at Magnolia last season, will return to the North Shore this year, but she will be at Pride's Crossing. Her daughter, Miss Elizabeth S. Howard, and son, Thomas H. Howard, Jr., will spend the summer with their mother.

Miss E. C. McVickar, of Providence, will spend the summer in Magnolia. Last year Miss McVickar had a cottage on Smith's Point, Manchester.

James McCullock Sturgis, son of Mrs. Russell Sturgis, who arrived at her summer home in Manchester this week, has just returned from war work in France.

Mrs. Charles D. Sias, of Bay State rd., Boston, will spend the summer at Beverly Cove, where she has leased the house owned by John Magee, of Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Frank A. Magee will spend the summer at 56 Lothrop st., Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert and family, of Boston, will open "Stoneledge," their summer home at Hospital Point, Beverly, next Thursday.

Miss Margaret Williams and Miss Betty Cole, of Dedham, were guests over Sunday of Rev. W. H. Dewart and family at Manchester Cove.

The annual meeting of the Essex County club at Manchester will be held at the club-house on Saturday, June 12, at 5.30 p. m.—"to elect officers for the year, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting."

The Manchester Yacht club opened last Saturday for the season—the floats being put in position off the club-house.

BROWNLAND COTTAGES, at Old Neck, Manchester, will open the 15th of this month. In addition to the list of guests announced a few weeks ago, a number of others have engaged apartments, thus completing the full quota for the summer. As usual, Brownlands will be filled to capacity all season.

Among the newcomers to Brownland cottages, Manchester, this season, will be Mrs. George Garr Henry and son, of Morristown, N. J. They will be here the entire season.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Newlin and three children, of Philadelphia, will spend the summer at Brownlands, this being their first season here.

From Chicago will come Mrs. R. H. Tames and two children. They are also newcomers to Manchester this season.

Mrs. James Howe, of Philadelphia, sister of Mrs. George D. Howe, of Smith's Point, Manchester, and Boston, will spend August at Brownlands.

Mrs. Percy Chase and daughter, from Boston, will be all-season guests at Brownlands.

Miss Gertrude White, of Boston, will spend July at Brownlands. Miss White has been traveling since leaving the North Shore last season. She spent most of the winter in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brewer (Elsie Carr), of Boston, will come to Manchester the middle of this month and will spend the season at the Wheaton cottage, one of the Brownland connections, at Old Neck, Manchester. Mrs. Brewer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Carr, will move from Boston to their cottage at West Manchester next week.

MAGNOLIA cottagers, always among the last to settle for the season, because Magnolia is essentially a hotel resort, are beginning to arrive in goodly numbers. Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard, one of the old-time cottagers, is back for the season, coming on from St. Louis this week. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Ely Smith, and family, also from St. Louis, are among the week's arrivals, too.

The H. W. Farnums, of Chicago, opened "Sun Dial," their summer home at Magnolia, this week. They were among yesterday's arrivals.

Mr. and Mrs. John Allyn and daughter, Miss Dorothea Allyn, of Berkeley st., Cambridge, will spend the summer as usual at their cottage, off Magnolia ave., Magnolia.

It will be pleasant news for the many friends of the Edward H. Brainards, of Pittsburg, to learn that they will return to the Oceanside, Magnolia, for the season, as usual. The two daughters, Misses Frances B. and Adelaide F. Brainard, are among the most popular of the North Shore younger set. The two younger members of the family are Ira Fitch Brainard, a 17-year-old son, and a 12-year-old daughter, Margaret.

Rev. and Mrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl, of Washington, will be among the late June arrivals at Magnolia. They will again occupy the Ayers cottage on Lexington ave.

Mrs. Francis H. Williams and family, of Boston, are among the week's arrivals at Magnolia. They are again occupying "Att-Lea Lodge," the cottage owned by Mrs. S. Fisher Corlies, on Shore rd.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rex Flinn (Eleanor Bradley), of Pittsburg, who had the Lycett cottage at Magnolia last year, will not have a place this year, though they will come to Magnolia for August, to be with Mrs. Flinn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Carter, of Boston, who will spend the summer at the Oceanside, as usual.

Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, arrived Wednesday at his summer home on Coolidge Point, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell are settled at their summer residence in Manchester Cove. They arrived several weeks ago from a winter in the south and were for a while at the Essex County club, before opening their house.

MRS. MAURICE JOSEPH, of Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio, will be among the season guests at the Oceanside hotel, Magnolia, this year. Mrs. Joseph has many friends among the cottage colony along the North Shore. She spends her winters in Pasadena, Calif. During her stay at Magnolia this summer Mrs. Joseph will have as her guest for a month Madame Theo. Ysaye, of Brussels, Belgium, and Miss Emily Wellman, of New York city. Her son, J. Bernard Joseph, who attends Phillips Exeter academy, will also spend part of the summer at Magnolia.

The wedding of Miss Meriel Olga Squire and Michael Cody, Jr., will take place on Saturday, June 19, at 4 o'clock, at First Baptist church, Boston. Miss Squire is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Squire, of Brookline and Beach Bluff, Swampscott. The wedding is of much interest to the residents of the Swampscott section of the North Shore, as the family is quite prominent in the social activities of that resort.

impressed me that I began figuring up this forest wastage, and the deeper I go into it the bigger it grows.

Destruction Caused by the Ax

"The vast amount of money that has been made and will be made in timberlands is not because of the growth of timber, but because of the great enhancement in values.

"Now, when you come to the destruction caused by the ax, and take figures compiled from the United States forest service statistics, which amount to 244,000,000 cords of wood of all kinds, including fuel wood, harvested in the United States per annum, if this were piled in a solid pile four feet high and four feet wide it would reach a distance of 369,000 miles, or 123 times across this continent, or more than fifteen times around the globe.

In considering these appalling figures it would seem to me that it is now time to cease imitating the ostrich, and to begin to look this question of a rapidly vanishing timber supply on both sides of the line squarely in the face, and see where we are heading before it is too late; for a treeless continent is unthinkable."—Literary Digest.

"BAKER'S DOZEN"

Did you know that in the olden days a baker who gave short weight had awful things happen to him, and consequently when called upon for a dozen rolls he put in an extra one to be on the safe side? Thus, the phrase "baker's dozen" was originated.

In June, a series of weekly matches between picked teams in the club, composed of the eight best men, will be started for the benefit of the club members who desire to attend. Polo practice has already begun at the Myopia Hunt and is scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. H. P. McKean, Jr., who will again be captain of the Myopia four, is one of eight men who have already reported at the club, the others being Neil W. Rice, Frederick Ayer, Herbert Hostetter, A. C. Burrage, Jr., Dudley P. Rogers, Captain Pentacost, Bayard Tuckerman and Russell Burrage. Others who will probably enter the practice field are Q. A. Shaw McKean, Mrs. James Proctor, C. G. Rice, Thomas Proctor and Thomas P. Mandell.

The James Howe Proctors have arrived at their summer home in the Hamilton section. Their daughter, Miss Polly Proctor, one of the season's most successful débutantes, has also joined them there.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES along the North Shore have shown signs of much life with the opening of June. The week-end and holiday brought many people to the various towns along the Shore—and there has been the usual early June influx of cottagers.

Mr. and Mrs. Boylston A. Beal and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Beal, of Boston, have arrived at their summer home, "Clipstone," on Smith's Point, Manchester, this week, for the season.

Thomas S. Blumer and family, of Boston, plan to arrive at Manchester the 10th of June. They will occupy "Wyndhurst," one of the Harris houses, Smith's Point, this year.

The Jesse Koshlands and George N. Black are among the week's arrivals at Smith's Point, Manchester. R. S. Codman and family is another Boston family to move to Manchester this week.

ENGAGEMENT.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barker Taylor, of Boston and Manchester, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marcia Lathrop Gleason Taylor, to Oswald Kunhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Kunhardt, for many years a resident of Boston, who is now engaged in business in New York city. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and their daughter are now at The Craigs, their beautiful summer home on Smith's Point, Manchester. No date has yet been set for the wedding.

The summer schedule of services at St. John's church, Beverly Farms, will go into effect the coming Sunday—Holy Communion at 8, morning service and sermon at 10.30. The Bible class for children will begin the first week in July.

The marriage of Miss Rosamond Eliot, a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot, of Cambridge, to William Gordon Rice, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., to be solemnized on June 29, at Mt. Desert, Me., will interest many North Shore families. The wedding will be a very simple affair with only the two families in attendance. A sister of Miss Eliot, Miss Frances Eliot, and Frank Fremont Smith will be married tomorrow—June 5—at 4.30 o'clock in the First Parish church, Cambridge.

Another Boston wedding to take place this month that will interest North Shore folk is that on Monday, June 14, of Miss Lydia L. Storer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Storer, of 222 Beacon st., and Henry Snow Hall, Jr. The wedding will be at Trinity church, Boston.

THE HORSE SHOW will be a feature of the big naval festival at the Haven estate, Beverly Farms, on Saturday, July 3—one month from tomorrow—in aid of the Charlestown navy yard Y. M. C. A. The committee in charge states that more than a hundred hunters and children's hacks will be shown in the different classes. More than half that number were entered when the event was announced. There will be classes for lightweight hunters carrying 175 pounds, heavyweight hunters carrying 190 pounds, pairs of hunters (the pair does not have to be the property of one owner) shown over jumps. The class for children's hacks will be open to any pony or small horse considered suitable by the judge. At the discretion of the judge the children's hacks may be divided into two classes.

Frederick Ayer, chairman of the horse show committee, announces that John P. Bowditch and Col. G. S. Patton, Jr., will judge the hunter classes and the hacks will be judged by Walter D. Denègre. Prizes for the different events will be donated by Commander Richard S. Russell, Lt.-Commander R. W. Emmons, 2d, Lt. John Tarkingson, Commander Nathanial F. Ayer and Lt. John Reese. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., chairman of the committee in charge of the whippet races, states that the entries close on June 26 and may be made to him at 112 Water st., Boston. Horse show entries close on the same date with Frederick Ayer, 141 Milk st.

THERE are evidences on every hand that the present season is to be the most active along the North Shore of any since pre-war days. There will be more people on the Shore this year than ever, and the hotels all anticipate "full house" from the opening weeks until September. While there are yet some cottages and estates for rent, there are not as many as usual at this time of year.

"Some books, generally grown-up ones, put things into your head with a sort of rush, and now it suddenly rushed into mine—'That's what I'll be!—that's what I'll do. I'll take seeds and cuttings, and off-shoots from our garden, and set them in waste places, and hedges, and fields, and I'll make an Earthly Paradise of Mary's Meadow.'"—From "Mary's Meadow," by Mrs. Ewing.

GIRLS, have you read these books? We take from the list compiled by Effie L. Power, of the St. Louis public library, and later of the Carnegie library in Pittsburg. Titles and authors are given below. References are made to books of similar interests in most cases.

Hans Aanrud's "Lisbeth Longfrock," Bjoernson's "Synnöve Solbakken," "Arne," "A Happy Boy" and "The Fisher Lassie" make up a group of similar kind.

"Little Women," "Little Men," "Jo's Boys," by L. M. Alcott, may be followed by Moses' "Louisa May Alcott" and D. M. Mulock's "John Halifax, Gentleman." Miss Alcott's "An Old-Fashioned Girl" and Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre" are good to follow each other.

Likewise books of similar interest are shown below:

John Bennett's "Barnaby Lee," Pyle's "The Story of Jack Ballister's Fortunes," Bennett's "Master Skylark," Tappan's "In the Days of Queen Elizabeth" and Scott's "Kenilworth."

John Brown's "Rab and His Friends" and Atkinson's "Greyfriars Bobby."

Bulwer-Lytton's "The Last of the Barons" and Stevenson's "The Black Arrow."

M. H. Catherwood's "Rocky Fork," Smith's "Jolly Good Times," Catherwood's "The Story of Tonty," Parkman's "Pioneers of France in the New World" and "LaSalle and the Discovery of the Great West."

F. E. Crichton's "Peep-in-the-World," Ambrosi's "When I was a Girl in Italy" and J. Spyri's "Heidi."

F. E. Crompton's "Gentle Heritage" and Lucas' "The Slow Coach."

B. M. Dix's "Merrylips," Du Bois' "Elinor Arden, Royalist" and Marryat's "Children of the New Forest."

Mrs. M. M. Dodge's "Hans Brinker" and Griffis' "Brave Little Holland."

Allen French's "The Story of Rolf and the Viking's Bow," "Heroes of Iceland," Liljencrantz's "The Thrall of Leif, the Lucky" and Tegner's "Frithiof Saga."

E. W. Grierson's "Children's Tales from Scottish Ballads" and Marshall's "Scotland's Story."

Thomas Hardy's "Far from the Madding Crowd," Shakespeare's "As You Like It" and Hardy's "Under the Greenwood Tree."

Harriet Martineau's "Feats on the Fiord," Cottin's "Elizabeth" and "The Exiles of Siberia."

H. A. Nash's "Polly's Secret" and Hawthorne's "The House of Seven Gables."

Jane Porter's "The Scottish Chiefs" and Yonge's "The Prince and the Page."

Howard Pyle's "Men of Iron" and Stockton's "The Story of Viteau," Pyle's "Otto of the Silver Hand," Knapp's "The Boy and the Baron," Yonge's "The Dove in the Eagle's Nest," Pyle's "Jack Ballister," Stevenson's "Kidnapped" and "David Balfour."

Jeanne Schulz's "The Story of Colette" and Austen's "Pride and Prejudice."

C. M. Vaile's "The Orcutt Girls," "Sue Orcutt" and Jewett's "Deephaven."

J. D. Wyss' "The Swiss Family Robinson" and Marryat's "Masterman Ready."

C. M. Yonge's "The Chaplet of Pearls," "The Dove in the Eagle's Nest," Scott's "Anne of Geirstein" and Hauff's "Lichtenstein," Yonge's "The Prince and the Page" and Scott's "Ivanhoe."

Thackeray's "Henry Esmond" and "The Virginians," Scott's "Anne of Geirstein," "Ivanhoe," "Kenilworth," "Quentin Durward" and "The Talisman;" Dickens' "The Cricket on the Hearth," "David Copperfield," "Nicholas Nickleby," "Little Dorritt," "The Old Curiosity Shop," "Oliver Twist," "Dombel and Son" and "A Tale of Two Cities" are given as representative of these renowned writers.

Mrs. J. H. Ewing's "The Brownies: and Other Tales," "Jackanapes," "Jan of the Windmill," Ouida's "A Dog of Flanders" and Ewing's "Lob-lie-by-the Fire" make up a group, the latter to be followed by Mrs. Gaskell's "Cranford" if you like the old ladies in it.

M. P. W. Smith's books listed include "Jolly Good Times (on a Massachusetts Farm)," "Jolly Good Times at School," etc.

"Polly Oliver's Problem," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Mother Carey's Chickens," "A Cathedral Courtship," and "The Bird's Christmas Carol" are Mrs. K. D. Wiggin's list.

"The art of saying appropriate words in a kindly way is one that never goes out of fashion, never ceases to please, and is within the reach of the humblest."

A BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL TABLET, a cut of which appeared in the BREEZE last week, was formally dedicated at a memorial service held at the Beverly Farms public library on Memorial Day. Augustus Peabody Loring presided and made an admirable address in which he paid loving tribute to the eight gold star men whose names appeared upon the tablet. On the tablet are the names of the young men of Beverly Farms who served in the great war—129 of them. General Clarence R. Edwards made the formal address, which was appreciated by everyone. He paid a tribute to the men who had given their lives in the war, naming particularly those of his own command whom he knew. Mayor James MacPherson on behalf of the citizens of Beverly thanked the General for his address. General Edwards presented the French memorial certificates to the nearest relatives of the men who were killed or died in France. It was particularly fitting that he was able to present to Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Jr., her memorial certificate for the service rendered by her husband. The dedicatory prayer was by Rev. James H. Downey. The work of arranging the names and collecting the funds for the tablet was done by a citizen's committee. Miss Katherine P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, was a moving spirit and worked diligently for the memorial tablet; Mrs. Robert Means was treasurer of the committee. James B. Dow was an active member of the committee and Eben Day, representing the G. A. R., was chairman of the committee. General Edwards was entertained at the home of Gordon Dexter at luncheon before the memorial service.

Eugene G. Foster and family, of 175 West 72d st., New York city, are among this week's arrivals at Manchester. Their summer home is at Coolidge's Point (Magnolia P. O.).

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Appleton, of New York, are always among the first of the Ipswich colony to arrive for the season. They opened their estate this week for a long stay in this delightful section, as usual.

The Italian Ambassador and Baroness Romano Avezzana will join the summer colony in Newport this month, where they have taken a lease of the large Morrell cottage on Ochre Point. Their daughter, Miss Romano Avezzana, who has friends in the North Shore colony and who plans to visit here this summer, will be with her parents in Newport during the gay season. It is said that the Italian Counsellor Giuseppe Brambilla and Mrs. Brambilla (nee Julia Meyer, of Hamilton) will also be at Newport this summer.

They left Washington two weeks ago with Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, in the "Roxana," cruising the Chesapeake, stopping at Annapolis, and then going to Philadelphia to attend the Devon horse show, whence they will continue on to Boston, making the entire journey by water, if weather conditions are favorable.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Boardman and family, of Boston, have arrived at the "Brick House," their summer home at West Manchester.

Among the newcomers to Manchester this season will be Mr. and Mrs. Strafford Wentworth, of Dudley lane, Milton. They will occupy the Tappan house on Sea st., Old Neck. When the BREEZE announced their coming two weeks ago, it was erroneously stated, the Wentworths formerly lived at Dudley, La., which the writer confused, apparently, with Dudley lane, Milton.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

East Gloucester, Bass Rocks, Rockport and Annisquam Ready for Busy Season

By Alex. G. Tupper

THE holiday brought many cottagers to the various sections of Cape Ann. The beautiful day attracted a great many players on the golf courses both at Bass Rocks and Rockport Country club. Motorists were numerous on the roads and at the beaches and altogether it seemed that the season had been ushered in.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart and Miss Stewart, of Louisburg sq., Boston, and Gloucester, are at present in England. They expect to return in time to reopen their Gloucester house the latter part of June.

EASTERN POINT.—Many of the large estates have been opened at Eastern Point for the season. The Eastern Point golf clubhouse opened on Wednesday. The tea house will again be in charge of Mrs. Ernest S. Deane, as in past seasons. Clock golf will be a feature, followed by afternoon tea, as has been very popular with the members of the club and their friends entertaining. The fine appointment of the clubhouse makes it a pleasant rendezvous for the summer guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, of Kansas City, Mo., the former senior member of the prominent baking products firm of Loose, Wiles & Company, have arrived for the season at "Sea Rocks," the beautiful estate completed two years ago for Mr. and Mrs. Loose at Grape Vine Cove, Eastern Point. Mr. and Mrs. Loose come early and remain late in this delightful location at the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth K. Ames, of Melrose Highlands, owner of the Ames chain of stores in cities throughout New England, have arrived at "Sunset Rock," their Eastern Point estate, for the season.

John J. Pew, who has been spending the winter in Boston, has arrived at his Eastern Point estate, situated on the large boulder near the Ames estate. Mr. Pew is chairman of the board of business administration of the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company, of Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan S. Raymond (nee Miss Pauline Pollard) are occupying their colonial house on the Raymond estate, "The Ramparts," Eastern Point.

Mrs. William Sheafe, of Boston, is occupying the Sheafe cottage, Eastern Point, for the season.

Miss Anne Aspinwall Curtis, of New York city, has arrived at "Windover," the Curtis estate, on Niles Beach boulevard, Eastern Point.

Mrs. Ada C. Reid, widow of General George Croghan Reid, of Washington, D. C., is at "Heathercrest," the Reid estate, at Eastern Point, for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Twombly, of Boston, will occupy "Heathercrest," the Reid estate at Eastern Point again this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Pearson are Kentucky people who have come to Beach End cottage, Niles beach, Eastern Point, for the season. The Pearsons have long

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, of Brookline, are located at their Brightside cottage, Bass Rocks, for the season.

Miss Kate B. Sturgis, of Englewood, N. J., is occupying her pleasant cottage on Beach rd., Bass Rocks, this season. Miss Sturgis is one of the pioneer cottage residents of the colony.

ANNISQUAM.—The picturesque section of Cape Ann known as Annisquam has developed extensively as a summer resort within the past ten years. Previous to this time there were myriads of cottages, small and unpretentious, nestled in the brush and ledge sections of the river that winds in and out of the pretty landscape. Now there are a great many large and attractive houses with delightful surroundings, gardens and green lawns. One section has developed much during the past five years. It is Rockholm, situated on the Ipswich bay side of the colony, on a beautiful hill, overlooking the sea and the setting sun of the summer. On a clear day the New Hampshire coast and Mt. Agamenticus can be seen plainly on the horizon. Several new houses have gone up in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wise Wood, of New York city, have arrived at their Annisquam cottage for the season.

Preparations are being made for the opening of the Annisquam yacht clubhouse. As usual, the house will be open for July 4th festivities, dancing, afternoon tea and the yacht races which have been so popular and the yachtsmen so enthusiastic for a number of years.

ROCKPORT.—Once again the pleasant fields of Marmion Way, Rockport, are green with waving grass and the appearance of early summer flowers. There are several families located early in their cottages, as mentioned in the BREEZE the past two weeks. The holiday brought many people down for a short visit and they will return about the middle of the month permanently for the summer. The links at the Rockport Country club were taken advantage of by enthusiasts from the Land's End colony and members of the club. The day was perfect for golfing and the fields were covered with players all day.

Mrs. Hattie G. Bass and Mrs. Joseph Leman, of Hyde Park, are stopping at Mrs. Bass's cottage on the Headlands, Rockport, for the summer.

Mrs. James Routledge, daughter of the late Francis Smith, of San Antonio, Tex., has arrived at the family summer home, Loblolly, Land's End, Rockport.

THE UPPER NORTH SHORE SHOWING SIGNS OF EARLY SEASON

The Marbleheads and Nahant, Swampscott and Picturesque Shore Line Already Alive with Visitors

SWAMPSCOTT and the Marbleheads are teeming with new life as the opening season brings cottagers to their delightfully cool retreats by the ocean. The holiday and week-end was the signal for a big influx of people who wanted to pay a visit to the seashore, even though they have not yet opened their houses. The biggest crowd of all, of course, arrive about the middle of June, when the hotels open for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rothwell, who have spent the winter at the Hotel Empire, Commonwealth ave., Boston, are at their Harbor ave. home, Marblehead Neck, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, of Brookline, and their two children, Miss Katherine and James Cunningham, Jr., are at the Paine cottage, Marblehead Neck, this summer.

Miss Maria E. Hatch and Miss L. P. Hatch, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at the Wallace cottage, Marblehead Neck, for a long season.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Jealous, of Andover, with their two daughters, are established on Follett st., Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

Theodore Jones, of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton Co., of Boston, has purchased the Joyce estate on Ocean ave., and alterations are being made, prior to the arrival of the family for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin T. White, of Weston, with their five children, are installed in the Foster cottage this season. They have been coming to the Shore for some time and are a distinct addition to the social group of this section.

Dr. Joel E. Goldthwaite, of Boston, a Marblehead summer resident, will be the chief speaker at the graduation of the Salem hospital training school for nurses, at Salem, June 15.

Charles H. Farnsworth, of Cambridge, arrived this week at Marblehead Neck for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Gibson, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at their Foster st. cottage, Marblehead Neck, for the summer. Mr. Gibson is president of the Ivers & Pond Piano Co.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Robinson Harding, of Westwood, have opened their summer home on Foster st., Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL at Marblehead Neck was a busy place over the week-end. Guests who have arrived for the week are Lt.-Comm. and Mrs. Edward Ellsberg, of Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Burke, of South Weymouth; Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Pratt, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hunneman and family, of Brookline, will be at Goodwin ct., again this summer, the old town of Marblehead being their favorite summer resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace M. Houser, of Akron, Ohio, who spent the winter traveling in California and Arizona, will again occupy their handsome home at Peach's Point, Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Lomond Collver, of Brookline, have leased their home "The Old Corner House," Marblehead, and will spend the summer with their two children in the artists' circle at Provincetown. Mrs. Collver was formerly Miss Ethel Blanchard, the artist and designer.

Mrs. Jonathan Brown, who has been in the south during the winter, is spending the summer months at the Hotel Bellevue, Beach Bluff.

Stuart Canby, of Chicago, spent the week-end with Kenneth Canby, who is spending the summer at the Oceanside hotel, Marblehead Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lowell, of Brookline, will come to Marblehead Neck this summer and will occupy the large house, their smaller cottage being rented to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice A. MacBride, of Brookline. Mr. MacBride is vice-president of the R. H. White Co., Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bowman, of Winchester, are at the Marblehead Neck shore for the season, and are again occupying "Bellair."

Demarest Lloyd, of Boston, who has been so tremendously interested in the Loyal Coalition, will return this summer to the Bridge house at Marblehead Neck, the house which he occupied last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Booth, of Brookline, purchased property on Corinthian lane this spring and have thoroughly remodelled their new home. The piazzas overlook the harbor and the gardens have been planted, greatly improving the appearance of the entire lane.

Walcott Booth is attending summer school at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

We carry a fine assortment of G-E fans. Don't be without one this summer in your office and home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Wendell, who have recently sold their house in Washington, will in the future make their home in New York. They will spend the hot season, as usual, at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Mrs. Carl Dreyfus, of Boston, is convalescent after a recent operation and will soon be at Devereux for the summer months. Her handsome home is already open and the gardens are a-flower with early spring blooms.

Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, of Boston, who spends her summers at Marblehead Neck, is chairman of the Boston Y. W. C. A. vacation camp committee. Camp Sokosis at Canton was made possible through her strenuous work, and it will open June 12, accommodating 50 girls at a time.

Mrs. William R. Nolan, of Dublin, Ireland, who is in this country on a short visit, has been visiting among other North Shore friends, Mrs. John T. Way, of Clifton.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hunnewell, of Boston, together with their four young children, are installed in their Ocean ave. house for the summer months. The youngsters thoroughly enjoy the Neck and they make a lively household.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Root, of Boston, have arrived at Marblehead Neck for the summer, being with Mrs. Root's mother, Mrs. Benjamin Owen, at Lighthouse Point.

Mrs. George Brown, of Atlantic ave., Clifton, who was severely ill during the winter with pneumonia, and who has been convalescing at Atlantic City, has returned to her lovely home on the North Shore.

Mrs. Eleanor Holden Englefinger, of Stuttgart, Germany, with her son, Francis, is spending the summer with her father in Swampscott. Mrs. Englefinger has been for nearly 15 years in Germany and during the war was cut off from communication with this country. She has a pitiful tale to tell of the shortage of food and the number of starving children in the crowded industrial areas.

Mrs. William Browne, of Genoa, Italy, has been visiting Mrs. Frank Price at her Clifton residence. Mrs. Browne has little to say of the disturbed conditions in Italy, but is rejoicing in the opportunity to visit her friends.

John Whitmore and Robert Seamans, of Salem, who summer at Marblehead Neck, will be among the ushers at the wedding of Miss Dorothy Gray, of East Orange, N. J., and Joseph T. Battis, of Salem, to be held June 12 at Woonsocket, R. I.

Miss Laura Daizell, of Lynn, who is an exponent of rythmic dancing in Boston, will give an exhibition of her work before the Phillips Beach Neighborhood club members, June 8. A group of dancers from Boston and New York will assist Miss Daizell.

JUNE

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

AH, June! I race the fields amid the violets and clover green
I chase the sunbeams darting o'er the lea;
And swift my soul doth follow winging bird,
To some fair spot, where liquid pool is seen—
A nectar-laden cup of ecstacy.

Forbid me not to clasp thy hand and feel thy thrill,
To bend with thee and drink the wine with thee!
The pureness of thy face reflecting there
Where nature's smiles are mirrored in the still,
The peaceful harmony of spring I see.

Ah, fair thy face! Oh, June, immortal June!
The innocence of love—oh, purest love!
Thy heath, oh sweet! Thy voice, oh rare!
That draws my troubled soul immune
From sorrow, to the wond'rous sky above!

Thy soul, oh June, would penetrate the deepest blue,
Where God is clasping, dear, thy hand!
Could I, like thee, with Him sweetly commune
If I, like thee, the nearness of His spirit knew
And give, like thee, all beauty at command!

Perhaps, fair June, thy spirit can imbibe
The golden message from thy nature-pen,
Upon the whiteness of a page upon my soul;
I long to have a blessing you'd inscribe
And read its love to all my fellow-men!

In earth's fair cloak of green and fringed bloom,
I nestle tenderly within its fold
And ask forgiveness when in mirth I tread
Upon the fields his loving smiles illume—
That worthily His beauty I behold!

"CUPID DISPOSES"

By HELEN CHRISTENE HOERLE

(The Breeze will print as often as practicable, this season, a fiction article. Manuscripts solicited for acceptance.—Ed.)

WITH a grand flourish the man brought the car to a standstill before the Herricks' imposing mansion, and nimbly jumped out. Before he could mount the steps, however, the door was opened quickly, and a tall slim creature, just budding into fair young womanhood, stood framed in the doorway, her face flushed as with anticipation.

"Oh, it's you, Jack," she said, almost in disappointment, the eager light rapidly fading from her face. "Is this your new car?" she cried, her eyes lighting with pleasure as they fell on the little brown racer. "Jack, it's a beauty."

"Yes," agreed the man, gazing proudly at the machine. "Won't you come for a ride, Christie?" he asked perfunctorily. "I thought you'd like to have the first ride."

"Really? Oh, Jack, I'd love it,"—she continued to gaze rapturously at the little puffing thing,—"I'll be ready in a second."

"Now, Jack, this is really great," she breathed in ecstasy as they rolled swiftly along over the smooth roads, "I like this car so much better than your big Losier, or our Peerless, don't you?"

"I sure do," he replied, dexterously avoiding a truck as he turned a corner. "Where shall we go? Out toward the club?"

"Anywhere. Yes, the club road will do." She settled down comfortably in the low seat, and watched the man's hands as he gently guided the snorting, almost human, machine over the stony country roads.

To look at them one would have imagined it the most natural thing in the world for the two to fall in love with one another. John Bruce was the typical type of young American manhood; not too tall, well built, with clean-cut — the not particularly handsome — features, and taking a healthy interest in the events of the day. He was fair to the last degree of fairness, while Christyne Herrick was a splendid brunette, with waving brown hair, brown eyes and clear olive skin. Almost as tall as he, and taking an active part in all the sports he indulged in, their interests ran in the same direction. Still the look in the girl's eyes as she watched him was one of admiration of his prowess rather than of love.

"Chris!" he turned toward her, his voice breaking in on her reverie, and rudely recalling her from her dreams in which a man, but not the one at her side, figured largely. "Christie, dear, you know I love you, and, and I want you for my wife." It was said almost as if it were a duty, and without a shred of emotion.

The girl rested her great brown eyes on his face for a second, as if seeking something she couldn't find, and then smiled a little trembling smile. "Yes, Jack, I know you do, and, I love you," she gulped. "When—."

"Our birthday is just four weeks from today," he went on impassionately, "and if you could be ready, we could be married then."

"Yes, I can be ready," she agreed absently, wondering vaguely if all proposals and weddings were made and arranged for in this perfunctory, cold-blooded manner. It was so different from what she had expected; but then most things in this world are. Bruce fumbled in his pocket for a second, then drew forth a tiny blue velvet box and handed it to the girl.

"Chris," he whispered, "I hope you'll like it; it was the handsomest I could buy."

As in a dream she took the box from his hand and opened it. A great white diamond gleamed forth. "Oh, Jack, it's wonderful." She slowly slipped off her glove and placed it on the finger where it belonged, then held it up for his inspection; but the man's eyes were glued on the long stretch of shining white road ahead of them.

"Shall we go back now?" he inquired abruptly. His profile seemed to the girl to be unusually stern.

"Yes, please, I'm—I'm tired," she gasped, her thoughts in a whirl. Slowly he turned the car—a difficult feat in such a narrow road—and a minute after they were speeding in the direction from which they came.

Not a word was spoken between the two all the way home. The girl seemed like one in a daze. She had just promised Jack she would marry him on their twenty-third birthday, in four weeks. Four weeks, then she would be Jack's wife forever! A shudder ran through the slim figure. She had spoken truly when she had said she loved him, but it was as a sister loves a brother, not a wife her husband. The man stared straight in front of him, his hands moving mechanically as they guided the wheel. Christyne had said she loved him; then it was all right. Yet it did seem strange to think of Chris as anything more than a good pal.

A little speck appeared in the distance. Coming rapidly toward them Jack recognized the car of Doc Lawrence, and evidently Christyne did, too. She sat up quickly, a warm blush mantling her cheeks, the breath coming quickly through her childishly parted lips. With a bright "Hello, there," the doctor shot past. The girl turned and watched the car till it disappeared and then sank back with a long drawn sigh.

The ride seemed unending to the girl and she breathed a sigh of relief when finally they did draw up at her home. Jack assisted her to alight and whispered, "Shall we tell your mother now?" She nodded dumbly, unable to speak. Slowly they mounted the steps and were confronted by their respective parents sitting in one corner of the porch, waiting expectantly. In a flash Christyne realized that their engagement wouldn't be any news to them, and Jack had—

"Why, children!" It was Mrs. Bruce who spoke. "We didn't expect you to be home so soon." She cast a meaning glance at Christyne's mother, who smiled back at her.

Young Bruce cleared his throat, "Mother, Dad, I've just asked Christyne to marry me, and she's consented."

With a low cry Christyne threw herself in her mother's arms, and sobbed wildly. The men rose silently and grasping the younger man's hand, wrung it warmly.

"Jack, I'm more than glad that she loves you," Christyne's father said huskily, while his own father just whispered, "God bless you both."

Jack breathed freely once more; it was over — the worst part. Soon everyone would know, and then there would be the endless congratulations. He could stand anything, but he must not let Christyne know that he didn't care for her—that way.

"Come, Christyne, George, John, we'll go indoors and leave them alone. Children, if you are one-quarter as happy as your foolish parents you must be in ecstasy, for we are in Heaven," Christyne's mother said.

The door closed softly and they were alone. Jack leaned over and took the girl's strong capable hand in his own.

"Christie, dear, do you really love me?" he asked softly.

"Yes, Jack," she replied, avoiding his eyes and silently vowing that he should never know the truth.

Then, Chris, I shall try to make you very happy." He pressed a kiss on her forehead. Somehow it chilled him and left him feeling very old and worn. She did love him; she had said so, and he had never known Christyne Herrick to tell a lie. He rose abruptly. "I must go," he lied, "may I come over tonight?"

"Yes," she returned, raising her trusting brown eyes to him. The sudden realization of the wrong she was doing him came to her—to marry him and not to love him. But he loved her, and her sacrifice would make both their parents happy. Rushing upstairs to her own room, she threw herself on her bed, and burst into a paroxysm of weeping.

Why, oh, why hadn't she told him the truth; but she couldn't bear to think that the plans and the hopes that their parents had fostered for so many years should be miscarried. She must get away—somewhere—to think.

Hastily unfastening her gown, she slipped into her riding habit. Creeping cautiously down the servants' stairs, she ran to the stable, and quickly saddled Bunny. Mounting, she swiftly galloped down the road, through the city streets and, not quite realizing it, out on the clubhouse road. The sharp air cleared her brain, and made her realize only more keenly what she had done. On and on she rode till the clubhouse loomed in sight. She was in the same predicament as when she left home. Turning Bunny's nose toward the city, she cantered quickly on through the fast growing dusk.

Suddenly—she never quite knew how it happened—Bunny shied at something, her hands loosened their grip on the reins, and she felt herself falling, falling through space. A nerve-racking bump and then oblivion. The next thing she knew she was in someone's arms, and a familiar voice whispering endearing words in her ear.

"Bob," she murmured rapturously, "Oh, Bob, Bob!"

"There, there, don't cry, honey." Big Doctor Lawrence looked helplessly at the girl he loved, sobbing on his shoulder. "Here, let me lift you into the car, and I'll take you home." He picked her up as easily as if she had been a baby, and settled her comfortably in the machine. "There, don't cry any more, Christie. Nothing serious is the matter, only you are a little shaken up. You'll be all right once you get home and to bed."

"No, no, no, don't take me home," she begged, raising her tear stained face to his. "Please, Bob, I can't go back."

"All right," he soothed her. "Shall we take a little ride, and you can tell me what's the matter."

"Please," she acquiesced.

The man glanced pityingly at the tall figure crouched down in a corner of the car. "Please, Christie," he pleaded, trying to smile, "tell your doctor what is wrong."

She hesitated for a fraction of a second, and then slowly pulled the muddy brown glove from her left hand, holding it toward him in the dim uncertain light.. The big diamond shone forth on the third finger. The man sank low in his seat, as if something had hit him.

"Who," he gasped, "who is the lucky man?"

The girl shrank from him, stunned by the bitterness of his tone, but her heart leaping with joy. He did love her. Christyne laughed hysterically, "Lucky? Why Jack—"

"Bruce?" the man broke in. "Great Heavens, I—I."

"Please, Bob, I want you to advise me what to do," she entreated.

"I? Advise you?" Doctor Lawrence laughted bitterly, "You're crazy. I'll take you home, and you can have your mother do the advising."

"No, she can't do it; not fairly, I mean." Christyne placed her hand over his on the stering wheel, "If you don't drive on, I'll jump out while it's going, and—and—"

"Is it as bad as all that," the doctor inquired, instantly repentant and surprised at the vehemence of the girl's words. "I'll drive slowly so you can tell me all."

Christyne Herrick raised a pair of grateful brown eyes, and met his keen gray ones unfalteringly. "Thank you. I hate to, but you see it's this way. Daddy and Jack's father were boys together, went to the same college, and after they graduated went into business, partnership. Mother and Mrs. Bruce were chums and made their début the same night. The following summer Daddy and Mr. Bruce met them, and a year later they had a double wedding, and even moved into adjoining houses on Woodson st., you know, right across from where we live now. Well, then Jack and I came; he was born just an hour sooner than I. Then I was named for his mother and he for my father. As soon as it was discovered that one family had a boy and the other a girl our parents decided that when we grew up we should marry—"

"Rather previous, don't you think?" Bob asked dryly as the girl paused for breath.

She nodded. "It was. Jack and I grew up as brother and sister, and never even thought of marrying till last summer, when Dad hinted at such a possibility one day when we were together. Today Jack proposed, and as long as he loves me, and it is our parents' dearest wish, I lied and said I loved him too. And—and we're to be married on our birthday," her voice broke in a strangling sob.

A spasm of pain crossed the doctor's fine face. "You don't love him," he repeated unsteadily, "you do love someone else?"

In the fast failing light, he could barely distinguish the little affirmative shake of the girl's head. With a quick turn of the wrist he stopped the purring engine, and the machine came to a standstill in the middle of the road. Could it be that she loved him? Well, if she didn't she could do no more than say "no." Squaring his shoulders, and clearing his throat, he turned, and slipping his hand under the girl's chin raised her sweet face to his.

"Christyne, dear, I love you, have loved you for years and years — ever since we were kiddies. I was going to ask you on your birthday to be my wife, but I ask you now. Do you think you love me enough to marry me? Oh, my darling, say you do," he cried, his voice vibrating with passion.

Her eyes dropped, but not before he had read his answer written there. Here was a real proposal, from a real man, whom she loved. If Christyne only had known, the loving part was the only thing that counted.

"Bobbie," she sighed, slipping her arms around his neck, while he pressed her pulsing figure, now alive with the joy of life, to him. "Oh, Bobbie, dear, if you hadn't found me and I had married Jack!"

"But I did, honey, and I'm the happiest man in the world. We can go home now."

"Oh, no, no," she interrupted nervously, "I don't know what they will say.

"Then we'll run over to Warrington, get married, then telegraph them. Spend the night at the Warrington Arms, and return home in the morning. How's that?"

She laughed happily. "Lovely, hurry up, Bob, before we're caught."

"Can you forego the pleasures of a trousseau, Chris, dear?" he asked, a wicked twinkle in his happy hungry eyes.

"Anything, everything to be your wife." And Bob was satisfied.

Half an hour later Doctor and Mrs. Robert Lawrence (a rather muddy though blissfully happy bride in a torn green riding habit) were receiving the usual congratulations from the young curate of St. Mark's church, Warrington.

* * * * * * *

The great clock in the Bruce's hall struck eight. Mrs. Bruce put down the book she was reading with a sigh and cast a worried look at the back of her husband's head.

"George, dear, do you think Chris and Jack could have gone out in the car again. It's so strange of them not to have told us. Isn't it wonderful though," she continued, "that they love each other so much?"

"It's a great thing for the boy. Christyne is a fine girl," her husband agreed. "Maybe he is over there now."

"No," his wife returned, going to the window and looking out, "The car isn't in front of the house. I'm beginning to worry."

"Bosh, my dear, do you remember—?"

"Here comes Mary and John now," Mrs. Bruce interrupted. "Something is wrong. Open the door, George, it takes James an age."

"Christyne," gasped Mrs. Herrick, rushing into the room and thrusting an opened telegram into Mrs. Bruce's hand. "Read that. Oh, poor Jack, I'll never—I'm so, so sorry."

"Bob Lawrence and I were married at Warrington an hour ago. May we come home in the morning? Christyne," Mrs. Bruce read slowly. "Oh, Mary, Poor Jack. I wonder where he is, we thought he was with Chris."

"Isn't he at home?" Mrs. Herrick gazed woe-begonedly at her friend, through her tears.

The telephone rang noisily.

"Hello," shouted Mr. Bruce angrily. What right has a telephone to interrupt family conferences. "Jack, yes, this is Dad—married—Estelle Crane—at Bedford," the receiver dropped from his trembling hand. "Great Heavens!"

"What?" gasped Jack's mother, sinking into a chair. "Jack married to Estelle Crane?"

Silence reigned supreme. Everyone was too stunned to speak. Then, fortunately, Mr. Herrick's sense of humor triumphed over his baser feelings and he laughed long and loudly.

"Why, John, I'm surprised at you," his wife reproved, "this is an awful predicament."

"It's too funny," John Herrick grinned more broadly. "Here we are bemoaning the fact that our children have married whom they love and not each other because their old fools of parents wanted them to."

"But what are we to do?" questioned his wife.

"Do?" he roared back at her, "Do? Give them a rousing reception when they come home and thank God they have wills of their own."

And they did. All of which only goes to show that some people can see a joke, even if it be on themselves, and that MAN PROPOSES, but CUPID DISPOSES.

THE MILK PROBLEM

Pasteurization the Answer to Cry for Pure Milk, Writes Correspondent—Germs of Disease Then Killed

(The pictures printed with this communication are furnished through the courtesy of H. P. Hood & Sons, and depict some of the "city dairies" referred to—pictures taken not over a mile and a half from the office of the Board of Health, Boston.—Ed.)

COMMUNITY MILK PROBLEMS was the subject of a talk by Dr. E. V. Babson, of Gloucester, before the North Shore Horticultural society, at Manchester, at one of its meetings the past winter. The account of that lecture as printed in the BREEZE at the time brought the communication printed on this page from H. P. Hood & Sons, the owners of Cherry Hill Farm at North Beverly, and one of the largest producers of milk in New England. The letter bears so interestingly on the milk problem that we are pleased to devote the space to its reproduction, together with the illustrations, in this number of the BREEZE, when so many families are moving to the North Shore from various sections of the country for the summer.—EDITOR.

Editor of North Shore Breeze,

Dear Sir: The writer has read with great interest, excerpts from the lecture delivered by Dr. Babson before the North Shore Horticultural society, contained in the BREEZE of recent date. Dr. Babson is to be complimented for giving his time to assist in the enlightenment of the public upon this vital subject. He very likely shares my opinion that too little is seen in print which contains real information that may be applied as a tangible guide by the house-wife in buying the family milk supply. True, we very frequently read the excellent advice "use more milk," and similar slogans, but there is a wealth of interesting information which prompts the authorities to spread this propaganda. Let more be said about milk, providing the data is accurate, and the community will have a more intelligent method of selecting this necessity for the baby and for the table.

Dr. Babson's reference to conditions of 30 and 40 years ago brings to mind the fact that so many people try to exonerate the haphazard manner in which their milk is bought by the fringed excuse that "all these new fol-de-rols were unnecessary in former years," and that "babies were brought up just as well and had a heritage of health the equal of modern children."

Such people are, unconsciously, of course, making a statement without a vestige of truth in it, as figures on record prove that the death rate among infants in the 80's and 90's was very much greater than it is today.

Listen to the plea of Nathan Straus, of New York city, the pioneer among advocates of "safe milk" in this country, when on September 29, in 1897, he addressed the delegates at the National Conference of Mayors and Councilors: "We appeal to you as if you were standing beside a great river in whose current were constantly swept past, hundreds of drowning infants. This stream is a very real thing, if people would but recognize its existence, and all its yearly tribute of death is paid because of the public neglect of some of the simplest precautions for the saving of children's lives." The "stream" to which Mr. Straus refers was the stream of unsafe milk.

We may fervently thank the kind hand of Providence that this river has been well dried by the warm, beneficent sun of Dairy Science, and a beautiful valley, luxurious with flowers and grasses, noisy with appreciative birds who sing in delight, peopled with fat, laughing babies, who are content and safe in their surroundings, has come in its place!

If we are asked, "What is this discovery in Dairy Science which has wrought such a change," my answer will be "pasteurization." The very simple process of heating milk, to kill the germs of disease, which may be lurking there, totally invisible, has saved hundreds of thousands of infants, and adults as well, from being swept down the great river. This process of heating milk is called "Pasteurization" and was the subject of Mr. Straus' appeal on that notable day in 1897.

We cannot agree with Dr. Babson that "the nearer the consumer is to the cow, the safer he is." The milk from a cow in your own door yard, which is suffering from tuberculosis, is not a whit safer than the milk, obtained from a similar cow 150 miles away. The germ of tuberculosis is just as apt to exist in the "local" milk as in the "country" milk. Common logic tells us that distance has no bearing upon the quality of milk. Can we fairly say that the milk produced in Essex County is superior to that milked in Middlesex County? Has the fact that an imaginary boundary line exists between these two districts any influence on the quality of the milk? Emphatically no! Then, by the same reasoning, milk obtained in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont is the equal, in excellence, of the milk obtained in Mass.

I think Dr. Babson rather refutes his own statement when he calls attention to the International Milk Contest in Paris several years ago. The winning entry was from New York state and the sample of milk was three months old when it received the award of the judges! Naturally enough, the French were loath to believe that it was not freshly milked on French soil, but they learned a timely lesson in producing milk clean, and keeping it cold. Verily, the distance milk is transported has no bearing upon its quality.

On the other hand, it may be fairly said that there are arguments which favor "country" milk rather than that produced in or near large cities. Nature never intended that the dairy cow be confined to the limits of a city barnyard. The cow is a delicate animal and requires the right pasturage and the right environment that she may remain in good health.

Your readers may be interested in a pictorial illustration of our reference to city dairies, which we hand you herewith. These were taken from a neighboring city not over a mile and a half away from the office of the Board of Health (Boston)!

But the crime of the milk dealer which cries to Heaven for adjustment, is the sale of "raw" milk. It has been so conclusively proven by the hundreds of thousands of cases of infection and thousands of fatalities, that raw milk is an insidious danger, that it is a rash defiance indeed of past experience to offer raw milk for sale.

Scientific research has proven the efficacy of pasteurization for making milk safe. It is a very simple expedient. It simply means cooking the milk and there can be no objection to cooking milk when most of our foods are habitually cooked.

Thanking you for the courtesy of publishing this letter, we are Cordially,

FLOWER GARDEN DAY

Why Not Make It a Grand Feature on North Shore in Mid-Season?

By Alex. G. Tupper

HOW beautiful are the gardens on the countless estates on the North Shore! The interest and attention that has been taken by owners increases from year to year. This cannot be fully recognized by the view the passersby gets from the street front. The loveliest gardens are behind hedges and in spots where they fit most wonderfully into the landscape.

It is delightful to view the formal garden with its glowing colors, the stately and graceful blooms, among which are bits of fine sculpture and rippling fountains.

It is indeed artistic to see the Italian garden with its green shrubs and borders of color in circles and in straight lines along the narrow gravel walks, with a blue sky and floating white clouds to complete the picture. It is very suggestive in Maxfield Parrish's paintings. Of course, you have seen them! The English garden is no less pleasing and what about the old-fashioned New England garden? Can anything be much prettier than the hedge of phlox, with its pink, white or purple colors? Can a colonial doorway be replete with its rustic charm when the climbing rose bush or the tall stately hollyhock is missing? The latter seem like clusters of happy children smiling into the face of the visitor!

Then again there are the novelties in raising flowers. They appear in urns, chests, cemented stone receptacles and in various other forms. A happy suggestion is the placing of a fisherman's dory, painted green or yellow, into one nook in an old-fashioned garden and filling it with plants or nasturtiums and having vines grow over the sides. A mast may be placed in proper place with the booms supported by ropes and climbing vines can be grown over these with beautiful effect.

The floriculture of the North Shore benefitted by the sea air, which gives the richness of color and bloom, is certainly remarkable, yet interest can even more increase. I would make a suggestion: Why not have Flower Garden Day? Why not establish this feature for the North Shore each season and make it famous? I would suggest that an attractive booklet be published and widely circulated, giving a list of estates and locations, the kinds of gardens and instructions for visitors if certain parts are to be kept private. Certain sections could be roped or fenced off for visitors to stand away at a distance to view the gardens if it is the desire of the owners not to have visitors passing through. This would be appreciated. The beauty of these gardens all along the Shore should be seen by the world and all lovers of flowers.

There may be some people content to just look upon these beautiful blossoms by themselves, but I believe the greater majority of people heartily and seriously interested in gardens and the growing of wonderful flowers will be eager to have the people share in the beauty God gave them with His sunlight and gentle showers! Flowers are messengers and they bring wonderful thoughts that create cheer and goodness to our heart and soul! Again I say—why not have Flower Garden Day? Do not let the blossoms fade and die without seeing friendly and thankful faces before they pass away from the vision! Let every cottager unite in this glorious exhibition!

GENERAL EDWARDS HONORED GUEST

Beverly Farms Appropriately Observes Memorial Day—Special Afternoon and Evening Exercises

THE observance of Memorial Day this year at Beverly Farms will be long remembered. The weather was ideal for the exercises and the program of events was carried out as scheduled. In addition to the regular Memorial services held under the auspices of Preston post, 188, the roll of honor tablet, a beautiful bronze tablet at the public library, was dedicated with impressive ceremonies.

The members of Post 188 assembled at 1.15 in the afternoon on Oak st. and headed the line of march, which was made up as follows:

George F. Williams, Marshal
Platoon of Police
Salem Brass Band
State Guard, Capt. W. Publicover, Comm.
Michael J. Cadigan Post, A. L.
Post 188, G. A. R.
Sons of Veterans
Women's Relief Corps
Two Platoons of Firemen
School Children

The procession moved up West st. to G. A. R. hall, where the invited guests were received. Exercises were held at the monument, where the following program was carried out:

Commander's address, Lincoln's Gettysburg address, Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, prayer; selection by the band, address by the officer of the day, Relief corps memorial service, Legion memorial service, chaplain's address, benediction.

The march was then taken up through Hart and Hale streets to the public library, where the tablet was dedicated.

The tablet bears the names of 140 men. Those marked with a gold star are Oliver Ames, Jr., Michael J. Cadigan, Jr., Charles Coffey, Frank J. Kelleher, Norman Prince, N. S. Simpkins, Aaron D. Weld and Thomas D. Connolly.

Senator Augustus P. Loring presided, and in his remarks, which will be found on another page of today's Breeze, paid tribute to the men who gave their lives in the service. He gave a short sketch of each and his record in the war, paying special mention to Thomas D. Connolly, N. S. Simpkins, Jr., and Norman Prince, each of whom he personally knew.

Following Senator Loring's address came the unveiling of the tablet by members of Preston post. A selection, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," was followed by the dedicatory prayer by Rev. J. H. Downey, of St. Margaret's church.

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards was the principal speaker of the afternoon. He told of the splendid work done by the soldiers of the World war. Speaking of the men whose names are on the honor roll, General Edwards commended their patriotism, their call to duty, and their supreme sacrifice, laying particular emphasis on the life and work of N. S. Simpkins, Jr., who was a member of his own staff.

The General then presented the French certificates of merit to the parents or relatives of those who died in the service.

Mayor James McPherson made a short address in which he paid a tribute to the men of Beverly Farms for

DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL TABLET AT BEVERLY FARMS

Hon. Augustus P. Loring Delivers Address— Unveiling of Memorial to World War Heroes

WE have come from decorating the graves of those who have fought for their country, for you and me. We have scattered flowers on the sparkling waves of the trackless sea for those who lie below the waters, and now we are about to unveil a tablet, to commemorate the names of those who fought in the World war, so that their names may be recorded in imperishable bronze. But on this day consecrated to the memory of soldiers who have died, it seems fitting that we should call particular attention to the names on the tablet of those who have fought their fight, kept the faith, crossed the river, and for whom the trumpets have sounded on the other side:

Oliver Ames, Jr.—Born April 8, 1895. Enlisted in the first battalion of 165th infantry, 42d division. He was a second lieutenant, and acting captain when killed in action July 29, 1915, at Maurey farm, in France.

Michael J. Cadigan, Jr.—Born Aug. 7, 1897. Enlisted in Battery F, 101st field artillery, 26th division. Died of spinal meningitis January, 1918.

Charles Cossey. — Born in England about 1880. Enlisted early in the war in the Cold Stream Guards of the English army. He was in constant action, badly wounded and gassed and died in France.

Frank J. Kelleher.—Born March 4, 1894. Enlisted in Battery F, 101st field artillery, 26th division. He went through the Aisne-Marne, the San Mehiel and Argonne offensives, and died of pneumonia at Lyons, France, Feb. 20, 1919.

Norman Prince. — Born Aug. 31, 1887. Enlisted as aviator in French army in 1914. He was a lieutenant in the famous Lafayette escadrille and met his death in an aeroplane accident, Oct. 12, 1916. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre with two stars and four palms, and the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Nathaniel S. Simpkins, Jr. — Born Dec. 14, 1885. Enlisted February, 1916, in 101st field artillery, 26th division, and served first on the border and then went to France, and was on the staff of General Clarence R. Edwards, first as lieutenant and later as captain. Saw active service through the whole campaign, and died in France, Oct. 22, 1918.

Aaron D. Weld. — Born Sept. 21, 1896. He was a first lieutenant in Co. I, 7th infantry of regular army. Was in constant active service and killed in action Oct. 11, 1918.

Thomas D. Connolly. — Born Oct. 14, 1856. He served as chairman of the exemption board from the time of its organization until he died Oct. 24, 1918. His death was caused by his devotion to the service.

Of these I knew intimately Connolly, Prince and Simpkins, and so I ask your forgiveness if I add a few words of personal appreciation and recollection to the formal part of my address.

Tom Connolly was honest, sincere, and wise, a good friend and no one's enemy,—he gave all that was in him for the service. You doubtless remember that terrible winter, with the icy roads and fierce cold, twelve and fourteen degrees below zero, Tom was out night after night and all day and finally it killed him. He was drafted to his position and did his duty just as those who went overseas did their's. He did not count the cost and, like them, he paid the price.

I would never have prophesized that Nat Simpkins would make a soldier. A gentleman in the best sense of the word, but his invariable good humor, his extraordinary tact and his ability to do the right thing at the right time made him invaluable on the border and in France. I think another who can speak better than I will give some further details.

I knew Norman Prince, as many of you did, as an easy-going, brilliant and fearless boy. If there was a fiery horse, Prince rode him; if there was a reefing breeze, Prince carried full sail. When aeroplanes were a dangerous experiment, he learned to fly. He passed through the Harvard law school with credit and became a member of the bar. Soon after the war broke out I was coming from Chicago on the train with Norman Prince's father, and he said to me: "Loring, if we had the spirit of our fathers, we would be fighting in France."

Soon after I heard that Norman had joined the French school of aviation at Pau, France. He graduated and became an organizer of the Lafayette escadrille, famous for its daring. He rose to be sergeant, then lieutenant; he was mentioned in orders and received the Croix de Guerre with two stars and four palms. One evening he saw an aviator attacked by several bosche planes. He took to the air, repelled the enemy and rescued his friend. In the meantime it had become dark and he had to alight on a strange field. His machine was overturned by an aerial wire, invisible in the darkness and he came to earth mortally wounded. They placed the cross of the Legion of Honor on the breast of the dying man. He smiled and then closed his eyes forever.

I wish I could tell you something about the others, who lived as nobly as these men did and died as heroes. It is only the lack of the personal contact that compels a silence which I would gladly break, but I know that their worthiness is known to many and their exploits are written among the stars.

MEMORIAL DAY ADDRESS AT MANCHESTER

Excerpts from Speech Delivered by Major Judson Hannigan at Evening Exercises

IT is an annual pleasure to consecrate a day to the memory of those who have fallen defending the nation's honor and its glory. Death which is the result of a lofty purpose, conceived and carried to its final conclusion, has always been an important factor in the evolution of government.

Although the achievements of the brave men of the G. A. R. have been repeatedly praised in song and story, they will ever remain an inspiration to the posterity of that great army. But in fairness to them and in fairness to the nation which they saved we cannot look back at their deeds without seeing and feeling the result of those deeds. Such retrospection turns our eyes toward the future. Upon the foundation which those men laid a great nation has been built, and it is for us who come at a later period to maintain the traditions which they have so gloriously given to us.

We are at a vital point in the nation's history and if all the sacrifices which have been made are to bear fruit then we and our children must take up our full duties of citizenship and

EDITORIAL

Senator A. P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing (Beverly), has always enjoyed the support of this district in the state Senate. His business experience, his wide acquaintance, his sterling honesty and unflinching opposition to every evil measure, has won the admiration of his constituency and compelled the acknowledgement of his leadership in state affairs. He was elected to the Constitutional Convention without opposition and his efficient service resulted in his being drafted for service in the Senate, in which body he has acquitted himself well. His constituency has never been uneasy concerning his position on questions involving good judgment and sound ethical decision. He has announced that "it was stated recently, that some years ago an agreement was made by which Salem should have the senatorship four years, Beverly two years, Marblehead two years and Danvers two years. It is Marblehead's turn. While I was not a party to that agreement, I believe that where such agreements are made they should be respected. I have therefore stated that I should not be a candidate unless Marblehead asks me to be. She has not and I do not expect she will. So I am out." The position taken is an honorable one. The arrangement made by party leaders is solely to give every town or city in the district representation in turn in the Senate. There are objections to such arbitrary agreements, of course. Inasmuch as the arrangement has been made, Mr. Loring has kept political faith in accepting the agreement. Mr. Loring should not be "out." Marblehead would do well to make the request which the senator does not expect. The voters of the state have discovered the sterling character of the service which he has rendered and will draft him for state service again. He would make an admirable governor after having been elected lieutenant-governor. It will not surprise the friends who know his work best if he be drafted as the Republican candidate for the lieutenant-governorship when a candidate is to be drafted for that office pursuant to the general policy of the party. He would be an admirable choice and would maintain in both offices in turn the best traditions of the Republican party in Massachusetts and the lieutenant-governorship and the governorship of Massachusetts.

The Rare Days of June have come, as rare and beautiful as ever. There is a charm which June has that no other month can give. Fortunate the man who can have these days for labor or holiday on our Shore!

Governor Coolidge has again shown his alertness and ability in the message which he has sent to the legislature asking for authority to appoint a fuel administrator and for an appropriation to care for the work of his department. Since the war the industries of Massachusetts, in common with all of the industries of the New England states, have been threatened by a shortage of coal because of the great demands made upon the American supplies by Europe. The European prices are so high that it makes the European trade more profitable to the coal operators than domestic trade. Senator Walsh at Washington has recommended a national embargo on soft coal, not for the purpose of abandoning Europe in her hour of need in the reconstruction period, but in order that the American industries may not suffer. Governor Coolidge has in mind drafting again as administrator James J. Storrow, who rendered such efficient service under the war conditions. The decision of the governor is a wise one. Massachusetts is dependent upon industrial coal for the maintenance of her industries. The water power of the state is negligible and a shortage of coal would mean a crisis in every Massachusetts industry. Massachusetts must conserve its interests and assure coal for the work which it has to do. It will be folly to wait upon the individual activities of great coal companies or to wait for national action. A coal administrator will have the authority of the state in his negotiations for coal and in its distribution.

Memorial Day This Year was the first when all of the young men were home from overseas or returned from their military stations. Last year the American Legion had not been organized and many of the young men were still in the service of the nation. On Monday the ranks of the Grand Army, the heroes of other years, marched again to the tread of marshal music, escorted by a company of stalwart men in olive drab who had served our country in the last war. In every city and town on the North Shore the two organizations united to maintain the cherished inheritances of the day. The original memorial observances began by the voluntary act of some young women in Atlanta, Georgia, and now the day has been designated by our government as well as our patriotic organizations as a day of service in honor of the loyal dead who died in the service of our nation in the wars of the republic—the wars of the colonies, the war with England in 1776, the war with England in 1812, the war for the preservation of the Union in 1861-5, the war with Spain in 1898 and in the great war against Germany. The presence of the younger men assures the maintenance of the ceremonies of the day in the future by the members of the American Legion. The Grand Army of the Republic is still strong, despite the flight of years, but each year the men are older and the obligations and duties are heavier because fewer hands are left to care for the work. In the future the men of the Legion will prove valiant assistants in the observance of the day. Then, as the years pass by, when the ranks of the G. A. R. become thinner, the young men in olive drab must take up the work. It was a pleasant sight to see the men in blue and in khaki and know that peace was in the land again. The day brought to mind the fresh graves in France and Germany that were being cared for on the same day.

The Socialists have had their records marred by their extremists, while the real value of sane "social" reform is the spirit of the age. True socialism wins its way and the cause of the "reds" languishes and fails.

Congress has begun the consideration of legislation that will eventually assure to the employees of the Postal Department, salaries which are commensurate with the responsibilities and duties of their positions. The services which the postal clerks and carriers have been giving to the people of the country are universally appreciated. Words of appreciation and articles of commendation in the news journals of the country will not aid the under-paid postal employees to meet the bills that come due with the coming of every month. The appreciation of the people must find expression in fact and deed as well as in words. It is elementary justice that prompts the consideration of the wage scales and the hours of service of employees in the postal department. When one considers the unworthy methods used by men of many callings to obtain an increase in income and when the honorable action of the postal employees is considered, there is nothing but praise to be offered. In all conditions of weather the postal carriers are at their duties. The sagacity which many have shown in their work has resulted in an efficient postal service. The salary increases are not large. This is but a step in the right direction. The injustice of underpaid workers should be corrected as speedily as possible.

The Labor Problem on the North Shore is acute, especially in the care of the grounds of the estates. Experienced gardeners and professional agricultural workers are unavailable. The head gardeners and operators of farms are having difficulty in engaging help to do the specific and general tasks on the estates and farms. Laboring men that were available in pre-war days for $1.50 per day, the Italians, are now demanding wages incommensurate with their responsibilities and duties. There is a restlessness and a lack of initiative that is irritating to men of energy and spirit who take pleasure in doing their work well and maintaining their estates and operating the farms in a thorough-going manner. The high wages make it imperative for owners to cut expenditures, with the result that many are forced to operate their departments with an inadequate number of men and with men who are untrained and who require more supervision than their tasks should require. The late season is another handicap. Despite these limitations, however, most of the estates are in fair order. It has been a difficult season for the owners of property, whether one owns a cottage or a more pretentious estate. The season will be a difficult one for every gardener and superintendent, for there is no promise now of a change in labor conditions. Increased wages have worked favorable in many ways, for some very objectional foreign colonies have been obliterated. They were a menace that was recognized by everyone who realized the evil situation. The high wages are proving a problem, but eventually the new standards will mean a raising of the standards of living despite the present trying "transition" period.

The Naval Middies may make "ninnies" of themselves if they wish, but they should have had a saving sense of propriety to have planned their "sob Sunday" demonstration for some other day than Memorial Sunday. The sorrow of that day was real. It was a travesty that merited the punishment imposed.

This Year the Holidays are favorable to workers in the cities and towns, affording long week-ends from Friday evening until Monday night or Tuesday morning. The highways last Friday were an evidence to the popularity of the long week-end, for automobiles laden with baggage and with all seats occupied by enthusiastic holiday seekers were crowding every road into the Essex County district. The holiday week-end was a glorious one. The weather was ideal. Whatever the form of the recreation desired, the weather made it an enjoyable opportunity. Most everyone sought the open air, and the days were ideal. There was nothing left to be desired. Owners of estates had opportunities to go over their work for the season, to seek recreation on the golf links, to motor, to entertain and to attend memorial observances on Monday. Cottagers went fishing on stream and ocean, planted gardens and motored, and had leisure to unite with the veterans of the wars in their observance of Memorial Day. Everyone who could and had homes or estates on the Shore spent the week-end here. The evening trains on Monday were laden to capacity and compelled the addition of many cars to accommodate the holiday crowds. Surely there is no better place to spend the holiday than the North Shore and the large number of people who were here over the week-end testify to the fact that the attractions of the district are well-known. There are other holidays in the year with long week-end periods that will be welcomed by the workers in factories and offices. These holiday seasons give rest, recreation and leisure, breathing spells in the hard work of life, and they should be enjoyed.

America Is Not to have a separate peace. The Knox Resolution has been vetoed by the President and he has been sustained in his position by the nation. The purposes of the Knox resolution are commendable, — the establishment of a legal status of peace, but the method is condemnable. The attitude of the President is that of the American people, however strongly one may oppose his personal methods and general policy. The executive leader has signally failed in many of his acts, and the present entanglement is due in no small degree to his own fixed mind. However that may be, the veto stands out as a state paper that must command attention. It is desirable that peace be established and that the embarrassments of war-time conditions be ended. It is more desirable that the nation maintain its honorable relations with the nations of Europe with whom we were allied in the late war. The efforts of the nations to safeguard the peace of the world must be sustained.

America did not hesitate in throwing into the contest the full power of her military ability, when war was declared to make the world safe for democracy. The period of strife has ended and the time has arrived in which the labor of war may be conserved by the constructive coöperation of the nations. America cannot afford to sacrifice her position of leadership and influence by the establishment of a condition of isolation; America must aid in the present day international problems. It is the duty of the present, just as it was the duty of the nation to enter the war. The responsibilities of the era are no less important nor obligatory than the responsibilities of war. There is a patriotic spirit which thrives in an atmosphere of war; it exhilarates, and enthusiasm is rife. The thrill of war must be followed by the deliberate and difficult tasks of peace-time negotiations. The hard labors of the battlefield won by the life-blood of American soldiers must not be sacrificed.

The situation is clearer because of the veto. The Knox resolution has failed, as it ought to have failed. America is now in a position to ally itself with the nations of Europe in a progressive program for the establishment of international equity, freedom and liberty.

America has become a world power and must exercise that power with daring, initiative and justice. The nation cannot neglect the obligations of the present any more than it could the duty of the war period. The peace days bring the new tasks which must be carefully done in the name of the republic and its inheritances. It is now time for the leaders of the nation to arrange for such a compromise as will assure the necessary number of votes to eliminate all the objectional features of Article X and re-draft a new article that will insure the spirit of American coöperation without the sacrifice of our national independence. There is surely a way out of the present unfortunate situation. The time has come when the American Senate should make an effort to re-establish peace conditions by the adoption of compromise measures that will assure the nation the opportunity of laboring with the nations of the earth without in any way becoming entrapped in relations that will sacrifice American independence. This is the present situation.

There is strong opposition to the President's policy and of the methods he employed in arranging for the present League of Nations, but it must be conceded that in vetoing the Knox resolution he will make it possible for the Senate to reconsider the entire matter and formulate an article which when adopted will make peace a reality, an honor, and not a sham and a disgrace.

Gasoline has Increased in price, but its relative value does not appear to have been increased. Where can one receive greater values for money expended than that which comes from the purchase of gasoline, either for the commercial trucks or pleasure cars.

Motion Picture Regulation fight is nearly ended. Every effort has been made by the operators of motion picture theatres to block the proposed regulations. Their activities have been ill-advised and contrary to their own best interests. This is seen in the attitude of many owners, who have quietly approved the proposed legislation, because it will finally place them at an advantage in selecting films for their clientele. Now the owner is at the mercy of the producers of films; he is limited in his choice by what they can furnish to him on his contract for films for his theatre. The man who is making a fight to maintain the high ideals of right and to present good, clean and entertaining pictures, is having a difficult time. The opposition to the poor pictures presented is felt by reduced receipts at the box office. The state regulation of pictures will in the end prove a marked advantage to the man who operates only one theatre or who operates a chain of theatres. He will be aided by the state in the maintenance of a high standard in all reels presented. If the reels are rejected by the state department he will profit by the new standards. Eventually it will aid the producer. Massachusetts will eliminate the undesirable films and the producers will automatically adjust themselves to the demands for good films, and it will be an influence in the planning of scenarios. Many films now in existence will be useless in Massachusetts until expurgated at a great expense, but when the producers attempt to make new films guided by known standards of the state there should be an elimination of the undesirable films. One of the senators from the North Shore district in discussing this measure suscinctly stated the issue when he claimed that everything was being subjected to inspection,—meat, fish, eggs and milk. The people of Massachusetts do not propose to allow any man to sell decayed meat, putrid fish, rotten eggs or low standard milk. The necessity for inspection is recognized. Why should the operators of a moving picture producing company be exempt from inspection? The point is well taken and Senator A. P. Loring touched the vital reason why inspection cannot be objected to. The governor, with his habitual sense of fitness of things, will give the right side his support.

The Man Who has Delayed his plans for summer has but few days to find his place. The real estate operators will be able to help him, but he must quicken. The popularity of the North Shore increases. Never in the history of the coast has there been such a demand for summer homes.

Still, with such weather as prevailed over the holiday and since, we must admit that joy-riding is rightly named.

SELF-PITY

Man May be Beaten, but Not Lose Manhood if He Returns to Renew the Fight Again

MAN is nearest God when he feels pity for the unfortunate; he is nearest nothing when he feels pity for himself. Trained soldiers who are without employment while away idle hours by thinking of their hard lot and the general depravity of all men above the rank of private. They simmer in discontent. But let the bugles call to arms and they are agrin with the joy of action. They welcome hardship and make a jest of sudden death. When they had no just cause of complaint they were at outs with the universe; given multiplied grievances they laugh.

The idle mind is provincial. It stays at home. It finds little of interest in the world save itself and the body it inhabits. The idler thinks of himself. Self is his hobby, his vocation, his pet and his burden, and since all persons have something less than they desire, it follows that the self-centered man discovers cause of grievance. Let it be the impudence of a waiter, the state of the weather, approaching baldness or a persistent corn. No matter. Beginning with the assumption that the universe centers in his person he will magnify his grievance until he generates sufficient self-pity to feel a martyr. Once established in his martyrdom, he withdraws somewhat from the world of men and lives in the plaintive atmosphere where the ego fattens for the benefit of nerve specialists.

The man who is beaten may retire from the contest to regain his strength and return to conquer. The man who finds the blows too heavy may cry "Hold, enough!" and yet not lose the whole of his manhood. But he who quits to mend his wounds and washes them with tears of self-pity is no longer a man, but a thing. The door of hope is closed against him. He has fallen to the lowest depth man may know. He cannot come back; there is nothing to come back save the shell that once housed the spirit of a man.

When a child falls in its play and bumps its head against a chair it knows not whether to laugh or weep until it has had time to measure the pain. If the hurt is trivial the child will decide in favor of a laugh. But let an overfond mother lift the child to her lap and croon tender words of pity and its cries will alarm the neighbors. Children are easily persuaded to self-pity, and men are but children steadied by pride.

Every man of sense knows that work is good for him. Every man who has learned to do good work is proud of his skill and delights to make it manifest.

Yet let him who loves labor be visited by one who toils not save with his tongue and told of the pity uplifters feel for poor wretches who have a job to keep them decent and respectable, and forthwith he will find fault with his lot. Eight hours of labor! God pity us! Why must we toil more than two hours and twenty minutes? How pleasant it would be to loaf always and listen to the jargon of theorists who get a fat living by talking nonsense to suckers! And if necessary tasks could not be completed in the shorter hours we could all pleasantly starve to death.

When we observe a man making an ass of himself we cringe with shame. The shame is not for him, but for ourselves that we are related to one of so little sense. The folly of one man hurts all of his breed.

Americans—and by Americans I mean men of every race who have made America their home and know the love of liberty and pride of manhood and of service that is America—these are hurt and shamed when one of their fellows sobs to the tune of an air written for those under the yoke of a czar. Americans need not creep on their bellies to the governor's door, nor sit at his gate and howl for crumbs.

They know the meaning of a square deal and will have it under a government that is themselves. And if they find abuses in the system they have fashioned they will set about correcting them with their chins up and a level eye.

There is no place for whiners in a land where there is no master with a whip. Ease up on the soft pedal and give us more man talk, else this gentle drama will become a farce.—ROBERT QUILLEN in Saturday Evening Post.

MANCHESTER

Curtis Stanley, of Waltham, was in town over the holiday.

Francis M. Andrews, Jr., was home over the week-end and holiday.

Miss Gwendolyn Glendenning spent the holiday with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Glendenning, Church st.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Soulis, of Dorchester, spent the holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Soulis, Lincoln st.

Mrs. Benjamin Smith, of Marblehead, spent a few days last week at the home of her sister, Miss Asineth Dow, Norwood ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Proctor and daughter, Edna, of Gloucester, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Soulis on Memorial Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leach have occupied the Mrs. George Rowe cottage, corner Sea and Summer sts., for the season. Mr. Leach is one of the sorting clerks in the South Postal Station, Boston.

The five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Burgess, Morse ct., met with an accident Saturday afternoon. Stepping off the curb directly in front of a machine driven by D. T. Beaton, who was returning to his store from the house, the youngster was knocked down by the car, but fortunately fell between the wheels so the machine passed over him, but did not touch his body. Mr. Beaton at once applied his brakes, bringing the machine to a stop inside its own length. He pulled the boy from under the rear of the machine, and took him to his home. A physician was called, but no injury was found outside of a few bruises and scratches.

Breeze Plant Will Move Today and Tomorrow

The Breeze is moving today and tomorrow to its new home on Summer st. Today's issue of the Breeze is the last to be printed at the old plant, in the Knight bldg., at 33 Beach st., where the Breeze was first printed in Manchester and has experienced its growth from infancy days back in 1906 to the present.

While the new home is not entirely completed—and will not be for several weeks—the building is sufficiently finished to warrant moving the plant over the present week-end.

Visitors will be welcome at any time. In the near future a complete description of our new plant will be given.

Sturtevant and daughter, Nina, of Beverly, were guests at the house party given by Mr. and Mrs. Addison G. Stanwood, of Brook st., Manchester. The party was given over the week-end and holiday, and the guests were made up entirely of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Stanwood, who lived in Porto Rico at the time they did.

Week-End and Holiday Vacation Enjoyed by Many

Many Manchester families entertained relatives and friends over the week-end and Memorial Day. The holiday following Sunday gave a good opportunity to many to take advantage of a few days' vacation. Weather conditions were ideal. During the day there were picnic parties on Singing Beach, and the patriotic exercises held in the afternoon and evening were well attended. It was noticed that Frank B. Amaral post, A. L., made an unusually creditable showing, having about a hundred men in line.

FIRST OF SEASON

Manchester Wins from Essex, 18 to 4, in Opening Game

Manchester opened its baseball season on Saturday afternoon on the Norwood ave. playgrounds with a decisive victory over Essex by an 18 to 4 score. Against the strong club that Manager MacCallum has secured to represent the town this season, the Essex boys were absolutely helpless, and unable to check the wholesale scoring. Manchester put over tallies in every inning.

The game started out to be a battle of southpaws, between "Bill" Sullivan for Manchester and Lindholm for Essex, but the battle part went astray in the opening session. Lindholm's support evidently went with it, for it was lacking from the time Andrews faced him in the first until the last man was out in the eighth.

Lindholm was hit hard at times, but he stuck it out until the finish. The box score shows 17 safe hits, but perhaps a half dozen of them were the result of poor fielding and slow fielding rather than good stickwork.

In the fifth Jack Twiss, a right hander, succeeded Sullivan on the mound for Manchester. He showed more stuff than his predecessor, mixing up a nice assortment of curves with a dandy fast ball. He blanked the Essex team until the ninth, when the ship builders bunched a couple of hits with an error and decision against Manchester on a close play, scoring two runs.

"Jake" Warner played a grand game at second base. Andrews at first and Joyce at short will be fixtures. Wallace on third hasn't rounded into shape as yet and failed to show well Saturday. "Bill" Fallon on the hot corner would make the Manchester infield a classy quartet. Joyce certainly stung the ball hard, hitting for three sacks with the bases choked in the first and driving the ball over the left field fence with one on in the fourth. For good measure "Al" singled again in the seventh.

Levie played a pretty good game at short for Essex. Tom Boutchie did good work also and hit safely twice in four times up. Boutchie and Lindholm were the only ones not figuring in the error column. Lawson also had a blank there, but he didn't have a chance.

Tomorrow, Saturday, Manchester will play the Revere town team and will undoubtedly have more opposition than Essex presented on Saturday.

Wanted a Substitute

While waiting for the speaker at a public meeting, a pale little man in the audience seemed very nervous. He glanced over his shoulder from time to time, and squirmed and shifted about in his seat. At last, unable to stand it any longer, he arose and demanded, in a high penetrating voice: "Is there a Christian Scientist in this room?"

A woman at the other side of the hall got up and said, "I am a Christian Scientist."

"Well, then, madam," requested the little man, "would you mind changing seats with me? I'm sitting in a draft." —Exchange.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

"A Straight Deal, or The Ancient Grudge," by Owen Wister, author of "The Virginian," is one of the new books. I wish every thinking American would read it. The book was written to help promote a better understanding and feeling between the two great English-speaking nations. It is a very plain talk, but coming from one whose Americanism is unquestioned it should do much good.

"Have Faith in Massachusetts" is the title of a small volume containing some of the speeches and addresses of Calvin Coolidge, governor of Massachusetts. This book is full of good things. As long as we are blessed with such leaders as Calvin Coolidge we have every reason to "have faith in Massachusetts."

"The Blower of Bubbles" is a volume containing five short stories having to do with love and adventure, the background being supplied by the late war. The author was a soldier with the Canadian forces for nearly four years.

"The Harbor Road," by Sarah Ware Bassett, is a good novel. It is a humorous story of Cape Cod people. You will enjoy it.

"The Voice of the Pack," by Edison Marshall, is a story of the Oregon woods. Love, adventure and the great out-of-doors are all so well blended in this novel that the combination makes a very attractive bit of fiction.

"The Natural History of the Child," by Dr. Courtenany Dunn, is a very unusual book. The information contained between its covers is encyclopedic in character, much of it gleaned from out of the way sources. All lovers of children will enjoy this work.

Admirers of Leonard Wood—and their name is legion—will appreciate "Leonard Wood on National Issues," compiled by Even J. David.

Sir William Osler was one of the great physicians of all time. He was a man of broad culture and a great lover of classical literature. "The Old Humanities and the New Science" is the title given to his inaugural address as president of the British Classical association delivered a few months before his lamented death. It has a memorial introduction by Dr. Harvey Cushing, of Boston.

"Unbroken Lines," by Harriet L. Comstock, is one of the new novels. It is a good character study.

Much has been written lately on the subject of spiritualism, most of it in its favor. Once in a while, however, we have something on the negative side. Such a book is "The Case Against Spiritualism," by Jane T. Stoddart, author of "The Christian Year in Human Story" and "The New Testament in Life and Literature." She writes in a convincing way. Her arguments are well supported by facts.

Two works on wireless telegraphy, ordered some time ago, have arrived at the library. "The Elementary Principles of Wireless Telegraphy," by R. D. Bangany, is in two volumes. The other work is "Practical Wireless Telegraphy, a Complete Text Book for Students of Radio Communication," by Elemer Bucher, instructing engineer Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co., of America. Anyone interested in wireless telegraphy will find in these volumes much practical information.

A novel by W. Rider Haggard is always welcome. "The Ancient Allan" has just been received.

"The Gray Dream and Other Stories of New England Life," by Laura Walcott, is a volume of short stories portraying in a charming manner the New England of many years ago.

"Some Diversions of a Man of Letters," by Edmund Gosse, is a very entertaining book. The author of the work has been librarian of the House of Lords since 1904. He has written a number of volumes on English literature.

If you would learn something about the literary lions of England read "Set Down in Malice," by Gerald Cumberland. The book contains a series of interviews with prominent British writers.

Next week there will be a short note on some works of fiction, popular fifteen or twenty years ago.

Boy Scout Week May 30th to June 6th

For ten years the Boy Scouts of America has stood for character building, citizenship training, — hand in hand with school and church and home; Americanization, without hysteria and by nature's own way, have been its ideals.

Growth has come, steadily and soundly. In ten years fully one million two hundred thousand boys have become Scouts.

Fourteen thousand unpaid scoutmasters give at least 72 nights a year, and 24 half days or days to the personal leadership of their boys. Eighteen thousand unpaid assistant scoutmasters more than double this citizenship contribution.

The enrollment of parents and friends of boys as associate members of the National Council (chartered by Congress) brings the homes into the movement, and greatly assists in extending it to other boys and homes.

Right into the hand of every father of a boy, the Boy Scout movement puts an insurance policy for that boy's future. Scouting is not something outside the home to turn your boy over to, and forget about it. Scouting is the most active force ever let loose in the world for welding father and son together into a winning team for home and country.

Boy Scout week is being observed throughout the United States this week and will continue until Sunday. An effort is being made to increase the membership and enlarge the work which the organization plans to accomplish.

Many can bear adversity, but few contempt.

WILLIS—FLOYD

MARRIAGE CEREMONY OF MANCHESTER COUPLE

The leading social event for several weeks in Manchester was the wedding Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock of Dr. Frank Adelbert Willis and Miss Abbie Perry Floyd, only daughter of Town Clerk and Mrs. Lyman W. Floyd, both of the contracting parties being Manchester residents.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride, in Central sq., and was attended only by members of the immediate families. Rev. Frederic W. Manning, pastor of the Congl. church, Manchester, performed the ceremony, the Episcopal single ring service being used.

The bride was very charmingly gowned in white satin, with beaded georgette crepe overhanging, and wore a bridal veil of white georgette. She carried a bridal bouquet of a shower of lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Florence McDonald, of Manchester, who wore pale pink organdie. The bridesmaids were Miss Edith Willis and Miss Elizabeth Willis, of West Roxbury, sisters of the groom; Miss Gladys Hildreth and Miss Ethel Allen, of Manchester. Following the color scheme of yellow and blue which predominated in the decorations, the bridesmaids and flower girls were attired in yellow and blue dresses. Miss Allen and Miss Elizabeth Willis were gowned in yellow organdie, Miss Edith Willis and Miss Hildreth in blue organdie.

Thomas S. Marsh, of Dorchester, formerly of Manchester, was best man. Mr. Marsh has been a personal friend of Dr. Willis for a number of years.

Alice Elaine Floyd, dressed in blue, and Dorothy Allen Floyd, in yellow, young nieces of the bride, were flower girls.

Promptly at 7 o'clock, to the accompaniment of the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Long's four-piece stringed orchestra, the bridal party entered the front room of the Floyd home on Central st. The room was handsomely decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, white lilacs predominating. The ceremony was performed in the southeast corner, against a bank of palms. The bride was given away by her father, Lyman W. Floyd.

The reception immediately following the wedding was attended by hosts of guests and friends from various parts of Massachusetts. A large number of friends from Manchester were present to congratulate Dr. and Mrs. Willis and wish them the best of happiness and prosperity.

The ushers at the reception were William W. Hoare, Frank L. Floyd, Bertram P. Floyd and Harry R. Floyd.

Refreshments of ice cream, fancy cakes, frozen pudding, assorted nuts and punch were served. Miss Hester Rust, of Manchester; Miss Lorna Pinnock, of Salem; Miss Elsie Murphy, of Cambridge; Miss Mildred Trask, of Beverly; Miss Elizabeth Wells, of Gloucester, and Miss Edith Butler, of Salem, were the servers.

Among the gifts were six plates over a hundred years old, electric table lamp, a handsome assortment of cut glass and silverware, pictures, various beautiful dishes and serving trays, linen in abundance, and many other gifts from friends and relatives presented with the congratulations and best wishes of the donors.

Amid showers of confetti, the newlyweds escaped in an automobile, their destination being known only to themselves. They will be away from town about 10 days, and on their return will occupy one of the apartments in Mrs. Fred Swett's house, on Friend's ct. Dr. and Mrs. Willis will be at home to their friends after July 1.

Mrs. Willis is the only daughter of Town Clerk and Mrs. Lyman W. Floyd. She was born in Manchester and is very popular with the younger set, with whom she has always been a general favorite. She has made her home with her parents, and during the war was especially active in Red Cross and relief work.

Dr. Willis is a dentist, having opened an office in Manchester only a short while before the war. He was commissioned a lieutenant before going to France and was promoted to captain after being in service a while. He is a prominent member of the Manchester club, Frank B. Amaral post, A. L., Liberty lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Beverly, and Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., of Manchester.

Theatres

Horticultural Hall Pictures

The attractions tomorrow, Saturday, evening at Horticultural hall, Manchester, will be Ethel Clayton in Rupert Hughes' story, "The 13th Commandment;" Frank Keenan in "Smouldering Embers;" Ford Weekly. This is a double bill program.

Next Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 8, Wanda Hawley in Jerome K. Jerome's "Miss Hobbs." This picture will be shown in Manchester before it is exhibited to Boston audiences. Al. St. John in "Ship Ahoy;" Herbert Rawlinson in "Chang and the Law;" Prizma colored reel; Fox News.

See display adv. for coming attractions.

Larcom Theatre, Beverly
Week of June 7

Mon. and Tues. — Dorothy Dalton in "The Dark Mirror." Tom Moore in "Duds."

Wed. and Thurs.—Pauline Frederick in "The Paliser Case." Madge Kennedy in "The Blooming Angel."

Fri. and Sat.—Ethel Clayton in "A Lady in Love."

Attractions at Strand Theatre, Lynn, for Next Week

Charles Ray, as the quick-witted American doughboy, who couldn't be kept down on the farm after he had seen gay Paree on his way home from war service in France, will be the principal screen attraction at the Strand theatre, Lynn, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. On the same program will be shown Larry Semon's new five-part comedy-drama "School Days" with its afterpart showing how the youngsters developed in later years; Burton Holmes' latest travels, Strand Topical Review, featured organ solos by Miss M. Frances Doughty and special numbers by Byron G. Ricker's Strand Symphony orchestra and soloists.

Wm. S. Hart in his new $450,000 western bandit production, "The Toll Gate," will be featured next Thursday, Friday and Saturday together with episode 12, "The Jungle Fire," of the African wild animal serial; "The Lost City."

The Strand's daily performances are continuous from 1 to 10.30 p. m. and Sunday concerts are given from 4.30 to 10 p. m. Plenty of safe parking space is provided for out-of-towners who attend in autos.

Federal Theatre, Salem

How you goin' to keep them in Paree after they've seen the farm. That's the way the popular ragtime tune will have to be rewritten if "Paris Green," the picture at the Federal theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is presenting the facts. Charles Ray is the star.

"Paris Green" presents Mr. Ray in a role that fits him like a glove. And Ann May makes a charming heroine.

On the same bill is Norma Talmadge in "She Loves and Lies." It is a special double feature bill.

ROUTINE BUSINESS TRANSACTED AT SELECTMEN'S MEETING

At the meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Manchester, held Tuesday evening of this week, it was voted to grant a license to John L. Silva to build a garage, 50 by 75 feet, on his land, off Morse ct. Licenses were granted Shepard & Story to operate four auto buses between Manchester and Gloucester. A victualler's license was granted Jeffrey S. Reed.

Joseph Coen was appointed special police officer for a period of six months dating from June 8, 1920. The matter of former officer Byron Bullock being returned to duty is left for at least another six months. The Selectmen have recently received several new "No Parking Here" signs. The signs have been delivered to the chief of police and will be placed where he directs.

MEMORIAL DAY

FITTINGLY OBSERVED IN MANCHESTER—SPECIAL EXERCISES GIVEN BY PATRIOTIC ORDERS

Memorial Day was appropriately observed in Manchester under the direction of Allen post, G. A. R., assisted by Col. Woodbury camp, S. of V., Frank B. Amaral post, A. L., and Allen Woman's Relief corps. Weather conditions were of the best for a day's celebration, and the program of special exercises was carried out as planned in advance.

The town was decked with flags and bunting, and the townspeople liberally supported the various activities of the day by their attendance and coöperation.

The line of march was formed at 1.45 o'clock at G. A. R. hall, with Willard L. Rust as marshal. The line included Clark's band, of Gloucester; Frank B. Amaral post, A. L.; Boy Scout troop, of Manchester; Col. Woodbury camp, S. of V., escort to Post 67, G. A. R., and members of the Allen post, G. A. R., in carriages.

The usual exercises were held at the cemeteries. At Summer st. cemetery there were eight graves decorated with flags and wreaths, ten at Union cemetery and 85 at Rosedale.

Services were held at the monument, after which the Woman's Relief corps conducted special exercises at Town wharf. Flowers were cast on the water in memory of departed naval heroes. Firing of a volley by members of the Legion post and sounding of taps were impressive features. The line then returned to the hall and was dismissed. A band concert on the Common by Clark's band completed the afternoon's program.

The evening exercises were held at 7.30 o'clock in the Town hall, musical selections being furnished by the Schubert quartet. Major Justin Hannigan, a veteran of the World war and a member of the American Legion, delivered the address, a complete account of which is printed on another page of this week's BREEZE. The following program was presented:

The Western Union telegraph office has opened for the summer season, having rooms in the Manchester House, as usual.

Postcards received from Rev. H. E. Levoy and family state that they are having a fine time at Star lake, N. Y. They will remain away from town for a portion of next week.

Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts Outlines Our Paramount Duty as People of the United States

The people of the United States are trying to shirk the responsibility of paying their own just share of our war's cost. Every man is clamoring to be placed in the same position as he was in prior to the war. Each is buying just as much food, just as much clothing, and is spending money on just as many luxuries as he did before we entered this struggle. And the production isn't here to meet the demand.

It might be possible for a single individual to shirk his responsibility, but it is utterly impossible for a nation, or for the entire people of that nation, to do so.

Until the people of the United States realize this, realize that they must take upon themselves the burdens which the war has brought about there is bound to be considerable dissatisfaction with the burdens that are being forced upon them. Every man is asking an increase in his spending power, and at the same time he objects to paying a relative increase in cost on the price of the goods he buys.

The remedy of this entire proposition lies not in the enforcement of some arbitrary regulatory act, but in the stimulation of production. A stimulation in production that will be great enough to re-create the materials which the years of war destroyed.

This increase of production will never be brought about properly until the United States allows the laws of trade to work their way. During a brief period an artificial form of restraint may seem to aid in reconstruction work, but ere long its hampering effect will become evident.

Laws against profiteering and their more or less arbitrary enforcement will not build houses, will not produce clothing, will not provide the nation with coal. Such laws tend to restrain people from entering into such occupations, and thus, in the end, defeat their own purpose.—Gov. Coolidge in Boston's Chamber of Commerce Current Affairs.

Boy Scout week is being observed by the Manchester troop this week, the dates being from May 29 to June 6.

The Willis-Floyd wedding and reception was attended by a large number of relatives and guests from out-of-town.

A telephone alarm from Box 52 called the fire truck to a chimney fire at the Eiseman estate at West Manchester early Sunday morning. The blaze was extinguished without much damage resulting.

Editor H. W. Eldredge, of the Antrim Reporter, Antrim, N. H., and family, were in town last Friday. H. B. Eldredge returned home with them for over the week-end and holiday, making the trip by auto.

Among the many visitors in town over the holiday were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker, of Chelsea, with the former's mother; and Mr. and Mrs. Allan McKinnon, with Mr. McKinnon's parents, on North st.

Fenton Moore has a position with Perkins & Corliss as automobile salesman and general assistant.

Daniel Chane is commencing his vacation the first of next week from his duties as clerk at the postoffice.

Mrs. Bertram Floyd entertained her mother, Mrs. D. H. Mitchell, of Medford Hillside, over the week-end.

Mrs. Edwin P. Hooper has returned to her home on Ocean st., Manchester Cove, after spending the winter in Cambridge.

Harry W. Purington is expected home within a day or two from a trip to Globe, Ariz., and New Mexico, where he has been in connection with his position as private secretary for Frank P. Knight.

Russell Lloyd joined his wife (nee Annabelle Lodge) and two children Monday after a journey from Munson, Alberta, where he had gone from California to harvest his wheat-crop that was buried in the early snows of last autumn before it could be harvested. Mrs. Lloyd has been in Manchester since leaving western Canada last fall, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lodge, Bennett st. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd are undecided as to their plans for the present, though they will ultimately go to their new home in Palermo, Cal., where Mr. Lloyd is conducting an olive plantation with his younger brother.

We regret to report the continued serious illness of John R. Cheever, the photographer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ayers, of Manchester will observe their 25th anniversary of their marriage, June 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tent, who recently moved from Clairmont pk., have stored their furniture and have taken rooms with Mrs. Susan E. Hooper, 17 Union st.

James Scott, who was for many years the gardener at the H. L. Higginson estate, West Manchester, has secured the position made vacant by the resignation of Wm. Till, at the Coolidge estate, Coolidge Point. When Mr. Scott left Manchester some years ago, he went to Cuba and engaged in fruit growing. He came back from Cuba several years ago and went to Southbridge. He will return to the North Shore again next Monday.

Editor I. M. Marshall, of the Manchester Cricket, has been a busy man the past week—busy in his position as president of the Mass. Press assoc., which has been host to the National Editorial assoc. on the occasion of its annual convention, held this year in Boston. Mr. Marshall has been in Boston most of the week and has taken a prominent part in the meetings of the convention. Yesterday several hundred of the members visited Beverly as guests of the United Shoe Machinery Co., going later for a trip along the Shore through Manchester.

MANCHESTER BASEBALL

The Manchester team will have the strong Revere town team as opponents at the playgrounds tomorrow, Saturday, afternoon. The game will start promptly at 3.15.

Manchester will have a new catcher to try out this week when Healey, the star catcher of the Brookline team, will do the backstopping for Twiss and Lothrop. Healey is the Dee type of receiver with a lot of pepper, good throwing arm, and knows how to handle the bat. He has been recommended by Twiss and caught for him the past four or five years. Kelley will be seen in left field this week. Outside of these two new men, Manchester will have the same lineup as last week.

Wm. Hodgdon resumed his carrier duties at the postoffice yesterday. Allan P. Dennis commenced today on his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Franklin and son, who have been making their home in the Swett house on Friend ct., will leave tomorrow for their camp on the Kennebec in Maine, to be away until September. In the meanwhile Dr. Willis and his bride (Abbie P. Floyd) will occupy the furnished apartment on their return from their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Gavin and three small children are newcomers to Manchester as year-round residents. They have this week moved from Boston to the house on School st., formerly used as the Manchester Food Centre. The house is owned by Mrs. John W. Campbell, who is now in California. Mrs. Gavin is a niece of Mrs. Campbell, her maiden name being Miss McDonough.

Wm. Till has secured a position with Frank P. Knight, and has moved his household to the Knight homestead on Central st. Mr. Till was for 12 years in the employ of Hon. T. J. Coolidge as gardener on his estate at Coolidge Point. A pleasant acknowledgement of these years of faithful service came in the form of a check for $500 as Mr. Till concluded his services last week.

After a most successful career, inspired by war conditions, the Manchester Food Centre closed its activities with the end of May, and Miss Parker, who has been in charge the last year, has gone to Beverly to continue her some line of activities with the Health Centre, which is a permanent organization. Miss Parker will carry on her home economic, cooking, dressmaking and other classes in Beverly, and it is barely possible some arrangements will be made in the fall to carry on some of the work here, though we do not say this with authority. At least the wish has been expressed.

SOME DEFINITIONS OF AN AMERICAN

An American is a person:

Who not only shouts "Old Glory!" but feels it.

Who pursues a practical, not a passive democracy.

Who not only likes to thrive with his country, but is ready to die for it.

Who would not barter its tiniest blade of grass for the wealth of the universe.

Who respects its institutions, who does not deride them.

Who believes in principle, not its stultification.

Who can be genuinely sympathetic without being patronizing.

Who rocks the cradle with one hand and balances his books with the other.

Who is childlike with you in success and staunch in adversity.

Who loves one woman and honors all.

Who is mild with the simple, but a rock with the sophisticated.

Who can pat a puppy that bespatters his trousers.

Who is square with himself, and lenient toward ignorance.

Who is fair to labor, and labors fairly.

Who is humble in his achievements, and generous with his praise.

Who can be a stalwart champion as well as an innocent bystander.

Who observes the intent, not the letter, of the law.

Who can be gallant to a scrub-woman and indifferent to the haughty.

Who is fastidious about his moral shirt cuffs as his laundered linen.

Who tries to be kind to every race and creed because he has no wish to draw distinctions among those who will serve him in the pinch.—New York Sun.

Deep

Sea Scout: Well, what do you think about the ocean?

Emil Jordoin has returned to his work at the F. P. Gaudreau barber shop, Central sq. Saturday was the first day he has worked for the past six weeks. He has been quite ill.

The permanent members of the Beverly Farms fire department have drawn their annual vacation periods. Frank L. Woodbury is first on the list and his vacation will start July 5.

The M. J. Cadigan post, A. L., carried their new silk American flag in the Memorial Day march. It is most beautiful and the boys are justly proud of it. The flag was recently presented to them by Preston W. R. corps.

The bronze tablet which was unveiled on Memorial Day will be set up in the reading room of the Beverly Farms library. There are inscribed on it, 129 names of the Beverly Farms men who gave their services in the World war.

The West beach pavilion is now open for the season in charge of H. W. Perkins, superintendent. The warm days of this week induced quite a number to go in bathing; they certainly seemed to enjoy their bath in the briny deep.

The estate of Mrs. Caroline Pierce and son, Charles E. Pierce, on High st., which has been closed since last fall, is for sale. Both of the above parties are now making their home in Woburn, and it is doubtful if they return to live at Beverly Farms.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Beverly Farms fire department will be held at the local fire station next Monday evening. The committee representing the local companies is very busy with arrangements to make the coming field day in Beverly a success.

M. Silverberg and family, of Boston, moved to Beverly Farms last Saturday for the summer. They are occupying their home on West st. Mr. Silverberg, for a long period in the tailoring business, became interested last winter in the wool trade and consequently sold out his tailoring business. The store on West st. is soon to be opened by Mr. Silverberg's successor.

Summer Schedule at St. John's Church

Beginning Sunday, June 6, the summer schedule of services at St. John's church, Beverly Farms (Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, pastor), will go into effect. Holy Communion at 8; morning service and sermon at 10.30. The Bible classes for children will begin the first week in July. The Sunday evening service is discontinued for the summer.

Senator Loring Not a Candidate for Re-Election

Senator Augustus P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, who is serving his second term as senator from the second Essex district, will not be a candidate for re-election. He says:

"It was stated to me recently that some years ago an agreement was made by which Salem should have the senatorship four years, Beverly two years, Marblehead two years and Danvers two years. It is Marblehead's turn.

"While I was not a party to that agreement, I believe that where such agreements are made they should be respected. I have therefore stated that I should not be a candidate unless Marblehead asks me to be. She has not, and I do not expect she will. So I am out."

The building on Hart st. known as the George A. Bennett store and tenement, recently purchased by Dr. John J. Riordan, has been moved across the street to the rear of Dr. Riordan's property, where a foundation has been prepared. The building will be turned into a cottage house.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on hand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

Lawrence A. Ford, a former well-known Beverly Farms young man, delivered the Memorial Day address in Beverly.

The Beverly Farms American Legion ball team will play the Rockports at the local playgrounds tomorrow—Saturday—afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Connolly, High st., are being congratulated on the birth of their second child, a son, born the first of this week.

The summer residents and visitors are rapidly coming to Beverly Farms and Pride's Crossing, and the village is beginning to be quite a busy place.

It is reported that George Wyness, superintendent at the Henry C. Frick estate at Pride's Crossing, has tendered his resignation to take effect in about a month.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Harris, of Berlin, N. H., have been spending the past week at Beverly Farms visiting friends.

Mrs. Mary Dwyer and son, Wm. P. Dwyer, are moving into their new home, the Linehan homestead, so-called, at Pride's Crossing.

John Daniels, of Cambridge, a former well-known Beverly Farms business man, has commenced work at Brewer's market as a meat cutter.

The wedding of Forrester Pierce to Miss Helen Troy, both of Melrose, will take place in that town on June 15. The marriage is of special interest to many Beverly Farms people. Mr. Pierce is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrester H. Pierce, formerly of Beverly Farms.

Preston post, 188, G. A. R., together with the other organizations taking part in the Memorial Day exercises, desire to express sincere thanks and appreciation for the contributions of beautiful flowers sent them by friends; also to all those who assisted in helping to make a success of the day's observance.

Following the regular meeting Wednesday evening of St. Margaret's court of Foresters, Lt. Gregory P. Connolly related some of his experiences in France during the great war. His talk was very interesting. The public was invited to hear Lt. Connolly and many people were present.

The Beverly Farms American Legion ball team played the strong Imperials, of Danvers, at the Beverly Farms playgrounds last Saturday afternoon and were defeated by a score of 10 to 2. At the playgrounds on Monday forenoon a large crowd saw the local Legion team defeat the Y. M. C. A. team of Beverly, 8 to 7.

ALL THE DIFFERENCE

As the elderly couple took their evening walk, a lady on the other side of the road tripped—no, not on a banana skin, but on a stone—and fell rather heavily to the ground.

At once the husband rushed across the road, and, raising his hat politely, asked if she was hurt and if he could be of any assistance. While he was helping her to her feet his wife came up to them and shook her fist angrily in his face.

"It's all right! It's all right!" whispered hubby.

"I know it's all right!" retorted the aggrieved lady. "Here a stranger slips, and you rush up to help and eat her up with kindness. Yet the other day, when I fell from top to bottom of the stairs, you stood there and roared with laughter and wanted to know if I was practicing for the circus!"

RECOMMENDATION? YES

Wife: "Have you any references from a former employer?"

Maid: "Oh, yes, ma'am, I have 64 of 'em!"

Will Hold Special Town Meeting Soon

A special town meeting will be held in Manchester soon—probably a week from next Monday evening, June 14, or the week following. One of the matters to come up for consideration is the question of Sunday sports. A petition signed by some sixty-odd voters has been presented to the board of selectmen asking for adoption of the measure as far as Manchester is concerned.

TOWN NOTICES

MANCHESTER

NOTICE

All bills and claims against the town should be presented to the Town Accountant on or before five o'clock p. m. Monday of each week. After approval the bills will be paid by the Town Treasurer at his office on the following Wednesday. The regular business meeting of the Board of Selectmen will be held on Tuesday evening of each week at 8 o'clock.

SAMUEL L. WHEATON,
GEORGE R. DEAN,
WILLIAM W. HOARE.
Selectmen of Manchester.

TOWN TREASURER'S NOTICE

The Treasurer's and Tax Collector's office will be open each day from 9 o'clock a. m. to 5 o'clock p. m., except on Saturdays, when it closes at 12 m. Tuesday and Wednesday evenings until 8 o'clock.

All bills and pay rolls paid by check and mailed.

E. P. STANLEY,
Treasurer and Collector.

SCHOOL NOTICE

The regular meeting of the SCHOOL COMMITTEE will be held the first Friday evening of each month, at which time all bills against the school department of the town should be presented for approval.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Another matter will be to dispose of the sewer claims of R. L. Cheever and the Knight estate. The special bill passed both branches of the legislature, and the governor signed the document, giving the town authority to pay the claims. The town will not vote on the matter.

It is also suggested that a small appropriation—say $100—be made to put the baseball diamond in better playing condition. The school committee can expend only a small amount in this direction, and that will go mostly for mowing the field.

NEW GARAGE

Will Open at Beverly Farms Next Week

A new automobile garage will open at Beverly Farms next week, to be conducted by William Peterson and James J. Nugent. The business will be located on Vine st., opposite the Beverly Farms station, at the property of Mr. Nugent.

Both men are well and favorably known at Beverly Farms, and have a host of friends who will wish them success in this new venture. Mr. Peterson was for some years chauffeur for the Leonard Ahls. He is a thorough mechanic and during the war was foreman in the shipyard at Fore River.

Mr. Nugent has been in business at Beverly Farms the last 20 years—first as proprietor of Nugent's stable, when the stable business was flourishing, but of late he has had cars for hire in connection with his livery business. He has many friends among the summer colony.

The new concern will conduct a general garage business, specializing in the workshop end of it. All makes of cars will be overhauled and repaired. There will also be provisions for storage, and automobile accessories will be on sale.

MEMORIAL DAY AT MANCHESTER

live up to those duties. We must realize that the oath of citizenship carries with it a duty, and that duty is broader than our own personal ambitions or desires. It is a duty which places the welfare of our country above all other considerations.

As a part of this duty we must realize that the criterion of a congressman's greatness is not in the number of postoffices he has built in his district or in the number of mud creeks which he has dredged out. Our patriotism and our interest in the country must be broad enough so that we will demand of those who represent us not "What have you done for this district?" but "What have you, as a representative of this district, done for the nation?"

While honoring the heroic dead of the nation we should not forget those who, through the wounds received on the field of battle, are unable to take up their life work. We must remember that the gratitude of the nation should be shown to them by means of educational and vocational training and the very best of medical care.

GEN. EDWARDS HONORED GUEST

the service they gave to their country and to the men who made the supreme sacrifice. He spoke of the splendid spirit of the men of Beverly in answering their country's call and to those who fought under the flag of the allied nations as well as under the Stars and Stripes. He referred feelingly to General Edwards and expressed appreciation of his coming to Beverly and of the esteem in which he was held by Beverly people as the beloved commander of the 26th division.

A selection by the band, "America," followed the Mayor's address, then came the raising of the flag to full staff, the "Star Spangled Banner" being played by the band.

In the evening special services were held in the Second Baptist church, where the address was given by Rev. Alexander Blackburn, former pastor of the Great White Temple at Seattle, Washington, now of Salem. There was special music by the church choir and the address was preceded by a short devotional service.

Our June Display of Blouses Meets Every Woman's Desire

The warm summer days just ahead will double the demand for Blouses. The sheer sorts will be wanted, for their coolness, as well as their daintiness. And then every woman wants double the usual number, because they must go into the tub so often, and one never has enough. So we have planned to exactly meet the needtime of hundreds of women. We've selected the most wanted kinds, made of the most suitable fabrics, for warm summer days, cool, dainty, comfortable, but also nicely made and durable.

Of course, we've got a quite remarkable price story to tell about each group. That's why every woman will want to select several for her summer wardrobe. A personal inspection will prove most pleasing. Price range—

A Simple (?) Questionnaire for Government Clerks

A Washington, D. C., postoffice clerk, nettled at the many questionnaires he has been asked to fill out and return to Congress or to organization headquarters, has suggested to Thos. F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, the following draft of a questionnaire, which he says more nearly meets the needs of the government clerks than any other yet proposed:

1. Are you married or single?.... Why? .....
2. Do you drink near-beer?..... Why? .....
3. What is your favorite flower?
4. If a box clerk, are you troubled with insomnia? .....
5. Did you withdraw any money from the bank during the past year? ...Where did you get it to put in?...
6. Does your wife play the piano? ....What effect does this have on your rent? .....
7. Are you a light eater or heavy? .....If heavy, state how and why? .....
8. Has your yearly expenditure for rent increased since the shortage of houses prevents frequent moving?...
9. Are you on friendly terms with your relations? ..... Why? .....
10. If possible, give the name of some less intelligent person than yourself, yet making more salary. .....
11. State average monthly grocery bill and payments, if any? .....
12. State briefly (no profanity allowed) what your wife thinks of being married to a postoffice clerk?....
13. Do you drink and where do you get it? (This information will be treated as confidential.) .....
14. Exclusive of the bartenders, how many people depend on you for support? .....
15. Do you keep chickens?..... Does your wife know about it?.....
16. Does your wife take in washing to help support the family?..... Have you suggested this to her?.... If so, state the results and name of hospital .....
17. What do you think is a fair salary for a good worker?.....For yourself? .....

The Dollar Hair-Cut

It is said that the dollar haircut will soon be with us. Men, those are sad words, but when you read the following clipping don't miss the ray of comfort offered in the latter portion. We are offered the choice of either wearing the hair long, or resorting to "shingling" the head:

"From Leon Worthall, general organizer of the Barbers' International Union, comes the news that: 'The dollar haircut is in sight. The master barbers will have to come to it, with the heavy rents, increased cost of supplies and higher wages. It won't go there at once—75c will probably be the next rise, and then $1.'

"A dollar is pretty stiff price to pay a barber for cutting your hair the way you don't want it cut. Perhaps mere man, slave to convention though he is, may be forced to consider the possibilities of hair dressing as opposed to haircutting. The prospect seems alarming at first glance, but necessity may point a way to the union of thrift and art.

"There is nothing unmanly about hair worn long. Trappers and guides, fearless men of the woods, appear in the movies with flowing locks. Buffalo Bill was not close cropped. Sailor men sometimes even in these days wear pigtails.

"There is another possibility of escape from the profiteering barber. There must be a good many hundreds of thousands of men who recall with grateful thoughts the comfort of a head denuded of hair with clippers. Clippers may be bought even by men who are not members of the barbers' union. The operation formerly known in some parts of the country as 'shingling' the head may be revived as one of the domestic arts."—New York Sun.

AND REMINDER

Vol. XVIII Manchester, Mass., Friday, June 11, 1920 No. 24

SOCIETY NOTES

THE beautiful Italian gardens at Dawson Hall, Burgess Point, Beverly, proved a most delightful feature of the North Shore visit of the National Editorial association last week. This is the summer home of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Evans, of Boston, occupied now by the Misses Hunt, sisters of Mrs. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Bartlett and children, of Boston, have arrived at their summer home in Beverly Farms for the season. They have two children, Serita, a beautiful little 7-year-old daughter, called after her mother, who was Serita Lincoln, and Arthur Lincoln, not yet two years old.

R. Paul Snelling and family have opened their summer home on the shore-front at Beverly Farms. The Snellings have a country estate in Needham where they spend most of the winter season.

Edward S. Booth and family, of Brookline, have arrived at Marblehead Neck for the season, being located again at the large Tyner cottage on Nahant st.

Mrs. Waterman A. Taft, of Pleasant st., Arlington, has opened "Balhama," her attractive summer home at Eastern Point, Gloucester, and with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. Allen Taft, and children, will spend the summer in this delightful section of Cape Ann.

Philip Stockton and family have arrived at "Highcliffe," their residence off Summer st., Manchester.

Mlle. Germaine Cossini, who is returning to Manchester the end of this month, has given very successful conferences at the Universite des Annales. The following is an excerpt from one of the leading Paris papers: "Mlle. Germaine Cossini, par la chaleur de sa voix et la hardiesse de son interprétation, fit passer dans l'auditoire les frissons de la terre roumaine et de sa race á la fois âpre et délicatement civilisée dans de caractéristiques chansons populaires de Stan Golestan." We expect that Mlle. Cossini will give this conference as well as others during the summer months at the North Shore.

Miss Doris Felton, of Chestnut Hill, entertained a few of her friends at her summer home, "Villa Palmyra," Essex, last week-end. Among the guests were Miss Alice Dow, Miss Rebecca L. Clarke, Ralph Thompson, Robert Smith and Sanford White.

SOCIETY NOTES

MR. AND MRS. S. V. R. CROSBY, of West Manchester, are among the enthusiastic Hoover supporters who attended the convention in Chicago this week.

Henry S. Grew and family, of Marlboro st., Boston, arrived at their summer home on Harbor st., West Manchester, yesterday. They plan to remain here until late September.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. Loose, of Kansas City, have opened their summer home, "Sea Rocks," at Gloucester. They will remain well into the early autumn.

Among the arrivals of the week at Manchester are Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dana, of 300 Berkeley st., Boston, who are at their summer cottage off Beach st.

The Emmanuel Episcopal church, Masconomo st., Manchester, will be open for the summer season on and after June 7. Service every Sunday at 10.30; Holy Communion first and third Sunday in the month at 11.30, other Sundays at 8 a. m.

On Tuesday, June 15, the marriage of Miss Maud E. Kahn to Captain and Brevet-Major J. C. O. Marriott, of the Scots Guards, will take place at half-past four in the afternoon at St. John's church, Cold Spring Harbor, L. I. Major Marriott arrived in New York from England last Saturday. As the church at Cold Spring Harbor is small, only relatives and a very few friends are to attend the ceremony, which will be followed by a reception at the country house of Mr. and Mrs. Kahn, of Woodbury, L. I. Miss Kahn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, of 1100 Fifth ave., New York. The Kahns were some years ago members of the North Shore summer colony, when Mr. Kahn leased the estate at Manchester of the late Charles Head, the Boston banker, which is now Dr. J. H. Lancashire's summer home and is known as "Graftonwood." Mr. Kahn will give his daughter in marriage and Miss Margaret D. Kahn is to be her sister's maid of honor. The other attendants will include Mrs. Otis Guernsey, and the Misses Adelaide Sedgwick, Marianne McKeever and Marion Tiffany. Major-General Hugh K. Bethell, C. B., D. S. O., is to act as best man for Major Marriott. The ushers are all members of the British embassy staff, of which Maj. Marriott until recently was a member, and will include Lt.-Col. Andrew Thorne, Air Comm. Leo Charlton, Capt. J. F. Harker, and R. H. Hadow.

MR. AND MRS. S. PARKER BREMER and their three daughters — Misses Edith, Mabel and Ruth — of 33 Marlboro st., Boston, have arrived at their estate on Smith's Point, Manchester, for a long season, as usual. Mr. Bremer's sister, Miss Sarah F. Bremer, will not come to the North Shore this year, but will go to Cohasset, on the South Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. P. Weeks have closed their Boston house, at 467 Commonwealth ave., and are in Beverly for the summer. They have a cottage on Neptune st., as usual.

The Shore school, which is conducted at Beverly Farms, closed its first session by giving some exercises in the schoolroom on Saturday afternoon, June 5. Mrs. Frank G. Cheever, the principal, had the children give some recitations and exercises, and also had an exhibition of some of the work the children had completed during the year. At the close of the exercises, Alvin F. Sortwell, chairman of the committee, made a short address and gave the children prizes. Those receiving them were Miss Lee McKean, Master T. J. Newbold, Jr., Master Bayard Warren, the Misses Burrage, Miss Frances Burnett, Miss Anne Sortwell, Miss Marion Clark, and Miss Pauline Shaw. Among those present and interested in the exercises were Mr. and Mrs. H. P. McKean, Jr., Mrs. John F. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burrage, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Sortwell, Dr. and Mrs. Francis L. Burnett, Mrs. Pollard and her daughter, Mrs. Raymond, and Mrs. Henry Cannon Clark. The next session of the school will begin the first part of October.

NORTON WIGGLESWORTH MANCHESTER, MASS.

SECRETARY OF NAVY DANIELS has promised the committee in charge of the navy festival at Beverly Farms, Saturday, July 3, that he would formally request Rear Admiral Wilson to assign one of the big battleships of the Atlantic fleet to Beverly Farms to participate in the festival on that day. The committee plans to entertain hundreds of jackies and marines, who are to give drill exercises as one of the many features of the festival. While society is solidly in back of the navy festival, yet the committee is not planning to make it a strictly society affair. The program is being arranged with the idea of attracting the greatest number of people. The one aim of those in charge is to raise a large sum of money for the Navy Y. M. C. A. in Charlestown and offer the "largest show" ever staged along the North Shore.

Alvin F. Sortwell, chairman of the committee in charge of the festival, says that the program will begin at ten o'clock in the morning and will run continuously until midnight. If the navy officials see their way clear to sending a warship to North Shore waters it will give added zest to the entire program.

Because of the insistent demand for a class for saddled hackney horses Chairman Frederick Ayer has added that class. Another new feature of the horse show that has been announced is the competition for the best hunter in the show. Richardson, Hill & Co., the Boston bankers, have given a very beautiful cup for this class. With several classes for hunters and children's hackneys it will be necessary to judge some of them in the morning. The horse show has excited greater interest than the committee had hopes for and they now plan to build a hundred boxes around the ring.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL at Magnolia, with its score of cottages and the big Annex — formerly Hesperus House, will open next Friday, the 18th, at which time it may be said the Magnolia season opens officially. The hotel will start the season with a larger advance booking than ever before, and the prospects for a busy summer are in evidence in many ways. The Garden club of America will bring many women of prominence from all sections of the country in late June. Many of them will make the Oceanside their headquarters.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sohier Welch and family, of 125 Beacon st., Boston, have arrived this week at "The Old Fort," West Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Renton Whidden and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Whidden, of 170 Ivy st., Brookline, will spend the summer at Manchester, where they have a cottage on Proctor's Point. They were not here last season.

JUNE

She sits all day plaiting a wild-rose wreath,
This daughter of the Sun, come from afar.
Sweeter is she than her bright sisters are
Who follow her across the flowery heath.
A daisy is her sign, and underneath
The meadow's foamy flow the clovers wear
Their uniforms of white and red, and bear
Their cups of sweet to scent their mistress' breath.
What dawns are thine, O dear, delicious June
When at the drawing of thy curtain's fold
The birds awake and sing a marvelous tune
To the young Day that comes in rose and gold!
What twilights when the gray dusk hides thy face
That thou mayst come with more enchanting grace!

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

East Gloucester, Bass Rocks, Rockport and Annisquam Ready for Busy Season

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—A serious question came up before the citizens of Gloucester at a big mass meeting at City hall, called by Mayor Charles D. Brown and the municipal council. The summer season opening in Gloucester and Cape Ann, the summer residents now arriving, gave a feeling of concern to the hotel men, real estate men, merchants and others who would be affected by the discontinuance of the street railway service. Consequently other citizens interested, besides those business men mentioned, came together to consider whether the city of Gloucester would furnish financial aid to the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway. It was almost a unanimous vote to turn down any such proposition and only a dozen votes could be mustered in favor of the trustees' ultimatum. It is of interest to learn that the company has now placed placard notices in the trolley cars announcing that the service will be discontinued on and after June 20. The trustees of the railroad company will give a public hearing to all persons interested June 11 at 2 p. m. at the offices of the trustees, 1 Beacon st., Boston. If the trolleys should be taken away from public service it would interfere seriously with summer transportation, unless bus lines could be established. However, it is the concensus of opinion that the Gloucester Electric Company, that now already supplies the electricity for the car service, will take the Cape Ann and Essex lines and conduct them in a satisfactory manner. The Cape Ann line, in particular, has always been a paying proposition.

The Tavern on Western ave. has been opened for the season and it is a mecca for automobile parties. Last holiday week-end over a thousand people were entertained at this resort at dinner during Sunday and Monday.

EASTERN POINT.—The past week has brought a number of people to East Gloucester and Eastern Point. All the hotels excepting Hawthorne Inn will be open for the season. The Inn will open early the following week.

The family of the late Waterman A. Taft, Mrs. Taft, of Arlington, and her son, W. Allen Taft, and family, of Waban, have arrived at "Balmaha," the attractive Taft estate at Eastern Point, near the golf clubhouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown, of Brookline, have purchased the pretty Taylor bungalow on Mt. Pleasant ave. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are taking occupancy. They have been guests at the Pilgrim House for a number of seasons.

The Pilgrim House, located on Rocky Neck, has opened for the season, with a number of guests registered, among them being Miss Irma Kohn, the artist, of Rock Island, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hinkley, of Boston; Miss Frances Reed, of Orange, N. J.; Miss Samuel, of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. E. Bernstein, of New York city.

The Rockaway hotel opened on Tuesday for the season and many guests are expected to arrive early.

Alice Beach Winter, the well-known painter, and her artist husband, Charles A. Winter, of New York city, are occupying the Coas cottage, East Gloucester, this season.

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large—none too small—for our kind of happiness.

Miss Charlotte Munster has arrived at her Annisquam cottage.

The Hotel Brynmere is being prepared for early opening, June 20.

ROCKPORT.—The Land's End section of the Rockport shore since Memorial Day has a number of cottagers settled in this delightful spot for the summer. Of course, the Loblolly point, where people leave for the off-shore pull to famous Thatcher's Island in boats, would not bear the same atmosphere if Mr. and Mrs. Emerson B. Haskell were not there. Mr. and Mrs. Haskell have opened their camp, so well-known for its lobster and fish dinners. Ex-President William H. Taft and other notables have partaken of dinners at this place.

Carl O. Harding, of Boston, has taken a lease of the Baldwin cottage on Paradise Cliffs, Land's End, Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans, of Boston, have arrived at their summer home on Sandaba ave., Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

John Wesley Brown, of Baltimore, Md., has taken a lease of the pretentious summer residence of James E. Cotter, Esq., at Little Cape Hedge, Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

Charles N. Harris, of Cambridge, will occupy one of the Emery cottages at Pigeon Cove, this season.

The Clement Gazzams, of Georgia, have arrived at their attractive summer home on Gale ave., Pigeon Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Stone, of Newton, are occupying the cottage on Phiilips ave., Pigeon Cove, formerly owned by Mrs. Elinor Ripley, of Brookline. Mr. Stone has purchased the house.

Mrs. Ethel Frank Brigham will occupy Thalheimer cottage, Pigeon Cove, this summer. Mrs. Brigham spent last season at Rockport, in the Nelson cottage at the Headlands.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Pope and family, of Brookline, are located at their charming seashore house on Brier rd., Bass Rocks, for the season.

THE UPPER NORTH SHORE SHOWING SIGNS OF EARLY SEASON

The Marbleheads and Nahant, Swampscott and Picturesque Shore Line Already Alive with Visitors

MANY SUMMER VISITORS have arrived on the upper North Shore the past week and are busily getting themselves settled for a summer which promises to be a busy one. The estates are looking particularly fine at this time of year, and one of the most noticeable things is the increase in the number of truck gardens, many of the summer residents taking care of the gardens themselves, finding health and recreation in so doing.

The Tedesco Country club will hold a dinner dance at the clubhouse in Swampscott, next Thursday, June 17, and it is expected that there will be a large number on hand for the occasion.

The summer season at the Phillips Beach Neighborhood association is scheduled to be rather quiet, for this club caters more especially to the all-year residents of this vicinity. The usual dances, however, will be held, the program to be announced later.

The Eastern and Corinthian Yacht clubs, at Marblehead, will be busy over the holiday, for races of various kinds are to be held and special dinners will be the order of the day. As yet it is rather quiet at both clubhouses.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Harris and family, of Salem, have opened their summer home at Marblehead Neck for the season.

The Oceanside hotel, Marblehead, has for new guests, arrived this week: Mrs. Helen R. Carroll, of Abington, accompanied by Misses Lucy T. Phillips and Florence Fisk, of the same place; Miss A. L. Lynch, Miss A. M. Lynch and Miss G. C. Lynch, of Utica, N. Y., who are motoring through New England, are spending the week at the Oceanside hotel. Mrs. Arthur P. Abbott and daughter, of Montclair, N. J., will spend the season at the Oceanside hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Perkins, of Cambridge, together with their children, have opened their summer home on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—Mr. and Mrs. Carl P. Dennett, of Boston, will not be at Marblehead Neck this summer, for it is understood they plan to go to Europe. Their house will be occupied by W. E. Putnam, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Traiser, of Boston, have arrived at "Edgemere" for the summer. This place has never looked so well as at the present time, for every effort has been made to get the grounds into shape as soon as possible, and flowers bloom everywhere. The glassed-in porch, which runs the length of the house on the water side, is also filled with flowering plants.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Devereux Barker and B. Devereux Barker, Jr., of Boston, have arrived at "Driftin" for the summer.

Wm. G. Barker, of Salem, and his daughter, Miss Elizabeth G. Barker, are at Lighthouse Point for the summer.

James S. Wiley and family, of Brookline, have opened the Cutler cottage, Marblehead Neck, this week, for the summer.

Mrs. Daniel D. Morss, of Brookline, and her sisters, the Misses Glidden, have arrived at Harbor st., Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cole, of Winchester, and their daughter, Deutzia, are at their Ocean ave. residence, Marblehead Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Hoyt, of New York, will not be at the Marblehead Neck shore this summer, for they are contemplating going abroad.

Gilbert Hodges, of Beach Bluff, has leased one of the Walter C. Harris cottages at Marblehead Neck.

W. S. Crosby, of Brookline, is at the Paine cottage on Follett st., Marblehead Neck.

SWAMPSCOTT.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Goulston, of Puritan rd., Swampscott, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Edna, to Byron E. Van Raalte, of New York, Columbia college, class of 1918.

Albert M. Creighton, of Swampscott, has returned from a most successful trip abroad.

Miss Eleanor Potter, of Swampscott, is one of the most attractive of the younger set of that section, and she is much in demand at the sub-débutante parties which are scheduled for the early summer.

H. C. Buckminster, of Boston, will come later in the season to the Tedesco Country club, Swampscott, where he will make his headquarters.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bowden, who have just returned from their honeymoon, are newcomers to the Clifton shore.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Bunting have sold their Phillips Beach property to William H. McCarty, of Lynn, who has bought for a permanent residence in that locality.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Robins are among the popular members of the younger set at Beach Bluff.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry P. Jaques, who are well-known in the Nahant summer colony, will pass the summer in France and Switzerland. They will attend the marriage of their son, Captain Francis Jaques, which will be solemnized in Paris in the early summer.

JOHN M. WARD, of Newbury st., Boston, who summers at Marblehead Neck, has succumbed to the march of time and has given up the use of his horse, and has taken to an automobile, which he is learning to operate.

J. B. Fallon, of Boston, has arrived at the Ripley cottage, Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck. He was formerly commodore of the Corinthian Yacht club.

Augustus H. Ellis and Mrs. A. C. Josselyn, of Boston, have leased the Percival-North cottage on Harbor ave., Marblehead Neck, arriving this week.

Mrs. Marion Mitford, of London, England, has leased the O'Connor bungalow for the summer, her husband being in Egypt, at the present time, in the English army.

Mrs. Gertrude D. Ter Mulen, of Greenwich, Conn., is a new arrival at the Marblehead Neck shore, having the Goddard house.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. McQuesten have opened their summer home on Foster st., Marblehead Neck. The garden, planted in war-times, has been retained and is again planted this year, green peas already showing well above the ground.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER H. TRUMBULL and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Trumbull, of Salem, are established at Marblehead for the summer. Miss Trumbull is much interested in book binding, and has quite a studio in Salem, where she binds rare books, and, as well, has a class in the arts.

Mrs. Carl A. de Gersdorff, who summers at Peach's Point, Marblehead, is now at Stockbridge for the early summer. She is one of the members of the house committee of the Stockbridge Casino.

Mrs. Edward Bates Carleton, of Boston, who is now at her country home in Concord, N. H., will arrive early in July at the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead, for the remainder of the season.

G. Walter Vialle, of Concord, has taken the Farmer-Ridgeway cottage in Marblehead for the summer.

Albert L. Hollander, of Boston, of the firm of L. P. Hollander Co., has leased the Tucker house on Allerton pl., Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Irwin Doyle, who are now honeymooning in the western part of the state, will make their home this summer with Mrs. Doyle's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Boyd, of Brookline, who are established at Marblehead for the season.

Mrs. Rebecca Wheatland, of Salem, is spending the summer at Marblehead.

Miss Margaret Ballou, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Northey, of Marblehead, was graduated this week from Bryn Mawr with a B. A. degree. Miss Ballou intends to take up settlement work.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison M. Davis, of Federal st., will spend the summer, as usual, at their sightly home on Gilbert Heights, Marblehead.

Max Agassiz' schooner yacht Kirin will be seen in Marblehead waters during the racing season.

Mrs. Fannie C. Buxton, of New York, is occupying the Bowles cottage on Front st., Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hale, of Boston, are at their attractive home on Lee st., Marblehead.

DEVEREUX.—Mrs. George E. Spaulding, of Atlantic ave., Devereux, has gone to Dover, N. H., for the month of June.

Thomas J. Palmer and Miss Marion Palmer, of Akron, Ohio, are visiting Mrs. Joseph G. Goodwin, of Atlantic ave., Devereux.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK MCQUESTEN, of Boston, have arrived at their attractive home, "Questenmere," Marblehead Neck, for the summer. The house is being repainted and minor repairs are underway. The gardens are particularly fine this year, and although the formal garden with the display of roses and lilies is not yet in its flowering state, it gives promise of great things. The borders of the driveways have been planted with pansies, and the cunning little Swiss figures which decorate the lawns are in place and their arms are filled with flowering plants.

The garden across the way is planted with all sorts of good things which will be eaten later in the season, and the orchard, which has been in full blossom, will bear fruit in the fall. This farm piece is the largest at this section of the Shore, for there is not much room on Marblehead Neck for truck gardens.

Mrs. Olive M. Evans, of Manchester, N. H., who spent the winter in the Sandwich Islands, is at Marblehead Neck for the summer months.

The Hotel Samoset is being opened at Marblehead Neck—rather later than usual.

Rufus H. Sprague and family will return again this year to the Marblehead Neck shore, having leased their winter home at Beach Bluff.

Henry A. Hildreth and his sister, Mrs. Alma E. Hildreth, of Beacon st., Boston, are at their Nashua ave. house, Marblehead Neck.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK C. FLETCHER, of Brookline, arrive this week at "Red Gate," Marblehead Neck. This place is at its best now and the great masses of rhododendrons and wild azaleas are in full flower. "Red Gate" is easily one of the show places of this section.

Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Gilman and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Moore, of the Hotel Beaconsfield, Boston, are in the McQuesten cottage this season.

JUNE

Rest! This is the year's bower. Sit down within it. The winds bring perfume, the forests sing to thee, the earth shows thee all her treasures. The air is all sweetness. The storms are but as flocks of mighty birds that spread their wings and sing in the high heaven. The earth cries to the heavens, "God is here!" The heavens cry to the earth, "God is here!" The land claims him, and his footsteps are upon the sea. O sunny joys of sunny June, how soon will you be scorched by the eager months coming burning from the equator!—HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Brevity never fatigues; therefore, brevity is always a welcome guest.—GAUTIER.

A New Department Devoted to the Younger Members of the Breeze Family

Conducted by Lillian McCann

The sea, the sea, the open sea,
The blue, the fresh, the ever free!
Without a mark, without a bound,
It runneth the earth's wide regions round;
It plays with the clouds; it mocks the skies;
Or like a cradled creature lies.
—Barry Cornwall.

On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.
—Tennyson.

WHAT thoughts are going to "arise" in the kiddies' minds when they see the sea at Singing Beach, Beverly Farms, Magnolia, Gloucester, or Marblehead. Not sad thoughts we'll wager. Kiddies, little, big and older grown, may outdo the poet and be able to "utter the thoughts that arise" in them when they begin to splash around in North Shore waters.

If you have never learned to swim why not start right and take some lessons of an expert teacher at the North Shore swimming pool located at Magnolia? Here the water sports with their prize features will be of interest all summer to our young readers.

Some of you must know by experience the best ways of getting initiated to the thrills of surf bathing. How should the novice begin? How can he tell danger spots? Suppose you write us your experience.

Good Citizenship Pledge

"We will never bring disgrace to this, our city, by any act of dishonesty or cowardice, nor ever desert our companions. We will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the city laws and do our best to incite a like respect and reverence in others. We will strive unceasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty, that thus in all these ways, we may transmit this city greater, better, and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."
—Athenian Oath.

WHAT else do the young folk and kiddies, big and little, do on the North Shore?

Well, of course, there is motoring, boating and yachting; sports at the country clubs, and milder social sports in the homes and hotels.

But the North Shore has long had one form of sport which interests kiddies from three or four years to those far along in their teens. Bunny Woods' "outing classes" have solved the problem of organized groups enjoying true sportsmanlike games.

Bunny Woods, occasionally known by his true name, Bernard J. Woods, is really a Boston "institution" which moves out to the Shore for the season and welcomes the young sports.

His young groups play games of various kinds from bean-bag to baseball. Physical and athletic out-of-doors exercises are most skillfully combined by Mr. Woods. Fair play is taught in a most exacting and delightful manner. Obedience in every detail is insisted upon by him.

From water sports, tennis, baseball, general games and parties Bunny never varies in his love and sympathy with the children.

YOUNG FOLK, big and little, are you planning to get all the value and health possible out of the glorious out-of-doors on the North Shore this season?

Horseback riding, for instance, that most "sportsmanlike sport," should be yours. Learn to ride while a youngster and escape the fear and nervousness which often comes to older folk when trying their first mount.

Horseback riding should be yours as much as music, dancing and other accomplishments.

A few weeks of it here on the Shore will fill your lungs with oxygen, and send the blood tingling through your body, while you will have lovely roses painted on your delicate white cheeks.

Just try it.

Write us about some of your experiences; also tell where your favorite ride is so that others may enjoy it.

THE value of reading aloud to a child cannot be overstated. It establishes a delightful comradeship between the parent and child. The child's mind is like a phonographic cylinder of most tenacious adhesiveness. With this understanding the greatest care in choosing the impressions that are to be made on this plastic mind should be taken. When they are very young one should begin this practice. Animal and bird stories even the tiny tots enjoy. And it is surprising and interesting to watch how eagerly they listen, and how quickly they comprehend. Before you are aware, they have acquired a taste for good reading, and a love for nature is well established. Then comes history and science.

Many a boy and girl who are wayward, spending their evenings on the street—an anxiety to their parents—might have had an entirely different start and outlook on life if when mere kiddies a little money had been spent for magazines and books that children like, and a little time each day and evening had been given them. It is a very mistaken idea that some parents have that they cannot afford to spend the money in this way or devote this time from other work. A very large percentage of boys and girls who have gone to the bad are from bookless homes and from parents who have not been companionable.—Thrift Magazine.

HABIT

Mistaken Identity Almost Changed John's Future—But Habit Interefered

By GWENDOLYN RALEIGH

(The Breeze will print as often as practicable, this season, a fiction article. Manuscripts solicited for acceptance.—Ed.)

AT last a vacation!

John Hayes sat back comfortably in his parlor car chair with a sigh of relief.

He was going on a vacation alone! For twelve long years, ever since his wedding trip, he had planned on taking a vacation alone, but Sarah, his capable and not too amiable wife, had always tagged along—that is, when they had gone.

There had always been the little odds and ends of closing the house, and the tiresome, severe, highly-pitched voice of his wife with her incessant "John, don't forget" this, that or the other.

He was going away alone!

John was not a striking figure as he sat there. Neither tall nor very short, and very skinny, he was not a person to command attention. His faded, watery blue eyes had in them a look of timid appeal. His hair had a distinct inclination to recede and his chin good-naturedly followed suit. No, decidedly John Hayes could not be called good-looking.

His looks bothered him not one whit, however. Perhaps he thought he was good-looking—or perhaps nice. Anyway he was leaving the grind of the office, his wife and her parrot far behind,—and he might not come back.

By Jove! That thought was worth considering, he thought. If he should decide never to come back!

A picture of Sarah loomed up in his mind. Every line of her stout figure would express indignation, her hair would be combed severely back as she always wore it, and her red cheeks would grow redder—a sure token that he had done something of which she did not approve. Yes, and there would be the forbidding frown on her forehead, and the threat in her eyes. It might be just as well not to think too much about breaking away from Sarah, at any rate not just now. He would rest now, and have a good time.

Perhaps there might even be girls at the beach, and perhaps—.

By this time John was well launched on one of his day dreams, his only comfort when Sarah talked too much. He did not always hear her unpleasant, nagging voice. Why should he listen, when he could sit and dream beautiful, impossible things?

He was just in the midst of rescuing a beautiful blonde maiden from the angry waves, when the porter interrupted the congratulations of the crowd, and the tearful, heart-felt murmur of thanks and admiration from the rescued damsel, with:

"Your stop next, sir."

"Eh? Er—Oh, all right!"

Instinctively John looked at the occupant of the next chair, half expecting that Sarah would be there. But, no, the chair was occupied by a fluffy-haired blonde girl with ravishing blue eyes.

He was traveling alone, quite alone! Sarah and her parrot were far away and forgotten (?).

Crowds of people got off at the same station, but John noticed only one—the little blonde girl who had sat next to him.

He liked her looks, he thought. She was pretty and had a pleasant laughing voice.

John took off his hat, gave his head a pat where his hair should have been. When he was excited, he forgot that his hair was one of the things that belong to "the good old days." Patting his hair was one of his deeply rooted habits, as was obedience to his wife's stern "John!"

Arrived at his room, John sat down to write to Sarah, for have we not said that obedience was one of John's habits?

A short time after his arrival, dressed in white flannels, he appeared on the veranda of the hotel. He looked younger in flannels, he had told himself, when he had looked in the mirror—younger and more carefree.

He was not surprised when several girls, their arms linked together passed and re-passed, with coy glances in his direction. He was a little flustered, and very much pleased, but not surprised. True the experience was new, but then Sarah had always accompanied him on other trips, and they had not come to this particular place.

Once more the girls passed, talking and giggling, and this time they went to the furtherest end of the veranda.

"I tell you, girls, I looked on the register and saw the name—John Hayes."

It was the little fluffy-haired blonde of the train who spoke.

"I just know," she continued—"I just know he is that millionaire bachelor from New York! They say he often takes trips like this to get plots for his stories."

"Well," said another girl, scornfully, "he doesn't look like a prominent author, and I sha'n't believe it until I see it. Besides he may have registered under a false name. People do, you know."

"Don't you think I know what I am talking about? Why, I have seen—actually seen—him before, and I know. They say he is a woman hater and—."

"Well," interrupted the second girl, "he looks as though there was something wrong with him! Anyway do you think he would look at a bunch of telephone operators, when he's had a chance at all those swell society dames?"

"Stranger things have happened," the blonde responded, "and I have my cap set! Come on, girls, I'm going to win!"

It was merely a matter of time when the girls had scraped a speaking acquaintance with John. Certainly John had had no thought of holding out against such charming seducers, and after eight days at the beach they were sworn friends.

The fluffy-haired girl's name was "Ruth," he discovered, and she had shyly suggested that he call her that. He, of course, had gallantly complied. Another day she had, again shyly, called him "John."

Truly John Hayes was having the time of his life!

Sitting on the veranda of the hotel in the soft summer twilight, surrounded by five happy, laughing girls, he determined that he would declare his independence. Why, he was popular! Had he not overheard Ruth say that she thought him "adorably reserved?" Why should he think he had to go back! He had money now; only two weeks ago he had inherited a lot of it from his uncle. Surely he did not need to go back. He just would not!

He looked around suddenly, helplessly. He was alone with Ruth.

"Oh, John, the water is wonderful tonight. Let's walk down to the beach. Want to?"

John patted his "hair" nervously, tremblingly.

"Er—why, yes," he said absently, "I'd like to. Ruth, I love—."

In a flash two soft arms were around his neck, and two soft lips were pressed to his. "Oh, I knew it, John, and I do, too, so much."

John was shocked, amazed. He groped desperately in his mind for something to say, but failed. He tried thinking of what he had been going to say, and this time he was more successful. He had meant to say that he loved walking, but he couldn't say that now. After all, she loved him, probably, he told himself.

He pressed her hand timidly, his watery blue eyes becoming more watery, and his hair seeming to recede still further in sheer fright. Then suddenly he heard a monotonous voice:

"Call for Mr. John Hayes! Paging Mr. John Hayes!"

John arose, in his haste almost falling over the girl by his side.

"Here, boy," he said.

The "boy" handed him a telegram, and with trembling fingers John opened the envelope and read: "Come home at once. Train leaves at 10 o'clock."

The far-reaching, nagging voice of Sarah!

John was decidedly flustered. Without excusing himself, he went hastily to his room. He would not go home, he thought, defiantly. He would write Sarah that all was over, and he was not coming home again. There was someone else now—.

He sat moodily on his bed. Sarah could not run him any longer! He simply was not going to catch that 10 o'clock train! Why, it was after nine now, and he had everything to pack, and, anyway, he didn't intend to go home—.

But the habit of years of submission and obedience was strong, and with tears of rebellion in his eyes, John packed for the 10 o'clock train.

He was going home! Home to Sarah and her parrot!

THE END.

"MASSASOIT"

Prize Essay

By HELEN KITFIELD BEATON

(The Manchester Woman's Club offered a prize for the best essay by a pupil at Story High School on a subject connected with the Pilgrim Tercentenary)

ONE DAY an Indian walked boldly into Plymouth and addressed the Pilgrims in broken English, saying "Welcome!" Upon inquiry, they found out that he had been sent as an envoy by Massasoit to open a trade in furs with the colony. After the preliminary preparations were completed, he departed.

Several days later Massasoit, accompanied by a large number of warriors, paid a ceremonial visit to the whites. The Indians advanced as far as a hill near the town, but, prevented by shyness and fear, refused to come nearer. However, after communication by means of interpreters, an exchange of hostage was effected, as an evidence of good faith, and the red men entered the town. They were conducted to an unfinished house, where a rug was spread for them, with several cushions placed upon it. Governor Carver soon arrived with as much pomp as he could muster on such short notice. This consisted of a trumpeter, a drummer, and several men bearing arms, as a bodyguard. Greetings were exchanged (which took the form of kisses); then followed feasting and drinking to each other's health with "strong water." Finally the business part of the meeting began. A treaty was negotiated, the most important feature of which was that if any nation should make war upon the colonists, and if any attacked Massasoit unjustly, the English would aid him. It might be well to add that this treaty was observed scrupulously for more than fifty years by both parties concerned.

In contrast to the visit of the noble sachem and his warriors to Plymouth, and the comparative splendor with which they were entertained, was one made by two of the whites to Massasoit's home.

For a long time the Pilgrims had been annoyed by the large number of Indian men, women and children who hung around the settlement, looking for something to eat. The matter coming up for action in a meeting, it was decided to send ambassadors to Massasoit to request his cooperation in adjusting this state of affairs. Winslow and Hopkins were appointed, and so made their way to the hut of the chief, carrying with them a bright red coat and several trinkets, in order that they might secure a favorable reception for themselves and their message. They were welcomed in true Indian style, and immediately presented their gifts. Massasoit's child-like delight in the red coat was very evident, and when, following up their advantage, the white visitors presented their message through an interpreter, he quickly complied with their request. "The business meeting then adjourned, and a pleasant social hour followed," as modern reporters would write up the account for the "Weekly News."

Massasoit, though a great chief, was poor, and had nothing in the house to offer his guests for supper. (It was before the days of canned Boston baked beans.) When the two whites expressed a desire to go to bed, Massasoit pointed out to them a sort of rude platform several inches above the floor, covered with a coarse, thin mat. One end of this was given over to them, while the other was occupied by the chief and his wife. In addition, two more Indians lay in the middle. Needless to say, Winslow and Hopkins did not have an entirely restful night. The next day many minor chiefs came to pay their respects to the Pilgrims, the rumor of their presence having spread abroad. About noon, Massasoit disappeared, returning, however, about two o'clock, with a string of fresh fish, which he boiled and offered to the messengers. This was the first meal they had had for a day and two nights. As soon as they could do so without giving offense, they made their adieux, and returned to Plymouth heartily sick of Indian entertainment. To quote one historian, "The chief was sorry and ashamed that he could receive them in no better style. Friendship was in his heart, but abundance was not in his cabin. He did the best he could."

Everything progressed well for several years, the relations between the red men and the English being all that one could desire. More than once the Indians experienced proofs of the kind-heartedness and skill of their white brothers.

At one time Massasoit was very sick. The Pilgrims, hearing of it, sent Winslow to see if he could be of any assistance. When he reached the hut where the dying chief lay, so many friends and relatives were present that he could hardly go in the door. Having gained entrance, however, he found six or eight medicine-men making the air hideous with their cries and incantations pulling and pounding the sick man—all this at a time when he should have had absolute quiet. The illness had deprived the old chief of his sight and his state was pathetic, indeed. He had swallowed nothing for over two days, and upon examination his mouth was found to be in a very bad condition, with his tongue thickly coated and greatly swollen. Winslow washed out his mouth, then gave him some nourishment. In a short time Massasoit showed a decided improvement. A messenger was despatched to Plymouth to bring back medicine and food fit for the sick Indian. Soon, responding to this treatment, he began to gain, and his sight returned.

The care and solicitousness with which Winslow tended their chief, proved to the Indians that the white men were their friends, and stood ready to aid them in their hour of need. Not only was this fact impressed upon the members of that one tribe, but it spread over a large area, because it was the custom, when anyone was sick, for friends to visit him, as a token of their high regard. Massasoit was held in such great esteem that Indians came from distances of one hundred miles to see him. Upon their return they told of his serious illness, and of the manner in which his English friends visited him, nursed him, gave him medicine, and brought him back to health. Thus the Indians for miles around became conscious of the importance of being on friendly terms with the English, that they might receive similar favors.

Up to the time of his death, Massasoit maintained his friendly attitude toward the whites. The only point on which they could not agree was that of religion. Many of the Indians were converted to Christianity, but Massasoit, though a firm friend of the English, obstinately refused to forsake the religion of his fathers. He lived to a ripe old age.

He was a representative of the highest type of Indian, free from all the deceit and trickery which characterized the greater part of his race. Honorable, upright, in history he stands in many ways as a model any white man may follow. The truest tribute to him is found in the words of one of his own people, who said:

"Massasoit was not like other Indians, false, bloody, and implacable; but kind, easily appeased when angry, easily reconciled with offenders. He was reasonable in his requirements, was not ashamed to ask advice of those in low stations. He was a wise ruler. He governed better with mild, than chiefs did with severe, measures, returning love for love."

Of how many modern rulers could the same be said?

OUR HOLIDAYS

Their Significance

By GWENDOLYN RALEIGH

FLAG DAY
Monday, June 14

BUNKER HILL DAY
Thursday, June 17

TO New York belongs the honor of the first public observance of Flag Day. In 1897 the governor of that state issued a proclamation that on June 14 of that year the national flag should fly over all the public buildings of the state. Philadelphia also observed Flag Day the same year, and since then most of the states of the Union have followed New York's example. There are few public buildings in the country today over which our flag does not fly on the 14th of June.

June 14 was chosen as Flag Day because on that day, 120 years earlier, the first "Stars and Stripes" flag was ordered by the Continental Congress, as our lawmaking body was then called. It is believed that the design of the flag was derived from the design of George Washington's family arms, which consisted of three stars in the upper portion and three bars running across the escutcheon.

In 1777 Congress passed a law ordering, "that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, and that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The Continental Congress appointed a committee to look after the making of the new national flag, and the following description of the design was prepared:

"The stars of the new flag represent the new constellation of states rising in the west. The idea was taken from the great constellation of Lyra, which in the hand of Orpheus signifies harmony. The blue in the field from the edges of the covenanter's banner in Scotland, significant of the league covenant of the United States against oppression, incidentally involving the virtues of vigilance, perseverance and justice. The stars are disposed in a circle (this was the original pattern) symbolizing the perpetuity of the union; the ring, like the serpent of the Egyptians, signifying eternity. The thirteen stripes showed with the stars the number of the united colonies, and denoted the subordination of the states to the Union, as well as equality among themselves. The red color in the Roman day was the signal of defiance, denoting daring; and the white, purity."

The committee took the design to Betsy Ross, an upholsterer, who was noted for her neatness as a seamstress. That she had made earlier flags for the troops is shown by an old bill paid by Congress the preceding year. She lived at 239 Arch st., Philadelphia, and her home still stands, a shrine frequently visited by patriotic pilgrims.

Perhaps no flag on sea or land shows its grace and beauty of design so well as the emblem of the United States, and its proportions are perfect when it is accurately and properly made—one-half as broad as it is long—the first stripe at the top red, the next white, and the alternating colors making the last stripe red. The blue field for the stars should be as broad and wide as the first seven stripes. American bunting only is now used for the Stars and Stripes, and these flags are woven for the government on American looms.

One wonders how many persons, outside of the boys who were in the army and, of course, the Boy Scouts, know that in lowering the flag it should not be allowed to touch the ground—or the deck on shipboard. Here are some of the rules governing the use of our flag:

When the flag is to be placed at half-mast, out of respect for the dead, it is first hoisted to the top of the staff and then lowered into place.

The flag should be saluted by all present while it is being hoisted or lowered. This is done by standing at attention, and uncovering or touching the hat or cap.

When the flag is passing in parade, or in review, the spectator should rise, if sitting, halt if walking, and always uncover and stand at attention.

When the flag is carried in parade with any other flag it should have the place of honor, at the right. If a number of flags are carried, the flag should either precede the others, or be carried in the center, above the others, on a higher staff.

When the flag is used as a banner, the union should be at right (as you face the flag); when draped, or when used as an altar covering, the union should be at the left. Nothing should ever be placed upon the flag.

THERE is nothing one can say that explains the history and origin of Bunker Hill day more adequately than did Wm. M. Sloane in "The French War and the Revolution." He says:

"Before dawn of June 16, 1775, about a thousand Americans, under Prescott, began the construction of redoubts on Breed's Hill, commanding the town of Boston, and during the day these were enlarged and strengthened despite the fire rained upon them by the British fleet. Next day, the 17th, at three in the afternoon, a force of about 2500 British regulars was sent across the Charles River and landed at the foot of Breed's Hill to attack the Americans.

"The battle opened by a splendid but premature rush of the whole English force straight up the slope. The Americans, numbering about 1500, had been judiciously posted in two divisions of equal size, and met the advance by a carefully directed fire which drove the enemy back. After an interval of about fifteen minutes, a second charge, more deliberate than the first, was repelled with equal skill and courage. There was a second and longer interval. The Americans were at the end of their ammunition—there was but enough powder for one more round.

"The English officers showed both courage and endurance. A second time the men were rallied, re-formed, and encouraged; a third time they moved upward with fixed bayonets, and aided by the enfilade of their battery successfully stormed the redoubt at last.

"In the ensuing mêlée the Americans passed almost unhurt through the broken lines, those who had powder using it with deadly effect, formed in good order, and slowly retreated over Bunker Hill to Prospect Hill, near Cambridge, where they threw up trenches and stood to await the British attack. But the English were too much exhausted to follow up their advantage, and the battle of Bunker Hill, as it has ever since been called, remained technically indecisive.

"Morally and historically this conflict was a victory for the united colonies. Its glory belongs to no single name, for the command was divided and ineffective, the slender resources of the provincials were not husbanded, and the battle took place where neither the council of war nor the committee of safety had intended. From the army of New England 304 were wounded, 145 were either killed or missing. Many gallant leaders perished, among them Joseph Warren, whose fame calumny cannot dim. On the other hand, the men had fought bravely and behaved like veterans.

"The English losses were enormous, 1054 killed or wounded, of whom one in ten were officers. The survivors, less than two-thirds of the total number, felt a respect for the courage of their adversaries which disheartened the commander. He wrote to the ministry that the Americans were not the despicable rabble he had supposed. Franklin, in a letter to English friends, tersely expressed the whole matter, 'Americans will fight; England has lost her colonies forever.'"

Bunker Hill day cannot be called a legal holiday, though the Boston banks close by mutual agreement. The day is observed only in Boston and its immediate vicinity, though of late years it is observed as far along the North Shore as Beverly.

As America has fought loyally and fiercely for her own rights, yet she proved herself equally ready to fight for the rights of others; and though she stood against England in claiming her rights, she proved a loyal and powerful ally during the World war.

THE TWILIGHT CALL

By Alex. G. Tupper

I WATCH the rosy kiss of day
Upon the brow of twilight grey;
And through the mist of falling dew,
The evening star is peeping through—
A jewel sparkling in the hair
Of mother-spirit—twilight fair!
The zephyrs stir the silken strands
That swirl fantastically and hands
Move tenderly, so broodingly,
Quite low to earth, so soothingly
On dear earth's tired, fevered cheek,
In summer winds we hear her speak!
Oh, peaceful is the fall of eve,
When all our burdened thoughts we leave
In prayer, to Him; as shadows fall,
We find our couch at twilight's call!

A PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN OF DEVASTATED FRANCE

WE have told in graphic pictures the story of the wretchedness and distress surrounding thousands and thousands of little children of France — children whose fathers fought and died for France and for us, whose mothers struggled on in misery and want.

We have shown the tragic realities, the poverty, the shattered homes; not in one isolated place or a few communities, but in all of devastated France.

Many of the children have suffered since 1914. They went hungry that a little food might be sent to their fathers in German prison camps. The stunted bodies, sunken cheeks and wasted limbs of the children are mute testimony to German cruelty. Great numbers of children are dying of tuberculosis and other ailments, resulting from neglect, hunger and exposure.

Throngs of children were taken captive and held in German prisons in conditions hideous beyond human belief.

It is a startling fact that during the last four months of fighting more French children were left fatherless and a larger number of French families were made dependent than in any other equal period of the entire war.

We come to you now pleading for your help for France's dependent, homeless and suffering children and widowed mothers.

France did not hesitate in our time of peril over a century ago, but sent us her ships, her men and her gold. She sent us the immortal Lafayette, Rochambeau and De Grasse, and by their help American liberty was won.

Now France is in need and we ask your aid for her children. Every dollar you send to us specifically designated for these children will be transmitted intact for that purpose, without one cent being deducted for administration expenses. The money will be speedily and effectively used for relief. We urge you to give now and generously in the name of France's suffering children.

How many children will you adopt? Eight dollars and fifty cents will supply a child at one of the "colonies" with housing, good food, simple education, medical and dental care for a month. Twenty-five dollars for a quarter; fifty dollars for six months; and one hundred dollars for a year. Clothing for the children is separately provided for.

He gives twice who gives quickly. Please send check to James A. Blair, Jr., treas., French Heroes Lafayette Memorial Fund, Inc., 2 West 45th st., New York city.

Flower in the crannied wall,
I pluck you out of the crannies,
I hold you here, root and all, in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are, root and all, and all in all,
I should know what God and man is.

—Tennyson.

EDITORIAL

It Is the Duty of every state to exercise its authority to protect pedestrians and motorists. The careless operation of motor vehicles causes too many deaths. Something must be done to check the menacing evil. A high-power car is a dangerous machine and its operation requires concentration, steady nerves and accurate judgment. To acquire this ability demands more than a knowledge of the state road laws and a driving record of one hundred miles. The requirements are not exacting enough to assure safety on the public highways. There are more motor cars registered in this state today than in the entire year in 1919. The increasing number of cars using the roads makes the revision of the state regulations imperative. The ease with which operator's licenses are now secured is a menace to public safety. No provision whatever is made in the present applications for testing the applicant's ability to operate a car, nor is his license limited to the type of car which he operates at the time the application is filed. More stringent requirements can be made without depriving any careful and honorable person of his prospects of obtaining a license; the time required for the mastery of the car only will be extended. The increased knowledge and experience acquired will prepare every motorist for the nerve racking road work more thoroughly. Stricter regulations will work an injustice to none and prove a benefit to all. Motorists and pedestrians will be less at the mercy of the indecision and judgment of incapable and inexperienced operators. The state is under an obligation to its citizens to demand any preparation necessary to make the roads as safe as common law by legislation can make them.

The Governor has Vetoed the Motion Picture Censorship bill because of the opinion rendered by the Attorney-General. In his opinion two sections of the bill might make the bill unconstitutional; the money invested in the new department would be wasted and the law inoperative. He did not discuss the merits of the censorship question. This ends the first campaign for the regulation of moving pictures. The Attorney-General's opinion is decisive for the present because only the legislature can apply for a court judgment on his opinion and the legislature has prorogued. Two decisions of the present Attorney-General have been reversed by the Supreme Court; it is possible that the censorship opinion may meet a similar fate. If so, then the Attorney-General and the Governor have delayed the censorship of motion pictures. If the Attorney-General's opinion is sustained the bill can be redrafted with the unconstitutional features eliminated. Any state has the right to establish standards for the regulation of motion pictures. The legislature made an effort, at least, and prepared a bill embodying a law that followed the censorship laws of four other states which have been sustained by the Supreme Court. If the Governor's action is well established in law he has rendered the state a service, for the bill can be rewritten. The layman, however, cannot understand why there was not teamwork on the Hill so that the bill could have been rewritten before it reached the Governor. Massachusetts will undoubtedly pass a censorship law, but for a while its progress has been checked.

The Present Method of selecting delegates to the national conventions of the political parties is unworthy of a democratic nation. America seeks, so we claim, to discover the will of the people, in order that the government may be of the people, for the people and by the people. The primary laws as related to the election of delegates to the presidential conventions defeats this principle. Arrangement should be made so that the primaries which elect the delegates to the national conventions should be held on the same day the nation over. The publicity expenditures of all candidates should be limited so that a wealthy man would not have an advantage and that an honorable yet poor man be under no obligations to large contributors to his campaign expenses. The primary ballot should be arranged in a way that every voter could register his vote for a presidential candidate as well as vote for delegates. The delegates should be placed so that the nominee whom they preferred would be plainly indicated. No voter now votes directly for the nomination of the President of his party's choice. The present campaign shows the need of reform. When the next legislative year is begun the leaders of all parties should address themselves to the task of correcting this evil.

The Financial Drives were desirable and successful during the war period. The united work was necessary to finance the war organizations. The drives met the need of the times and the necessity for haste; they were successful, as they deserved to be. Since then unsuccessful efforts have been made by various organizations to marshal funds for their work by the drive plan which were avowed imitations of the war "drives." The results have been unsatisfactory and the methods financially wasteful. The unvarnished truth is that every one has become weary of "drives" and the psychological effect of a drive is not enthusiasm, but reaction. Every one desires to return to peace-time methods with the opportunity and privilege of organizing private philanthropic budgets unhampered by nation-wide propaganda or stampede methods.

No criticism is made of the war drives. They were necessary and successful. Large funds have been raised for worthy purposes since the war. It is also true that large plans for a great work may "drive" funds available for benevolent purposes into the treasuries of popular organizations conducted upon a large scale. Many small philanthropic organizations have been hampered in their work by the "drives" of large organizations.

It is a reflection on one's individual good judgment when honorable responsibilities are neglected to bear the burdens of others. The first law of philanthropy is independence and self-help. Every man ought to bear his own burdens. Such is a social as well as an individual law. The smaller benevolent humanitarian organizations must be maintained. The war conditions have hampered their work for seven years. Some organizations have been forced to consider the advisability of stopping their work until funds are available. It is possible for the larger philanthropies to prosper and the lesser organizations to suffer. The present employment of the drive method harms both. All the causes for which drives have been organized are worthy, but they may be merciless in their results upon the weaker organizations. Clear-headed men realize the weakness of the "drive" plan and are abandoning it for the more adaptable plans of the pre-war period. One organization has deliberately, and with good judgment, announced that no quota has been assigned to any state or city and that no "drive" will be made in raising the funds. The psychological result of that announcement was unmistakable. It meant that there was as much sense in abandoning an old tried method that had succeeded in its hour of need as there was in adopting it.

The days of the drives are over. Let them be given a respected place in the annals of our history; let us have no more. One good result remains, however,—the people have been taught to give generously and wholeheartedly. The work of the philanthropies of the land will be more effectively and easily accomplished by a use of other methods. The people have not ceased to give nor determined to neglect their philanthropies. The abhorrence of the drive today is a just reaction against any pressure being brought to bear in order to give.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of the North Shore, was elected temporary and permanent chairman of the Republican National Convention at Chicago, this week, as was expected. The honor bestowed upon our fellow-citizen was merited for his personal ability, and his loyal service to the Republican party and to the nation. His address was a masterly effort embodying the principles which he has espoused and endeavored to make the policy of the Republican National convention. It was a great address and worthy of careful reading. He defended the belligerents in the Senate and the record of the Republican Congress. He arraigned the Democrats for their political destruction and chastised the President without mercy for his egoism, autocracy and his political policy. It was not to be expected that an address dealing with political details could maintain throughout the literary finish of the opening paragraphs. In the latter half of the address he clearly and forcefully stated his political ideals and policies.

After a description of the times in the figure of a storm at sea followed by the great swell of ocean long after the storm had abated, he cleared for action and presented the great task of reconstruction before the American people. He held the Democratic party directly responsible for the existing political situation. This compels the defeat of the party in power, the President and all associated with him. He accused the President of subverting the principles of democratic government by favoring an autocratic authority incompatible with the national traditions. Out of Chaos must come Order and Law. The American government to be of and for the people must be a government by the law of the people. A government of laws and not a government of individuals is the national ideal. The economic problems he considers complicated by the free-trader-socialistic tendencies of the President and the extravagant financial policy of the government.

The Republicans, on the other hand, have made a record for reconstructive legislation in the teeth of organized opposition. The oil leasing bill, the vetoed water power bill, the civil service retirement bill, the restoration of the army and navy to a peace-time footing, the establishment of a marine power and the writing of an intelligent and economical budget, which was vetoed, all show this. Profiteers were attacked with good judgment, although the present high prices were attributed in part to the increase of the circulating medium of exchange. He advised a production policy for economic progress.

The last half of the address considered three great problems,—the railroad situation, the Mexican problem and the League of Nations. He opposed governmental ownership of the railroads and counseled a form of governmental oversight without governmental patronage or control. He flailed Wilson for his laissez faire policy in Mexico and advised a big stick policy and the support of a government in Mexico favorable to the United States. The situation at our door led him to disparage the aid to be given Armenia with a near at home task undone. He opposed the Armenian mandate on the argument that it would involve the nation in the problems of the League of Nations without membership in the organization. The old arguments against the League of Nations were brought out, the number of votes of the British empire and the shortcomings of Article Ten. He calls for a national spirit of independence and the maintenance of the American policy on the American continent, the so-called Munroe Doctrine. The most striking sentence was, "Mr. Wilson and his dynasty, his heirs and assigns, or anybody that is his, anybody who with bent knee has served his purpose, must be driven from all control and from all influence upon the government of the United States."

The positions taken by the venerable Senator are that America has suffered from the domination of the democratic power, because of the autocratic temper of the President and the dangers involved in the League of Nations. Consequently the Democratic party must be defeated, the Republican party restored to power and the country redeemed from destruction.

Senator Lodge has taken up the gauntlet which the President has thrown down; he goes as Wilson wishes to go, to the people for a decision on the issue of the League of Nations. That may be advisable. Yet, we believe, it is unfortunate that the whole task of making peace with Germany and adjusting peace relations with Europe could not have been cared for without the issue being made the football of the two parties in a Presidential campaign. Mr. Lodge's ability, statesmanship and political strategy are recognized. In his judgment it has been advisable to make the League of Nations an issue, and only the results of the spirited contest which has just begun will reveal whether he has made a masterstroke of political strategy or whether the man in the White House has manoeuvred to score a point, if he can. In any event, League of Nations or no League of Nations, the year of Republican success is at hand. Everything has been rotten ripe for a change for a long while and what the issue is will make but little difference in the results of the campaign. The handwriting is on the wall.

It Is Honorable, if humiliating, for a nation to apologize to another nation for acts committed within the border of one derogatory to the other. No other course of action is open between nations at peace. Our Secretary of State, Mr. Colby, has presented a verbal apology to the British ambassador for the insult to the British flag by a group of propagandists who burned publicly, in derision, a British flag. There was nothing else for our government to do. The affair was condemnable and injures the cause the perpetrators sought to aid. The incident was the result of the thoughtless and untempered enthusiasm of a group of zealots. It led to complications which in their zeal they had not foreseen. Such publicity methods involving the relations of two friendly nations are deplorable and are to be unceremoniously condemned. It was humiliating for our nation to be obliged to make the apology. The situation demanded it. Our sense of national honor and our friendly obligations to Great Britain would permit nothing less. The verbal apology precedes an investigation which will undoubtedly result in written apology being forwarded to Great Britain.

WHAT DO THE BIRDS SING?

By WALTER K. PUTNEY, in Our Dumb Animals

"ZEE-zee-zee-ee" is the song of many of the warblers. The black-throated green warbler is said to sing "Cheese, cheese, a little more cheese!" and as you listen to the song you can catch something about cheese in it. Bradford Torrey interprets the same song as "Trees, trees, murmuring trees!" so you see we do not all think alike about the songs of birds.

It is interesting indeed to take the different interpretations and attempt to hear the wording for ourselves. One summer, not long since, I was visiting an uncle in lower New Hampshire. We heard a towhee sing his beautiful little melody, which causes him to be called chewink. That was not disputed; he certainly did say "chewink" very plainly indeed. But when we came to interpret his other, and longer, song, we certainly had an argument. I declared that he distinctly said "Where's your bree-e-e-e-ze?" while my father declared with emphasis that he very plainly declared that it was time to "pick your peas!" After we had talked for some time a friend told us that the common interpretation around any section where country dances were held was "Dick, you fiddle-iddle-iddle."

That bright golden summer spot, the goldfinch, is one of the most cheerful of our feathered friends, and yet no two people can agree upon what he sings. "Hear me, hear me, dearie!" is one way his song is put to words, while another is "So here we go, so here we go!" Never mind, I always had my own idea of what he says, and I think that anybody ought to hear the same words in his song. They are "Cheery, now, be cheery!" and his whole attitude reflects cheerfulness. But I suppose that you will have your own way of wording that song, and you have a perfect right to do so; that's half the fun in bird work.

There are many of our common birds that will fully repay you for the time you spend in listening to them. The earliest is the song-sparrow and Thoreau expressed the song as "Maids, maids, maids! hang on your teakettle-ettle-ettle!" Then there is the bluebird, who sighs with happiness as he announces that spring is at his heels, and exclaims "Dear, dear! Think of it, think of it!" The disgusted flicker, as he turns from some capering smaller creature, exclaims, "Wit? What wit! what wit! what wit!" The Baltimore oriole has evidently been having a hard time persuading his mate to do something he has been urgently seeking. Finally she assents and he exclaims, "Will you? Will you, really, really, truly?" and she answers, "I will."

The tanager is impatient; or perhaps he thinks his mate is, for he says, "Pshaw! Wait, wait, wait for me. Wait!" And so we may find in birdlife the same kind of talk that we human beings hear among ourselves. One of the greatest pleasures is to spend a portion of each day in listening to those songs about you and interpreting them. You will note that there are many ventriloquists in the trees; that the songs of different individuals vary; that you can fit one interpretation to one singer and not to his neighbor of the same color; that there are a thousand and one things in bird-songs and calls that you never noticed before, although you had heard them over and over again. It is lots of fun; just try it and see!

Breeze Established in Its New Home

This issue of the North Shore Breeze is printed in its new home on Summer st., Manchester, in a new fireproof constructed building in the rear of a cottage at No. 66. The cottage has been remodeled and changed suitable for offices. A covered "runway" connects the two buildings—which are about 25 feet from each other.

The task of moving the presses and linotype, together with the multiplicity of printing equipment, type, benches, etc., was accomplished in short order. While last week's issue of the Breeze was still on the press, the job of moving was started. The work was continued all day Friday and Saturday, and on Sunday the new quarters were "straightened out," the equipment being set in its proper place. On Monday morning the office equipment was moved.

Visitors will always be welcome to call and inspect our new quarters.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

The novels published during the first five years of this century differ in a number of ways from the fiction of today. At that time the historical novel was much more in evidence. Fiction dealing with the sex question and like problems was a thing of the future. Spiritualism and matters psychic had very little attractions for the novelist of that period. However, Mary E. Wilkins' "Wind in the Rose Bush" dealt with the supernatural in a way that has not been improved on in the modern novel.

E. P. Oppenheim, the popular novelist of today, brought out "The Mysterious Mr. Saben" in 1905. It is a real good story. W. W. Jacobs, who still entertains us with his bright, breezy sailor yarns, published during the first four years of this century, "A Master of Craft," "Light Freights," "The Lady of the Barge," "At Sunwich Port" and "Dialstone Lane." Robert Hichens' "Garden of Allah" came out in 1904. C. C. Munn's "Uncle Terry" and "Rock Haven" were much read.

S. R. Crockett, whose reputation was made by "The Stickit Minister," enhanced that reputation by such novels as "Cinderella," "The Silver Skull," "The Dark of the Moon" and "Banner of Blue." Of good sea stories, Connolly's "Out of Gloucester" and "The Seiners" and W. Clark Russell's "The Cruise of the Pretty Polly" and "The Captain's Wife" may be mentioned. Do you know Churchill's "The Celebrity," "The Crisis" and "The Crossing?" James Lane Allen was a great favorite with novel readers, and his "Choir Invisible," "A Kentucky Cardinal," "Reign of Law" and "Mettle of the Pasture" are among his best.

Have you read "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come?" Another well-known story was "Captain of the Grey Horse Troop," by Hamlin Garland. Three books that were in great demand when they came out were "Prisoners of Hope," "To Have and to Hold" and "Audrey," by Mary Johnston.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," by Chas. Felton Pigeon, was a much-read book. "The Right of Way," by Gilbert Parker, was one of that author's best works.

"The Pit," "The Octopus," "A Man's Woman" and "A Deal in Wheat," all by Frank Norris, had a large circulation. Four other popular novels were "Truth Dexter," "Captain Eri," "The Call of the Wild" and "Beverly of Graustark." We have "The Day's Work," "The Light that Failed" and "Stalky and Co.," by Rudyard Kipling. "Eleanor" and "Lady Rose's Daughter" are two of the best of Mrs. Ward's novels.

There were a number of works of fiction that came out between 1897 and 1900 whose popularity lasted well into the new century — "Hugh Wynne, Free Quaker," "Red Rock," "Quo Vadis," "Unleavened Bread," "David Harum," "The Hon. Peter Stirling," "Janice Meredith," "The Voice of the People," "Concerning Isabel Carnaby" and "The Double Thread."

Amelia E. Barr's "Bow of Orange Ribbon," which came out in 1893, was followed in 1900 by a sequel, "The Maid of Maiden Lane."

Charles Major's historical stories, "When Knighthood was in Flower" and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," are superior to many of the novels of today.

"Red Pottage," "The Christian," "The Tory Lover" and "The Pretty Tory" are all good.

Some of Marion Crawford's best novels—"The Palace of the King," "Via Crucis" and "Cecelia"—came out at this time.

"From Kingdom to Colony," by Mary Devereux, "The Needle's Eye," by Florence Morse Kingsley, and "The Garden of Swords," by Max Pemberton, are all worth reading. In this article, the names of some seventy novels have been given, and this list could be much enlarged, did space permit. Some new books, have just arrived at the library, and next week we hope to tell you something about them.

MANCHESTER YOUNG PEOPLE IN COLLEGE AND SCHOOL GRADUATIONS

Miss Ruth A. Herrick and Miss Helen Cheever are among the graduates at the Salem Normal school this year, the commencement exercises of which start next Wednesday, June 15.

Miss Cheever has been president of the Bird club at the school during the past year. This is a club organized by the Seniors of the school, but to which any member of any class may belong, and is devoted to the study of birds. Miss Cheever has a position for next season in the public school at Quincy.

Miss Grace Merrill is one of the graduating class at Smith college next week. Mrs. Merrill, who has been spending the past few weeks visiting in New Jersey, is coming on for the exercises and will be joined by Mr. Merrill, who leaves here for Northampton tomorrow. Miss Merrill has specialized in music during her college course.

Miss Nina E. Sinnicks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Albert Sinnicks, is one of the graduating class of the English course at Mt. Holyoke college this year, the exercises of which commence next week. Miss Sinnicks during her Senior year has been one of the three literary editors of the Senior year book, "Llama," which was ushered into being by elaborate ceremonies last Saturday morning. Two art editors of the book, riding on horseback accompanied by the three literary editors riding in an automobile entered the south campus of the school one hour before the rising bell and with a fanfare of bugles summoned the students for the reading of their literary efforts.

Later a luncheon was served in the blue dining room of Students' Alumnae hall.

Miss Sinnicks is a member of the Black Jack society, which is composed only of students who have had at least a certain number of "A" marks to their credit, or who have written a certain number of stories which have been accepted.

She has also been honored by being one of five from Mt. Holyoke college, with seven from Smith college chosen to study playwriting under Prof. Samuel Eliot, of Smith college.

Miss Sinnicks' parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Albert Sinnicks, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. George S. Sinnicks, are leaving tomorrow for South Hadley for the college exercises.

BEVERLY FARMS

The Beverly Farms branch of the Beverly Improvement society met with Mrs. Chas. Trowt at Pride's Crossing. Plans for improvements of various kinds were discussed. After the meeting the members were invited to the "Muffin Stand," a charming new tea-room nearby, where most delicious refreshments were served.

A bicycle repair shop has been opened at 28 West st., by Clare Peters, who conducts a similar place in Manchester. Mr. Peters will also carry a line of accessories.

Special Town Meeting will be Held Monday, June 21

The date of the special town meeting to be held in Manchester has been set for Monday, June 21, at 7.30 o'clock in the evening, and the warrants for the special meeting have been posted this week.

The warrant contains five articles, as follows:

Article 1—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $2,500 to pay jointly to Frank P. Knight and the estate of George L. Knight; a further sum of $800 to Frank P. Knight, individually; and a further sum of $291.44 to Richard L. Cheever; in each case for damages caused to property by the taking of easements by the town in 1914 for sewer purposes. The same to be paid only upon proper certification by the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners.

Article 2—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $300 for replacing and painting buoys in Manchester harbor.

Article 3—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $650 for interest on temporary loans.

Article 4—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $1,000 for maintenance of the park department, as per request of the Park Commissioners.

Article 5—To see if the town will accept Chapter 240, of the Acts of 1920, entitled "An act to permit, under public regulation and control, certain sports and games on the Lord's Day." As per petition of Eugene F. Wogan and others.

In regard to article one the state legislature recently passed a special act (Chapter 442), authorizing the town of Manchester to pay certain sums of money to Frank P. Knight and others if the town should so vote.

The Breeze $2 year, $1 six months.

BIG DOUBLE CIRCUS

This locality has entertained many circuses, but never anything to compare with the gigantic double shows billed as Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined which will exhibit afternoon and night at Boston, week of Monday, June 14.

The merging of these mammoth institutions in one circus of colossal size, constitutes the amusement surprise of the century. Nothing to approach this gigantic, new circus has ever before toured America. It has been formed by merging the pick and the cream of all that was biggest and best in the two famous shows. It would be folly to attempt to enumerate its many wonders. Some idea of the enormous scale upon which features are presented may be had when it is stated that a quarter of a million pounds of elephants take part in a single act. In other words—six times as many of the big-eared giants than have ever before been seen in one main-tent exhibition. All else to be seen is in proportion. The arenic stars embrace all the world's foremost circus performers. There are three hours of novelties and big sensational acts. The menagerie is far and away the most colossal ever traveled.

The marriage of Edison M. Baker, of Manchester, to Miss Esther Mow, of Quincy, has been announced. Mr. and Mrs. Baker will make their home in Quincy.

Mr. and Mrs. Murdo Mackay (Alma Baker) have left for Montreal, whence they will sail for Scotland on the Laconia to visit Mr. Mackay's parents. Before returning home they plan to visit the battlefields of France. During the war Mr. Mackay served in the Second Canadian Division in France, and he also went to Germany with the troops. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay will remain abroad during the entire summer.

W. R. C. will Observe Flag Day Next Monday Evening

Allen W. R. corps is planning to observe Flag Day in an appropriate manner, at G. A. R. hall, Manchester, next Monday evening, June 14, at 8 o'clock. The other patriotic organizations in town have been invited to attend the affair, and an invitation is also extended the public.

The entertainment will consist of readings, musical selections and recitations.

It is hoped that many of the townspeople will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending this patriotic observance.

Boy Scout Notes

Manchester troop of Boy Scouts participated last week in the national Boy Scout drive for associate members and funds. The boys met with a generous response from Manchester residents, also from many of the summer people. The money which they collected will all be sent to New York for use of the national association, and will not be applied to needs in Manchester.

The articles which the Scouts are making in the manual training class under the direction of S. Henry Hoare, are rapidly nearing completion. It is planned to hold an exhibition this summer, similar to the one held last year. The date will be some time in August, probably.

Instead of the regular meeting, tonight, Friday, the troop will enjoy a hike to the Essex woods. The troop members will be divided and a game entitled "Hunting for the Hidden Treasure" will be played. This game will apply many of the lessons of a Scout's life. All Scouts should be in uniform at the scouthouse this evening at 6.30 o'clock.

On account of the rain last Saturday the ball game with the Essex troop was postponed. It is hoped to have this game arranged at a later date.

MANCHESTER MAN SAFE IN REGION OF ARMENIAN-TURKISH HOSTILITIES

Wm. E. Hawkes, of Manchester, is reported safe in Sivas, Armenia, by courier who arrived from that place at the Near East Relief Headquarters at Constantinople.

Sivas has been in the zone of action in the fighting between the Armenians and the Turks in the recent uprising. Some anxiety has been felt for the Near East Relief personnel who were stationed there, but now they are all definitely known to be safe.

Hawkes has been engaged in organizing work for the Near East Relief in Sivas and the vicinity.

(The above information was furnished by the Near East Relief News Service, New York city. We do not know of any Wm. E. Hawkes, who is a resident of Manchester.—ED.)

Mrs. Green, of Boston, has returned to Manchester for the summer and has resumed her Hand Laundry, off 13 Washington st., which she has conducted so successfully the last few years.

The dance given in Town hall, Manchester, on Monday evening of this week by Frank B. Amaral post, A. L., was liberally patronized by the townspeople, and the Legion post added a few much-needed dollars to its treasury.

Bertram P. Floyd has let the contract to build his new home in Beverly to Roberts & Hoare. The house is of the Dutch colonial type and is to be built on the lot recently purchased by Mr. Floyd at 55 Lovett st. We understand work is to be begun at once.

Miss Cherstine Peterson, of Boston, who has been coming to Manchester summers for several years, has returned this week to take up her work at manicuring, shampooing, and doing facial and scalp massage, etc., at the residences of North Shore people. As usual, she is with Mrs. M. C. Dodge, 26 School st.

July 4th Plans

Plans are being formulated for the July 4th celebration in Manchester. There will be no attempt made to have a parade this year. There will be games and contests for the young folk in the morning, to be in charge of Dr. F. A. Willis; also a baseball game will be staged in the forenoon.

In the afternoon there will be a free picture show the the kiddies, and a band concert on the Common. Another concert will be given in the evening.

Rev. H. E. Levoy and family expected to return home this week from their vacation in New York, but the two children have been taken ill with the measles and the family will not return until some time next week.

The trees along the streets in Manchester have been receiving the attention of the tree warden and men this week. The trees have been sprayed with a poisonous solution to protect them from the ravages of enemies of plant life.

MANCHESTER VS. WOBURN IN GAME TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Manchester will have a new pitcher to try out this week. "Jack" Brawley, the Medford star, who is on the Red Sox list of recruits, will be given a chance to show the fans what he can do tomorrow, Saturday, when he faces the strong Woburn team. Woburn has one of the best teams in semi-professional ranks in New England and is coming to Manchester this year to wipe out the defeat of last season.

Healey will do the catching. Andrews will be on first again, Warner on second and "Bill" Francis will take care of the hot corner. "Bill" has been practicing every day at Fenway park and appears to be in perfect condition. With a little attention given to the batting end of the game he should make good. Kelley will be in left, Abbott in center and Harrison in right. Twiss, Lothrop and Brawley will do the mound work. This will undoubtedly be the best game of the season.

The lineup for tomorrow's game will be:

Manchester	Woburn
Andrews, 1b	1b, McGovern
Warner, 2b	2b, Toysly
Joyce, ss	ss, Cadigan
Francis, 3b	3b, McCarthy
Kelley, lf	lf, Doherty
Abbott, cf	cf, Walsh
Harrison, rf	rf, Walsh
Healey, c	c, MacQueen
Brawley, Twiss, Lothrop, p	p, Downey

The game will start at 3.15 sharp; no delay.

WHISPERINGS
Of the Breezes

It is

You are to judge it correctly.

x—x—x

When you have a lot of stuff to unload, there's nothing like tipping off other people to take it off your hands. "Inside information," even when it is genuine, and is given to you in all good faith, may be bad information for the very reason that it is "inside" information.

x—x—x

It is pretty safe to say that most "tips" and "inside information" which gets to the public come either from people with an ax to grind or from irresponsible sources.

x—x—x

Have you ever read Emerson's essay on "Compensation?" Then read it again and digest it! Emerson will show you that you must pay in some way for everything you get—pay at once or in the end; and that the people who seem to get something for nothing either in the end lose that something, or in the end pay for it two or three times over.

x—x—x

One of the most exciting incidents of the wedding is the "get away" of the bride and groom. Wednesday of last week, when Dr. F. A. Willis and Miss Abbie Floyd were married, in Manchester, nearly 200 of the guests awaited their departure from the Floyd home in the center of the town—but, they waited in vain, for the young couple successfully eluded everybody, by leaving the house through the back door, climbing over a fence, passing along the back of the Bingham property and gaining a friend's automobile (William W. Hoare) farther along the street. They rode off toward Essex, where another friend (William Patterson) awaited in the Doctor's own car, into which they transferred and continued on their way.

x x x

They say that if one is bitten a sufficient number of times by mosquitos, one becomes inoculated by the poison of the stings, as it were, and is henceforth free from bother. Anyone who chanced to visit Singing Beach last evening need not worry about mosquito bites for the rest of this summer at least.

PEBBLES on the BEACH

THERE was a little man,
Who had a little girl,
Who had a little dog,
And the little dog had a flea.
On a sunny day in May
The man went down the bay
With the girl,

Opening the Season at the Women's Club

The opening dance of the Women's club was held in the clubhouse, Tuesday evening, under the direction of Miss Peggy Abbott. Anderson's orchestra furnished the music. The dance was given for the benefit of the club, and a very jolly evening was the general verdict. Dances will be held every Tuesday evening this season under Miss Abbott's direction. The club will be under the management of Mrs. Alice W. Foster, as usual. Nearly every room is rented thus early in the season and several new names are on the membership book.

Children's day will be observed at the Village church Sunday at 10.45

Mrs. F. F. Story who spent the winter in Cambridge is now occupying her cottage on Western ave.

Mrs. Ernest Turnbull and baby boy, of New York city, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGaughey.

Nicholas Nelson is having a gasoline tank installed at the end of his driveway, on Western ave.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Closon, of Newton Centre, are now occupying their summer cottage off Norman ave.

Peter Lubraco, of New York city, arrived in town recently and his patrons are glad to see him in the barber shop again.

Dorothea McGaughey has been engaged for another season as the clerk and bookkeeper of the North Shore swimming pool club.

The Misses Mary and Elizabeth Thornton, of Lexington, are now pleasantly located in their respective summer homes, off Magnolia ave.

Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Thornburg and family will spend the summer at West Gloucester, having rented their attractive house on Norman ave., for the season.

Rose Nelson, who has just completed her Freshman year at Smith college, arrived home Wednesday. Her brother, Victor, will work for his father, Nicholas Nelson, this summer, driving a new Buick touring car.

We are thankful to our city fathers for what they have done in making our cemetery more attractive and beautiful, but there is need of improvement on the old broken fountain and remnant of a house in front of Foster's drug store, and the fishing schooner (or what is left of it) on the beach near the Oceanside bathhouse. Surely someone in authority should attend to this matter very soon, before our summer guests arrive in large numbers.

Fri. and Sat. — Wm. Farnum in "Wolves of the Night."

Strand Theatre, Lynn

Astounding under-water scenes showing the crew in a sunken submarine fighting death from suffocation, and Hobart Bosworth's sensational efforts to rescue them, are outstanding thrills of the new Paramount-Artcraft-Ince picture, "Below the Surface," to be featured on the screen of the Strand theatre, Lynn, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Something of the tang and power of the sea seems to have been transmitted to Bosworth's staunch frame, in this spectacular drama. Its beautiful love story makes it one of the screen's greatest masterpieces. Accompanying features will include Wm. J. Flynn's U. S. Secret Service story, "The Poppy Trail," featuring Herbert Rawlinson; Burton Holmes' travel picture, "An Oriental Sing Sing;" Sunshine comedy beauties in "Monkey Business" and Strand Topical Review.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be shown Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle in "She Loves and Lies;" "The Lost City," entitled "In the Cave of Eternal Fire" and other films.

Next Sunday's pictures will be Evelyn Greeley in "Me and Captain Kidd" and Zena Keefe in "The Challenge Accepted." Wm. Farnum will appear June 21, 22 and 23 in "The Joyous Troublemaker" and Elliott Dexter June 24, 25 and 26 in Cecil B. DeMille's "For Better, for Worse." Strand performances are continuous from 1 to 11 p. m. daily and from 5 to 10 p. m. on Sunday. Musical features include a 12-piece orchestra, concert organ and soloists.

Horticultural Hall Pictures

Commencing tomorrow, Saturday, there will be two complete shows each Tuesday and Saturday evening, at 7 and 9 o'clock. The Tuesday matinee will be discontinued through the summer months.

The feature pictures tomorrow evening at Horticultural hall, Manchester, will be Robert Warwick in "The Tree of Knowledge," and Marguerite Clarke in "All of a Sudden Peggie." Each feature picture will begin on the hour, at 7, 8, 9 and 10 o'clock.

Next Tuesday evening there will be a 6-reel special production from the novel by Sir Gilbert Parker entitled "The Right of Way," starring Bert Lytell. Herbert Rawlinson in a 2-reel Flynn detective story, "The Poppy Trail," Prizma natural color reel and Fox News.

The storekeepers on Lexington ave., are busy these days getting their stores ready for the coming season. This shopping district is one of the most beautiful parts of the village and we have never seen this avenue look more attractive than it does now.

Many Beverly Farms people were sorry to learn of the death of Philip Cross, who passed away on Friday of last week at his home in Beverly, at the age of 65 years. He was a former well-known Beverly Farms resident, being born and making his home here until about a dozen years ago.

The need of a traffic officer at Central sq., especially on Saturdays and Sundays, is apparent, as this is a most dangerous crossing. The silent policeman which used to do duty there and was of much value in keeping travel in its proper place may be enjoying a vacation, as of late it has been absent.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Miss Mary E. Collins, Struck by Auto, Dragged Over 140 Feet, Dies at Hospital

Dragged more than 140 feet, taken out from underneath the automobile when it tipped over after crashing into a stone wall, Miss Mary E. Collins, daughter of Mrs. Ellen Collins, of 261 Hale st., died at the Beverly hospital, Sunday afternoon, after four hours of terrible suffering as a result of an automobile accident at Chapman's corner, Sunday morning. Miss Collins had both arms broken, skull fractured and received internal injuries resulting ing her death.

Ludwick Buba, 49, of 90 Derby st., Salem, was arrested after the accident charged with reckless driving, operating an automobile without a license and for not carrying a registration license. Later, following the death of Miss Collins, the Salem man was charged with manslaughter and was bailed out in $2,000.

The Bay State car in charge of Conductor Everett Ober had finished the run to Chapman's corner, the terminal of the line and most of the passengers had alighted. Miss Nellie Collins, a sister of the dead woman had stopped to get a trip ticket and the sister waited. She had alighted from the trolley when the big touring car driven by Buba came swinging around the corner toward Beverly at good speed and making such a wide turn that he just barely missed the car and struck Miss Collins. In an effort to save herself, Miss Collins grabbed hold of the fender and was dragged underneath the wildly running machine. Buba lost all control of the auto for it continued on its run until it jumped the railroad tracks and went up against the stone wall near the Douglass place, shivered when it struck and then toppled over, pinning

Miss Collins underneath. John Quigley, a neighbor, who had been on the car and was about to go into his yard, saw the Buba auto hit Miss Collins. He shouted a warning and then followed the car and succeeded in getting her from underneath after it had toppled over. He found her bruised and bleeding and carried her to her home. The ambulance was summoned and the injured woman taken to the hospital, where despite everything that could be done she passed away about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Patrolman Edward F. Glidden investigated and to him Buba told the story that his brakes had failed to work. Glidden and Newton Thompson, an expert automobile man, tried the brakes and found that they were working properly. In the car with Buba was his daughter, Miss Polly, and two small children. They all escaped with a shaking up. The car was considerably damaged.

The accident cast a deep feeling of sadness over the Cove, where Miss Collins had lived all her life. She was born in Beverly, educated in the Beverly schools and at a business college, and for 25 years has been bookkeeper for Frank I. Lamasney, of the North Shore fish market at Beverly Farms. She was a remarkably keen business woman and was well-known throughout the city. She was an attendant at St. Mary's church, and was returning from the 9 o'clock mass when the accident happened. Besides her mother, Mrs. Ellen Collins, she leaves a sister, Miss Nellie Collins, bookkeeper at the J. H. Baker Shoe Company, and a brother, Joseph Collins, with the American Railway Express Company at Weston.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, Beverly, and were attended by a large number of relatives and friends. There were many floral tributes. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery, Salem.

The sympathy of the community is extended the bereaved family.

POSSIBLE MOVING PICTURE REFORMS

It is pleasant to read that the President is finding recreation in a moving picture machine of his own, operated in the East Room of the White House. Every day, we are informed, he sees one or two reels.

Patrons of the screen who have regretted the conservatism of the motion picture industry, the seeming lack of great vision, may hope that Mr. Wilson will be inspired to devote some of his future leisure to the uplifting of the dumb drama.

Open covenants of peace between picture directors and minor actors might be openly arrived at, with the result of giving a show to somebody in the cast besides the million dollar star.

Absolute freedom of navigation upon the stage could be granted occasionally to comedians who heretofore have been handicapped by their long shoes.

Adequate guarantees might be given and taken by Mr. Hart and his cinema enemies that they will reduce their armaments to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.

A free, open-minded and absolutely impartial adjustment of golden curls might be agreed upon by all the girlish heroines from Mary down.

The evacuation and restoration of drawing-rooms through which knockabout comedians have passed might be accomplished in full sight of the audience.

A readjustment of the frontiers of fat comedians along clearly recognized lines of rationing would not hurt anybody.

The freest opportunity for autonomous development, in closeups, could be given to diffident performers, when discovered.

A general association could be formed for the purpose of affording to minor characters guarantees of facial integrity against the aggression of custard pies.

There is a field for a great man in the reconstruction of the movies. True, they have no voices in the air, but think of the visions on the horizon of which they entirely consist!—Sun and New York Herald.

HACKNEYED FOR HER

"Can't you play something else than that everlasting march from 'Lohengrin' at my wedding?" asked the several times grass widow, who was arranging for another of her matrimonial events.

"Certainly, madam," responded the courteous organist. And as the bridal cortege wended its way down the aisle the church shook to the thundering forth of that popular classic:

"Over and Over Again!"—Reho-both Sunday Herald.

Little Willie: "What are debts, pa?"

Pa: "Debts, my son, are the silent partners of experience."—Chicago News.

"Do you really think that bleaching the hair causes insanity?"

"Certainly. I've heard of lots of fellows going crazy over a blonde."

BLUE AND PINK COLORED SEALS FOR BANK NOTES

A possibility of the near future is a standardization by the government of all United States currency for the purpose of facilitating quick change without the danger of short change.

The Treasury Department at Washington is now working on a proposition to mark bills of various denominations with a standardized color seal, so that anyone can recognize notes of different denominations at a glance.

The plan, suggested by R. Frank Beauchant, of Philadelphia, is the outcome of an experience he had recently when he mistook a $2 bill for a five.

The proposition, which he has submitted to the officials of the Treasury Department at Washington, and which is being considered along with others, provides for stamping the bills with a likeness of national figures, such as Washington, Lincoln, McKinley, etc. As a further mark of identification it is proposed to have a colored seal in one corner of the bill, such as a green seal for a one, a pink for a two, blue for a five, etc.

Mr. Beauchant has received a reply from John Burke, United States treasurer, assuring him that such changes as he indicates are already under consideration by the government and that his plan is one of those being studied by a special committee appointed for the purpose.

Their consideration of the subject thus far has virtually resulted in the elimination of "colored bills" from the list of feasible proposals, it was said, and it is probable when the new designs are adopted portraits and corner designs, possibly vari-colored seals, will be employed as a means of ready identification rather than other systems of marking.

Treasury officials dislike the idea of using different dyes for the various denominations of bills. They offer as one objection that colored currency "wouldn't like money;" as another that dyes—even the best—are not uniform and frequently fade or change when the money has been in circulation for a short time, and a third that the special grade of paper used in engraving money "takes" the dyes and inks now in use better than any other.

Carter Glass was the first secretary of the treasury to adopt the suggestion of uniformity in bills of the same denomination.

Acting on his predecessor's recommendation, Secretary Houston, when he took over the treasury portfolio, appointed a committee of experts including W. H. Moran, chief of the secret service, and probably the foremost authority in the United States on currency designs and counterfeits, and Wm. S. Broughton, commissioner of the public debt, to work out a schedule of standard designs. This committee has undertaken this work and probably will be engaged on it for several months.

The public is warned by treasury officials not to accept at present any bills bearing an unfamiliar design.—Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

Enough

A big, powerful car slowed up as the occupants perceived a car of very modest proportions standing by the roadside in a rather battered condition. The owner of the car was on his knees endeavoring to straighten out some of the parts.

"Have an accident, my man?" queried the man in the big car.

"No, thank you," grimly returned the other; "just had one."—Life.

Where It Came In

"I'm darned if I can see how you make any money on those clocks," said Jones. "You've got them priced at $5 and it must cost that much to make them."

"It does," agreed the dealer.

"Then where does the profit come in?"

"In repairing 'em."—American Legion Weekly.

SOCIETY NOTES

THE annual meeting of the Garden club of America, to be held at Manchester and vicinity on the 29th and 30th of this month, and July 1, will be the biggest event of the early summer on the North Shore, by all means. While it is expected several hundred people of prominence from all sections of the country will come to the North Shore for this event—as delegates and non-delegates from various garden clubs and kindred organizations—there will be no particular headquarters for the meeting. Practically all the delegates will be guests at the residences of North Shore people, while many of the non-delegates have engaged rooms at the Oceanside and Aborn hotels, Magnolia.

Some wonderful things are in store for the visitors, mostly, of course, in the nature of visits to North Shore estates.

The annual summer flower show of the North Shore Horticultural society will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 29 and 30, at the society's hall in Manchester. A visit to this exhibition, which chances to be given at this opportune time, will be the first thing on the program for the opening day of the convention. Then will follow visits to the estates of Mrs. Gordon Abbott, West Manchester; Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Pride's Crossing; Indian Hill, West Newbury; Mrs. F. J. Moseley, Newburyport, and Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr., "Castle Hill," Ipswich.

Among the places visited Wednesday, the 30th, will be the estates of Mrs. W. D. Denègre, West Manchester; Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Smith's Point, Manchester; Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, West Manchester; Miss Davison and Miss Hawley, Eastern Point, Gloucester; Mrs. F. M. Whitehouse, Mrs. Charles Hopkinson, Misses Sturgis and Mrs. G. M. Lane, Manchester; Mrs. Q. A. Shaw and Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, Pride's Crossing.

On Thursday, July 1, the estates of Mrs. Wm. C. Endicott and Mrs. Ward Thoron, at Danvers, will be among the places visited.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Blackwood Fay and family, of Boston, who usually have a cottage, will come to the Oceanside hotel at Magnolia today, when it opens for the season. They will spend most of the season there.

A special thermopak container for ice cream at Page & Shaw's Tea Room, Pride's Crossing, will keep contents hot or cold. Good for auto parties and will last for years. adv.

SOCIETY NOTES

THE first dinner dance of the season will be held at the Essex County club, Manchester, on Friday evening, July 2. Table d'hôte dinner will be served at 7.30, followed by dancing at 9 o'clock. Music for the dancing will be furnished by Herbert Lowe's best orchestra.

At the annual meeting of the Essex County club last Saturday afternoon, the following officers were elected: Henry S. Grew, president; D. L. Hickman, Jr., Henry S. Grew, George R. White, J. Torrey Morse, Amory Eliot, George E. Warren, George E. Barnard, Wallace Goodrich, Samuel A. Culbertson, directors; Frederick M. Burnham, secretary; William de Ford Beal, treasurer; Henry S. Grew, Wallace Goodrich, Amory Eliot, executive committee; George E. Warren, Wallace Goodrich, house committee; Amory Eliot, George E. Warren, George E. Barnard, grounds committee; George E. Barnard, E. Palmer Gavit, S. P. Bremer, golf committee; H. S. Bundy, H. S. Grew, tennis committee; W. de Ford Beal, George Warren, Miss Elaine Denègre, Mrs. J. K. Howard, entertainment committee.

Col. E. M. House and Mrs. House, of New York, who suddenly changed their plans about coming to the North Shore two or three weeks ago, sailed last Saturday on board the Red Star liner Lapland for Southampton and Antwerp.

The Eastern Dog club held its spring bench show last Saturday at the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Warren, Pride's Crossing. The club members were guests for luncheon of Mr. and Mrs. Warren. Q. A. Shaw McKean's champion Pride's Hill Tweakem was given the award as the best dog in the show. Puppies under six months first went to Bayard Tuckerman's Sealyham, Seven Hills. Albert Geiger, Jr.'s Helllock Hill Ibo Cadey, Sealyham terrier was given first for the best puppy over six months, but under one year. In the America-bred class Q. A. Shaw McKean's Tweakem won. In the open class Bayard Warren's champion Barbarry Hill Gin Ricky was first. In dogs bred by members Mr. McKean's Tweakem won. Whippet races on the Myopia Hunt club polo field at Hamilton with dogs from the Warren and Tuckerman kennels followed the show.

Mrs. Cranmore N. Wallace, of Boston, has arrived at her summer home on Neptune boulevard, Beverly Cove, for the season.

SURGICAL DRESSINGS! How familiar the term, and what thoughts and memories are revived in the minds of North Shore people when "surgical dressings" are spoken of! Grim reminders of the busy war-time days, bringing to mind the hours and weeks and months—incessant labors of North Shore matrons and misses to add their contribution to the great undertaking all over the country to supply the hospitals across the seas with materials during the terrible days of the war.

Now the war days are over, but there is yet need for surgical dressings. On account of a shortage of nurses, the Welfare committee of the Children's hospital, of Boston, calls for volunteers to make surgical dressings. "Will you help?" is the appeal being sent out by the North Shore committee in charge. Meetings are to be held in the basement of Horticultural hall, Manchester, from 10 a. m. to 12.30, beginning Tuesday, July 6th. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Timothèe Adamowski, Mrs. William W. Caswell, Miss Elaine Denègre, Mrs. Henry S. Grew, 2d, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. George H. Lyman, Miss Harriet C. Rantoul, Mrs. R. Paul Snelling and Miss Alice Thorndike. Contributions will be gratefully received by Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman, Beverly Farms.

THE wedding tomorrow — the 19th—of Miss Harriet Fessenden and F. W. Busk, the latter of New York, will take many of the North Shore colony already settled here back to Boston. Miss Fessenden is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden, of Chestnut Hill and Coolidge Point, Manchester. The Busks have a big summer estate at Newport, R. I., and it is there, probably, the young people will pass most of the summer, coming to the North Shore for a visit in August.

Thomas Taylor and family, of Columbia, S. C., are among the week's arrivals at Manchester. Their place is most picturesquely located at the eastern end of Singing Beach, close to Eagle Head, and offers a wonderful view of the ocean and of Massachusetts Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Davis, of Brush Hill rd., Readville, will occupy the Bradley cottage, Smith's Point, Manchester, this summer.

"WALDYN," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett (Dorothy Draper) and family, Blossom lane, Manchester, was opened this week. The winter home of the family now is on Brush Hill rd., Milton.

The Carl P. Dennetts have arrived at Manchester this week and are at the R. H. Dana estate, Dana's Beach.

D. A. Sullivan and family, of Brookline, have arrived for the season, at their newly renovated residence on Beach st., Manchester, formerly the Schofield cottage and part of the Masconomo House. The latter is now being demolished and is supposed to be entirely removed by the 15th of July.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sears Lovering (Mary Eliot) and four young children—Mary, Lydia, Richard and Phyllis—will spend the summer at their place in Manchester. They left here in mid-winter for their new year-round home at Hoffman, N. C.

THE NAVY FESTIVAL, to be held at the Haven estate, Beverly Farms, Saturday, July 3—two weeks hence—for the benefit of the Charlestown Navy Y. M. C. A., will be a big affair. The horse show promises to be the big feature of the festival. It was originally intended to have only two classes—hunters shown over jumps and children's hackneys—but the demand for a class for hackney saddle horses has been so persistent that Frederick Ayer has added this class. The horse show idea has "caught on" in a big way and the committee now plans to erect 100 boxes around the ring. One of the most interesting features of the show will be the class for the best horse in the show. Mrs. George von L. Meyer, chairman of the booths' committee, will have a large number to assist her. Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., will have charge of the confectionery booth and she will be assisted by Miss Olivia Ames, Miss Elaine Denègre and Miss Sybil Appleton. Mrs. Francis P. Sears is chairman of the cake booths and will be aided by Mrs. Lynde Cochrane and a large corps of assistants. The booth for fancy articles will be in charge of Mrs. Laurence White; Mrs. Isaac R. Thomas, dairy products booth, assisted by Mrs. Benjamin P. P. Moseley and Mrs. Frederick J. Allen; Mrs. Gerald Bramwell and Mrs. H. P. McKean, antiques; Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, flowers and baskets, assisted by Mrs. F. L. Higginson and Miss Burnham; Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, grab booth; Mrs. Louis Bacon, millinery booth; John R. Post, athletic goods, assisted by Charles C. Walker, Miss Katherine Pollard and Miss Priscilla Pollard. Herbert W. Mason and Gerald Bramwell will be in charge of the soda fountain.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lawrence and two children, of 386 Commonwealth ave., Boston, are spending the summer at Nahant, where they have a cottage at 2 Winter st.

Mrs. Marshall Field, who spent last summer at Beverly Farms, sailed on Thursday of last week from New York for Europe, where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane has closed her town house on Marlboro st., Boston, and with her daughter, Miss Katharine Lane, is now occupying her summer place, "The Chimneys," at Manchester. Mrs. Lane, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainments to be given in connection with the annual meeting of the Garden club of America, to open in Manchester on June 29, will have as her house guests over the convention several of the visiting delegates, among them Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Bouvoir, Fauquier county, Va., wife of Pres. Fairfax Harrison, of the Southern Railroad, and Mrs. Charles Ellet Rieman, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Grafton W. Minot and her children will soon leave Washington for the North Shore, where they will spend the summer at "The Alhambra," the Gardner cottage at Pride's Crossing. Mrs. Minot's mother, Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, will, as usual, occupy Sagamore Farm, her summer home at Hamilton, and her grandfather, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, will be at his summer home at Nahant. All three make their winter homes in Washington, and each maintains a separate residence.

DEL MONTE'S, that popular rendezvous for North Shore people who delight to "drop in" for a bite and a dance, will open for the season next Thursday, June 24, under the same management as the last three years,—Joseph P. Del Monte, who is connected with the Hotel Westminster, Boston. Del Monte's was formerly known as North Shore Grill—in fact, it was only last year that Mr. Del Monte changed the name. Del Monte's has a reputation for superior cuisine, excellent service and refined entertainment that means much to the success of an enterprise of this sort for such a short season.

SIGN OF THE CRANE Tea House, located on the main road in Manchester, opposite the old cemetery, will open for the season the last week in June. Miss Agnes R. Ferguson, of Springfield, has purchased the Tea House from Miss Judson, and it is her intention to conduct it on the same high standard as Miss Judson has in the past. Miss Judson will not come to Manchester this summer. Miss Ferguson announces that she will serve luncheon and afternoon tea, that she will also have the antique furniture and other articles for sale, and that she will carry on the gift shop feature as did Miss Judson last year.

With its shady lawns and piazzas, with tables set outdoors when weather conditions are favorable—and with the best of home-cooked food—the Edna Ferguson T House will prove a popular spot for visitors to Magnolia, who are seeking a quiet, restful place at which to "drop in" for a cup of tea, or for something more substantial.

Ye Old Burnham House, that delightful old relic of Colonial days, situated on Linebrook road, Ipswich, has been open since Memorial Day, under the management for its tenth season of Martha Lucy Murray. It is a rare pleasure to motor over through the country from Manchester or Magnolia, or any other section of the North Shore, in fact, through the town of Essex, with its shipbuilding industry thriving as it did a hundred years ago, and pass on through the town of Ipswich, by the famous old Ipswich Mills, to Ye Old Burnham House—there to rest in quiet amid the old furniture of the early days, in the low-studded rooms, with their hand-cleft beams. Appetizing dishes are served by modern colonial dames, or if one does not care for something to eat, there are toys and gifts in variety and oddity to suit one's tastes. Ye Old Burnham House was built in 1640.

The Larcom theatre, Beverly, will close on June 28 for two weeks and will reopen on July 12 with Tom Mix in "The Feud" and Elaine Hammerstein in "Woman's Game." adv.

THE seventh olympiad is to be held at Antwerp, Belgium, this summer, in August, and naturally the event holds the attention of athletes all over the country. Wm. F. Garcelon, the chairman of the New England committee, has asked the BREEZE to print the following appeal for funds:

The New England Olympic committee is raising $50,000 as New England's share of the expenses of the team of 280 men who will represent America in the Olympic games at Antwerp in August. Every sport-loving man is urged to contribute. Five dollars gives a contributing membership button; any amount is acceptable. On July 17th in the Stadium, at Cambridge, will be held the greatest track contest ever held in this country. The winners of the preliminaries at San Francisco, New Orleans, Philadelphia and Chicago will all compete just before sailing in an army transport for Belgium. America expects to win the championship. Contributions should be sent to William F. Garcelon, chairman, 608 Sears Bldg., Boston, or A. L. Winship, treasurer, National Shawmut Bank, Boston.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

East Gloucester, Bass Rocks, Rockport and Annisquam Ready for Busy Season

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—The summer social life at Gloucester and Cape Ann this season promises to be gay. Already plans have been made extensively for important events. The principal event which is being widely advertised over the country from the Pacific to the Atlantic is the "Pilgrimage to the Sea," and Gloucester is to be the center of interest for several days in August, when the 150th anniversary of Universalism in America will be celebrated. The first Universalist church in America is in Gloucester, where Rev. John Murray, the founder of the Universalist faith, erected the first meeting-house and preached the doctrine. A big pageant of a historical nature is to be staged in the open at Stage Fort Park, as one of the features of the celebration. Thousands of Universalists from various sections of the country will visit Gloucester on this pilgrimage.

A big "street fair" will be held in August for the benefit of the Addison Gilbert hospital new maternity ward on the hospital grounds. Many summer people will be interested in this event. An important affair in July will be an out-door fête on the Gallery-on-the-Moors grounds, in aid of the Braewood Tuberculosis hospital, of Gloucester. A most worthy cause and summer people will be especially interested.

A big mid-summer event is planned for the Hawthorne Inn grounds and the Community Playhouse at Eastern Point will present some interesting plays and musicales. A Fourth of July celebration will be held at Stage Fort Park, Gloucester. Over a score of prominent social and business organizations from cities scattered far and near will hold outings at various dates during the summer in Gloucester. Numerous interesting events are scheduled, but plans have not matured so that they may be announced at the present time.

EASTERN POINT.—A. P. Andrew, the well-known banker, of La Porte, Ind., has joined his son, Col. A. Piatt Andrew, of the American Ambulance corps in the late war, at Col. Andrew's attractive Eastern Point cottage. Col. Andrew's mother passed away during the winter, in La Porte, and she will be missed from the Eastern Point colony, where she spent so many summers.

Ex-Mayor and Mrs. Isaac Patch (Helen Andrew), of Eastern Point rd., are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a little daughter two weeks ago.

Mrs. James H. Knowles (Frances Serrill), of Philadelphia, has joined her husband, Dr. J. H. Knowles, at Lowestoff, their summer home on Niles Beach boulevard, Eastern Point, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Hinchman and daughter, of Spruce st., Philadelphia, have arrived at one of the Stacy cottages on Grape Vine rd., Eastern Point, for the summer. They have their car with them.

Mrs. N. H. Weeks and daughters, the Misses Weeks, of Manchester, N. H., are occupying their attractive summer cottage of Spanish design near Sunset Rock, Eastern Point, for the season. The family has been coming to East

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

Gloucester for a great many years, coming early and remaining late.

Louis Kronberg, the well-known artist, usually a member of the Eastern Point colony season after season, is this year across the water, being located in Spain.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Noyes, of Boston, have arrived at Rocky Neck for the season, being located at the Rockaway. Mr. Noyes, who is an artist, has a studio nearby.

Jane Peterson, the New York artist, has a new studio this season in the building near Rocky Neck marine railways.

Miss Felecie Waldo Howells, the artist, and her mother, of New York, have arrived at the Parker cottage on Wonson st., Rocky Neck.

Through the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. William Edwin Atwood the Gallery-on-the-Moors was opened on Tuesday evening of last week to the College Women's club and its guests for the annual reception to high school girls interested in higher education. A pleasing talk on "Opportunities for Citizenship Through Education" was given by Mrs. Claude U. Gilson, a lady prominent on both sides of the water, and accustomed to talk to large assemblies. Miss Nancy Flagg, the club president, made remarks, and there was a season of musical, vocal selections, followed by dancing and refreshments of ices and cakes. About 100 people were present and had an enjoyable time.

BASS ROCKS.—Great interest is being taken in the proposed new shore road between Gloucester, from Bass Rocks section to Land's End, Rockport, thereby connecting the main road and affording a beautiful shore boulevard. The county commissioners gave a hearing at City hall, Gloucester, Tuesday forenoon of last week, with a large attendance of interested citizens. A hearing was likewise held at Town hall, Rockport, in the afternoon. Two tentative plans were submitted for the layout of the Gloucester end of the road, one straight across the beach skirting the present trestle and the other running along the edge of the upland and paralleling Eastern ave. in part. It is favored to having the road built across the beach, where the beauty of the scenery could be realized in the drive as well as having a fine level stretch skirting the sea. There were a number of Bass Rocks summer residents present at the hearing who opposed the building of the road across the beach. Miss Emily McGuckin, president of the Bass Rocks Improvement society, objected in behalf of the members of the association. She claimed that if the road was built across the beach, it would make a picnic ground of the locality, with the accompanying nuisance of refuse and debris, and it would not be possible to police it properly in order to prevent depredations. She also claimed that the road would make a bunter for the tides and would cause an undertow, making bathing dangerous on the beach and it would also prevent the spring tides from washing and cleaning the beach. The citizens of Rockport at the hearing were in general favor of the shore road despite the fact that it will cost more to build it as proposed, in skirting the shore. As many people have said that after going over the section on the uplands they were convinced that the best route would be nearer the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Chandler, of San Antonio, Tex., have arrived at "Casa Del Mar," their beautiful estate at Bass Rocks.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Tucker Sayward, of Brookline, are occupying their cottage on Souther rd., Bass Rocks, for the season, the property being purchased last year by Mr. Sayward from Fred H. Eaton, of Lawrence.

Mrs. Nannie (Fisher) Delham and family, of Baltimore, Md., are expected soon to occupy the Harding cottage on Page rd., Bass Rocks, which was occupied for two seasons by the Siamese legation.

The Dearborns, of Boston, are occupying their summer home on Page rd., Bass Rocks.

The Wonson cottage at Grape Vine Cove, near "the Pines," is leased for the season by Max Rafel, a well-known clothier, of Boston. The family has arrived for the season.

The season is rather backward as far as arrivals are concerned at Bass Rocks. In comparison to other seasons there are less families settled in their summer homes. Houses have been rented, but the majority of people are waiting till the close of schools.

The Moorland hotel has been open to Technology students for several days, for their reunion. Bass Rocks and the hotel have been the mecca for Tech societies in past seasons and they had a grand time, with golf, baseball, bathing, feasting and entertainment during the past week.

Honking your horn doesn't help so much as steering wisely.—B. C. Forbes.

ANNISQUAM.—The hotels Wonasquam Lodge, Overlook and Brynmere are looking forward to a busy season and in another week guests will begin to arrive in goodly numbers. The smaller guest houses also have large bookings.

Otis A. Shepard and family, of Brookline, have been spending a few weeks at the Shepard cottage in Annisquam, at Norwood Heights. The family will be missed from the Annisquam colony this summer, as the Shepards left last week for England.

A. K. Warren and family, of Salem, are located at the Ricker cottage, Leonard st., Annisquam, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Williams and Mary Williams, of Columbus, Ohio, are at the Ricker cottage, Annisquam, for the season.

Edward P. Gokey and family, of Boston, have arrived at their cottage, Annisquam, for the season.

ROCKPORT.—Straitsmouth Inn, at Land's End, has opened for the season and a number of guests are registered.

The Harry Wests, of Newtonville, are occupying the York cottage, Sandaba ave., Land's End, Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shippen Barnes and family, of New York, have arrived at their summer home, corner School and High sts., Rockport. Mr. Barnes is a prominent musician and organist.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville A. Smith, of Newtonville, are spending the season at the Frazier cottage on the Headlands, Rockport.

Alfred Hayward, an artist, and member of the Philadelphia Water Color club and Fellowship Peuna Academy of Fine Arts, has leased the Witham bungalow on Granite st., Pigeon Cove, for the season.

Robert E. King, of Roslindale, and of the Merchants' National Bank, Boston, has rented "The Winthrop," a cottage on Bearsl in Neck, Rockport, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Huff, of New York, have arrived at their Pigeon Cove cottage for the season.

The Rockport summer colony, especially Pigeon Cove, will miss greatly the presence of Miss Helen D. Winchester, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Miss Winchester passed away in Brooklyn last week. She had been coming to Cape Ann for a great many seasons, in company with her sister, and her cheerful personality won for her a host of friends. She remembered the Rockport library each summer with a gift of books.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—Tuesday noon, the ladies of the delegates to the American Institute of Banking convention held at Boston this week, were entertained at dinner at the Corinthian Yacht club, over 250 women being present. The ladies had the use of the large dining rooms and the broad piazzas.

Walter P. Richardson and Arthur G. Richardson, of Salem, are established at the Corinthian Yacht club, Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

R. E. Pope, of Peabody, entertained a group of 20 business men at luncheon Tuesday noon at the Corinthian Yacht club.

The first dinner dance of the Corinthian Yacht club summer season will be held July 5 and will continue on Mondays thereafter.

Richard K. Salter, of Marblehead Neck, has had erected a new double portable garage on the one-time Wiggen estate at Lighthouse Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard C. Morrison, of Arlington, who recently bought the Rhodes cottage at Lighthouse Point, Marblehead Neck, have been doing extensive repairing, and a new garage, as well, has been erected. This week new signs have appeared at the right of way designating this road as Robin lane, for the future.

W. S. Crosby, of Brookline, who is summering at Marblehead Neck, is entertaining friends from Chatham.

Miss Harriet E. Clarke and Mrs. Henry Clarke, of Worcester, have opened their home on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck. "Gray Rocks" overlooks the Churn and the broad ocean.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus L. Wilbur, of Chestnut Hill, are at the Connolly cottage, Marblehead Neck, again this season.

Frederick P. Valentine spent the week-end with his family at Marblehead Neck, and plans to commute from New York each week.

Mrs. Mabel Lockwood, of Boston, is now in the Dunlap cottage, Marblehead Neck, for the summer months.

THE annual Eastern Yacht club cruise will begin July 5 with rendezvous at Mattapoisett. The racing of international boats will be the center of attraction as the boats move on into Long Island Sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Curtis, Jr., of Brookline, are in the Pierce cottage at Marblehead Neck this summer.

Mrs. Philip McQuesten, Mrs. S. S. Dearborn and Mrs. W. D. Swartz, of Boston, are occupying the Gen. Wheeler cottage at Marblehead Neck.

John Alden, of Brookline, is registered this week at the Eastern Yacht club, Marblehead Neck.

The Eastern Yacht club will commence its band concerts the first Thursday in July and a special dinner will be served and dancing will be enjoyed in the house.

Mrs. D. K. Snow, of Marblehead Neck, is chairman of the tea committee, and weekly events especially for the wives and friends of the club members are planned for the Eastern Yacht club. The Tuesday bridge clubs of last year are to be continued.

Mrs. Frank C. Huidekoper, of Cambridge, who arrived early in the season at Marblehead Neck, is quite ill at her summer home.

Hon. J. P. Monroe and Miss Elizabeth Monroe, of Boston, have arrived at Marblehead Neck for the summer.

Miss Grace Hiller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Hiller, of Ferry lane, Marblehead Neck, was hostess to a group of Smith college girls this week.

Guy Lowell, who will summer at Marblehead Neck, has been registered the past week at the Casino at Newport.

Arthur Winslow, of Marblehead Neck, will go on the Eastern Yacht club cruise on the schooner "Waterwitch."

Frank B. McQuesten, of Marblehead Neck, has chartered the yawl Mindoro, owned by Jack Curtis, for the Eastern Yacht club cruise.

C. H. W. Foster, of Marblehead Neck, will go to Long Island Sound to the International boat races in July, aboard the "Winsome."

Mr. and Mrs. Austin T. White, of Weston, are at Marblehead Neck for the summer months.

The "Corsair," which has often been seen in Marblehead harbor, is now at Newport with the J. P. Morgans aboard. It is interesting to note in this connection that Ralph D. Paine, the well-known author, has been commissioned to write the history of the "Corsair" in the war. This boat had an enviable career in war times.

The Beck hall tea, which always follows the exercises at the Stadium, Harvard, will be attended by many of the Shore people. William W. Caswell, Jr., Ernest Lovering, Lothrop Motley Weld, all of whom are Nahant summer residents, are among the hosts of the day.

Macpherson W. Collver, of Boston and Marblehead, has sailed for Paris, where he will enter school, preparatory to entrance to Harvard college.

Mrs. Hugo Munsterberg and daughters, of Cambridge, are expected at the Marblehead shore this season.

W. S. Bigelow and Miss Caroline Bigelow, of Elizabeth, N. J., are at their Ocean ave. house for the summer.

PILGRIM observances are in store for this year. Provincetown and Plymouth, on the South Shore, will be of much historical interest to everybody throughout the season of 1920 — now three hundred years since the Pilgrim fathers made their memorable voyage to America.

Dissent and persecution make up the background when the curtain rises for us to view the Pilgrims in the long ago.

John Robinson, their faithful pastor and friend, is the head of the non-conformists or Puritans in Scrooby, a village in northern England. Elder William Brewster helps in the church work and government. The congregation is made up mostly of sturdy English farmers who cling to their Bibles through all their tribulations.

Trouble sets in. They are "hunted and persecuted on every side. Some were clapped into prisons, others had their houses beset and watched night and day, and hardly escaped their heads, and the most were fain to fly and leave their houses and habitations and the means of their livelihood."

The scene then shifts to Holland. There are busy, happy views with Leyden Dutchmen for a 12-year period. Then restlessness sets in and these Bible-loving folk long for a home under the English flag, one where the English language will be spoken.

Negotiations set in between the Puritans in Leyden and the government in London, with Robert Cushman as Puritan agent.

The "Speedwell" is fitted out in Holland. Sad good-bys follow weeping and much quoting of Bible verses. All cannot endure the voyage to America so the task of selection seems hard. The "Speedwell" sails to England to meet the "Mayflower" with its company of Puritan friends bound for the new world. The "Speedwell" is doomed not to leave England, so the brave little "Mayflower" sets out alone from Plymouth, Sept. 6. It bears one hundred and two passengers. In November they anchor in Cape Cod harbor after a voyage of fair weather as well as foul. Perhaps the pleasantest things we note on this voyage are the coming of the baby Oceanus Hopkins, in mid-ocean, and the gathering of the Pilgrim men in the cabin on the day they cast anchor, to formulate a compact for their future government.

Scenes of land and water expeditions and Indian encounters follow. Capt. Miles Standish leads his brave men throughout the cold and dreary wilderness. Finally we see them landing at Plymouth in December. In their permanent home we note the birth of Peregrine White—the first-born in their colony. The deaths in this snow-bound country are saddening. These English farmers begin at once to put up their little homes. Miles Standish and Elder Brewster and other strong men build and care for the sick and dying as the winter closes around them. Over half their number die.

April comes. The "Mayflower" sails back to England laden with kind messages for the friends at home. Pilgrims gather at the shore to watch the ship till it disappears in the east. But not one of the little band has returned!

We have thought it might interest our readers to have some of the best poems on the story added to the little historical summary given above. The poems are arranged, as nearly as possible, in chronological order.

WHEN you read a book, a novel for instance, have you ever kept a notebook handy in which to jot down short, inspirational sentences?

The following are from "Louisburg Sq.," by Robert Cutler, the illustrations being done by Elise Ames (Mrs. Wm. Amory Parker), in 1917.

"How little poetry has been written which can be read with respect and pleasure out-of-doors in April!"

"Shatter the heart and age may mend its fracture; but shatter the hearth and no agency, divine or mortal, can rekindle the fire which has once gone out."

"People who permit their hearts to govern their heads sometimes find that they have no longer heads to govern."

"Be worthy of a grief and it makes you tender; it teaches you to subtract from the unhappiness of others."

"Life is very sweet; no wonder that it be human nature to desire the utmost of it."

"Charity we measure by our incomes, but sympathy by our hearts."

"Self-reproach bears a more bitter sting than scorpions. To the condemnation of parent or friend we turn the ear of one who reserves an ulterior judgment; but from the condemnation of oneself there is no court of appeal. Since man is to himself sufficient, his own judgment supplants in mortal life the Word of God. If a man have light within his own clear breast, earth is his Paradise; but the consciousness of wrong-doing stirring in his heart makes the world a dungeon."

"Nothing can raise so resentful a passion in the human breast as the knowledge that what to us is most sacred and profound is undervalued by another."

"The essential though often unconscious desire of all mortals is not for some one they can be loved by, but for some one whom they can love."

"To any citizen of the world there is no place like home; to the true Bostonian there never has been and never can be, even in beatific realms, a place like home."

THE JOYS OF SEASHORE SUMMER DAYS

The Delights of Making Each Morning with the Salt Air in One's Nostrils and of Pursuing Various Adventures Along the Shore

By Beulah Rector in Boston Evening Transcript

THE road from the village rambled a crooked five miles till it joined the Drift Way, and then it ran straight and white directly to the sea. June after June, while the hay was still uncut and wild roses pink, we clattered its length in the yellow buckboard.

With the gaining of the Drift Way all became familiar, and we leaned from the carriage, eager to catch every landmark. Here on the right is the red house where Dr. Edward Everett Hale summered. Then comes Browning's place, the country school, the yard where the gypsies camped, the wide cornfield from which Gypsy Sam once emerged, his water pail full of goodly ears. It was on that occasion Sam delivered himself in somewhat embarrassed fashion of the sentiment, "If you can't live honest, then live as honest as you can." Beyond lies the settlement of cottages, and then the ocean, with its unvarying background of sound, now louder; now, perhaps, softer.

You go to bed with that voice in your ears, you wake with it the next morning. Drops hang in the meshes of the window screen; your clothes have been left too near the encroachments of the fog and are a trifle chill to draw on. If the wind has been high in the night, or a hard rain storm has come while you slept, there may be something worth your while on the shore. So you scurry into those damp clothes, and since the others are interested in that last hour or so of sleep, you slide cautiously down the bannisters, your shoes in your hand.

There is never more than one figure abroad at this hour of day—thin, old Grandpa Cunningham crossing the fields to milk the cow, the one occupation his sons intrust to this old man of eighty years, aside from predicting the weather.

"Is it going to rain, Mr. Cunningham?" you ask.

The aged man turns his blue eyes to the sky. "It might," he returns, but adds with a glance at your downcast face, "and then again it might not." And he gives you the haunting smile of a very old person.

The seaweed has piled at one end of the bathing beach. This is the haying season of the sea. Tomorrow the farmers will be after this wealth, and their carts in slow file will trundle back up the Drift Way loaded with the wet, pungent brown kelp, its slippery long ribbons trailing over the sides. Later it will lie on the flat fields, dry and hard, no longer shiny, but giving back to earth some of the sea's saline strength.

The Harvest of the Sea

If the storm were a good harvester then it has brought something more than weeds. From the ocean bottom it will have dug deep-sea clams, very hard as to shell, very large and white. A few will make a bountiful chowder, and maybe your mother will roll one or two in egg and crumbs and fry them for you in butter when you return to breakfast.

Or, who knows? Perhaps, this morning you will find a bottle with a mariner's letter inside!

Or it may not be the treasury wrought by a storm in the night that calls you out early. The morning may be very blue and fair and you know the tide is out. Then for a race on the smooth, wide strip of sand with Benny, the Airedale. Benny is patient, yet he openly shows that he prefers this to those long, long waits when you insist on holding a heavy pole out over the water.

The fishing boats are just pulling out, slowly, bulkily, over the orderly rollers. On the bank behind, a line of gray shanties is perched. The blue wooden sailor boy scarcely moves his outstretched arms. Bill Larkin stands at the door of his cabin with a spyglass at his eye. Once Mr. Larkin sighted a schooner through the glass. The next moment the schooner was gone. No further news was ever heard of the vessel. Ah, such romantic possibilities as that glass suggest. It is a signal to the imagination to see him standing there.

At the end of the row of shanties is the fish house. Scales, and odors, and great chests of cold, slippery fish are associated with it. Men with honest red hands, never dry, and hairy arms, will weigh your bluefish, hang it on a hook, wrap it well, and home you will start with your dinner under your arm.

It is better to go for the fish in the morning. If you wait until noon it means having your bath a little ahead of the rest, coming out of the water very promptly and crossing the short-cut alone while you explain to all the other folk who are on their way to the shore, just how the water is, and whether the sea is like the proverbial mill-pond or inclined to be choppy.

There is the one compensation in the early bath, however. There is no one in the bathhouse keeping you outside, while with chattering teeth you ask how much longer this is to go on, and whether the occupant has got as far as shoes and stockings.

A Land of Adventure

Adventure bounds the four points of the compass. On the south is the beach. There is an old wreck to explore. There are channels that run from the sea back into the salt ponds. These must be crossed at low tide and quickly, for there are perilous quicksands and fearsome traditions of a wagon and horses swallowed, leaving less trace than when Jehu drove over Jezebel by the rampart of Jezreel.

If on such expeditions lunch gives out, or was not provided in the first place, then blessed is the one who carries a few matches; for mussels can be gathered on the reefs and steamed into real palatability over a driftwood fire. And as was discovered by the Walrus and the Carpenter when they sat down to their historic oyster supper, "pepper and vinegar besides are very good indeed."

To the west are the gypsies. If some morning you hear a patter of small hooves, and you spy a pony cart in which sits a dark-skinned woman whose costume predominates in red, that is a sign that Mrs. Gypsy Sam is on her way to the beach to tell fortunes, and that Mr. Sam is home sitting in the sun, smoking his pipe, doing the work. Mr. Sam is not sufficient to attract us, but Jim the mule, Dolly the blind mare, and Kitty are. Moreover, when the wife is away Sam is known to be lenient. We have been permitted to lead the horses to an unfrequented road where without saddles we have pounded along at possibly three hours a mile, in a scalding sun, but with a "lord of our hearts' elation" feeling.

Certain resources for amusement have been cut off with the departure of Jim and Dolly and Kitty. Very well, then, if there are no tame horses to be had, then there may be wild ones.

We turn toward the east. Across the salt pond we remember seeing two animals at pasture. A brown and a white. At least they are worth a trip over. We board our little rowboat, "Vesty of the Basins," and start out.

With some coaxing we urge the white horse near the steps of an old boathouse, and the bravest mounts, digs her heels into the astonished sides, and to our admiration trots off. But like berries and apples and other fruit, horses are not usually wild. They, too, belong to somebody. This minute a gate up the field has opened. A man is coming toward us. We desire to run. But we wait. And that man with the stooped shoulders, the beaten face and the blue eyes calls out, "Better try it with a saddle. I don't care if you ride, so long as you don't hurt yourselves."

Clumsy animals they are, that would much rather have fed quietly than rushed on heavy feet over the pasture. But to us they are trim-limbed steeds of Arabian blood that move fleetly over the fields, and we are graceful queens, lithe and beautiful, who ride with a tug of triumph at the heart, surrounded by the glamour of "Love and Fame and Far Lands."

Over the Clam Flats

The salt ponds offer much to adventurers. If you will cross from one to the other you must seize a time when the channel is full enough to float the canoe and the clam flats are covered. Spiritual descendants are we of the Cabots and Vespucci as we pack our bark some summer morning, the two most precious bits of cargo being a map of the coast drawn by an older brother, and an entire chocolate cake.

"Do you think that life is really worth living?" asks some temporarily melancholic adolescent filled with the long thoughts of youth.

"Yes," affirms the hearty girl at the oars, "with a whole chocolate cake in the bottom of the boat."

In the first channel there are crabs that walk sideways and are bowlegged. These can be tempted with fish heads of chunks of salt pork and scooped up with nets. But where shall we put them after being caught? They cannot have the freedom of the canoe. Someone suggests our stockings. First, however, we take the stockings off, and so do we carry home our spoil, the crabs' claws poking through a dozen unmendable perforations.

On such a trip we discover the "Flo," a red tug, water-filled to the deck, and leaning on one side on a sand bar. If what we appreciate becomes part of our possessions then we immediately own the "Flo." We have not to scrub her decks, oil her engines, or pay taxes on our property. We have none of those burdensome responsibilities connected with legal ownership, but all the joys of the spiritual. Thither we make innumerable voyages. From her red sides we dive into the water, on her sloping deck we spread our picnics, or lie on the warm boards, afterwards basking like sleepy young seals. For us Romance is at the wheel, and from the masthead flies the flag of Adventure. We are as ardent for the "Flo" as the sea lover who sings of his stouter craft:

> There's a schooner in the offing,
> With her topsails shot with fire,
> And my heart has gone aboard her
> For the Islands of Desire.

For languid summer days there are haystacks set about through the fields. These are enjoyable to climb, if the farmers are not too observant, and on the top one can pass a happy afternoon with a book and a cake of chocolate. If it be wet, a marshmallow roast never fails to allure us. All the lamps in the hotel are gathered together and hatpins collected for the sweet and sticky orgy. Better yet is a night roast on the beach, with a leaping fire of driftwood. Afterward, in the shifting light, two figures with wooden lances, knights from the days of chivalry, fence on the sands.

To the north what do we have? The huckleberry hills. Not so very hilly are they, nor yet so very huckleberry. How many early morning trips we make thither, our shoes soggy with the dew and powdered later with the dust as we trudge wearily homeward with our heavy pails so long in the filling. It is only the redeeming promise of the salt swim at the end of the march which keeps alive our ebbing spirits.

Among the hills are sprinkled little ponds. Do you remember Round Pond when vast masses of rhododendrons turned pink the sides? Higher than your head they stood, an invitation to golden-banded bees that swarmed eagerly to the cloying feast.

Here, with the rhododendrons as a background, lives the Hermit of Dinglewood Dell, white-haired and merry-eyed. He writes verses and makes a brew called "choke-cherry bounce," which we admire mostly for its name, and secondly for its maker. The hermit's hens wear bells around their necks that they may be the better located as they journey through the brush. Their eggs are carefully dated—would that all poultry men were as accurate! Yet it works not in his favor, for when the fishman comes to exchange halibut for eggs he finds some eggs dated three months back. If he failed as a poultry man, think what a star he would have made in history class, and what a pity Diogenes could never have turned his lantern upon this hero.

The Seasons Go Their Ways

The passing of the seasons is less dramatic at the shore than in the hills. The trees are few, just a number of weathered apple trees twisted by the winds and apparently all being blown in the same direction. Jewel weed dashes with a bit of color the coarse grasses along the banks. Between the sea and the salt ponds beach plums weigh the bushes. Bayberries, so fragrant when pressed between the fingers, are abundant on low-growing shrubs. The cries of the gulls seem a little lonelier. You sit on the breakwater and watch the full moving swell in the breach connecting ocean and pond, and the tumble of the pebbles as the waves draw them back and forth in the wet sand. But this time you sit on the rocks alone. The fishermen who dropped their lines from these rocks a few weeks earlier have wound their reels and departed.

The sterner tasks of life are calling. Latin composition, cube root and days indoors are at hand. In your land the voice of the ocean will soon be unheard. Nine months must pass before you can return. Thanksgiving and Christmas and almost the Fourth of July must happen between. It is not nine months—it is a lifetime to a child.

Yet when next June comes you know just how it will look as you start off. You can see the two little brothers in their blue serge suits and white ruffled collars, clasping their sailboats. And the three sisters deciding who is to carry the lunch box, and who the umbrellas, and whose turn it is to take the bird cage. And there again is Bridget, standing at a respectful distance from the family party, yet very interested. Mother, sweet and calm, has the Boston bag with its remedial graham crackers and its cinder-effacing soft towel and wash cloths. At one end of the station platform you see Father, his hands full of tickets and trunk checks, in conference with the baggage man.

And no matter how long the months that lie between, always the sea will be waiting.

> Up! let us to the fields away,
> And breathe the fresh and balmy air;
> The bird is building in the tree,
> The flower has opened to the bee,
> And health and love and peace are there.
> —Mary Howitt.

An Encore

Tactless Lady Friend to Hostess—By the way, what birthday is this we are celebrating?

Hostess—My thirty-fifth.

Lady Friend—But haven't we celebrated that before?

Hostess—Oh, yes; it is one of my favorite birthdays.

CAMERA-EYE KIRBY

A Detective Story

By Helen Christine Hoerle

THE cool dining room of the Cliffside Inn was ablaze with lights, somewhat subdued by the cleverly arranged foliage draping them. It was the evening dinner hour and the chatter of many voices rose above the soft whisper of the orchestra's music.

The big lobby was deserted save for the girl in a filmy black dancing frock standing on the stairs talking to Lawrence Kirby, when Mrs. Townsend-Graham rushed from the elevator, her usually florid face ashen. Straight to the desk she dashed, lips quivering and her eyes blazing wrathfully.

"They are gone," she gasped to the astonished Mr. Anderson, the night clerk, "gone, my emeralds!"

Her hands clasped tragically, as she gazed imploringly at Mr. Anderson.

"Are you sure?" he asked quietly, his own calm returning in the face of her excitement."

"Sure?" Mrs. Townsend-Graham shrilled, "Sure? I left the case on my dresser while I crossed the hall to Gwendolyn's room and when I returned they were gone."

"Please not so loud," the clerk implored, gazing anxiously in the direction of the couple on the stairs. "I'll call Mr. Manners."

In the manager's private room under the stairs, consternation reigned. A series of clever robberies had been perpetrated in the famous Cliffside Inn during the past month, and Manager Manners had begun to worry. There was no clue as to the thief's identity, the getaway was always perfect. And this latest, Mrs. Townsend-Graham's famous emeralds! It was incredible. The house detective was summoned.

"Where's Kirby?" Manners growled at him through his thick mustache.

"Talking to Miss Ashton," the detective smiled, "looks like something doing there."

"Never mind that now. Tell him that I want him," Manners commanded, "Mrs. Townsend-Graham's necklace has been crooked. Tell Kirby I want him."

Miss Ashton's eyes were sparkling happily at the dapper Mr. Kirby when the house detective approached. It seemed a shame to spoil the picture.

"Mr. Kirby," he said quietly, "may I speak with you a moment?"

"Certainly," he smiled at the diminutive blonde on the step above him, "will you please excuse me a minute;" then dropping his voice he whispered, "The first dance tonight?"

"Of course," she threw him a dazzling smile and floated rather than walked up the broad stairs leading to the hallway above.

Kirby watched her with fascinated eyes and then turned toward the Irishman.

"This mixing business with pleasure isn't what it's cracked up to be," he grumbled. "What do you want?"

Unconsciously the house detective lowered his voice and instinctively gazed cautiously around the now deserted lobby.

"Mrs. Townsend-Graham's emeralds were stolen from her this afternoon after she took them from the safe."

"The deuce you say." Kirby's long figure seemed to straighten and the love-light in his eyes died into a keen cold compelling knife-like glitter. "At it again?"

They entered the manager's office together, Kirby's jaw set firmly, and his mouth tightening into a hard line.

"At it again," he said almost too quietly, his eyes resting compassionately on the weeping woman. "How did it happen?"

"Mr. Kirby is really a detective," Mr. Manners explained in reply to that lady's look of bewilderment. "He has been posing as a guest merely as a blind to our patrons and to the thief."

"Will you please tell me how it happened," Kirby requested again, the steely look in his eyes increasing perceptibly.

Between heart-rending sobs Mrs. Townsend-Graham repeated the story of the robbery while the three men listened attentively.

"May I request you not to mention this to anyone," Kirby asked, as she concluded haltingly, "Mr. Connors and myself will start to work at once."

Gallantly he opened the door and closed it with a bang.

"Whoever the thief is we'll get him," he said, slowly sinking into a chair and lighting a cigarette.

"Well, you have been darned slow so far," Manners growled, "I got you because they said you could catch anyone, the devil himself if you had a mind to. So get on the job."

Camera-Eye Kirby smiled lazily into the smoke,—"The thief will leave this house either tonight or tomorrow morning, or I miss my guess."

"Leave the house," Manners spluttered.

"Exactly, and we'll get him or her, and Mrs. Townsend-Graham's jewels," he laughed mysteriously.

"No mistake, now Kirby," the manager warned, "Mrs. Townsend-Graham is our best patron."

"I know." Kirby strolled from the room, languidly lighting another cigarette.

The lounge was crowded now with groups of fashionably-dressed women and girls and sun-browned, faultlessly groomed men. From the ballroom came the alluring strains of a hesitation.

"Did you give Mrs. Townsend-Graham the case I gave you," he asked the night clerk as he bought a package of cigarettes.

Young Anderson nodded. "Good boy," Kirby praised, crossing to a corner where the girl in black was holding a tiny court of admiring males.

"You promised me the first," Kirby said, his eyes meeting hers in a ravishing glance.

Without a word she rose and sweeping aside the attendant youths slipped her hand through his arm. He pressed the little hand resting lightly on his arm to him. Miss Ashton's lips budded into a smile, as he slipped his arm around her waist and bending his head till his lips rested on the little blonde head, they drifted into the dreamy measure of the dance. As the music sighed and died, he gently released her. Leading the way through a French window and across the dew-swept lawn, they paused instinctively at the entrance to a rustic summer house.

"Shall we rest here?" he asked lightly.

"Yes," she murmured, her lids dropping over the big brown eyes.

No one could deny that Ruth Ashton was lovely, even the girls who disliked her most. Small, with diminutive hands and well-shaped feet, she was as attractive a little figure as could be found anywhere. Great masses of golden curls clustered fondly around the piquant face and the great brown robs gazed innocently from behind a veil of long brown lashes. A picture of alluring femininity in her transparent black gown held over her slender shoulders by a single band of jet, it was small wonder that Lawrence Kirby had fallen in love.

For a second neither spoke. Mr. Kirby tugged nervously at one end on his ridiculously inadequate moustache. The girl's long lashes hid her eyes, and her chest rose and fell tremulously. Suddenly he leaned forward and pressed a kiss on her lowered face.

"I love you Ruth," he exclaimed hoarsely,—"love you."

The girl succumbed to his embrace for a second, her bright head nestling on his shoulder; then she drew away, a shudder running through the slim little body.

"Don't Mr. Kirby,—Lawrence," she pleaded, "I don't—"

He kissed her again. "Haven't I a chance even? Do you care for one of those others?" nodding toward the brilliantly lighted hotel.

She shook her head slowly. "No, only you and no one but you counts." Her arms stole around his neck and they sat clasped in each other's arms till the inquisitive old moon came out from behind a baby cloud and lighted the summer house.

"Oh," breathed the girl, "I—we—we mustn't—"

Running like a deer, she sped toward the hotel, the man following more leisurely. As they entered the ballroom Mr. Kirby saw Mrs. Townsend-Graham sitting grandly at the other side of the room, the famous Townsend emeralds gleaming in her hair and on her neck and fingers. Beamingly she beckoned to him.

"They were on my dresser when I got upstairs after dinner," she whispered, delightedly. "You are a wonder. I'm so grateful."

Kirby smiled deprecatingly, and strolled into the lobby after the little figure in black. Miss Ashton had disappeared. Connors beckoned to him from the far end of the room.

"The case was there all right, returned," he said wonderingly. "I put the real ones in its place, before she got back. Here's the paste."

Kirby quietly pocketed the morocco box.

"How did you know the old girl's emeralds would be crooked tonight?" Connors asked admiringly.

Kirby smiled as he lighted a cigarette. "I didn't, I merely made a guess. She usually wears them Saturday night to the hop and as they are easily the most valuable pieces of jewelry, I thought the thief would go for them next;" he shrugged his shoulders and started toward the elevator. The house detective watched the lithe figure with something akin to hero worship in his eyes.

At the elevator Kirby felt for his watch, paused and turning crossed to where Connors still stood. A smile of elation spread over his good-looking features.

"Be at the station for the first train in the morning will you Connors," he requested, lazily stifling a yawn. "Arrest any hotel guest who attempts to leave on any train."

"Anyone?" Connors gasped.

Kirby nodded, "Exactly! Good-night."

The sun had been up many hours the next morning and so had Lawrence Kirby when the telephone in his room rang. Throwing down his cigarette he took up the receiver. Mr. Manners' voice came from the other end, excitedly asking him to come down to the office immediately. Smiling a queer little one-sided smile, Mr. Kirby bounded down the stairs.

"Just a minute, Mr. Kirby," the day clerk called as he crossed the lobby, "Miss Ashton left about five minutes ago, and asked me to give this package to you."

Kirby took the little white box and a queer light filled his eyes as he musingly broke the seal. His watch reposed within under a note.

"Filched this last night while you were doing the two in one for life stunt. Force of habit, I guess. After what you told me last night I couldn't stick around any longer. You are the only man who ever got any nearer to my heart than his pocketbook. You are a real gent, while four of my family are boarding at the expense of the state. I'll have made my getaway when you get this.—R. A.

"P. S. Mrs. T.-G.'s sparklers are paste. I can't use any phoney stuff, so I returned them."

Kirby opened the door of the manager's office and handed Mr. Manners the note.

"Well, I'll be blowed," he ejaculated when he finished reading it. "That's what I called you for. Miss Ashton left half an hour ago and skipped her bill."

"Connors will get her at the station," Kirby assured him wearily.

"You sure put something over on her," Manners grinned appreciatively, "But what if she had not only fallen, but also stuck to you?"

"It takes two to play every game and see it through to the finish. I knew who she was all along," Camera-Eye Kirby explained as he lazily lighted a cigarette, "and I—well you see I'm married."

THE END.

THE BELLS OF GLOUCESTER TOWN

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

YOU have heard of the Siren's weird silvery notes
That have sounded in crags by the sea;
But the sounds that set bounding a volume of song
Are the bell tones that drift sweet to me;
And I watch o'er the harbor at setting of sun
O'er a scene for an artist renown;
But a vision like magic sweeps over my soul
From the bells of old Gloucester Town!

Spires majestic are breasting the skies,
Where the amber lights play in the eve;
And the emerald rests on the high, swinging caps
From the belfry where sweet voices leave—
Out from the skies to the quaint quays below,
To the spiles known by artists' renown;
And the old docks vibrate with melodious tones—
From the bells of old Gloucester Town.

You may speak of your Venice and gondola's purl
And the music that sweeps o'er the bay;
But this harbor is fair with its spiling and ships
That stand purple at parting of day!
And there's laughter and drifting of songs from the shore
Such as those loved by poets renown;
And the voices of fishermen echo "Ahoy!"
With the bells of old Gloucester Town.

Ah, there's romance, there's beauty, there's song for the soul
In this haven of rest by the sea,
Where the pale, slender moon shows its vision of youth
In a long, rippling path—Destiny!
And a ship passes through ghostly dipped in its light,
In a scene from an Artist renown,
Whom we worship as Master, the giver of dreams,
Hear the bells of old Gloucester Town!

EDITORIAL

The Commencement Season has again come. From over four hundred educational institutions, including sixteen colleges and two hundred and twenty-five high schools, thousands of young people will receive diplomas, certifying that they have completed courses of study. Many will pass from one institution to another in the quest of an education. Surely, may it be said of Massachusetts that she raises men, as was said of another New England state, when two senators in Washington were discussing the products of the states which they represented. The Georgia senator, with just pride, spoke of the value and the necessity of having Georgia's cotton crop, and the senator from Pennsylvania knew well the supremacy of coal in the commercial world, but a senator from New Hampshire closed the conversation by saying, in New Hampshire "we raise men."

Massachusetts has made progress in its educational policy. The colony, when established, immediately founded a church and a school. Around these two institutions the state has grown. Since then, by steady progress, the results of the study of succeeding generations, the school system has been perfected. The slogan still is as it was then, "let us go forward." To Horace Mann the state owes much. If he could but return to see how the institution which he fostered and nurtured has developed, what a surprise would await him. Yet only the beginning of progress has been made. The keenest minds realize the shortcomings of our institutions and schools. The criticisms which are rife and irrefutable are made by those who are interested in the training of the young and who aspire to better things. Constructive criticisms of our most cherished institutions are welcome. For it is by such friendly, if merciless, criticisms, that progress is begun.

The schools of our land are studying the great problem of education. The young people who begin their work in life for the first time after completing their education have had rare opportunities for training. They have profited by the skill and ability of many generations of educational students. The state has equipped them and now they must return to society in honest work, honorable living and intelligent service, an accounting of the investments which parents, teachers and communities have placed in them. The responsibilities of life are severe. The tests are difficult. The problems of existence and communal life are never simple. The state has made an honorable effort, and now the young people of the present generations must take life with a seriousness that should impel labor and attention.

June is in the Meadows, on the hillsides, along the shores of the sea, in the gardens of the people, and in the woodland. Nature is at her best. The foliage this year is unusually luxuriant and fresh. The wild flowers are a riot of color. Wherever one motors along the Shore may be seen the flowers of the field that give pleasure to the children and delight to everyone. In the meadows, brilliant patches of pink stand out against the verdant green. In the brooks and marshes the iris blooms with pride, spreading its wings to every breeze. Those who look sharply will find tiny flowers growing close to mother earth destined "to blush unseen" unless the inquisitive nature lover pushes his way into the grass of the field or examines carefully the forest floors of the woodlands. Most charming of all is the ever welcome mountain laurel, one of the queens of the flower kingdom. The North Shore is rich in possessing great patches of this rare and beautiful plant, varying in height according to the place where the plants find a spot to grow. When the season is in its glory they present a beautiful vision to the eye. Despite their charm in the vase within the home, they are never more beautiful than when first discovered by the nature lover blooming in their sequestered place in the forest by low and rising ground—a sight to thrill. It is a thrill that may abide as the plants are carefully cut and flowers are taken for the home. Who will be so rash and thoughtless as to destroy plants in picking the flowers? Fortunately the flower lovers have been successful in their propaganda and now everyone knows how to pluck a field flower carefully to leave the root, and cut the mountain laurel to permit the plant to develop. June is with us everywhere and fortunate is the family that can enjoy the pleasure nature spreads at our feet.

A Third Party is flirting with defeat. Forty-eight men are planning the establishment of a new party. If one giant like Roosevelt could not succeed, forty-eight pygmies will fail.

There were Prospects a week ago that the League of Nations would become the issue of the Presidential campaign. The prospects were disconcerting to thousands of Republican voters who were willing to endorse an amicable arrangement with the Democrats that would assure the adoption of some form of a league of the nations resulting in the establishment of an international court, provide for the arbitration of disputed questions and yet place all the nations in such positions of independence as would please the American people. A plank has been placed in the Republican platform that places the Republicans against the autocratic effort of Woodrow Wilson and expresses its faith in some form of a league of nations. The article does not meet the expectation of many Republicans who favor outright the League of Nations, but it must be remembered that the plank is a compromise measure, and as such, would appear colorless to the enthusiasts who would desire a more deliberate statement. Progress has been made, however, and the situation is satisfactory. There has been no break within the party on the issue. The men who drafted the platform carefully considered their obligations and did well. Public opinion is a mighty force and the plank places the Republican party before the nation as favorable to some arrangement with the nations of Europe to meet the present situation and as opposed to the Wilson policy. As colorless as the plank may appear, the attitude reflected is exactly that of a great majority of the Republicans who do not wish the American nation to shun or shirk its responsibilities to the nations of Europe and yet recoil when proded by the Wilson policies. It would appear that the compromise was shrewdly arranged.

The Baccalaureate sermons and addresses are of the usual high order, teeming with good advice, the product of years of experience and observation. The custom is a time-honored one and the educational value of these addresses, presented to so many audiences, during the commencement weeks, cannot be overestimated.

The Republican National Convention has drafted two candidates to head its ticket this year. Harding and Coolidge will make good running mates. Their election is probable; it is a Republican year. Two years ago, the elections to Congress indicated the change of attitude the nation over. The spirit of the year is Republican. If all signs do not fail Mr. Harding will be comfortably seated in the President's chair and Mr. Coolidge will be the Vice-President of the United States, with all that can mean. The elimination of Wood, Lowden and Johnson from the race for the Presidential nomination was not surprising; for, at the beginning of the convention, the delegates were practically free despite the large number that were pledged.

Neither Wood nor Lowden had votes enough to control the convention, and Johnson was out of the running many days before the convention opened. The financial disclosures concerning the candidacy of two of the men undoubtedly injured them, not only in winning the nomination, but would have proven a formidable objection when nominated. The information gleaned in the investigations was good campaign material for the opposing party and the Democrats would have used it freely. Wood was opposed by many because of the desire to have a civilian and not a military man at the head of the nation. Lowden would have found it difficult to shake the general impression which his financial associations could have suggested. Johnson was out with great sections of the nation. The two new candidates indicate the purpose of the party to be free from all entangling alliances within the party and to place men free from obligations before the voters. Any of the three leaders, Wood, Lowden or Johnson, if nominated, would have had to have overcome real opposition within the party.

Harding appears to have aroused the enmity of none. The fact of his having been a senator is neither an advantage nor a disadvantage. The difficulty which arose because of the differences between the Senate and President Wilson was due to the President's assumption of authority. The presence of a former senator in the White House will give the new President the training and first-hand knowledge of political conditions. Such a deadlock will not arise again. If Mr. Harding is elected the quarrel between the Senate and the President will have been ended.

There is no doubt in the minds of observers that Mr. Harding's nomination was due to the prevailing influence of the so-called "old guard." The candidates of the so-called "progressive" faction had a strong following, but it was insufficient to nominate a President. There will be no defection in the party ranks; the steam roller was not operated at the convention. It was a straightaway voting contest. The convention resolved itself into a committee of the whole to find a good man for the nomination. They found one by the steady process of voting. No element can feel that fair play was denied. While the sting of defeat may smart for a long while in the ranks, the members of the party will rally to the support of the selected candidates. There can be no defection within the ranks of the party.

The threatened bolts, defections and alliances are reflections of the hopes within the Democratic party. Only a division of the Republican party made the election of President Wilson possible. The unity of the party this year will cause a Democratic defeat. The defeated factions in the Republican party recognize this and before the election day has come all will be working shoulder to shoulder to place Republican men in positions where the policies of the Republican party will be executed.

The Nomination of Governor Coolidge as the vice-presidential candidate by the Republican party advances Channing Cox, who has served efficiently as Lieutenant-Governor. The policy of promoting the Lieutenant-Governor to a position of leadership in the party as the nominee for Governor, has proven a wise one. The party is then advancing to the position of Governor a man who has been trained in the work required of an executive. Channing Cox is a quiet man of good qualities and excellent training. His advancement to leadership in the party politics of the state will bring pleasure to the host of friends which he has made in his service at the State House.

The Congratulations of our Commonwealth have gone out to the Governor for his new honors. The national convention which gathered in Chicago has conferred an honor upon Governor Coolidge that is appreciated by the people of Massachusetts. Mr. Coolidge merited the honor of Governor which came to him after his patient and honorable service on the Hill. Now he has been drafted for the service which he can render to the Republican party. The ascendancy of Mr. Coolidge has not been meteoric, but the result of steady development. There has been nothing dramatic about his career. He has quietly gone about his work, and the party to which he belonged, recognizing his sterling qualities and the faithful work which he did, bestowed new work upon him with the honors that go with it. He has demonstrated in the last decade the success which can attend the efforts of a man who is determined to work hard, live honorably and serve his state. The Boston police riots gave him an opportunity to do a great work, but the clear-headed judgment and action at that time only revealed the worth of the man. The manner in which he adjusted that problem only indicated the skill which he had used in many other incidents in his career. The great event threw light upon his powers. As the vice-presidential candidate he will make a good running-mate for Harding and will add strength because of his own personal qualities, and because of the dramatic hold his dealing with the policemen in the strike has given him throughout the nation. As vice-president, he will make an efficient chairman of the Senate and his training in working with men will prove valuable. Massachusetts is honored in having the Governor selected as the vice-presidential candidate.

The Essex County Members of a certain post of the American Legion, who are planning to make a political attack upon the Congressman from this district, because of his failure to vote for the bonus bill, should carefully consider their action and discontinue their activities, before it is too late. The question of the bonus is not the real question at stake. The question is whether the American Legion will tolerate any political or partisan use of their organization. It is the candid opinion of members of the American Legion that it should keep free from all partisan and political activities. The American people have a warm regard for the veterans of the great war. Again and again it has demonstrated its regard with no uncertain sound. It will resent, however, the alliance of the service men in any political contest. The success of the Grand Army of the Republic has been due to their independence and their patriotic and non-partisan principles. Dissension will surely arise and the continued interest and support of the American Legion will be threatened. There is a difference of opinion, relative to the advisability of the bonus, in the ranks of the Legion. The Legion cannot afford to take positions that will result in a division in its own ranks. The truth is that the American people do not look with favor or honor upon a group of young men who after fighting for the freedom of the nations and risking life for their country, sacrifice all their honor by an organized political campaign for a petty "bonus." The rank and file of the Legion are above such narrow purposes, and the proposed antagonism to the Congressman should be checkmated at once by the members of the Legion who do not purpose to have the influence and power of the organization hampered by such ill-advised and dangerous activities.

THE WAR-GIVING CAMPAIGNS and the war tax assessments have been great agents in stimulating systematic giving. The exemption percentage has placed an incentive upon intelligent regular giving. The war giving campaigns developed the spirit of enthusiasm. The result has been that thousands of people, carelessly pursuing their own way, have awakened to the desirability and the pleasure of having a personal philanthropic budget. Another result—men and women have their eyes open to give money to established institutions where it will be invested to the best advantage. Now the old-fashioned and thoughtless method of placing one's benevolences at the mercy of the propagandist, who successfully spreads a net for the uninitiated, has passed. The setting apart of funds available for philanthropic purposes is businesslike and intelligent. It yields pleasure, broadens the sympathies and increases one's capacity for enjoying life. As one man said, "I never in my life, have realized the keen pleasure that comes in giving with a free heart and a willing hand to the philanthropic interests that I have selected. I enjoy the pleasure of winter when I have made an honorable contribution to the great ameliorative organizations. I enjoy the cool air of the beach and the quiet walks of the woodland when I know that I have shared my pleasure with the city dwellers. A gift to any one of a dozen successful institutions will assure a vacation period to many at a nominal expense." A new era of conscientious giving has come. It has added pleasure to life. It is now the purpose of everyone, rich and poor, to maintain the established agencies for good work. When this is done churches will not lack for funds for their great work; institutions will be maintained at the standards which modern welfare work demands. America has the funds and the people are giving with a free hand and a true heart.

MARION, OHIO, IS NOW on the map, even if one cannot locate the place without a careful examination of the map of the state of Ohio. Northampton, too, is rejoicing, and while men of Massachusetts were looking up Marion, Ohio, there were men in Ohio looking up Northampton, Massachusetts. Both Marion and Northampton have a justifiable pride in their new honors.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF STORY HIGH, MANCHESTER

Program Includes Class Day, Graduation and Reception Events — Largest Class to be Given Diplomas

THE commencement exercises of the class of 1920, Story High school, Manchester, were held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. The class numbered twenty graduates and is said to be the largest graduating class in the history of this school.

The program included the class day exercises on Wednesday afternoon, graduation Thursday evening and the annual class reception Friday evening.

An innovation this year was the program presented at the class day exercises, held in the Town hall. These exercises were public and a large number of relatives of the graduates, accompanied by many friends in town and those who came from elsewhere, were present to enjoy the occasion. It was originally planned to hold these exercises on the lawn at the Story High school, but inclement weather conditions made it necessary to have the affair indoors.

The class history was given by Miss Bernice Stone Lee. Miss Lee sketched the progress of the class from Freshman days through the years spent in the schoolhouse on the hill until the present time when the pupils were the proud wearers of the cap and gown. Excerpts from Miss Lee's paper appear elsewhere in this issue.

Arthur Joseph Miguel amused his hearers with his class prophecy; his gifts of divination and prophecies as to the future of the members of the class of 1920 were highly entertaining and in many instances were of a surprising nature. Mr. Miguel drew his inspiration from a "communication" with the planet Mars and it is hardly necessary to add that his information was gratefully received by his classmates.

The presentation of gifts was made by John Morley, who performed, in a very creditable manner, the duties incumbent upon him in this position. Mr. Morley was most generous with his "gifts" to the graduates. In behalf of the class of 1920, Mr. Morley presented Principal Matthews with a $10 gold piece, and Charles R. Peart, janitor at the Story High school building, with a gold piece.

"The Prophecy on the Prophet," by Miss Ruth Agnes Carroll, clearly demonstrated that "Prophet" Miguel was not the only member of the Senior class who enjoyed the benefits supposed to be derived from crystal gazing. Miss Carroll portrayed a future for Mr. Miguel which was quite in keeping with what he had prophesized for his classmates.

Urging his friends of the graduating class to be firm of purpose, steadfast in the pursuit of success and all that is best in life, and to ever keep mindful of the class motto: "Umquam altior," Nelson Allen Butler delivered the "Address to the Undergraduates." To his friends in the lower classes Mr. Butler spoke words of cheer and praise, the entire tone of his address being optimistic and encouraging. As president of the Senior class, Mr. Butler requested loyalty to the school by supporting the athletic activities, the musical clubs and the school paper.

Profusely decorated with plants, evergreen and cut flowers, the Town hall, Manchester, presented a lovely sight Thursday evening at the graduation exercises. The class colors of royal purple and gold were given prominence in the decorating scheme.

The following program was given, music being furnished by Long's orchestra, of Manchester:

Chorus, "Wake, O, Wake" (Verdi) School
Invocation Rev. F. W. Manning
Chorus, "The Reapers" (Clapisson) School
Salutatory, "The Pilgrims" Helen K. Beaton

AMERICA'S FUTURE

Valedictory Essay Deals with Present-Day Problems as Related to Future Progress

(Excerpts from essay by Miss Janet Synnott Height, Valedictorian of class of 1920, Story High school, Manchester)

ONE of our Presidents once said that the greatest good fortune a man could have was to serve his country, his people, and all mankind. This, in a way, reflects the spirit of our Pilgrim fathers, and in the face of the great confusion and unrest into which our country is now thrown, we may earnestly wonder if we are carrying out the splendid purpose of those brave ancestors. What may we hope for the future of America?

We believe that the first great safeguard to the order and liberty of this country is in a general education which shall reach every class of people, in every part of the United States. This should open the way to our understanding each other, to coöperate in service in such a way that everyone shall feel it a great joy and privilege to do anything for his country.

The great influx of foreigners to our shores complicates the problem, but it is generally agreed that every immigrant should be Americanized. Needless to say, those who have not assimilated our customs and habits, our love of the United States, are a menace to themselves and to us. It is such as these who are responsible for much of our trouble today. No true American is trying to upset the government, or to influence young people against their country. We know that a nation cannot stand divided into groups of money-mad profiteers, Bolsheviki, or any other class against the true Americans. The sons of Pilgrim fathers will rise with the strength of their splendid ancestry to preserve the high ideals of union, freedom and justice, for they know that the future of America will depend upon these same principles. We must not fail, and we have no need to fear, so long as we remain intensely American.

When a common danger confronts the nation it becomes the duty and privilege of all men to battle for the right. Such a time is now upon us. The patriotic fervor of the war time is dying. The high resolves for righteousness have been undermined by the wild fury of class agitation. This is not the time to surrender our faith to the foes of America. Let us stand boldly forth and set our faces like flint against every man who is against America. Let us keep the sacred fires of national loyalty burning. Let a life of devotion to American ideals and institutions be our living memorial to the dead. Let us dedicate every day of every year of our lives to the noble task of preserving for our children the government of our fathers under which we have prospered so well. To keep the pathway of liberty open to a memorial to the Pilgrims, this being the tercentenary of the landing of the first English settlers on the American shores. Excerpts from the salutatory by Miss Helen Kitfield Beaton, an essay by Mark Lewis Sinnicks and the valedictory by Miss Janet Synnott Height, are printed in this week's issue of the BREEZE. The three parts were given in an especially creditable manner and were most generously applauded.

The graduates were Helen Kitfield Beaton, Ruth Merrill Bullock, Ruth Agnes Carroll, Dorothy Parsons Crombie, Alice Anna Flaherty, Janet Synnott Height, Alice Katherine Henneberry, Dorris Marie Knoerr, Bernice Stone Lee, Violet Louise Read, Blanche Mary Wade; Nelson Allen Butler, Ernest Holmes Lucas, Arthur Joseph Miguel, John Joseph Morley, William Thomas Murray, Lester Allen Peabody, William David Singleton, Mark Lewis Sinnicks, John Celestine Wade.

MEMORIAL TO THE EARLY SETTLERS

Salutatorian States that Mark of Pilgrim in 1920 is Same as in 1620

(Excerpts from essay by Miss Helen Kitfield Beaton, Salutatorian of class of 1920, Story High school, Manchester)

FRIENDS, your presence here this evening assures us once again of your never-failing interest in the schools of Manchester, your devotion to the upbuilding of a spirit of democracy, and your ever-ready generosity toward the town's young people.

We greet you with the realization that this occasion in our lives is made possible through your good will and friendship. Until we reach the time of graduation we have little or no opportunity to let you know the full extent of our appreciation. But now, at last, it is possible, and there goes forth to our school committee, superintendent, teachers, and friends, a hearty welcome from the class of 1920.

This year marks, as you know, the tercentenary anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims on our shores, and we have decided to make our graduation one of the many memorials to them, for it seems that in these troublous times it gives one new hope and courage to look back upon the Pilgrim forefathers, and to renew his faith in the simplicity and true greatness of their lives.

It is well for us to recall their high ideals, to remember that it is these ideals which have made us, as a nation, great so far, and to realize that if we wish to continue our present greatness we must not abandon these ideals as something old-fashioned; we must hold fast to them as a vital, throbbing part of our present-day existence.

Especially in their churches and schools do we see the exemplification of their high ideals. The difficulties they labored under during those first severe winters to maintain these institutions, should inspire us to greater effort to preserve them now.

The Pilgrim was as bitterly opposed to calling the meeting-house a church as he was to calling the Sabbath Sunday. His favorite term for that day was the Lord's Day. Sermons two or three hours long were customary, and prayers from one to two hours in length. Some of the prayers were rather personal, as for example, one concerning a young man who was vain: "And, oh, Lord, we pray Thee, cure Ned Ingraham of that ungodly strut." One minister while praying for rain is said to have petitioned the Lord "to send it not in floods, but drizzle-drozzle, drizzle-drozzle, for about a week. Amen!"

Pilgrim schoolmasters believed that "sparing the rod spoils the child," and the ferrule was fiercely and frequently plied, with, as was written, "lamming and whipping and such benefits of nature as in English schools of the same date."

There were two kinds of schools, the dame-school and the grammar. As the idea was then prevalent that it was not desirable to give girls much book learning, they were sent at an early age to dame-schools, where they were carefully instructed in housewifely arts. They learned to cook, spin, weave and knit.

Boys began the study of Latin immediately. Instead of commencing with the grammars they learned first the words essential for conversation. At that time the one entrance requirement of Harvard college was the ability to read, write and speak Latin fluently.

The indelible mark of a Pilgrim, whether it be in 1620 or 1920, is a very active and disturbing conscience. The Pilgrims were morally restless. They were always on the march to finer and truer ways of life. These men and women who embarked in 1620 for a new land had a sense of moral protest in their lives, and dared to be different from others. Those alone have the mark of a Pilgrim who dared to risk everything on the assumption that they are on the right way, and who dare to be different for the sake of righteousness.

THE ORIGINAL IDIOT AND HIS MODERN DESCENDANTS

(Excerpts from address delivered by William Henry Spence at graduation exercises of Story High school, Manchester.)

CHANGES in use have frequently carried words far from their original meaning. Some words have grown from a lowly to a high estate; having begun in humblest surroundings they now associate with the great.

On the other hand, some words have undergone a degeneration. Having begun in honorable associations they are now in dishoner; having ranked as leaders in high service they have become servants of low caste, as if a prince were driven from a palace to become a coal heaver.

Again there are words that seem dislocated entirely from their original use and that by a process not easily traced, just as rocks have been carried a long distance by glaciers which long since have melted.

Among the words that have been completely severed from their ancient moorings is "idiot." Pathetic word! It is pitiful to think of the father and mother whose brimming cup of joy in their baby has turned gradually to the bitterness of wormwood as they have watched the little one grow to childhood, then to maturity, without any signs of a growing mind; better far that it had been born a cripple if only it had learned to think. To be an idiot is to be helpless in the battle of life, the object of pity and a burden to society.

Citizens and "Idiots"

It was not so, however, when the word first came into use. We get it from the Greeks, who in the days of the Athenian republic used it to designate those who had no share in public affairs. There were citizens and idiots. The citizens ruled the city through their suffrage. Only they could hold office and share in the legislation. The idiots comprised the majority of the people, among them some of the most intelligent of which Athens could boast. Thus the word had only a political meaning, and meant one who had no public responsibilities or prerogatives.

You see, then, what I mean by the "original idiot." He was the strictly private person. His modern descendants are those people among us who refuse to promote in the commonweal or share in social and political affairs. There is, however, this difference between the idiot in the republic of Athens and in the republic of the United States. The Athenian could not help himself and the American can.

You will frequently find a reproduction of the original idiot in the family. It is the son or daughter who accepts all the comforts of home without sharing its sacrifices, who demands that the other members of the family shall serve him while he gives nothing in return; who takes no interest in family enterprises; who cherishes no pride in the family name, and who, if family fortunes fail, is concerned only to escape himself without loss.

The "Man without a Country"

It is, however, in relation to affairs of state that the modern descendant of the original idiot is at his worst. He is the citizen who cheerfully accepts all the privileges and opportunites of a democracy, but refuses to meet a citizen's obligations and responsibilities. The government rests on universal suffrage, but he refuses to vote. He pays his taxes with protest. He scorns public office. He belongs to no political party, and stands for no political opinion. He lives in this country, he is under its protection, he receives the benefits of its laws, he is the heir of its glorious past, but to all intents and purposes, he is a "man without a country." The country is the place where he lives, his native land, but he has no love for it, to him it is not a cause to live and die for.

In other words, the modern descendant of the original idiot is the person who aims to live only for himself.

We are really nearer right in calling such a person an idiot than it would seem; for his attitude toward life is a mild form of lunacy. A celebrated alienist has called insanity concentrated egoism. If that be so, then the type of person we are dealing with is in the first stages of imbecility.

His idea of life is irrational. He is dependent on his fellowmen and must share life with them or he will perish. He is acting on a theory that will not work.

Personality is the result of action and reaction on other persons. Through the sufferings, sacrifices and long years of care given the child in the family, humanity has been lifted above the level of beasts. To spurn the family is to scorn the institution that makes one a man rather than an ape.

Is There a "Self-Made" Man?

We are civilized because we have learned how to live in communities and share life and labor together. We simply could not get on if each lived for himself. Let the man, who claims to be "self-made" and who asserts that if he earns his wages he is beholden to no one, do a little thinking. Suppose he works in a cotton mill. How does he happen to find work there? People need cotton goods. If no one wanted cotton goods he would not be a cotton weaver. How does it hap-

"THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA"

Mark Lewis Sinnicks Describes New England's Greatness

(Excerpts from essay delivered at graduation exercises of Story High school, Manchester.)

IN 1868, Sir William Stoughton said of the Pilgrims: "God sifted a whole nation that He might send choice grain into the wilderness." This grim old Puritan did not exaggerate. The founders of New England were drawn from the best of the English nation, many of them college graduates and men who had the courage of their convictions.

The voyage of the Mayflower in the fall of 1620 marked the beginning of a new era in political and social development. The effective history of New England dates from Christmas, 1620.

While our great west has sprung into cities almost overnight, New England has always been a land of towns. For years it was against the law to build more than two miles from a meeting-house. This kept the people together, made it easier to enforce church attendance and public order, and developed a community spirit.

Hardly were the houses built before manufacturing and trade began. We find a variety of industries thriving: Sawmills, gristmills, glass and rope factories, iron foundries, textile mills, gunshops, shipyards and tanneries.

In 1647 the Boston bootmakers complained to the court that there was much bad work done by some of their craft, and they petitioned for a consolidated company with a standard product. In this we see early New England's supremacy in many manufacturing lines,—good work and pride in it.

During the period of industrial growth, New England was also taking care of that greatest road to progress —education. In 1647, Massachusetts decreed that every town should have a school with a competent teacher.

Enlightened progress is a characteristic of New England's history. She early abolished slavery. Rhode Island was the first state to grant complete freedom of worship. Maine led the country by 75 years in the adoption of prohibition, and New England has enacted model child labor laws.

In New England factories, efficient organization and modern machinery have founded her industrial supremacy. In every department of intellectual and industrial activity New England has been at the front.

As trade and commerce have grown, manufacturing has increased while agriculture has lost its pre-eminence. New Englanders who have settled throughout the west, have joined the two oceans with a population permeated with New England ideals—free institutions, personal liberty, public probity and integrity.

The list of New England's products in manufacturing and agriculture is limitless. This part of the country is, as ever, a promising field for development. Her opportunities are various, and need only the response of home-grown pilgrims to make the best use of them.

We should keep the nobly aggressive spirit of those first Pilgrims, settle ourselves in their habits of thrift and industry and prove that we, too, are anxious to realize the glorious future of New England—to make her a land of promise fulfilled.

HISTORY OF CLASS OF 1920

Miss Bernice Stone Lee Outlines Past Events

(Excerpts from essay delivered at class day exercises of Story High school, Manchester.)

THE class of 1920 entered High school as Sub-Freshmen in Sept., 1915, with a membership of 41. We certainly felt "green," as the saying is. We were like sheep, where one went, we all followed, but without knowing just where our destination lay. And sometimes we did not even follow! The time soon came, however, when programs and passing to and fro from classes held no terrors for us, and we began to enjoy life once more.

We numbered 38 when we entered our Freshman year. Janet Height, Helen Beaton, Ruth Carroll and John Wade managed to eliminate the necessity of going through the 9th grade, and so had joined our ranks.

It was the custom for the classes to organize in the Sophomore year, but 1920 has ever been a progressive class, so we received permission to form our organization in our Freshman year. Officers were elected and later we decided on royal purple and gold as our class colors.

In the fall of our Sophomore year the idea of a school paper was conceived. "Old Home Day" was observed for the first time while we were in the Sophomore year.

The great event of our Junior year was our Thanksgiving evening dance, our first big affair as a class. This was followed by a New Year's eve costume party, and other social affairs. One of the biggest events of our career in High school was our class trip to Boston on April 30.

On the whole, the past five years have been pleasant, and now that the time has come for us to leave old Story High, we realize that it is indeed true that "school days are the happiest days."

Work called for and delivered

William Angus has concluded his teaching duties at Mt. Vernon, N. H., and is vacationing at the home of his father, James Angus, on Washington st.

Flag day was appropriately observed in Manchester with a general display of the national colors and flag. It was gratifying to every true American to see the interest which our townspeople took in the day, "Old Glory" being prominently displayed from a large majority of the houses and business places. In the evening there was a special patriotic program given by the W. R. C. in G. A. R. hall, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue.

MANCHESTER

Mary Coen spent the week-end at Wollaston as guest of Miss Euphemia Chevie.

Anna Carey, of Roxbury, visited her aunt, Mrs. Patrick Kelliher, of Pleasant st., on the holiday, June 17.

Peter A. Sheahan is bemoaning the loss of his pet dog, "Cutie," which was run over and killed by an automobile Wednesday afternoon.

Harold M. Ellis, foreman at the Wareham Courier office, was the guest of his cousin, H. B. Eldredge, of Lincoln st., a few days the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Parsons entertained the grammar school orchestra at their home in West Manchester Wednesday evening of this week. The orchestra played for a number of guests and then the hostess served the party with refreshments. General dancing completed the evening's enjoyment.

The Lotus male quartet and reader, from Boston, will give an entertainment at the Town hall, Manchester, next Wednesday evening, June 23, at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the A. O. U. W., of Manchester. The quartet will present an entirely new program and the entertainment will be well worth attending. Reserved seats are now on sale at Ropes' drug store.

Mrs. George E. Rogers, of Masconomo st., sailed Saturday for a visit to her native home near Bordeaux, France. She will be away until September. Mrs. Rogers has not visited her old home for seven years, and she is naturally eager to be with her family once more, now that the war days are over. Mr. Rogers is caretaker of "The Narrows," Mrs. W. Scott Fitz's estate on Smith's Point.

Manchester will Play Hawley Folsom Team Tomorrow

The Hawley Folsom team which comes to Manchester on Saturday of this week is one of the best teams around Boston this year and has already won 12 games from some of the fastest clubs around the Hub. It has been rumored that the rooters who follow this team are willing to make many wagers on what they believe to be the best team in New England. The lineup contains some well-known players who have had a lot of experience either with minor league, college or semi-pro teams.

The Hawley Folsom team is composed of players who are employed in the wholesale dry goods house of D. A. Sullivan, who owns a summer home in Manchester. Mr. Sullivan is said to be quite anxious to have his team "carry home the bacon," and all indications point to a lively contest.

Now that the Interscholastic season is over "Bill" Coady will be on hand to umpire, which will assure the fans of a fast game with no delays. The game will start promptly at 3.15.

Manchester will present about the same lineup as last week, with "Joe" Dee as catcher.

VALEDICTORY

even the humblest of God's freemen is the purpose and pride of the glory that is America.

Classmates, each of us is now going a different way in life, some of us to seek further education, while others will enter the business world. Wherever we go, whatever we do, we may well remember the ideals of the sturdy Pilgrims who founded the country.

In large measure they followed the ideals of another, earlier Pilgrim —Columbus. His steady purpose and firm will urged him to tell his wearied seamen again and again, "Sail on!" until they reached the new world. This steadfast command comes down to us through the ages to give us the encouragement and the resolution necessary to make us go "Even Higher."

MANCHESTER GRADUATION

pen that there is a mill for him to work in? Some men, or group of men,—despised capitalists—got some money together and built it. What is it made of? Wood and brick and stone and metal; to produce these, men toiled in forest, mill, quarry and mine.

Members of the graduating class: When I now ask you not to be "original idiots," you will understand me. Do not attempt to play the role of a strictly private person in a modern democracy.

Find, therefore, that kind of a career which will permit you to make the largest possible contribution to human welfare. Especially do I plead that you consecrate yourself to your country. See to it that through stress and storm the ideal American shall find in you the fidelity that never falters, the courage that knows no surrender.

The ushers at the graduation were members of the alumni: Abbott Foster, Grafton Owens, Stanley Beaton, Manuel Miguel and Carlton Needham.

Streamers of royal purple and gold crepe paper were artistically arranged over the stage. In the center of the stage, near the rear, was a bower covered with flowers, through which the class filed to their seats on the platform. The letters of the class motto, "Umquam altior," were in purple on a new bulletin board which was presented Story High school today.

Rev. Wm. Henry Spence, pastor of the historic Tabernacle church, at Salem, delivered the address to the graduates. His subject was "The Original Idiot." Rev. Mr. Spence had a pleasing style of delivery and his message was thought-provoking. Excerpts from his address are printed in this issue.

The diplomas were presented by Raymond C. Allen, chairman of the school committee.

The graduation exercises closed with the singing of "Star Spangled Banner" and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. H. E. Levoy.

The annual class reception will be held this evening at Horticultural hall, Manchester. In the receiving line will be Supt. and Mrs. John C. Mackin, Prin. and Mrs. John O. Matthews, and the officers of the Senior class.

Dancing will be enjoyed until 1 o'clock, music by Long's orchestra.

M. E. Fisher, of Danielson, Conn., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Myric C. Horton.

Mrs. Richard B. Larkin and children, of Haverhill, have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Roberts, while Dr. Larkin attended the convention of dentists at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

About 30 members of the North Shore Horticultural society enjoyed an auto trip last Saturday to the Mrs. Stephen M. Weld estate, at Dedham. Here they visited the rock gardens and inspected the handsome alpine flowers which were blooming in profusion. On the return trip the members called at the Prof. Sargent estate in Brookline to see the rhododendrons which were at their best.

A false alarm of fire from box 56, near Essex County club entrance, School st., caused some excitement last night about 10.30 o'clock, just followlowing the graduation exercises at the Town hall. The department quickly responded with the truck. Mingled with feelings of relief that there wasn't any fierce fire to fight, the firemen felt furious at the joke (?) which called them out into the rain at that hour of the night.

MANCHESTER CHURCHES

"Friendship" will be the subject of Rev. F. W. Manning's sermon at the Congl. church next Sunday morning. The Odd Fellows will attend in a body, this being the Odd Fellows Memorial Sunday service. The public is invited to attend.

A large number of members of the Junior Christian Endeavor society, of the Baptist church, enjoyed their annual picnic at Singing Beach, Manchester, last Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Annie Heath, superintendent, was in charge. The children took their basket lunch with them and enjoyed a fine time, returning home in the early evening.

Baptist church, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor. Sunday morning at 10.45 there will be the regular preaching service with a sermon by the pastor. Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock Louis Marini, of Quincy, will be present and sing. Mr. Marini has sung here several times and Manchester people will be pleased to welcome him again. One of his selections will be "The Holy City." He will have a violin accompaniment. There will be a short sermon by the pastor. Everybody welcome.

A man who loses his temper always manages to find it again.

NEW RULE REGARDING DRIVERS OF MOTOR TRUCKS

A new ruling has recently been made by the Department of Public Works, regarding licenses for operators of trucks. The new ruling is that every operator of a truck must have a chauffeur's license—a private operator's license is not sufficient. This applies whether the driver is or is not the owner of the truck.

For example: A clerk who drives a delivery auto for a grocery store must have a chauffeur's license. Again: If a man has been driving a truck armed only with his private operator's license, he must obtain a chauffeur's license.

Miss Nina Sinnicks, a member of the graduating class at Mt. Holyoke college last week, was one of five members of the class to receive the Mary Lyon honor. This distinction is awarded to those who attain a very high mark in the study of English literature.

Chester L. Crafts left Sunday morning for Northfield, Vt., to attend the commencement at Norwich university, of which his younger son, Donald, is a student. He will then go to Amherst to spend a day to two with his other son, Gordon, who is a student at the Massachusetts Agricultural college. The latter will soon be home for the summer, but Donald will probably spend the entire vacation at some military camp, in accordance with the requirements of the university, which call for one summer of the 4-year course to be spent at a military training camp.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING WILL BE HELD MONDAY EVENING

Manchester voters should remember the special town meeting which will be held next Monday evening, June 21, at 7.30 o'clock, in the Town hall.

The warrant for this special meeting contains five articles. Among the matters to be discussed are whether Sunday sports shall be legalized in Manchester; to see if the town will vote to pay certain sums of money for damages caused to property by the taking of easements by the town in 1914 for sewer purposes; to see if the town will vote $1,000 for maintenance of the park department; and to see if the town will appropriate $650 for interest on temporary loans.

Woburn Meets Defeat in Well-Played Game

A fine exhibition of the national pastime was seen at the Brook st. playground, Manchester, last Saturday afternoon, when the fast Manchester team defeated the Woburn aggregation by the score of 4 to 3. As the close score would indicate, the game was hard-fought from the start and the result was not sure until the ninth inning, as the visitors put one run across in the last frame, and got another as far as the third sack.

Manchester's new battery, Brawley and Healey, did excellent work, the former pitching in fine shape, while the latter exhibited plenty of "pep" as a backstop. Brawley allowed only six hits, but Woburn managed to bunch them sufficiently to make them count for runs. Colucci, Tufts' twirler, was the opposing boxman, and he also did good work.

"Jake" Warner was the high sticker for Manchester with four hits. Al Joyce also did some nice work with the willow, his hits coming in timely fashion.

Both sides scored in the second inning. McGovern led off with a two-base hit. McCarthy fanned and Colucci flied to Harrison. Walsh singled to center, McGovern scoring. Patten was an easy out for Healey.

Joyce started Manchester's rally to tie the score with a single to right. Abbott singled to left, Joyce advancing to second. Francis fanned while trying to sacrifice, and Healey laced out a hit that brought Joyce across the plate.

McGovern scored the second Woburn run in the fourth. He was first man up and was hit by a pitched ball. McCarthy sacrificed and McGovern scored from second on Colucci's single to left field. Walsh and Patten both flied out.

In the last of the fifth, with one down, Harrison and Warner singled and Kelley drew a pass, filling the bases. Joyce's rap to the shortstop resulted in a double play, Harrison being cut off at the plate, while Joyce was nipped at first on McQueen's sharp throw.

Manchester went ahead in the seventh. Harrison started with a clean single to right. Warner beat out his attempted sacrifice for his fourth hit. Kelley sacrificed, both runners moving up a base. Joyce delivered a timely hit and both Harrison and Warner counted. Joyce took second on the throw to the plate, stole third and was put out trying for home after Abbott had fanned.

Francis hit a homer into the brook in the eighth, but was called out by the field umpire for not touching third. The decision was reversed by the umpire-in-chief on the ground that the ball hit by Francis was not recovered. Francis then ran back and touched third and came home again, the run being allowed to count.

Woburn made trouble in the ninth. Colucci drew a pass at the start. Walsh followed with a clean single and Patten moved the runners along with a sacrifice, Andrews to Warner. McQueen grounded out, Joyce to Andrews, Colucci scoring. Torpey flied to Kelley for the final out.

The shortstops of both teams had great days in the field. Joyce accepted ten chances without an error, while the Woburn man, Cadigan, had four putouts and seven assists to his credit. Andrews played a wonderful game at first and made splendid pickups of poorly thrown balls.

Orpheus Club has Pleasant Musical Gathering

Last Sunday afternoon marked a very interesting musical event for the Orpheus club, of Manchester. It had as guests musicians from Melrose, Needham and Watertown, who came in automobiles and enjoyed a basket lunch at Singing Beach. After the luncheon the party went to the Price school hall and spent the afternoon playing to a goodly number of guests. One of the numbers most enjoyed was a violin solo by Miss Pauline Taylor, accompanied by Miss Adele Howe. Among the musicians was Edward S. Howe, treasurer of Elias Howe Co., of Boston; also Miss Alice Gustasson, who together with Miss Taylor, was a pupil of the well-known symphony violinist, Tradkin. After the program of the afternoon, Mrs. John C. Mackin and Mrs. Robert Porter acted as hostesses and served refreshments to the party.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

"Young People's History of the Pilgrims," by William Elliot Griffis, is one of the new books. Very few writers of history have the knack of presenting history to young people in a form that will attract them. It can, with safety, be said that the author of this fascinating history of the Pilgrims is such a one. Dr. Griffis spent much time collecting the facts set forth in so attractive a manner. He went over the ground seven times and searched the archives of England, Holland and America. To make the book appeal to the young he has dwelt on many things that would naturally interest the girls and boys. Do not fail to read such chapters as "Fun and Play in the Old Home," "A Girl's Life in Merrie England," "Brewster, the Boy Traveler," "Bradford, Boy Hero and Typical Pilgrim," and "Captain Miles Standish and His Little Army."

For the "children of a larger growth" we have "In the Days of the Pilgrim Fathers," by Mary Caroline Crawford, author of "Old Boston Days and Ways" and "Social Life in Old New England." Miss Crawford tells us much about those sturdy pioneers who laid the solid foundation of this republic three hundred years ago. "The Women Who Came Over in the Mayflower," by Annie Russell Marble, is a captivating little volume that tells you something about that noble band of women who so ably helped our forefathers in their early struggles.

"Paris Through An Attic," by A. Herbage Edwards, is the story of a newly married couple that spent two years of study at the Sorbonne in Paris. Their many and varied experiences are related in a pleasing way. You may learn much about Paris that is not found in guide books.

The story of the Red Indian has always had a fascination for boys. "The Boys' Book of Redskins," by Eric Wood, gives a lot of information about the Indian character in a way that will appeal to every real boy.

"A Pilgrim Maid," by Marion Ames Taggart, is a book that will be enjoyed by grown-ups as well as girls. It gives a good picture of the family life in a Plymouth home of "ye olden time."

"The Slayer of Souls," by Robert Chambers, is a thrilling tale, being a mixture of love, adventure and black magic, the scene of action being China.

A good story of ranch life in Idaho is "The Quirt," by B. M. Bower.

"Don Strong, American" is a book that will please the boys. It is by Wm.

Heyliger.

Another real good story for boys is "The Ring-Necked Grizzly," by Warren H. Miller. It is a story of life in the Rocky Mountains.

"Dick Arnold, of Raritan College," gives a good description of undergraduate life in a small college.

"The Boardwalk" is a volume of short stories by Margaret Widdemer, author of "The Rose-Garden Husband." Another volume of short stories is "Half Portions," by Edna Ferber. Her characters seem real people.

In next week's list you will find both new and old books.

John Rufus Cheever

John Rufus Cheever, one of Manchester's well-known citizens, passed away last Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his home on Union st., after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Cheever was born in Portland, Me., May 8, 1846, son of Jacob and Elizabeth Cheever. He learned the trade of a wood carver, and entered the employ of the Hallet & Davis Piano Co., Boston, when quite a young man. Several years later he came to Manchester to work for William E. Wheaton in a furniture shop and at the latter's decease he entered the employ of Samuel L. Wheaton. About 25 years ago he retired from active work.

In the meantime he had become interested in photography with Taylor & Preston, of Salem, and for a number of years did a large amount of the local work in Manchester for the summer residents. He was a successful photographer and loved this kind of business.

Mr. Cheever was a member of Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., of Manchester. He did not care to seek town office, although having an active interest in everything which related to the welfare of the town.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at Crowell Memorial chapel. Rev. F. W. Manning, pastor of the Congl. church, spoke words of comfort to the bereaved. Burial was in the family lot at Rosedale cemetery, the commitment service of the Odd Fellows being used.

He is survived by a wife and two sons, Frank G. and Richard L. Cheever, both of Manchester.

Subject to a Rest

Mrs. Keene was greeting the eligible bachelor guest effusively, and as she took his hat Miss Keene, in the next room, could be heard executing a song to her own accompaniment.

"Ah!" exclaimed the fond mother, proudly. "My daughter is breaking into song!"

"You are right, madame," growled the exasperated listener. "You can tell that she's breaking in, for obviously she hasn't been able to find the key!"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

MAGNOLIA

The library at the corner of Lexington and Norman avenues is open every morning, except Sundays, from 9 until 12 o'clock.

Alice Linnea Swanson, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swanson, of Magnolia ave., will graduate from the Malden City hospital next Monday evening.

Dorothea McGaughey has resigned her position of clerk and bookkeeper at the North Shore swimming pool, to assist her father, Robert McGaughey, in his business in New York city.

The Misses Dakin, both graduates of Smith college, and daughters of Dr. Dakin, of Boston and Magnolia, attended the commencement exercises of their alma mater this week, going and coming in their automobile.

Services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. As in former years the Sunday school will be discontinued during the summer months. The Sunday evening service will be resumed July 4, at 8.15 o'clock.

Carroll Webber, who was in the employ of a well-known Gloucester firm for sixteen years, has resigned his position to engage in business on his own account as a florist. Mr. Webber has established a business on Western ave., opposite the Mrs. F. F. Story place. At present he is raising flowers on the "Butler" field and later he contemplates erecting a good-sized hothouse. His many friends wish him success in his new enterprise.

Magnolia Women's Club

Tuesday evening Miss Abbott held her second assembly at the clubhouse. These assemblies take the place of the last season's dancing class. Miss Abbott will be glad to help anyone who wishes to learn the new steps, either before or during the dance. She is planning some very interesting diversions later in the summer.

Every Thursday evening will be given over to whist as in other years.

This Friday evening and every Friday evening through the summer, a dance will be given for club members and their gentlemen friends. An orchestra will be provided for these nights. Other interesting evenings are being planned.

Men's Club Notes

Troy Combs, who so successfully managed the club last season arrived from Princeton, where he has been attending college, on Monday, and immediately got to work to get the house ready for opening.

The popular Wednesday and Saturday dances will be a feature this year as in previous seasons.

SOME STRANGE ACCIDENTS

Many Odd Mishaps are Reported to Insurance Companies

Accident insurance, or insurance which pays benefits in case of temporary disability, is carried by a great many people. The claim agent whose business it is to investigate reported injuries often meets with amusing incidents. The following were furnished by an agent of a large insurance company:

"Some captive rattlesnakes in a restaurant escaped from a box in which they were confined and so frightened one of the patrons that in his haste to get out he fell in front of me, and in getting up, came up underneath me, tossing me over his head."

"I was in bed and dreamed that a burglar was bending over me. I struck at him so hard that I was thrown on the floor with arm extended and broke my collarbone."

"Assisting a lady who had an umbrella under her arm, to board a car, the point of the umbrella was thrust into my left eye."

"I placed an electric fan beside my bed on a hot night. While asleep I stuck my foot in it."

"In a playful mood I kicked at my wife while barefooted and accidentally struck her on the knee, thereby spraining the big toe of my left foot."

"My arm encircled the neck of a young lady. I suddenly withdrew it and the thumb of my left hand came in contact with a brooch, penetrating the thumb almost to the bone."

"My wife was curling her hair. I ran against her and the hair curler struck my eye."

"I was embraced by a friend who playfully said that he could make me cry—fractured my rib."

"On a private yacht, I had just had a highball, got up, the boat gave a lurch and I sat down on the glass."

"Looking for a leak in a natural gas pipe with a lighted match—explosion followed."

"I missed my train and while walking on the country road I fell over a cow lying in the road. As I fell the cow got up, striking me and also stepping on my foot."

"Sitting in a chair in a barber shop and billiard parlor, a ball from a pool table nearby struck me on the nose, breaking nose and injuring one eye."

"I had been talking with another man, and as I started to walk along didn't notice a woman had pushed a baby carriage directly in front of me—fell over it."

"I was going down the walk in front of my house when an automobile wheel which had come off two blocks away rolled down the hill and struck me, fracturing both bones of the right leg."

"I was riding in an automobile when it struck a hole in the road, causing my teeth to come together with such force that the lower jaw was fractured."

"I was looking for burglars, and was accidentally mistaken by one of my neighbors for the man we were looking for, and he shot me in the arm."

A good many of the objections to painted faces are due not to the fact that they are painted, but because they look like the job had been done by non-union painters.

Eugene T. Connolly left Monday for a trip to California. He will be away five or six weeks.

Miss Josephine Palmer, of Patterson, N. J., has been spending her vacation at Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner D. Mead, of Dalton, have spent the past week visiting friends at Beverly Farms.

Miss Mary Resoldi, a senior nurse at the Lawrence hospital, is home with her parents on Haskell st. for a vacation.

Rev. Fr. Meanie, of Maine, has been the guest for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory P. Connolly, Everett st.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Varney have taken a few days' vacation this week, motoring to Mr. Varney's former home in South Wyndham, Me.

The Beverly Farms American Legion ball team played the Rockport A. A. at the local playgrounds last Saturday afternoon and the home team won, 8 to 5.

Mrs. Joseph C. Stanwood and Miss Alice Leahy have just returned from a week's vacation trip to New York city. They went by automobile and returned by train.

Mrs. Mary Lee returned from No. Conway last Saturday to attend the funeral services of the late Mrs. James B. Dow. She returns to No. Conway in a few days, where she will spend the summer.

It is reported that the Linehan estate, located on West st., has been sold, the deal being put through on Monday last. This estate is pleasantly situated, and with improvement would make an ideal home.

Friends of John Kelly, a former Beverly Farms young man, will be pleased to learn that he has a fine position as timekeeper and cost clerk with a New York construction concern. He is located at Oyster Bay, L. I.

At the annual meeting last Monday afternoon of the Beverly Old Ladies' Home society 14 new directors were added to the board of managers. Beverly Farms is represented by the election of Mrs. Howard A. Doane and Mrs. Frank I. Preston.

The BREEZE man stepped into the Public Bakeries, in Salem, the other day, and was surprised to see a familiar face—that of Edward Higgins, a former well-known Beverly Farms business man. Mr. Higgins was the originator of the first bakery at Beverly Farms and conducted it successfully for a number of years. He went west, but returned about seven years ago.

MRS. MARY L. DOW

DEATH FRIDAY OF ONE OF BEST-KNOWN WOMEN OF BEVERLY FARMS

Mrs. Mary L. Dow, wife of school committeeman James B. Dow, died at her home, 705 Hale st., last Friday, at the age of 85 years. Mrs. Dow suffered from a shock on Tuesday and failed to rally.

Mrs. Dow had long been a resident of Beverly Farms. Her maiden name was Mary Larcom Ober. She was born at Beverly Cove. Her father was Benjamin Ober, first mate of an East India trading vessel, and her mother was Mary Larcom, daughter of Andrew Larcom, one of the early settlers of Beverly Farms. Her education began in the Beverly schools, then she went to the Francistown academy. Afterward she and her sister worked their way through the Salem Normal school by binding shoes.

The first school in which she taught was at Brewster on the Cape, then at Castine, Me., and afterward for many years at Pride's Crossing and Beverly Farms. Two winters she taught in schools at the south. For years she taught the Beverly Farms school and in many instances had the distinction of teaching the parents and their children. In all the schools taught by her she was recognized as a most successful teacher.

Since her marriage she has lived at her home in Beverly Farms—the home where she came to live when five years old at the time of her mother's marriage to David Larcom.

Mrs. Dow was an attendant at the Beverly Farms Baptist church, was much interested in its affairs and was a charter member of Preston Women's Relief corps.

Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at her home on Hale st., Rev. Clarence Strong Pond officiating. The Misses Lizzie Hull and Mildred Gerrish sang two of her favorite hymns, "How firm a foundation" and "O, Lord, our help in ages past." A number of the members of Preston W. R. C. attended. The three nephews of Mrs. Dow, George, Sidney, Theodore Larcom and Fred W. Trowt acted as pall bearers. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Burial in the Beverly Farms cemetery.

Two Beverly Farms parties enjoyed last week-end camping on the shores of Chebacco lake. One party occupied the Standley camp and another the Peabody cottage.

Peter McLaughlin left the early part of the week to resume his former position as superintendent for Connolly Bros., on the Weld estate, at Warrenton, Va.

The Beverly Farms ball team of the grammar school, having won eight games and lost only one, will be one of the teams to play in the series for the championship.

Tunipoo Inn, Beverly Farms' popular summer hotel, is now open for guests. With the bookings that this inn has for early arrivals a most successful season is assured.

Mrs. Hershel Lutes (Nellie Preston), of Hemstead, L. I., is at Beverly Farms for a two or three weeks' visit and is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Alice L. Preston, Hart st.

A young deer, evidently scared by an automobile, made a wild run across Haskell st. last Saturday and jumped down an embankment, falling in such a way that its neck was broken. Patrolman Hooper investigated and reported the matter to the State Fish and Game commission.

The wedding of Forrester Pierce and Miss Helen Troy, both of Melrose, took place in that town last Saturday. The ceremony was performed at a nuptial mass at the Catholic church, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip they will reside at Long Branch, N. J. Mr. Pierce was a former resident at Beverly Farms.

On Tuesday Mrs. Edwin Pride observed the 84th anniversary of her birth by receiving the congratulations of a host of relatives and friends. Mrs. Pride makes her home with her two sons, Willis A. Pride, of Beverly Farms, and Edwin L. Pride, of Winter Hill. She is in good health, and with one exception is probably the oldest Beverly Farms woman resident.

New traffic rules have been put in force for West st. from Central sq. to the railroad crossing at the Beverly Farms depot. Because of the heavy travel and the narrow street automobiles will be required to proceed slowly, and signs to this effect have been posted. Parking of automobiles will be allowed only on the north side of the street.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on hand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Batchelder, of Brattleboro, Vt., have been among the visitors at Beverly Farms the past week.

The Beverly Farms American Legion ball team played the Trojan A. A., of Salem, at the local playgrounds Wednesday; the local team won.

Mrs. Ruth Heffenreffer and son, of Jamaica Plain, are visiting at Beverly Farms, the guests of Mrs. Heffenreffer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hardy.

West Beach is again becoming a popular spot. Daily, especially in the afternoon and early evening, many people go there to enjoy the pleasure and recreation the place affords.

Preston W. R. corps has received an invitation from the Beverly lodge of Elks to attend the flag day services at the Home, 75 Cabot st., Beverly, on Sunday evening next, at 7 o'clock.

The case of Ludwick Buba, of Salem, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Mary Collins, who was struck and fatally injured by an automobile driven by Buba on June 6th last, was held for the grand jury in the sum of $2000. There were also two other complaints; one was reckless driving. Buba was found guilty and given a month's sentence and appealed. Bail was set in $1000. The other complaint alleged that he did not have his license with him. He was found guilty on this charge and a fine of $10 was imposed. He appealed and bail was set in $100.

"Marguerite, can you cook?"

"No, Percival; can you afford to keep a limousine?"

"No, dear."

So they did not marry and they lived happily ever after. — Boston Transcript.

Edward P. Ober and Miss Lena J. White Married Thursday Night

The marriage of Edward Peter Ober, of Beverly, the head operator of the motion picture machines at the Strand theatre, Gloucester, and Miss Lena J. White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey White, of Gloucester, was solemnized at the parochial residence, Thursday evening of last week by Rev. Alfred J. McDonald, the double ring ceremony being used.

The bride was attired in an Alice blue suit with hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Elizabeth Ferguson, was gowned in a taupe satin. Robert Hennessey was best man.

A reception was held for the immediate friends of the couple at the residence of the bride. After a short honeymoon the young couple will live in Beverly.

Mr. Ober is well-known in Beverly Farms.

Boards of Trade Will Meet in Gloucester

Road building in Essex county will probably take on a new lease of life following the meeting of the Essex County Associated Boards of Trade at Hawthorne Inn, Gloucester, June 22, as at that time full details concerning what financial assistance can be secured for highway construction from state and county governments will be placed in the hands of delegates.

The cost of building roads in the county is shared, in certain instances, proportionately by three different sources: namely state, county and cities or towns, the latter initiating the construction. This has been impressed upon previous meetings of the county association, but its effectiveness in increasing road building has been counteracted by a large extent by a lack of complete information.

Between the Shafts

"The major is a good enough horseman," agreed the young lieutenant, who also prided himself on his prowess in the saddle, "but his feet are so large that he looks positively ridiculous!"

"I bet you can't ride his new horse without being thrown off," put in a friend.

"We'll see about that," was the answer, and, to settle the matter, the major agreed to have his new horse brought out. The animal duly appeared, plunging and curveting about in a manner that was really alarming. It had already thrown three men in as many days, but, nothing daunted, the lieutenant sprang into the saddle and grasped the reins. In another moment he, too, was thrown to the ground.

Then the major mounted and the animal walked about as quietly as if it were a wornout cab horse.

"Well, what else could you expect?" said the lieutenant, with sarcasm, "look at the major's feet. The horse thinks he's between shafts!" — Richmond Times Dispatch.

She Knew at Once Who It Was

The agent rang the doorbell and a maid opened the door.

"Good morning," smiled the agent. "I am trying to find a married lady whose name I can't remember just now. I think this is her home. She is a woman easily described. Perhaps you know her. She is a handsome woman, with a perfect complexion, beautiful hair and teeth, lovely eyes and an ideal figure. I thought—"

"Mary!" called a voice from the top of the stairs, "tell the gentleman I will be right down!" — Cincinnati Enquirer.

THIRTY-NINE STILL THREATENED

The meeting was interrupted by the entrance of one who made his way to the platform and whispered excitedly to the chairman.

"Is Mr. Smith in the audience?" broke forth the presiding officer. "I am informed that his house is afire."

Forty men sprang to their feet.

"It is the house of Mr. John Smith," added the chairman.

"Thank goodness!" fervently exclaimed one man, resuming his seat.—Everybody's Magazine.

LEAVE IT!

THE ONLY ANSWER TO ALL WHO DO NOT LIKE THIS COUNTRY

"My suggestion is this: If you don't like this country and its methods of justice, you can leave it. I can take up your case with the authorities, and I think I can arrange for your transportation back to Russia. Once over there, you can denounce our laws to your heart's content. On the other hand, if you are of the right sort and wish to assume the duties and share the responsibilities of citizenship, I for one should be happy to have you stay. We are glad and proud in America to admit those who come to us in good faith and who seek in this country an asylum which guarantees to them the right to 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.' But we should be a weak and miserable nation, indeed, if we failed to bar or to evict those who come to destroy. It's for you to decide, Leo!"

"Oh, judge, I want to stay. I don't want to leave America. I am sure I will make a good citizen."

"Then stay you shall. I am going to put my trust in you, and I feel confident that such trust will not be misplaced. My best wishes go with you."

Our little conference was at an end.

My friend, the spokesman of the committee, however, was in no hurry to leave the courtroom, possibly because he found that its atmosphere was so different from that which he had expected.

"Your honor evidently has a knowledge of socialism. Possibly you might like to attend one of our meetings. We might be able to convert you."

"I hardly think so," I answered. "The trouble with many of you is that you have not yet found yourselves. As I said before, I do not see why a good socialist cannot be a good American. I trust that the two things are not antagonistic. On the other hand, socialism, it seems to me, is being used, at the present time, as a generic name to cover beliefs and creeds which are as widely separated from each other as the poles. Some of you had better get to work threshing out the chaff from the wheat."—FRANKLIN CHASE HOYT, in Scribner's.

THE BAFFLED BARBER, OR CHEATED OUT OF HIS CHAT

"How will you have your hair cut, sir?" said the talkative barber to the victim in the chair.

"Minus conversational prolixity," replied the patient.

"How's that, sir?"

"With abbreviated or totally eliminated narrations," answered the other.

"What?"

"Without effervescent verbosity," was the reply. "Let even diminutive colloquy be conspicuous by its absence."

The barber scratched his head thoughtfully a second and then went over the proprietor of the shop and whispered:

"I don't know whether the man in my chair is mad or a foreigner, but I can't find out what he wants."

The victim had to explain that he wanted the job done in silence.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

SOCIETY NOTES

MRS. WILLIAM H. MOORE, of "Rockmarge," Pride's Crossing, will give a dinner next Wednesday evening for the 150 delegates to the meeting of the Garden club of America. The entire group of visitors will see her gardens at five-thirty that day.

Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane, of "The Chimneys," Manchester, will entertain at a tea next Wednesday, when the 350 and more Garden club visitors are due to visit her beautiful gardens at four-thirty. The visitors will walk along the rocky shore from the F. M. Whitehouse gardens to Mrs. Lane's estate.

Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, of "Graftonwood," Manchester, will entertain Mrs. Edward Lowe, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren, of Detroit, Mich., as her house guests during the Garden convention next week.

Mrs. F. S. Moseley, of Newburyport, entertains the visiting Garden club members and friends at a luncheon at one-thirty next Tuesday at her beautiful home, after gardens along the Shore have been visited in the morning.

Miss Margaret L. Corlies, of "Att-Lea House," Magnolia, will entertain at a large buffet luncheon for the non-delegates of the visiting garden clubs in convention next week upon the Shore. She will have about 50 guests including the Philadelphia club and "The Weeders," both clubs from Philadelphia, and a few mutual friends from along the Shore. The luncheon is given Wednesday, June 30, at one o'clock.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Arthur Biddle, Mrs. Charles Biddle, Mrs. R. H. Bayard Bowie, Miss Emily K. Smith, Mrs. Frazer Harris, Mrs. Thomas Newhall, Mrs. Randal Morgan, Mrs. Marshall Morgan, Mrs. William Dick, Mrs. Charles Cresswell, Mrs. Stacy Lloyd, Mrs. Charles Coxe, Mrs. James Winsor, Mrs. George Willing, Jr., Mrs. Cheston Morris, Jr., Miss Goodman, Mrs. Lewis Neilson, Mrs. Charles Platt, 3d, Mrs. Wm. SOCIETY NOTES

AMONG the Harvard classes to include the North Shore in their Commencement festivities was the Class of 1895. While the members of the class went to Natick Monday to celebrate their "silver" anniversary at the country estate of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Patten (Anne M. Thayer), the ladies of the party motored to the North Shore. They came first to the Essex County club—about 110 of them—for luncheon, then motored along the shore to see the gardens and the charming vistas always obtained in a motor ride in this section. At four o'clock they returned to West Manchester, where Mrs. Edward S. Grew, mother of Randolph C. Grew, served tea at her residence, "All Oaks," so delightfully located on the crest of "Glass Head," overlooking Salem Bay with its picturesque islands. From there the party continued their way inland through the Myopia Hunt club section to "Cedar Hill," the beautiful country estate of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wheatland, Topsfield. Supper was served here in plenty of time for the return trip to Boston to be made by daylight, thus affording an opportunity for a full enjoyment of the country scenery, the rolling hills and farms that make this section of the North Shore such a delight to visit.

Miss Rose Fessenden, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden, of Coolidge's Point, Manchester, will be among the débutantes of the coming winter in Boston.

Richards M. Bradley and his daughters, of Boston, will spend the summer in Brattleboro, Vt. The Bradley cottage, formerly occupied by them on Smith's Point, Manchester, has been taken by Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Davis, of Brush Hill rd., Readville. Mr. Bradley recently announced the engagement of his daughter, Amy Owen Bradley, to Philip Hales Suter, son of the Rev. and Mrs. John W. Suter, of Boston.

Rummage will be for sale on Saturday, July 10, at 7 Washington st., Beverly. The rummage sale is to benefit the New England school for deaf mutes at Beverly. To help this most important and worthy cause those having articles of any description for the sale will find them greatly appreciated by the committee in charge. Articles will be received by Mrs. Samuel Vaughan, Beverly Farms; Mrs. Bayard Warren, Pride's Crossing; Mrs. Everett Dodge, 6 Corning st., Montserrat. The building at 7 Washington st., will be open the day and evening previous to the sale when articles may be sent in, also.

AMBASSADOR AND MRS. IRA NELSON MORRIS expected to come to Manchester the latter part of this week after a visit to their old home in Chicago. After their return from Sweden some weeks ago they came to the North Shore for a short visit, to the McMillan estate, "Eagle Head," so picturesquely located on the eastern end of Singing Beach. They spent a week in Washington, where the Ambassador had official diplomatic business to attend to; they then went to Chicago, being there while the convention was in session. They were at the Blackstone hotel. Their daughter, Miss Constance Irene Morris, who attends Wellesley, will spend a few weeks in the early summer with her relatives at Green Lake, Wis. The young son, Ira Victor Morris, who attends Milton Academy, will be home this week for the summer.

Rev. Dr. Charles Wadsworth and family of Overbrook, (Phila.), Pa., are at Oakes Field, their summer home in Magnolia, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison K. Caner, of Philadelphia, will open their summer home, "Felsenmeer," at Dana's Beach, Manchester, today.

Mrs. William R. Nelson will come on from her home in Kansas City within a few days to spend the summer at Magnolia, where she has an attractive residence overlooking the ocean.

At Murray Bay, Canada, on July 15, Miss Helen Taft, daughter of former-President and Mrs. William Howard Taft, will become the bride of Frederick J. Manning. Miss Taft is well remembered by North Shore people, as she spent several summers here while the summer White House was located at Beverly back in the days when her father occupied the Presidential chair.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill, of Smith's Point, Manchester, left the Shore Tuesday for New York, where they are sailing next Monday for England and Scotland. Their son, Jack Merrill, will accompany them. The Merrills have friends in both England and Scotland and are planning to extend their travels until about October, when they will return to the Shore.

Surgical Dressings—don't forget Tuesday, July 6, in Horticultural hall, Manchester, Mrs. Timothis Adamowski and her able committee will meet you from 10 a. m. to 12.-30. Dressings are asked for by the Welfare committee of the Children's hospital, Boston, due to a shortage of nurses.

Mrs. Hall McAllister, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, and her son, Francis H. McAllister, will spend a part of the summer on the Shore visiting friends. Mrs. McAllister has a large singing class which she teaches on Tuesdays and Fridays at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. Gordon Abbott and her daughter will return to their West Manchester home tomorrow from the New London races. Mr. Abbott is spending a couple of weeks on a cruise. "Glass Head" will have eight or more Garden club delegates for house-guests next week.

Mrs. Edward J. Holmes, of Manchester, entertained with a luncheon at the Essex County club, Manchester, on Monday for 80 ladies, wives of the members of the class of '95, Harvard, that was celebrating its 25th anniversary.

North Shore Swimming Pool at Magnolia has been painted inside and out and thoroughly "dressed up" ready for the buffet luncheon on the Fourth. Tea and music will begin July 1. The pool was opened in 1913 and always has been one of the jolliest and best patronized clubs on the Shore. The tennis court is ready and the pool itself has also been painted and improved in anticipation of a big and busy season. Afternoon bridge will again be given, starting July 5.

The open regatta of the Corinthian Yacht club took place last Saturday, June 19. Among the smaller boats covering an inside course were Commodore Dick Payer's "Swift," which took first prize, and Master Arthur Shuman's "Lillian," which took second prize. Both boys live at Marblehead Neck and their boats are the Duxbury Baybirds representing the Pleon Yacht club.

The Breeze $2.00 a year, $1.00 for six months.

Mrs. Pierpont Edwards Dutcher, of Milwaukee and Magnolia, has rented "The Towers," at Spofford Lake, N. H., nine miles from Keene, and is entertaining her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, and family, for the season. In July, her son, Pierpont E. Dutcher, Jr., and his family, of New York, will visit her.

Mrs. Wm. McFadon, who is also well known in Magnolia and along the Shore, is spending the summer at Saybrooke Point, Conn., where her daughter, Mrs. Thos. B. Dorman, of Upper Montclair, N. J., has a cottage for July and August.

THE GARDEN CLUB of America will find a royal welcome awaiting it on the North Shore next week when the annual meeting of the club takes place in Manchester and its vicinity on the 29th and 30th and July 1. There will be no particular headquarters for the meeting. The delegates and non-delegates will number about 350 and there will be a few invited guests. The non-delegates will mostly stay at the Oceanside and Aborn hotels, Magnolia, or with friends on the Shore, while the presidents, delegates, and executive and bulletin committees will visit at the homes of the members of the North Shore Garden club.

The officers of the Garden club of America include the following well-known women: President, Mrs. J. Willis Martin, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Samuel Sloan, of New York, Mrs. Francis King, of Alma, Mich., Mrs. John E. Newell, of West Mentor, Ohio, and Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne, of Millbrook, N. Y., the four vice-presidents; treasurer, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, of New York; secretary, Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt, of Glen Cove, L. I.; editor of the bulletin, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, of Lake Forest, Ill.; librarian, Mrs. Frederick L. Rhodes, of Short Hills, N. J. This executive committee is augmented by the bulletin committee which includes besides the editor, Mrs. Brewster, the following: Mrs. Robert C. Hill, of East Hampton, L. I., Mrs. Charles Hubbard, of Winnetka, Ill., Mrs. Wm. K. Wallbridge, of Shorthills, N. J., Mrs. Benjamin Warren, of Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich., Mrs. John A. Stewart, Jr., of Short Hills, N. J., and Mrs. F. H. B. McKnight, of Pittsburg, Pa.

Two important business meetings are scheduled for the affair. One will be held at the home of Mrs. F. S. Moseley, Newburyport, and the other with Mrs. W. D. Denègre, West Manchester. A council of presidents will be held at "Castle Hill," Ipswich, the home of Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr. Aside from these there will be many smaller business meetings.

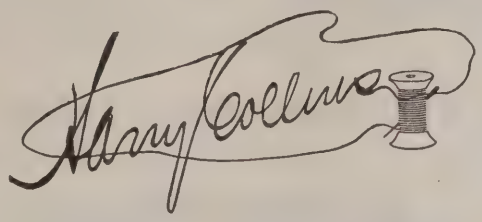

Visiting the beautiful estates on the North Shore will, of course, be uppermost on the program.

It happens that the annual summer flower show of the North Shore Horticultural society takes place on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 29 and 30, at the society's hall in Manchester. The ladies plan to visit the show on the first day. Then they will pass on to the gardens at some of the estates in Manchester, Pride's Crossing, West Newbury, Newburyport and Ipswich. By the close of the convention gardens in Gloucester, Nahant, Danvers and Brookline will have been visited. These places contain some of the most beautiful and attractive gardens in the country and have long been noted for their flower culture.

The North Shore Garden club is composed of 35 garden lovers along the Shore. Each one is personally interested in her garden. The president is Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, West Manchester; vice-president, Mrs. Wm. C. Loring, Pride's Crossing; secretary, Mrs. G. M. Lane, Manchester; recording secretary, Mrs. John Caswell, Beverly Farms; treasurer, Mrs. R. Paul Snelling, Beverly Farms.

The North Shore committee in charge regrets that Mrs. Francis King, of Alma, Mich., who is so prominent in the work, cannot come to the meeting on account of having met with an automobile accident.

The coming week-end and all next week cannot help but be a gala one for the Shore. It will mark not only the real summer exodus of society from the cities, but will show the most entertaining in private homes and clubs, occasioned by the coming of these several hundred garden devotees.

THE ANNUAL ROSE SHOW of the North Shore Horticultural society will be held at Horticultural hall, Manchester, next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 29 and 30. It will open to the public at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. This annual exhibition will include over 100 classes of different varieties of roses, peonies and perennials of all kinds. An exhibit of orchids from the estate of Albert C. Burrage, at Beverly Farms, will be shown. Cherry Hill Nurseries, at West Newbury, will have an exhibition of the newer varieties of peonies, which will be a feature of the show. This display will occupy 100 running feet of space. R. & J. Farquhar Co., of Boston, will show their new lilium regal. The rose show will be one of the principal features to be visited by the Garden club of America.

Mlle. Germaine Cossini returned this week from Paris and is at Manchester for the summer. She is making arrangements for a series of her popular conferences later in the season.

Ye Old Burnham House, on Linebrook rd., Ipswich, is one of the delightful places one may visit at the end of a motor trip from Manchester, Magnolia, or other sections of the North Shore. Aside from the historic interest—the house was built in 1640—there is much to draw one to this charming place. There is dinner if one cares for a full meal, or afternoon tea and refreshments. Then there are toys and gifts, and antiques to look at or to purchase.

Among those who have been at Ye Burnham House this season have been Misses Dorothy and Ruth Dill, of Swampscott and Boston; John Craig, Jr., of Boston; John F. Machado, Ottawa, Canada; Francis D. Beard, New York; Miss Sally Doggett, Manchester; Sherman D. Hickbold, Toronto; Miss Hope Bush, New York; Miss Helen A. Butler, Salem; Miss Sylvia Sears, Grays Lake, Ill.; Roger A. Strauss, Paris.

HARVARD GRADUATES of the class of 1914 came to the North Shore, Monday, for their class outing, which was held at the estate of Wm. H. Coolidge, Magnolia, "Billie" Coolidge, Jr., being a member of the class. They came from Boston by special train, 125 strong—arriving at Magnolia about 10.30. With the class marshal, R. T. P. Storer in charge, and headed by a brass band, the boys marched to the Coolidge bungalow, on the shore, and had a real old-fashioned clam-bake. Donned in their yellow and black caps and jackets they were conspicuous about Magnolia all day—in fact, they "owned" the town. In spite of the weather everybody had a most glorious time, enjoying swimming in the pool, baseball on the beach. As the closing, but nonetheless important feature of the outing, the class had a dinner at Del Monte's, which opened especially for the occasion.

Joseph C. Grew and family have just left Paris, by motor, for Denmark, going by way of Berlin, which they had not visited since the hurried exit at the outbreak of the war between the United States and Germany three years ago. Mr. Grew has recently been appointed minister to Denmark and he has gone there to take up his new duties. Since the war Mr. Grew has acted in a most important capacity for this government in connection with the Peace Treaty and conferences. He held an important position in the diplomatic councils during the war, his many years with the embassy both at Vienna and Berlin serving him in good stead.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Thomas, of Boston, are season guests at the Oceanside.

STRAND THEATRE, LYNN

Wallace Reid, as the young man-about-town, who played sick to avoid testifying in a sensational divorce suit, will be featured in his latest Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Sick Abed," at the Strand, Lynn, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with Bebe Daniels of "Why Change Your Wife?" fame as his nurse. The production abounds in comedy and amusing climaxes. Olive Thomas will scintillate in "The Flapper," a boarding school romance; Burton Holmes will present new travel scenes and there will be a comedy and Strand Topical Review.

"The Courage of Marge O'Doone," James Oliver Curwood's northwest outdoor masterpiece of winter's snows and places far from civilization, will be screened by Pauline Starke and Niles Welch against magnificent backgrounds typical of mid-winter life in the Canadian backwoods. This production is in eight reels. Juanita Hansen and her intrepid followers will at last find "The Lost City;" Al St. John will be starred in his own new comedy, "Cleaning Up," and a new Topical Review will be shown.

An indifferent agreement is better than carrying a case at law.

"MARY" STILL DRAWS BIG CROWDS TO TREMONT

Not within ready memory of old theatregoers has Boston enjoyed such a sensational theatrical hit as "Mary," the musical comedy production presented by the George M. Cohan Comedians at the Tremont theatre. For seven weeks now it has been packing the delightfully cool auditorium of the Tremont at every performance, and that at a period of the year when people are supposed to have had their fill of theatrical entertainments and are seeking the outdoor kind. No more emphatic endorsement of the attraction's quality could be accorded it.

THE NAVY FESTIVAL, held at the Haven estate, Beverly Farms, Saturday, July 3, for the benefit of the Charlestown Navy Y. M. C. A., promises to be the big and glorious event fitting to usher in the season of 1920. Under a huge white top North Shore society will "cabaret" and "jazz" the night before the Fourth. Reservations for over 500 have been made for the supper-dance, beginning at nine and running till midnight.

The cabaret program will be specially attractive, as it will be made up in part by "stars" from the recent Vincent club show. Miss Frances and Miss Louisa Hoar and Miss Mary Sigourney will give their dance specialties; Mrs. Bayard Warren will sing popular selections, and piano selections will be played by Alexander Steinert, Jr. An orchestra, with a special team of 10 jazz musicians, will furnish music for dancing between the different cabaret acts. Bayard Warren, chairman of the committee, states that the reservations for the dance and cabaret are limited. Tickets may be obtained from him at 53 State st., Boston, and from the following members of the committee: Miss Elizabeth Caswell, Neil W. Rice, Frederick Burnham, Jr., W. A. Parker, F. I. Amory and William de Ford Beal. The festival will be an all-day affair. The horse show will be in the morning and afternoon. There will be drill exercises by marines and jackies, music by a naval band and thé dansant in the afternoon, followed by the supper-dance and cabaret. A dozen attractive booths for refreshment, sporting goods, millinery and antiques will be another feature.

The Upland Farms, Inc.,
Ipswich, Mass.

Gentlemen:

We wish to report the results of our bacteriological examination of five samples of milk received from you in original one-quart bottles on June 16th. These samples were well iced and in good condition when received. The results are given below:

Sample	Bacteria per c.c.	Microscopical exam.
Barn No. 1	4,000	OK
Barn No. 2	1,100	OK
Barn No. 3	1,150	OK
Barn No. 4 Baby	350	OK
Barn No. 5	1,350	OK

These counts show very low bacterial content which indicates very careful handling under sanitary conditions.

Very truly yours,
THE BOSTON BIO-CHEMICAL LABORATORY,
Burtnon G. Philbrick.

We wish to call special attention to the low bacterial rate in our BABY MILK, as Certified Milk admits of 10,000 bacteria, and the Upland Farms Baby Milk is as low as 350.—UPLAND FARMS, INC., Ipswich, Mass.

THE wedding of Miss Harriet Fessenden, of Chestnut Hill and Coolidge Point, Manchester, and Frederick Wadsworth Busk, of New York, Harvard '16, took place last Saturday noon in the Unitarian church, Chestnut Hill, the Rev. Addison Moore officiating. Miss Fessenden, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden (Caroline H. Lee), is the first vice-president of the Vincent club, and one of the popular members of the younger set. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her wedding gown of white satin and point lace. The tulle veil, arranged in fan effect, was held in place by a coronet of orange buds, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and swainsonia. Miss Louisa Fessenden, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore lavender satin draped with flounces of point lace, the bodice of lavender satin and point lace, a large hat of lavender chiffon and carried a bouquet of lavender sweet peas. The other attendants were Miss Rose Fessenden, sister of the bride; Miss Isabella Lee Mumford, a cousin; Miss Edith McHenry, Miss Vera Morgan, Mrs. Austin B. Mason (Margaret Bliss) and Mrs. Richard Harte (Mabel Webster). The bride was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Mrs. Harte in the same church three years ago. They all wore rose pink satin and point lace, large hats of pink chiffon and carried bouquets of pink roses. Joseph Busk was his brother's best man and the ushers were Edward Whitney, William Mitchell Van Winkle, D. Percy Morgan, Jr., Frederick Stevens Allen, Lucius Manlius Sargent, Robert F. Herrick, Jr., Alexander Winsor, Donald C. Watson, William R. Bullard, Edward Cunningham, Cornelius C. Felton, all classmates of the bridegroom; also C. Sewall Clarke, of Philadelphia, and Leon Chichester, of Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Busk will pass the summer in Rye, N. Y.

NORTH SHORE SOCIETY was well represented at the wedding in Boston last week of Miss Lydia Lyman Storer and Henry Snow Hall, Jr. The matron of honor was Mrs. Thomas D. Cabot (Virginia Wellington), a recent bride, who is the daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Lowell Cabot, of Beverly Farms. The bride is a granddaughter of the late Robert Treat Paine, one of the early summer "settlers" on the Shore.

Stanley Cunningham, of Milton, and Smith's Point, Manchester, has announced the engagement of his sister, Miss Alice Cunningham, and George Russell Harding, of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham (Esther Burnett) and family have spent their summers near the home of the latter's brother, Dr. Francis L. Burnett, on the Point. Miss Cunningham is a member of the Vincent club and the 1910-'11 Sewing Circle. Miss Cunningham served two years in France in war work and is now working under the auspices of the American Red Cross.

The wedding of Miss Geraldine Lawrence, of Boston and Groton, and Dr. Edward Harding, of Boston, which will take place at Groton, July 17, will be of interest on the North Shore. The two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Fay, of Nahant, will serve as flower girls. Dr. Harding is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emor H. Harding and a brother to George R. Harding, whose engagement to Miss Alice Cunningham has just been announced.

North Shore folk were interested in the wedding last week of Miss Priscilla Gale, of Weston, and Samuel Abbot Smith, of Arlington. The bride is the daughter of the Lyman Whitman Gales and had many girl friends on the Shore.

The Misses Amy and Clara Curtis, of "Crow Island," Manchester Cove, have just returned from their long stay abroad in Pau, France, where they were engaged in war work and reconstruction work.

LOVERS of flowers found an orchid show at Horticultural Hall, Boston, last Saturday, when the annual peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural society was opened. The season has been unfavorable for peonies, yet the main exhibition hall was well filled with cut blooms of all shades and varieties. The orchids, however, were the feature of the exhibition, and the special displays, in addition to the monthly "century of orchids" showing one hundred exotic plants from the Orchidvale greenhouses of Albert C. Burrage at Beverly Farms were what the visitors went to see. In making the Orchidvale exhibit of one hundred plants, additional space was taken, so that the group formed is larger and the individual plants are seen to better advantage. This group contained an unusual number of new and rare hybrids of Odontoglossums, Odontiodas and Cattleyas, many exhibited for the first time in America. The plants were largely those with long drooping racemes or sprays of flowers, which added greatly to the attractiveness of the exhibit. The color combinations were beautiful, especially attractive being the blue Vanda coerulea from the Shan states in Burma. The orchids were banked against the wall, the Oncidiums and Odontoglossums, with the long sprays of flowers, towering above the shorter plants. Another special group of orchids, also from the Burrage greenhouses, consisted of fifty plants of Cattleya gigas, from Medellin in Colombia.

IT is pleasant to hear that Mrs. Hall McAllister will again arrange the North Shore musicales which she has conducted so successfully for several seasons. There will be three musicales, as usual, and Mrs. Amory Eliot, Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge and Mrs. Bayard Warren have kindly given their houses for the series. The dates are July 16 and 30 and August 13. The announcements, giving the list of artists, will go out this week.

Bordie Harriman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, of New York, is on for a visit with his cousin, Frederick Ellsworth, of "Wayside," Manchester Cove.

Miss Margaret L. Corlies, of Magnolia, will open her home for a large bridge party the first week in August. The affair will be given as a benefit for a fund that is to be raised for the Henry Jewett players, of the Copley theatre, Boston. A street is planned to cut through their theatre. The North Shore is asked to assist in raising a fund for the purchase of property upon which they can build. Several dances for the cause will be given later in August and a dog show will be the final entertainment. Committees are now being formed. They hope for the coöperation of everybody on the Shore.

Miss Nancy Carnegie, of Manchester Cove, will be the maid of honor at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Lucy Carnegie Ricketson, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Robert Weeks Ferguson, of New Bedford. The event takes place in Grace church, New Bedford, Tuesday afternoon, June 29. Miss Mabel Bremer, of Smith's Point, Manchester, will be one of the bridesmaids.

Says a despatch from Washington concerning Col. E. M. House, who gave up his plans for returning to the North Shore several weeks ago rather suddenly: Speculation as to the nature of the mission which has taken Col. Edward M. House back to Europe at this time has been ended here by the announcement of the Public Ledger of Philadelphia that Col. House, who was a member of the American peace mission at Paris, has joined its staff and will contribute to its foreign service. The announcement says:

"The Public Ledger takes this opportunity to announce to its readers the addition to its staff of Col. Edward M. House, who sailed for Europe June 12. A keen observer, he will, while abroad, keep this newspaper in touch with the current of events. Few Americans have a wider acquaintance with the statesmen of Europe than Mr. House, and none more fully than he enjoys their confidence and respect. This is true not alone of the older and more powerful nations, but of the newer and weaker as well."

OCEANSIDE HOTEL
MAGNOLIA

OCEANSIDE HOTEL, at Magnolia, the rendezvous par excellence of the North Shore, is open and guests are arriving on nearly every train, or by motor. July and August will be busy months, as the advance booking for the season is very heavy. The big hotel, with its score of cottages, and big Annex, never looked better. Its well-appointed lobby and tastefully furnished lounging rooms attest the ease and comfort one is afforded here. A cheery atmosphere fairly permeates these spacious rooms and one finds in the bright chatterings there, an enticing reflection of this ever-present cheerfulness and gaiety.

Were one to attempt a wordy description of the natural beauty which surrounds this watering-place de luxe, he would find that words are totally insufficient and inadequate. One must actually see with his own eyes these masterpieces of nature's handiwork. No pen is so trenchantly gifted that it is equal to the task of graphically depicting the scenes.

A commodious piazza, on the "sea-board" of Oceanside, affords a view of incomparable beauty. Kindly winds are ever wafting breezes "with the tang of the salt sea air" to dissipate the humidity, even at times of the most excessive heat. Fortunate, indeed, is one who is at Oceanside for "summer days and summer ways."

The renovations at the Annex are rapidly nearing completion and the place will be ready for occupancy in approximately ten days. The center entrance is being entirely remodelled and newly roofd. When completed, the Annex will accommodate several hundred guests.

Miss Alice Wilson, of Farragut sq., Washington, D. C., is at the Oceanside for the entire season.

MRS. STILLMAN B. ALLEN, of Boston, is expected at the Oceanside on July 1st. This will be Mrs. Allen's 23d consecutive season at Magnolia. She will be accompanied by her son, Willis Boyd Allen, who is a noted writer of children's stories.

Professor and Mrs. Charles Donner Hazen, New York, who will again spend the summer at the Oceanside, have been somewhat delayed, but are expected to arrive June 30 to remain the entire season. Mr. Hazen is a writer and historian of unusual talents.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Miller, of Buffalo, who are usual visitors at Oceanside, will be missed this season, as they have recently sailed for Europe, which is the first step of an extended tour.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Carter, of Brookline, were among the first to arrive at the Oceanside this season, as usual. The expect to be visited, early in August, by their daughter, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, of Pittsburg, and her little son, "Billie."

Mr. and Mrs. F. Blackwood Fay, their two daughters, the Misses Fay, and Mrs. E. F. VanDeventer, all of Boston, will summer at the Oceanside, occupying "Highland Cottage."

Mrs. A. E. Schmidt-Barker, of New York, is spending her first season at the Oceanside.

Ronchi's orchestra will be at the Oceanside again this season, but under new management, in the personage of Armando Pellegrini. These musicians, eight in number, will play classical and popular selections daily from two to 3, and evenings from eight to ten, excepting Sundays. On Sunday evenings a concert will be given from eight-thirty to nine-thirty. Special numbers, arranged by Mr. Pellegrini, include selections for quartets and trios. The orchestra has just returned from a highly successful season at Hotel Ponce De Leon, St. Augustine, Fla.

On Lexington Avenue

OVINGTON'S, in addition to a stock of china of charm and good value, are displaying hundreds of suggestions which go to make summer homes attractive.

Whether you wish a flower bowl for the veranda, a lamp for the living room or a complete set of Lenox china for the dining room, OVINGTON'S have it and the prices are the same moderate prices of our New York store.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Culbert, of New York, are welcomed back to Magnolia by their many North Shore friends. They have an apartment in "Perkins Cottage," and will remain here the entire season.

Mrs. J. M. Bonnell, of Youngstown, Ohio, is expected at the Oceanside the earlier days of August and will remain the balance of the season. Miss Caroline Bonnell, her daughter, has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Myron C. Wick, of Manchester.

Miss Helen Coates, of Philadelphia, who has been spending her summer seasons at the Oceanside for many years, arrived this week. She plans to be here until the early fall.

Mrs. Albert W. Hobart, of Boston, has returned to the Oceanside for the summer.

Mrs. W. P. Stams, of Staunton, Va., who is also an old-time visitor to Magnolia, is here for the summer months.

The Rev. Canon and Mrs. George Wm. Douglas, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., were the first to arrive for the convention of the Garden club of America which opens June 28. Rev. and Mrs. Douglas will remain until July 1.

The tennis courts at the Oceanside, newly rolled, are in excellent condition. They will, as in former seasons, afford the guests the opportunity of enjoying and witnessing many spirited matches.

The exquisite lawn, fronting the Oceanside, has taken on added elegance in the coloring of the bright flowerings of garden-beds, which, neatly and tastefully arranged, are festooning its velvety surface.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Halmi, of New York, have arrived at Oceanside and will be here for the entire season. Mr. Halmi, who is a portrait painter of renown, has leased the Rhen studio at Magnolia for the length of his visit.

Mrs. A. F. McArthur, of New York, has the Winslow cottage, one of the Oceanside group, and expects that Mr. McArthur will join her over the Fourth of July. Mrs. McArthur gave a dinner party at the Oceanside on Thursday evening.

MARIONETTE PLAYERS on the North Shore.—Miss Lilian Owen's Marionette Company, of the Neighborhood Playhouse, of New York, which has just finished playing in and around Boston for the Mt. Holyoke College Endowment fund, has established a workshop in Gloucester for the summer. It is called "The Gloucester Puppet Shop" and in it the company will produce and rehearse new Puppet Plays for the coming season. The Marionettes will be giving performances at the leading hotels and clubs along the North Shore during the summer. Miss Owen was formerly associated with the Chicago Little Theatre and the partner of Tony Sarg. Other members of her company are: Knowles Entrikin, playwright and late leading man of the Ibsen Plays Company; Miss Violet Turner, the clever young English actress, who was such a success in the "Bran Pie Revue" in London last season; Miss Gertrude Roth, a pianist and singer of note in New York musical circles; Theodore Wilde, for many years associated with "Everywoman" company, and many others. North Shore folk are surely fortunate to be able to enjoy the artistic Marionette plays that this clever group will offer.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

East Gloucester, Bass Rocks, Rockport and Annisquam Ready for Busy Season

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

CAPE ANN.—The present week finds all the hotels on Cape Ann open for the season, with guests arriving steadily. A great many cottagers also came to the seashore this week. True to the notices posted in the trolley cars of the Massachusetts Eastern Street Railway Company, the cars were discontinued from service on Sunday last. Immediately lines of automobile buses were established and new means of transportation has taken away the worry of the citizens and summer residents. The schedules will be well regulated, with numerous machines to carry amply the crowds of tourists and passengers. While there is current rumor afloat that a ferry will again be established for the harbor route, no definite plans have been made. No doubt it would be well patronized should this come about. It has been reported that many people expecting to come to sections have cancelled their leases because of lack of car service, particularly to the Briar Neck and Long Beach sections. There is no particular cause for worry in this regard, as the jitney service will supply transportation at these points as well as others.

BASS ROCKS.—The Bass Rocks golf clubhouse has opened its doors for the season and arrangements have been made for some interesting tournaments and matches for the golf enthusiasts. The links are in very good condition and the continued wet weather has been excellent for the greens.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Sargent, of Cincinnati, Ohio, have arrived at their cottage on Little Good Harbor rd., Bass Rocks. The house is of colonial architecture, with pillars and the grounds and gardens surrounding it are attractive. The family has been coming to Bass Rocks for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip H. Duprey and family, of Worcester, arrived this week at their commodious and sightly summer home on Atlantic rd., Bass Rocks, for the season.

Mrs. Henry C. Carter and daughter, Miss Eunice Carter, and the former's mother, Mrs. Timms, of New York, have arrived at Bass Rocks, and they are occupying the Carter cottage, corner Atlantic and Beach rds.

The Thorwald and Moorland hotels are both open for the season, in the Bass Rocks colony. The Thorwald opened on Wednesday and over sixty guests arrived shortly afterward.

Contrary to report that the Siamese legation would again be at Bass Rocks for this season, the legation will not be here. A new minister has taken charge d'affaires and although it is not known here whether the legation will seek summer quarters, it is possible that Secretary E. H. Loftus and family, of the legation, may come to Bass Rocks later in the season.

Mrs. Marion (Roberts) MacCord, of Atlanta, Ga., has arrived at Souther cottage "G," at Bass Rocks, for the season.

The Harris family, of Boston, has arrived at the large house of the C. Granville Way estate, Bass Rocks, which

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

Mr. Harris, a member of the Harris, Wheaton Company, of Boston, has leased for the season.

The Rosses, of Utica, N. Y., have taken occupancy of the Green cottage, Beach rd., Bass Rocks, for the season.

Edward A. Hart and daughter, Miss Mary T. Hart, of Cincinnati, Ohio, have arrived at the Hart cottage, corner Atlantic and Beach rds., Bass Rocks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Farnsworth, of Memphis, Tenn., are occupying "Seaways," their summer home at Bass Rocks, situated on Nautilus rd., near the bathing beach.

Mrs. E. Bradley Currier and young daughter, Miss Jane Currier, of New York, have arrived at the attractive Currier estate on Page rd., Bass Rocks, for the season.

EASTERN POINT.—All the hotels are now open in the Eastern Point section and guests are coming along for an extended stay in this popular section of the North Shore. The Hawthorne Inn opened its hospitable doors for the season this week. The season at this big resort will be a busy one and much social life is expected throughout the summer. The tea room will be open for afternoon tea and bridge parties. The regular evening dances and the Sunday evening musicales in the casino will be inaugurated and numerous forms of entertainment will be on the social calendar from week to week. A large outdoor event on the spacious hotel grounds, usually held for a benefit for Gloucester, will not be omitted.

The Mailman House, managed for so many years by the late Mrs. Susan Mailman, at Eastern Point, near the Gate Lodge, and for the past few years managed by Mrs. Mailman's daughter, Mrs. Samuel Montgomery, and her husband, has changed ownership. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Colby purchased the hotel and good will, during the early spring and they will manage it this season.

Mrs. A. W. Pollard, of Boston, has opened her attractive summer home at Eastern Point, near "The Ramparts," and she is located there for the season, with her daughter, Miss Priscilla Pollard.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Allen, of Boston, are again located at the cottage, 8 Clarendon st., Rocky Neck, for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Allen entertain friends at various times during the season and their son, George M. Allen, often spends the week-end with them.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Procter and family, of Brookline, are located at the Procter estate at Eastern Point, near the lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Royce and family, of Brookline, have arrived at High Cliffe Lodge, Grape Vine Cove, for the season.

Mrs. B. T. Whipple, of Kansas City, Mo., has arrived at her pleasant colonial estate, "Tenth Tee" cottage, High Popples rd., near the Bass Rocks golf links.

The Playhouse-on-the-Moors, East Gloucester, will present two groups of plays this season. A season of unusual value to those interested in dramatic art has been planned by Miss Florence Cunningham, the director, and she has secured the coöperation of the Boston School of Public Speaking, which has an excellent department of acting. The school will give an opening reception at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, next Monday afternoon, June 28, at 4 o'clock, to which the public is invited. The following day, classes will begin at the studios. There will be a regular course in acting, public speaking, voice training, etc., for adults and special courses may be arranged for adults or children. Daleroze eurythenics will be a special feature of the school, a class meeting every morning at 9 o'clock, under the direction of a teacher from the New York school (authorized by Monsieur Jacques Daleroze, the founder of the "Institut Jacques Daleroze," Geneva). An excellent teacher has been secured to give private or class lessons in French. The two groups of plays will be given at the Playhouse-on-the-Moors the third weeks of July and August and the actors will not be limited to members of the school, but the usual policy of choosing the best possible material will be adhered to. The Community Dramatic school will also produce plays from time to time at the studios.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Richardson, of Fairmount st., Brookline, the former a Boston architect, are occupying their summer home on River rd., Annisquam, for the season. They have three charming daughters, Phyllis and Lane L., 16 years old, and Jeanne L., aged 5 years.

ANNISQUAM.—Cape Ann seems to have its distinctive sections. For instance, East Gloucester, like a great arm into the water, with its quaint wharves and calm harbor on one side and the rugged ocean on the other, is different from Annisquam, the little village with its peaceful river winding in and out of the marshes and brooks singing along pine dells and high, rocky woodlands. And the town of Rockport, with its old houses and broad fields and extensive view of sea, differs much in its environment. One of the loveliest and most picturesque sections on the coast is Annisquam, which for a great many years has been chosen as a summer resort by prominent people coming from various cities of America. It is really the land midway of the Cape. In going one direction down the river, we connect with Gloucester harbor and in going the other direction, northeast, we enter Ipswich Bay and the waters that break upon the shores of Bay View, Pigeon Cove and a part of Rockport. The subjects for artists in Annisquam are varied. There are old houses, with their old-fashioned gardens, marshes, and hills that overlook stream and sand dune. The sunsets at Annisquam are particularly beautiful. While the Annisquam river is lined with cottages of all kinds, there are a great many beautiful estates owned by prominent people. There are three hotels and several smaller guest houses in the colony and the atmosphere of the place, as a whole, is attractive and inviting—an ideal spot in which to live and to spend a summer vacation.

Ralph T. Hall and family, of Winchester, arrived recently at "Overlook" cottage, Annisquam, where they will pass the season.

George L. Huntress and family, of Brimmer st., Boston, are occupying the Pulcifer homestead on Leonard st., Annisquam, which they have leased for this season.

Mrs. Lelia Parker is occupying her cottage on Leonard st., Annisquam.

Miss Anna Vaughn Hyatt, the noted sculptor, of New York, has arrived at Annisquam for the season, where members of her family are located, as has been their custom for so many years.

ROCKPORT.—The season of 1920 has now begun in earnest on the Rockport shore. The hotels have opened for the season and a busy summer is anticipated. Cottages have found ready rental and the remaining ones are being quickly taken. The Straitsmouth Inn has been open for some time and Turk's Head Inn is to be open this week-end, when many guests will arrive at Land's End.

George W. Perkins, the New York millionaire and financier, who passed away last week at a sanitorium in Stamford, Conn., was well-known in Rockport, where he had business interests, in the big cold storage plant, particularly. In company with his wife, Mr. Perkins stopped for a time for recreation in the colony. He had large interests in the Interstate Fish Corporation and the Sandy Bay Pier Company in Rockport and naturally there will be some anxiety as to what will be the outcome of the business here.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Liffler, Jr., of Boston, have arrived at the charming Liffler cottage at Little Cape Hedge, Land's End, Rockport, for the season. Mr. Liffler is a member of the insurance firm of Charles Liffler & Son, 70 Kilby st., Boston. Miss Elizabeth B. Liffler, the daughter, is with her parents at Land's End.

Chas. H. Dillaway and family, of Melrose, have taken occupancy of their summer home on Marmion Way, Rockport, as has been their custom for a great many years. Mr. Dillaway is treasurer of the Lincoln & Dillaway Cordage Company, of Commercial st., Boston. He has been known as the champion tautaug fisherman of the colony for many years. He knows just how and where to catch them, much to the envy of his friends who enjoy the sport from the rocks in the vicinity.

Miss Kate Cotherin, the Boston artist, has arrived at Rockport for the summer.

Bearskin Neck, situated near the entrance of Rockport harbor, is a rendezvous for prominent artists and the colony there is becoming enlarged each week.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harvey, summer residents of Land's End, Rockport, have presented the First Baptist church of the town with a handsome new Kimball and Frazee organ. It is a memorial gift, in memory of Mrs. Hannah M. Smith, mother of Mrs. Harvey. The dedication of the new organ took place at the church last Sunday afternoon before a large congregation. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey was present and Mrs. Harvey entertained at her summer home on Marmion Way afterward. The church appreciates deeply the gift of the organ, as well as music-lovers of the town, who have the musical interests at heart. Joseph K. Dustin, of Gloucester, an organist of ability, who is a pupil of Truette, of Boston, gave the musical program at the dedication.

PIGEON COVE.—The Edward hotel, situated so charmingly on the shore at Pigeon Cove, overlooking the bay, will open for the season this Saturday, June 26, under the management of E. T. Maguire, of Pittsburg, Pa., as last season. The Edward has a fine booking of guests and a successful season is anticipated. As usual, attention will be given to dinner and tea parties on the spacious and attractive verandas, dining room and roof garden, where society of the North Shore visits daily.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland H. Williams, of New York, have arrived for the season at Rockridge cottage, Pigeon Cove.

The Ocean View has opened at Pigeon Cove for the season.

The Cromwell cottage at Pigeon Cove is being occupied by the William B. Perry's, of New Bedford.

Mrs. E. R. Mosely, of Westfield, expects to be in Pigeon Cove, July 1, and she will open her attractive little gift shop, "The Lantern Shop," on Green ave., near The Edward, as usual, the first of the month.

IS not English the only great language in which the pronoun of the first person singular is capitalized? How monumentally imposing is that upper-case "I!" If a writer is egoistic the capitals stretch across his page like a colonnade. When he writes "we" he descends to the lower case. But this orthographic solipsism, mark you, is shared by Americans, Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders,—all who use the English tongue. It is therefore not to be set down to insularity, but to individualism,—a stark, ineradicable, valuable quality of these various folk whose thoughts and feelings have been nourished by the same language.

It comes to its philosophic climax in the Yankee Emerson who held the infinity and suffciency of the private man, and declared, "I wish to say what I think and feel today, with the proviso that perhaps tomorrow I shall contradict it all." No Briton, not even Carlyle, could beat that.

It is all very well to have confidence in yourself, but when it passes into contempt for the rest of mankind it becomes a different matter. Plato said, "Self-will is a companion of solitude."—HENRY VAN DYKE in Scribner's Magazine.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE at Swampscott is now open for business, and this week the house has been well filled with convention crowds, who are enjoying the first real touches of summer on the Shore. The great house is unusually attractive this season, with flowers inside and out and everything newly painted and shining.

The Massachusetts State Pharmacy association members are spending the latter part of the week at the hotel, holding their business meetings in the ballroom, and enjoying the delights of the North Shore.

The Harvard class of 1900 had a reunion at the New Ocean House this week, about 200 members being put up. A lively time was enjoyed with swimming on the hotel private beach, golf, tennis and baseball at the Tedesco Country club and motor rides along the Shore.

The Luncheon club, of Boston, of 100 members, held its annual dinner at the New Ocean House last week.

The first formal ball of the New Ocean House season will be held July 5 and invitations will be extended to the North Shore summer colony to attend.

In July and August special children's parties will be arranged.

With an unusual number of children scheduled to spend the summer at the New Ocean House, a special dietitian, Miss J. E. Bruen, of Boston, has been engaged to attend to the diet for the young people.

One of the features of the July season at this hotel will be a costume ball and in August a "black and white" ball will be held.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Kingsbury, of New York, have arrived for the season. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Benedict and family, of New York, have also returned for the season, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Fahey, of Brookline, are established here for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Ludington and family, of St. Louis, are spending July at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mitton, of Brookline, are registered for the summer, as are also Mr. and Mrs. John M. Pringle, of Port Marie, Jamaica.

Mrs. E. W. Congdon and Mrs. W. H. Purdy, of Glen Ridge, N. J., are at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Randall, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Harris and son, Newton J. Harris, of Detroit, Mich., are spending June and July at the New Ocean House.

TEDESCO COUNTRY CLUB at Swampscott promises to be a busy place this summer, and already the golf course and the tennis courts are well filled with players, while luncheons, bridge parties and dances are featured in the house.

June 30 a dinner dance will be held in the clubhouse and there is a large booking for reservations.

Trap shooting is to be a popular sport for the season. Eugene W. Ong, of Swampscott, is one of the most interested and a member of the committee for promoting this sport.

J. H. Hyde, of the Tedesco Country club, has established a low record of 78 for the new 18-hole course, and it will probably not be beaten for some time. The course is in fine condition now for the large number of players who continually participate in this sport.

Mrs. W. E. Johnson and Mrs. W. I. Goddard, of Lynn, entertained a group of 30 friends at bridge and luncheon at the Tedesco recently.

The Budget club, of Lynn, enjoyed a dinner at the Tedesco this week, this being an annual event.

Mrs. O. D. Clark and Mrs. C. O. Baird, of the Hotel Bellevue, Beach Bluff, entertained a group of twelve ladies at bridge and luncheon at the Tedesco club, Tuesday noon.

Mrs. W. J. Lloyd, of Swampscott, was hostess at a luncheon for twelve ladies at the Tedesco Monday last.

Mrs. J. M. Farquhar, of Swampscott, entertained a group of eight ladies at luncheon at the Tedesco, Monday. Bridge was enjoyed during the afternoon.

June 29 the members of the Real Estate Exchange, of Boston, will hold a dinner at the Tedesco Country club, at which 100 covers will be laid. Golf, tennis and baseball will be featured in the afternoon.

C. B. Humphries, vice-president of the Old Colony Trust Co., and Maj. Frank M. Sawtell, of Boston, president of the Boston Art club, are spending the summer at the Tedesco club.

F. D. Beard, of New York, who has a handsome yacht at Marblehead harbor, is spending the summer at the Tedesco club.

———

Mrs. F. A. Keyser, of Farragut rd., Swampscott, will entertain this summer her mother, Mrs. H. B. Williams, of England, who arrived this week on the Imperator.

PHILLIPS BEACH Neighborhood association will be the scene of a pleasant party once a month during the summonths when dances will be arranged for the membership.

Tomorrow evening the June dance will be held and the Jefferson-Johnson colored orchestra will supply the music. A large crowd is booked for the affair.

This year Norman S. Dillingham, of Boston, is president; Willard F. Spalding, of Boston, vice-president, and Richard Robins, of Beach Bluff, treasurer and secretary.

During the summer months this club will be closed Sundays at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Brown, of Atlantic avenue, Phillips Beach, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mary Andrews Brown, to Forester Fisher Ainsworth, son of Dr. George C. Ainsworth, of Kingston. Mr. Ainsworth is a graduate of Yale and was a well known foot-ball star.

Walter B. Phinney, of Lynn, has purchased the William L. Terhune house at Phillips Beach. This is one of the show places of the Shore and the handsome gardens which were especially planned and planted by Mr. Terhune are now in full flower, the larkspur and the poppies providing masses of color .

Edwin Gerould, who spent the winter in England and France, is returning to this country and will be at his Swampscott home the last of June.

CLIFTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Theodore P. Gooding, of Boston, have again returned to the Clifton shore for the summer months.

Ferdinand Strauss and family have opened their attractive home on Atlantic ave., Clifton. The gardens are in full flower now and the delicate blues and soft greens of the garden are an excellent background for the two handsome ornamental vases which are placed in the center of the old-fashioned garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Little of Ocean street, Lynn, gave a dinner to New York friends at the Sunbeam Tea room, Swampscott, Tuesday evening.

LYNN.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Ingalls are now occupying their new home, after being thoroughly remodelled, at No. 51 Atlantic st., Lynn, next to corner of Ocean st. Mr. Ingalls is a native of that section of Lynn, but removed from West Lynn, where he had been a resident for 26 years.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lennox Hannan, of Lynn boulevard, have returned from a visit to New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter E. Tuttle, of Ocean st., Lynn, have purchased a new home at Phillips Beach.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL at Marblehead Neck has as guests this week: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hickmott, Hartford, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Atwill, Fanesville, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stetson, Brookline; Robert L. Ryder, Lexington, and Mrs. George L. Matheson, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Nathan Gordon and family, of Boston, have arrived at "Sky High" for the summer. Mr. Gordon owns a chain of theatres in Boston.

Dr. Franklin White, of Boston, has arrived at the Marblehead Neck shore for the summer.

F. C. Fletcher's yacht, the "Ariadne," has arrived in Marblehead Neck waters, having come from the other side of the Cape. This boat will go down to Long Island for the international races.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Kemp, of Marblehead, have sailed the past week for a summer in England and Scotland.

The Rockmere hotel, Marblehead, is open for the season and has a large booking of guests.

Earle A. Cross, of Memphis, Tenn., is spending the summer with relatives in Devereux. He is connected with the Illinois Central Railroad.

Robert Homans and family, of Boston, are at Fort Sewell, Marblehead, for the summer months, the cottage which they have leased commanding a fine view of the harbor.

Oscar L. Ives and family, of Essex st., Salem, are at Marblehead for the summer, having gone over to Harbor View this week.

The children's hospital at Lowell Island has been opened for the season and there are many little children enjoying the life in the open. Later in the season a sale for the benefit of the hospital will be held at the Rockmere hotel, Marblehead.

Demarest Lloyd, who is summering at Marblehead Neck, is attending the Democratic convention in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Bowditch and son, of Brookline, are at Marblehead for the summer months.

The racing season of the Eastern Yacht club will start tomorrow both at Marblehead and south of Cape Cod. The New London-Marblehead ocean race, a pre-war annual event, will be started in the morning and is scheduled to bring the fleet to Massachusetts Bay after the Harvard-Yale races on the Thames. The open regattas for the smaller classes of boats will be sailed off Marblehead in the afternoon.

Hendrick A. Hallett, of Boston, who has summered the last 35 years at Marblehead, has presented four pictures to the Marblehead Historical society, which are of unusual interest as they are bits of Marblehead shore which are most pleasing. The etching of the harbor is particularly interesting, for it was done in the days when the ferry went to the Neck from old Tucker wharf and deposited the passengers on the beach by dory.

James H. Gilman, Jr., is with his parents at Marblehead Neck this summer, after a winter in Miami, Fla.

I WONDER how many of you girls have read "America's Daughter," by Rena I. Talsey.

The chapter called "The Candle-light Service" is of particular interest in studying about the Pilgrims at Plymouth.

The girls and their teacher and others are making a tour of historical places in New England. While in Plymouth they hold a candle-light service one night in memory of the women of the Mayflower, and of those who were buried on Cole's Hill. As each girl holds up a candle she recites briefly the virtues of the one whom she is commemorating.

For instance: "I burn this candle in memory of Mary Brewster, the wife of the ruling elder of Plymouth. She was a devoted wife, and a loyal mother to her four boys and two girls. A gentle, womanly woman, who was called the mother of the flock, although she was but a little over forty years of age, but said to have been the oldest woman of the Mayflower company."

In like manner candles are burned in memory of Dorothy May, wife of Wm. Bradford; Rose Standish, the "English Rose," wife of Capt. Standish; Katherine Carver, wife of John Carver, first governor of Plymouth; Elizabeth Winslow, wife of Edward Winslow; Susannah Chilton and her daughter, Mary; Susannah White, wife of Wm. White, mother of the first white child born in New England, also, upon the death of her husband, she had the honor of being the first bride in the Pilgrim town when she married Edward Winslow.

Others mentioned are Alice Mullins, wife of William Mullins, her daughter, Priscilla, wife of John Alden; Helen, wife of John Billington; Elizabeth Hopkins, wife of Stephen Hopkins, and mother of the baby born while crossing in the Mayflower; and others, including the little girls who came over in the Pilgrim ship.

Mary Chilton, who, according to tradition, was the first woman to step on Forefathers' Rock, and later married John Winslow and lived and died in Boston; and "Priscilla, the Mayflower of Plymouth," wife of John Alden, are two characters we always like to hear about.

Not to be outdone by the candles burned to the "memory and appreciation of all those brave and heroic women founders of this nation, who sailed the wide deep to help their good men build an altar to the God they desired to serve and worship, according to the sincere devotion of their humble lives," a boy of the party burned a light in "memory of those brave men who forsook their homes, the comforts of life, and their native land, to lay the corner-stone of a nation, not ruled by king or bishop, but, through their simple faith in God, by the divine heritage of liberty."

THE JOINTED DOLL

I'm only a jointed doll,
With arms and legs that can move,
But I can walk and tumble and roll,
When I'm allowed to stroll and rove.

Three years I was kept by a man,
In his pocket to repose.
I stayed there till my color ran,
Then he took me out,—and what d'you s'pose?

He gave me to a little girl,
Whose hair was light and full of curl.
Gracious! she treated me badly, too,
She dragged me till I was black and blue.
I think I should have better treatment, don't you?
Though I'm only a jointed doll.

—Written by Miss Virginia Wainwright, of Boston, when 12 years old.

Pluck not the wayside flower;
It is the traveler's dower.
A thousand passersby
Its beauties may espy,
May win a touch of blessing
From Nature's mild caressing.

KIDDIES, little and big, have you given in your name to the North Shore swimming pool instructor at Magnolia? John Wallace, the popular Y. M. C. A. teacher from Boston is beginning his fourth season at the pool. Since the opening last Saturday many of the young folk and little tots have come to try out the water. Swimming lessons and water sports with medals are features that draw all you youngsters to the pool.

Among those already seen there are the Richardson sisters, Anne and Catharine, and their cousins, Barbara and Elizabeth Richardson; Eleanor Rowe, the Luther Smith girls and boy and their cousin; the Eugene Foster children, the John Chess Ellsworth children; Mrs. Arthur Jones and little folk; Mrs. John Stevens and Mrs. S. S. Stevens with their little ones.

By the way, we hear that Bunny Woods moved out to his home in Beverly Farms yesterday.

If you are new upon the North Shore just wait and you'll see what that signifies.

A GOOD PAL

By Helen Christine Hoerle

(The Breeze will print as often as practicable, this season, a fiction article. Manuscripts solicited for acceptance.—Ed.)

THEY had been introduced the summer before, had met each other casually a few times during the winter, and now for the past three weeks had been renewing the pleasant acquaintanceship begun the year before.

"I hardly realize I have only a week more," Elizabeth Reeves was saying to the man at her side as they ambled lazily back toward the big hotel. "These three weeks have simply flown."

Jack Taylor smiled indolently into the blue eyes gazing so frankly into his own, and hitched his golf bag to the other shoulder.

"I wish you weren't going," he murmured longingly, "it's been jolly nice to meet you again. Maybe this winter—in the city"—he hesitated, floundering hopelessly.

Miss Reeves laughed delightedly at his all too evident embarrassment. He never failed to amuse and entertain her, this long limbed, clean skinned young Adonis; the kind of fiction hero we read so much of, and so seldom, or never —thank Fortune—see in real life.

"I haven't much time for play during the winter," she confessed. "Saturday and Sunday are the—"

"May I call for you some Sunday morning early, then, and we'll spend the day on the road. Please say yes," he pleaded so earnestly, that for the second the woman's laughing face was grave.

"Yes, indeed," she assented heartily, "I'd like that awfully. After holding down a desk for six days in the week, it's a joy to get God's pure air into your lungs on the seventh. Make it soon, please."

Elizabeth didn't think it necessary to add that her days of pleasure were few and far between during the winter, and it was necessary to crowd all she could into her month's vacation.

At the hotel steps she paused and gazed around as if looking for someone.

"Oh, I say, let's have a little game of tennis, that is, if you're not too tired," he added, noting the weary droop of her mouth.

At that minute she looked older than the man, and he acknowledged thirty years.

"Can't, I'm sorry, for I need the practice. I promised to motor with Mr. Kimball at four, and it's a quarter-of now," consulting the watch on her wrist. Then added, as if defending her act, "I couldn't refuse him again, this is the fifth time he has asked me."

Then bestowing one of her smiliest smiles on his scowling young lordship, she ran up the steps only to reappear in a few minutes, bonneted and coated.

With a deep scowl on his handsome face, Taylor saw her enter the millionaire's car and spin away. What the deuce could she see in Kimball besides his money?

Along the smooth road, Mr. Kimball guided the big six-cylinder, his hands moving almost automatically, while his little eyes dwelt with an unknown fondness on the woman at his side.

Miss Elizabeth Reeves, assistant advertising manager of the O. T. Trimble Dry Goods Company, was good to look at though no one could possibly call her handsome. Her eyes were too vivid a blue, her large features too irregular for beauty, yet in some irristible way she attracted a'h' 1 iwklittlei' with those same blue eyes, and held one interested with her soft melodious voice.

The big car sped on. Miss Reeve's eyes sparkled and her cheeks glowed. She loved motoring just for the joy of it, and it really mattered little who was at the wheel. Her thoughts were a hundred miles away in the little office on the top floor of the big building in Herald square.

The man's voice brought her back with a start and she realized that the car had slowed down.

"Miss Elizabeth!" The broker's voice was suave, and disagreeably monotonous. She hated to be called that.

"Miss Reeves," he continued, "there is something I have wanted to say to you for a long time, but you are so constantly busy with those young chaps, I can't seem to get a minute of your time."

Elizabeth smiled mischievously, but said nothing.

"I am kept quite busy," she acknowledged demurely, thinking of the past three weeks, and how crammed full they had been of pleasure.

"Miss Reeves, all my life has been devoted to acquiring wealth. I have attained my desire; I am at last wealthy, a person of some importance in the financial world. All my life I've worked, worked hard for that same money. Now I need not work any more. I've always wanted to play, but couldn't; I didn't have the time. Now I have the time."

He paused and turned his attention for a minute to the car. Miss Reeves wondered if he had brought her out to tell her his life history; she wished she were playing tennis with young Taylor.

"I understand," he went on, "that you, too, have struggled for some few years till now you, too, in a measure, have attained the goal toward which you were working, through unceasing toil."

Elizabeth nodded, "I have, through unceasing toil."

"You, yourself, have told me that you never have had time to play either." He stopped impressively.

Miss Reeves fidgeted in her seat and asked herself what the man was driving at.

"I've heard the men at the hotel declare you to be a good pal."

Miss Elizabeth smiled disdainfully, withal sadly. That was all she was to any of them, "a good pal." Somehow her friendships with men never ripened into anything more.

"A good pal," David Kimball repeated, "Elizabeth, I need someone to play with me, someone who wants to play as badly as I do. As conventions have decreed that only as husband and wife can man and woman live and play together, I ask you to be my wife."

That was what he had been driving at. Elizabeth stared blankly at the speaker, as he finished, and then sank back, stunned. David Kimball had asked her to be his wife. His wife! All that that meant. No word of love. He needed a pal to play with and had chosen her. A shudder ran through her from head to foot, and she realized he was talking again.

"I cannot truthfully say I love you. I don't know what love really is. I have never had time to find out. I respect you and admire you more than any woman I know, and if that is love, I love you."

Elizabeth smiled cynically. The love she had dreamed—girlish dreams—would some day be hers, the proposal from the only man she had conjured up, the picture of the married life she had built up through all her twenty-eight years, had all fallen to ruins in the past five minutes.

Instinctively she knew that the millionaire was waiting for her answer. She would have to say something.

"This is all so sudden," then a hysterical fit of laughing overcame her at the ludicrous, time-worn statement."

The man watched her, a look of chagrin disfiguring his usually unemotional face.

"I'm leaving for town tonight," David Kimball ventured, not quite knowing how to act with this woman, "and—"

If he didn't stop talking in that unemotional, matter-of-fact way, Miss Reeves knew she would scream. What would she say? She wanted time to think.

"Will you let me out," she begged, clapping her gloved hand suddenly on his arm, "I—I want to think. If you'll come back for me in an hour, I'll give you my answer."

His keen gray eyes met hers searchingly for a second. In his was a question, but in hers no answer, only doubtful uncertainty.

Without a word, he stopped the great, purring machine. The woman jumped out, then watched the big green car till it was a mere speck in the distance, crawling slowly up the hill like a great green bug.

With a little moan, she sank down on a boulder and dragging her hood from her head pressed her fingers to her tingling temples.

David Kimball had asked her to be his wife. She kept repeating the assertion to herself to impress it on her perplexed brain. No, not his wife, that in name only, but his "pal." Someone merely to play with. No love, no sharing of joys or sorrows, he offered nothing but companionship. "A good pal; a good pal." The words rang in her head till she could have shrieked in loathing.

Then she tried to reason it all out. Being David Kimball's wife meant giving up daily toil. It meant ease, comfort, luxury even, but no love. Was anything worth that? Could she retain her self respect?

Before her troubled vision stretched years of unceasing grind, the struggle to keep where she was, even without climbing higher. Years that would leave her old, gray, before her time, worn out with the struggle. In the end she would be alone, unloved. Was it worth striving for?

Marriage with David Kimball meant travel, the opera, her own machine, clothes,—all the things she longed for and craved, but not love!

Wearily she started again and went over the same ground, always arriving at the same conclusion. David Kimball offered her everything but love. Did she have the strength to hold out for that? To men she was "a good pal," never had been anything else, and never would be, she feared. She couldn't make men love her and—.

She looked at the watch on her wrist. Only half an hour more! Would she, could she say "yes?" Her heart said "no," but her head said "yes." There was still half an hour. Which would win?

The minutes ticked rapidly past, one by one. The men she had known seemed to pass in silent questioning review before her aching eyes. Instinctively Elizabeth passed them all till but two seemed to remain, one, old, the other young. One offered wealth, home, companionship, the other, why she didn't suppose he thought of her as anything more than "a good pal."

What was the use? The man she loved need never known she cared for him. She—she would marry Kimball. She would live, laugh, but not love.

Her decision was made. She would give him all he asked, no more. She'd live up to her bargain, and be "a good pal!"

The tears forced themselves through Miss Reeves' closed lids, and trickled down her smooth cheeks. She was miserably unhappy.

From the distance came the whirr of a motor, drawing nearer and nearer every second. Furtively Miss Reeves brushed the tears from her eyes and tried vainly to smooth her ruffled hair. It would never do for her prospective husband to find her in tears.

As the car approached Elizabeth rubbed her eyes, and gazed in wonderment at the little brown car that had stopped in front of her.

"Jack, Mr. Taylor!" she faltered, "I thought, I thought it was Mr. Kimball."

The young man gazed in consternation at the tearful face of the resourceful Miss Reeves. Springing out of the car he sat down next to her and clasped her hand in his.

"What's the matter?" he asked, his face very near to hers.

A choking sob was his only answer, and unconsciously Miss Reeves' tired rumpled head went down on his shoulder.

"There, there," he soothed her.

Reaching in his back pocket, he produced a handkerchief, and dabbed her overflowing eyes, confiscating her damp one in the meantime.

Don't cry. Good heavens what did—did t—that man, s—say to you?" When he was excited Taylor always stuttered.

Miss Reeves laughed suddenly, then cried, great sobs rending her slim body. Mr. Taylor was puzzled. What on earth had caused such a change in the usually laughing, happy-go-lucky Miss Reeves, whom nothing ever seemed to bother.

He had always felt that she was sufficient unto herself, Elizabeth gave one the impression of being horribly efficient. But now—now, Taylor suddenly discovered, she was exactly like other women, and needed to be petted and comforted just as they did. In a flash Jack felt a very tender feeling for the weeping woman steal in the direction of his heart, and knew that he had cared more all along than he had acknowledged even to himself.

"Elizabeth," he pleaded, his fine face very serious, "please don't cry. Tell me what's wrong and I'll do everything in my power to right it. I can't bear to see you so unhappy."

Miss Reeves slowly raised her head from his shoulder and looked searchingly into the troubled brown eyes which were regarding her so tenderly. What she saw there caused her heart to thump madly. She opened her lips to tell him, then closed them again. It wouldn't be fair to Kimball to tell.

"I can't tell you, I can't," she wailed. "You wouldn't understand the—the temptation. I came very near to making a fool of myself."

The man had sense enough not to press her any further.

"I want, m—may I ask you something, sometime," he mumbled, "You're too upset now."

"What is it?" she insisted, eagerly, wiping her face with his handkerchief and trying to hide her blushes.

"Elizabeth, dear, I love you, l—love you. I w—w—want you—w—will you," he babbled helplessly, "w—will you marry me?"

Miss Reeves' heart stood still. Love had come to her at last, and from the man she loved. How very near she had been to losing that love. It seemed improbable that five minutes before she had decided to marry another man, to be another man's wife; no, merely "a good pal."

"Jack," she cooed, "Jack, dear, I love you—love you so much."

The man bent his handsome head and pressed kiss after kiss on her feverish hot lips, knowing full well that if he hadn't found her in tears, alone and unhappy, he wouldn't have known how very much he cared, and how much she meant to him. The weakness of woman always appeals to man more than her strength.

On the top of the hill a speck appeared, growing larger and larger every second, as the metamorphosis of the green bug into a big motor car was rapidly taking place.

As it quickly approached a little brown car disappeared in a cloud of dust up the long, white, level road, that led to happiness.

THE END.

WHEN MY SHIP COMES SAILING IN

By Alex. G. Tupper

I AM watching, yes, eagerly watching
O'er the sea, to the east, at dawn,
Where the bright'ning rays of hope appear
At the rising of the sun;
And the golden splendor gladdens the world—
When my ship comes sailing in!

I am waiting, yes, patiently waiting
O'er the tide and the restless sea,
Where the craft of Faith can know no fear
And a voyage just begun;
And the pure, white sails appear unfurled—
When my ship comes sailing in!

Her sides are battered with many a gale
And her hold is laden with treasures rare
And her masts can bear the heaviest sail
For there's captain of Faith, at the helm, staunch there.

Oh, mariners brave! There's a compass so true
When you steer from your heart, the voyage through;
For the haven of Hope holds a ransom to win,
When my ship comes sailing in!

THE IDEAL OF EDUCATION

THE following article, written by the noted educator, L. B. R. Briggs, which apeared in the Atlantic Monthly some years ago, is so applicable at the present time, when so many of our young men are leaving school, some for colleges, some for other walks of life, that it seems worthy of reprinting in these columns:

"He who loses his ideals, loses the very bloom of life. To see a young man's ideals rapidly slipping away while his face grows coarser and coarser, is one of the saddest sights in college, or out of it. What is his training good for if it has not taught him the folly, the misery and the wrong of dabbling in evil? If he must believe that no man is wise till he has come to know the resorts of gamblers and harlots and has indulged himself for experience's sake in a little gentlemanly vice, can he not put off the acquaintance four years more, by the end of which time he may have learned some wiser way of getting wisdom Besides, in the course of those four years (and the chance is better than even) he may meet some girl for whose sake he will be glad that his record has been clean. Cannot a school which closely watches its boys, while their characters are moulding, teach them to keep their heads level and their hearts true, save them from the wrongs that never can be righted, send them to college and through college, faulty it must be at least, unstained?

"When all students of all colleges and all boys of all schools believe, and have the right to believe, that their teachers are their friends; when the educated public recognizes the truth that school and college should help each other in lifting our youth to the high crown of character—the school never forgetting that boys are to be men and the college never forgetting that men have been boys—we shall come to the ideal of education. Toward this ideal we are moving slowly but steadily. When we reach it, we shall cease to dread the transition from school to college."

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE OF NORTH SHORE ESTATES

I

SMITH'S POINT, Manchester, is in the midst of an army of carpenters, masons, plumbers, painters and decorators.

The high point of land near the center of the Point is surmounted by a beautiful stucco house nearing completion. This belongs to the James J. Phelan family, of Brookline. It was formerly the J. Warren Merrill homestead, and after being in the possession of the late John M. Graham, has now been chosen by the Phelans as a permanent summer home.

On the tip end of the Point the John R. McGinleys, of New York, are having extensive alterations made upon their place. Always a fine, sightly place it will now be more noticeable than ever with its added rooms.

Near the entrance to the Point, on Proctor st., are two houses which are charming and will be sure to attract the passersby this season. Those who have long known the places as the home of Dr. and Mrs. Maynard Ladd, of Boston, will fail, almost, to recognize Mrs. Ladd's studio as it now stands—transformed into an ideal cottage in which Mr. and Mrs. Chas. P. Curtis, Jr., of Boston, are living. On the opposite side of the road, the cottage occupied by the Ladds, is now the summer place of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Augustus Parkhurst, of Dobbs Ferry, New York. These two cottages belong to the Morgan estate and have been remodeled by R. L. Whipple Co., of Worcester. Steele & Abbott Co., of Manchester, have done the painting and staining.

The visitor on the Point will want to linger around the Phelan place these days if he desires to see the finishing touches put onto a modern Shore cottage.

Roberts & Hoare, of Manchester, have the work in hand, and when the place is finished we hope to describe it in detail for our Estate department. Just now the stately, well-balanced, sightly stucco house with its sloping red slate roof is best seen from the outside.

It faces a circular terrace built on the high point of land on which the house stands. The terrace is centered with a fountain just completed and a sturdy chestnut tree. The driveway sweeps around this fountain center. The terrace is surrounded by a stone wall, shrubs and flowers. Two new stucco seats have been built in the circular terrace wall.

The view out over the treetops below and to the ocean beyond is one of the most idealistic imaginable. The sound of the waves is just below one's feet, seemingly.

Iron balconies, big windows of various kinds, and stucco balustrades are some of the features noticed about the place.

From here, where the mechanics are reigning supreme, one may find his way over to the McGinley place.

A long and striking addition is being put up for a service wing. Here, also, Roberts & Hoare have a host of workmen getting things in shape for the family's moving in.

Aside from the large and commodious quarters and remodelling of the great house a handsome terraced porch is being constructed by Connolly Bros., of Beverly Farms. Artistic and most unusual will this creation be with a house, massive rocks and the ocean joined by cement.

Later we hope to tell more in detail of the work at the McGinley home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Augustus Parkhurst have their little cottage furnished and are about scettled for the summer. A new garage is now being built, but without this sign of improvement, the spic and span newness of the place is in evidence in the white shingle covering and fresh green blinds. White trellises have been arched over the windows in the living-room and dining-room. Under the arches are long boxes of bright blooming plants. Vines will in time cover the window trellises, making a pretty cottage picture, indeed. A screened and open porch are on either end of the house. A brick walk bordered on each side by prim little box trees carries out a most charming effect.

Inside the rooms are as daintily and airily furnished as would be expected from the outside.

The hall and living-room are done in rose, tan and gray, while the woodwork is in white throughout the house. The windows are as effective from the inside with their white and rose hangings as they are from the outside. Cretonne covered chairs, basket chairs with cushions, and door hangings, all show one pattern of cretonne emphasizing the color scheme. A large gray rug is used on each floor, smaller rugs in doorways and by the fireplace in the living-room being of the old-fashioned New England style.

The dining-room is in buff and blue, the walls of dainty cream making a delightfully cool looking background. Window hangings carry out the color scheme most effectively and uniquely with fruit basket and flower designs on them. The floor is covered with a blue rug.

These three rooms, a guest room downstairs, four master's bedrooms and a sleeping porch, besides the service quarters, complete the cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Parkhurst have a young daughter, Miss Anna Glidden Parkhurst, who attends school at Wellesley, and a small son, Master Walter Glidden.

"LODGEHURST," the J. Warren Merrill cottage on Smith's Point, Manchester, although not among the new cottages, has many interesting and unique points which place it among the most desirable and typical houses of the Shore. It stands on a rocky eminence on the Point among the trees, seeming to fit well into the landscape with its greenish gray shingled covering. It has one of the matchless waterviews of the Point, best seen from the side veranda.

It is in this house that the Merrills have been living a short time this season while preparing their adjoining cottage for the J. Kenneth Howards, of Boston, and their country home in Hamilton for a Chicago family.

The living-room at "Lodgehurst" is done in red and white most effectively. The reception hall is a model of coolness in its white, green and rose colorings. A very attractive stairway leads to the upper rooms. About halfway up is a balcony window which has the appearance of an outside window on the inside of the house. Window boxes of flowers help carry out the delusion in a pretty fashion.

The dining-room which is done in dull green and gray has two balconies in the upper part. The walls extend the full height of the cottage and with the long, unique looking balcony for musicians and a smaller one on the end opening from Mrs. Merrill's sitting room, the whole presents a most unusual sight. A feeling of olden days is felt while looking up to these balconies. One can imagine children of long ago peeping out from behind the curtains above at some feast below and wishing they were old enough to leave their nurses and join the merry-makers below.

Singing Beach, Manchester

Top — Looking toward Eagle Head

Opening off the main hall is the den, or a "comfy" little room with a fireplace. This is done in peacock blue and it is in this room that the son, Jack, has stored many rare and costly family curios.

Spears and a queer musical instrument from the South Sea islands, a great gun inlaid with silver from China, Figi island clubs, and specimens of Japanese art make up some of the most noticeable objects seen.

Rhododendrons seem unusually bright and appealing these dull, rainy days. Nowhere have they been seen more attractive than at the Louis Baer, Boylston Beal, Geo. R. White and Jesse Koshland places on Smith's Point, Manchester. No doubt they are showing up well all along the Shore, but these happened to be seen at close range this week.

At the Koshland place the gardener laments that his flowers are three weeks late this season. His fine rolling lawn, well-kept privet hedge on either side the driveway and the neat appearance of the flower beds are an evidence, however, of his care and of what may be expected later on at this, one of the most attractive places on the Point.

CHILDREN STARVING TO DEATH IN AUSTRIA

This is the Most Desperate Situation in the World—A Plea for Your Assistance

THERE are 300,000 children starving to death in Austria, and of these 100,000 in Vienna alone. Do you— can you realize the full significance of this staggering truth?

These are children—little children who do not even know the meaning of enmity or sin—they are starving to death. They are suffering the horrible agony of starvation—wasting away to skin and bones—the food they need so desperately is not to be had in that country and there is no earthly way to save these children's lives unless outside aid is given quickly.

These are true statements. They are made by the agent sent by Herbert Hoover to Austria to investigate food conditions among the children. This agent further says: "The saddest sight is that of the children of thirteen to fifteen, who look not more than four or five. Undernourishment has arrested their development. They have the yellow pallor that bespeaks famine and their lips and mouths are blue. Some of them have distended stomachs that result from lack of food for long periods."

This is the most desperate situation in the world. It is not a time to split hairs or talk of magnanimity.

These are children — human beings — and they are starving to death. There are men and women who are also suffering—seemingly countless numbers of them—but we appeal to you at the moment for the children.

Help them in the spirit of mercy—help them out of natures that can afford to be generous—obey the plain, simple dictates of humanity and make it possible for us to send these children bread to save them from starvation. Great Britain is helping Austria's pitifully afflicted children. In fact, the British government through Earl Curzon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has given its full approval of the work of relief. The French government is helping. Only recently the Italian government arranged to take a number of Austria's little sufferers to Italy and care for them, even in the face of Italy's serious plight. If these countries, hit hardest by the war, can be merciful and generous, will not America—big-hearted, prosperous America—lend her hand to the work of rescue that this awful misery may be ended and the lives of innocent children may be saved?

The strongest words will not exaggerate the desperateness of Austria's condition. Sir William Goode, British Director of Relief, in a recent speech described this terrible emergency. He said, in part:

"I have myself recently returned from Vienna. I feel as if I had spent ten days in the cell of a condemned murderer who has given up all hope of reprieve.

"It is not unusual to see the traffic in one of the main streets which leads to the cemetery held up by hearses. Nine-tenths carry the bodies of Children. A distinguished British army officer who has been in Vienna for some time said to me; 'For God's sake go home and tell them what it is like.' It seems to me that you cannot trifle with starvation and privation in Central Europe such as prevails today in Vienna without running the risk of a carnival of Bolshevism which would probably not be confined to this continent."

But hunger is not the only burden of Austria's stricken people. Disease is raging and spreading with alarming rapidity. Tuberculosis is on an appalling increase and is especially rife among children. Malnutrition has increased the mortality and diminished the birth-rate. What is more, it has given rise to new diseases, besides aggravating the ones previously known.

These are the tragic, desperate facts about Austria. Famine, pestilence and death are scourging, ravaging the nation of which Germany made a cat's paw. But, over and above all else, Children are dying of hunger. Children with agonized bodies and tortured minds are starving to death.

These children can be reached through Herbert Hoover's committee, the American Relief Administration, which is keeping alive as many as possible with one meal a day at its food kitchens in Austria. They can be reached through the Vienna Children's Milk Relief. They can be reached through the Vienna Emergency Relief Fund, of London, of which Field Marshal Haig is chairman and which includes in its membership the Rt. Hon. H. H. Asquith, Earl Curzon and others.

One hundred cents of every dollar you send us specifically designated for Austria's starving children will be transmitted intact for the purpose. There will be no deductions. Your money will buy food that will save starving children's lives.

Do not stop to figure the whys and wherefores. At the moment you are reflecting, a child may be dying of hunger. Your money could save that child's life. We earnestly beg of you to help. Give now—give generously—only GIVE.

Please send checks to Charles H. Sabin, treasurer, General Relief Committee, Inc., Vanderbilt hotel, New York city.

For amid all life's quests
There seems but worthy one—to do men good.
It matters not how long we live, but how.

THE MAGNOLIA SHOPS

NOTES OF INTEREST

ONCE more with the coming of the summer season the Magnolia shops are opening their doors to their North Shore patrons. These little shops, miniatures of the best-known and most exclusive stores of New York and Boston, have blossomed out this season with a larger and better assortment of goods than ever before, and the managers pride themselves on their low prices and the excellence of the quality of the materials.

In the bungalow-like and well appointed little shops, where the word "elevator" is never spoken, one can shop at leisure, confident that whether it be table or bed linens, or silver or glass ware, or books, or clothing, the place to get the very thing that one desires is at the Magnolia shops.

Never have the gowns and hats been more charmingly becoming nor the materials and colors more beautiful than they are this season. The shops abound in the cool little afternoon frocks that are a real delight, and hats that are smart and "different."

In short, there is everything in the Magnolia shops to make one look forward to a shopping trip with the keenest anticipation of pleasure, confident that there is no disappointment in store for one.

Visitors to Bonwit Teller & Co.'s store will find a pleasant surprise awaiting them, for there has been a new addition made to the store, which allows of a much larger display of their attractive lines of goods. This season they are carrying a greater assortment of the smart bathing suits, which are so alluringly simple in design, and which are so much in demand by the North Shore colony.

There are also the trim, smart riding habits and sports suits, sweaters and skirts, suitable for all occasions, as well as the dainty blouses, afternoon frocks and the more formal evening gowns, which cannot but attract the attention and delight the lover of beautiful and correct attire. Then there are the hats, for the hat plays a large part in setting off a pretty frock or sweater, and in the assortment of colors and designs the hats at this shop meet with one's entire satisfaction and approval, from the "dressy" hat to the little sports tam.

A novelty that is attracting a great deal of attention from the shoppers is the new tweed walking breeches. These breeches are made in tweeds of the various colors, to be worn with middies or sweaters, and are unrivalled for real comfort and practicability.

In speaking of Bonwit Teller & Co. one must not forget to mention that the prices on even the smallest article in their Magnolia shop are precisely the same as those prevailing in their New York store; a fact which is recognized and appreciated by their many patrons.

During the summer there will be a representative of Marie Earle at Bonwit Teller's, who will give treatments and consultations on the care of the skin. Marie Earle is a famous skin specialist, well-known in Paris and London, and her preparations for the skin are known both in New York and Boston.

McCutcheon's, the home of linens, are displaying an assortment of entirely new designs in linens this season. These designs were originated by themselves and were taken from various little French towns. It is interesting to know just how the different designs are thought out, and the care and precision with which the monograms are made to suit each design. There is a little story attached to each design, showing the thoughtful attention which is given to making each pece of linen as attractive as possible —and one has only to visit McCutcheon's to find that a great deal is possible. Patrons who call at McCutcheon's are exclaiming delightedly at the exceptional values which this store has to offer.

This year they have an unusually large assortment of the new sweaters and scarfs, both in silk and wool. There is also a large assortment of children's dresses, which cannot fail to please the little tots, as well as the grown-ups.

Patrons will be glad to learn that McCutcheon's have brought a splendid line of their rare, fine laces, which is sold by the yard, and for which there were so many calls last season.

In speaking of attractive stores one is immediately reminded of the Grande Maison de Blanc. Here there is on display charmingly simple little tub dresses for morning wear, sweaters with hats to match, skirts and blouses that could not help but make one feel appropriately and smartly dressed.

In their children's department one finds everything for the young folk from the tiny new baby to the little miss of fourteen. Dainty little frocks and coats with hats to match, and attractive as well as practical little "undies" are displayed. Then, too, there are the bassinets, exquisitely furnished with soft, lacey little pillows for baby's head, and silky comfortables to keep baby warm.

At the Grande Maison de Blanc one also finds an unusually extensive display of bed and table linens. Pretty luncheon sets in different designs and tastefully arranged attract the eye as soon as one enters the door. Then, too, there are the nice wooly blankets, which even at this late date of spring, one has occasion to use at times. Comfortables to match the trimmings on the blankets are also obtainable here. In fact, in looking for furnishings for the bed or table one finds a pleasing variety at the Grande Maison de Blanc.

In the summer months one must have a great many attractive sweaters, so a shopping trip is not complete without a visit to Farr's. Here one finds sweaters of all the prettiest and smartest designs, many of them originated by Mr. Farr himself. One is confronted by a difficulty in choosing, for all are equally desirable and the colors are so well blended as to suit even the most exacting taste. The white sweaters, so fashionable this season, make one determine that only a white sweater will do; but after making up one's mind—almost—one is confronted by another of burnt orange, also very fashionable this season, or one of blue or green or rose, and once again the process of deciding begins. A pretty sweater shown at this shop and one that is very new is made surplice fashion and ties in the back with wide ties which can be made into a smart bow. This sweater does not strictly adhere to the surplice style, for the Tuxedo form is suggested. There are also all styles of the slip-on sweater, which is always so popular.

The problem of sweaters decided, one's attention is attracted to the knitted capes. These capes are both fascinating and comfortable. They have been knitted in such a fashion as to suggest the accordion-plaited effect, and the stitch has been turned in such a way that the plaits cannot come out. There is a wide collar of soft wool, which crosses in front and forms the fastening underneath the cape.

The shopping tour is not yet completed, for directly across the street from Farr Company's a new little gown shop has been opened, and surely one must also visit Tysons, which is the name of this little shop, for the gingham dresses that are simply a necessity. Dainty and fresh, and in pretty becoming colors the gingham dresses on display at this store are attracting a great deal of attention from the Magnolia shoppers. There are also the little French dresses, and they, too, are commanding their share of attention. Delightfully simple and girlish, there is really no other gown that can take the place in one's wardrobe of the little French dress.

In rounding up the trip one must not forget shoes, and one has only to turn around and presto! one is in a shoe store! The John Lauther shoe store is also new, this being their first season in Magnolia. The problem of keeping correctly and comfortably shod is answered at Lauther's, for one finds shoes suitable for evening, afternoon and sports wear in this little shop (in the same store with Tyson's). One soon learns that there will be no difficulty in getting fitted, for they carry all sizes in stock. No doubt patrons who know the John Lauther store at Palm Beach will be glad to welcome them to Magnolia.

Many other of the Magnolia shops are open, and these will come in for a visit of the MAGNOLIA SHOPPER in some future issues of this page.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "TIP"

Did you know that the word "tip"—meaning a fee given to a servant—is made of the first letter of the phrase "to insure promptness," and that the inscription used to be on money boxes in every tavern, in which travelers dropped their coins, which later were divided equally among the servants?

EDITORIAL

THE VOLUNTEERS who prepared surgical dressings for the military hospitals rendered inestimable service durthe war. The skill and experience acquired in this work should not be lost during the peace times. Volunteers are now using their training and are calling upon others to lend a hand in preparing surgical dressings for the Children's hospital in the city of Boston. The board of managers of the Horticultural hall, in Manchester, has placed a good room at the disposal of the efficient committee which is in charge of the work, so that the expenses of the work are very small. This is a worthy work and those who are here for the summer and have the time at their command could not invest a morning or two a week to better advantage than in preparing these bandages for the surgical work of this hospital. The welfare committee should have the hearty coöperation of everyone. The Children's hospital fills a very important need in the city of Boston, which practically means New England. The expense of purchasing and preparing surgical dressings is an important item in their financial budget. The work of preparing these dressings is a direct contribution of the most valuable sort. The number of nurses which are now available for the hospitals is very limited, especially in children's hospitals. As a rule, young women who are seeking a nurse's training prefer the courses in the general hospitals. The new law, the so-called eight-hour statute, limits the hours of service of every available nurse and increases the number required to do the work. With these difficulties to overcome it is readily seen how valuable the surgical dressing work becomes to the children's hospitals. The hands of skillful women will delight in this sweet charity that will help to assuage suffering among children. There are expenses to be met and the volunteers would delight in being able to purchase the materials which are used. Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman, of Beverly Farms, has consented to serve as treasurer of the welfare committee. The committee should not want for workers nor for funds for this appealing work. The rooms are conveniently located and ought to present everyone an opportunity to do effective and enjoyable work.

THE REAL ESTATE and personal property on the North Shore impels every resident to consider the fire and police protection which is afforded. Last week one of the North Shore city districts (Beverly) observed firemen's day. The equipment indicated the purpose of the city to protect the owners of property against loss. An honorable and an efficient effort has been made by every North Shore community to be prepared for fires which may break out. Modern efficient fire-fighting machinery has been acquired. Motorization is popular and the range of every department is increased and the speed with which the district is served is also increased. All of the larger districts have an adequate water supply so that all may count upon the aid of the fire-fighting machinery of the neighboring towns and cities. This was demonstrated in the Salem fire when the Salem fire-fighting force was assisted by fire apparatus from all of the neighboring cities. Fire equipment is worthless without an esprit de corps that implies unity of action and energy in service. Machines are the creations of men's minds. The minds of men must leash their creation and then set them to do the work required. The esprit de corps of the North Shore firemen is well known. It means everything in a summer colony. The demonstration of the ability of the firemen in the "tryout" at Beverly last Saturday is insignificant compared with the principle of harmonious action which was exemplified. Wholesome "gamey" competition cultivates this spirit. The day was a pleasure to all the participants and indicated that the leaders were making successful efforts to knit their forces into an efficient command. The district gains from such spirit and purpose.

SOME YEARS AGO an effort was made to obtain franchises for electric railroads along the North Shore from Beverly through Manchester to Gloucester and thence around beautiful Cape Ann. The opposition put an end to the agitation for tracks from Beverly to Gloucester, principally because it placed an electric railroad in competition with the steam railroad that was giving good service. The decision against the proposed road was followed by the establishment of a line from Montserrat to Essex and from Essex to Gloucester, and thence around Cape Ann. These roads have proven to be valuable transportation agencies. Last Saturday night the service on these lines was discontinued. No cars are running between Beverly and Essex, or Essex and Gloucester, or on any part of Cape Ann.

The discontinuance of the service is a distinct loss to the territory. In company with other railroad enterprises the owners of the electric lines have had unavoidable financial difficulties that even an increase in passenger fares could not relieve. The Cape Ann residents may lose altogether the service which they have had. This will prove a serious handicap to every resident despite the increasing number of automobiles owned and operated by Cape Ann residents. A plan is being discussed which appears to have merit, that of laying the extra burden of operating the roads directly upon the towns served. The deficit each year could be met by taxation. The proposition does not involve town or municipal ownership. It means a financial underwriting. The socialistic scheme of having the towns of Cape Ann own their electric railroads and operate them would prove a failure. The success of the private ownership by the corporate organization could be assured as a service company by a community underwriting policy. The method would give the advantages of relieving the management of political influence and stimulate the trained railroad men to use their knowledge advantageously. The plan has merits and the final outcome will be of interest.

THE THREATENED COAL SHORTAGE due to the unusual shipments of coal to Europe is now a serious problem. While the householder is not to be embarrassed because of the abundant supply of anthracite coal, he will, sooner or later, discover that the shortage of the bituminous coal supply is a vital question in his life as well as that of the manufacturers who use the soft coal. Soft coal is needed for the great mercantile and manufacturing plants. Schools and hospitals are endangered. The question will be a serious one when the winter closes in. Capable men are at work on the problem, fortunately, in the summer, and before the acute transportation difficulties of the winter season block every effort. The coal shortage may cause manufacturing plants to discontinue their work and compel increases in prices for the commodities which they produce and sell. Coal and oil are important factors in cost calculations. Complaint will now be made, for serious conditions confront the business enterprises of the North Shore. One electric light and power company has found it necessary, because of the increased charges made for coal and fuel, to increase its charges for electricity, for power and lighting purposes. The advances in the prices are to be regretted, yet it is the only course open to them. Everyone, directly and indirectly, is affected by the bituminous coal situation. It is a matter for satisfaction that there is a strong commission at work and that Governor Calvin Coolidge has had the sand and sense to grapple with the problem and place it in competent hands.

Dr. Hugh Cabot, who is well known on the North Shore, made an admirable address recently upon the progress that should be made in the establishment of community hospitals, equipped as modern, up-to-the-minute establishments whose facilities should be available to the physicians and residents of the district served. The community hospital is an unchallengable ideal. Its establishment all over the United States would place every physician in a strategic position of advantage, in meeting the evils which sickness and bodily accidents involve. The physician is a health officer with large responsibilities and opportunities. He is handicapped if he does his work without the help which an established hospital can give him. Such an institution increases the physician's sphere of influence. The ethics of the medical profession are high. The responsibilities which every doctor carries compel it. The stern and severe competition which a general practice places upon scientific men soon excludes unworthy, tactless and unskilled men. The trained man, who has stood the test of community service for a decade or for a generation or more, is a force by virtue of the service which he has rendered to the community. He is always a man of parts and power. In this district the residents are served by men who have been tested in the crucible of experience. From Lynn to Rockport there are established hospitals which are rendering service of an unusually high grade to the communities in which they are established. The physicians are fortunate in having such efficient institutions as are the people of the North Shore summer colonies as well as the permanent residents. A good hospital is an indispensable institution in these modern days.

George W. Perkins has completed his earthly career. With rare ability he demonstrated the possibilities of a determined man to make his way in the world. Successful as his business operations were the pre-eminent virtue of his life was not his ability to accumulate a fortune, but his personal capacity for doing good. He was a free man in his life and not a slave to wealth, either in its accumulation or its possession. He saw the gleam and followed it. While wealth has its values and place he discovered that life could only be defined in terms of worth and happiness. The higher thinking and purposes in life are expressed only in service to man. He knew the mockery of possessions and the folly of mere financial standards. He experienced the charm of the inner life; but let him speak for himself: "Money is not all of life. I might have gone on adding more millions to my possessions, but what would these have availed me? I have enough to provide for my family and for myself. I can wear only one suit at a time. I can eat only one meal at a time. I can live only in one house at a time. When I die I cannot take one dollar with me. These are my thoughts which came to me at my fiftieth birthday . . . . is there not something more that I can leave? In my judgment the fashion of acquiring wealth simply for the sake of possessing wealth has reached its greatest height and the fashion of performing public service for the sake of its performance is coming into vogue." Truer words were never spoken. The attention which men are giving to life for others is testimony to the truth of these burning words. Here is a secret of happiness and living that is worth while. He carried his business enthusiasm into his social service work and he speaks again: "The most important thing of all is to look upon work as play and throw yourself into it with the same zest and relish and determination to excel as when you play baseball, or checkers, or football. By adopting this mental attitude toward your work you can accomplish more, and find greater pleasure and satisfaction in doing it. Any young man . . . . will be eager to achieve the task in hand and will get genuine fun in its achievement." So spake the rich man who had played his game of life hard and fast and won along lines that commanded respect from men; this man will be remembered not for his business ability—that remains unchallenged—but for his personal service to mankind, one "who loved his brother man."

Honesty Is Not a Rare Virtue! Sterling honesty is a reality today and is not a myth, despite the fact that dishonesty crops out from time to time. Its depredations and annoyance are felt in every walk of life, yet honesty remains still the backbone of all the relations of society. Dishonesty is encountered in more forms than the human mind has been accustomed to recognize. Business requires scrupulous honesty: for honesty is hearing aright, interpreting aright, and speaking aright. Many who would avoid dishonesty toward a neighbor's goods as they would a plague, with a nonchalance that is appalling, hear amiss, think amiss and speak amiss concerning him. In stealing another's purse one "steals trash," but if by word and act another is robbed of opportunity, reputation or social standing, the harm done is more severe and permanent than the purloining of goods, money and possessions. Possessions are replaceable, but who has power so subtle and intelligence so keen as to be able to stay the havoc of misspent words. Cast upon the waters of conversation they drift afar. Who has power to check their influence? Honesty is far-reaching in its obligations. The worker who fails to give just returns for the money paid for his service, or who does not measure up to the responsibilities of his service, or who does not measure up to the responsibilities of his position, however humble it may be, or however wealthy his employer, or however great the corporation which employs him, is essentially dishonest in his relations. The waste of time, the squandering of material, the neglect of opportunity, the failure to act honorably and conscientiously are all forms of dishonesty.

Honesty is required in every walk of life. The workman who sells his brawn and muscle, or who bargains for money for his time and brains are both subject to the laws of honesty. The farmhand and the laborer, the nurse and the physician, the judge and the clergyman require in their work the sturdy grace of genuine honesty, in purpose and thought, in word and deed, in the use of time and money and in dealing with the reputations of men and women. There are men and women, strong and true, who recognize the alluring opportunities of dishonesty, who daily have temptation thrust before them and yet keep in the straight and honorable path. The world is full of good men and true women. If one bank teller goes wrong, or one physician betrays the sacred responsibilities of his profession, or one clergyman beats off the straight course over the sea of life, an irresponsible journalist features the "stories" because they are the exceptions. Men in all walks of life have possibilities of failure and climb the up-hill road of success instead of betraying themselves by coasting down the deceptive and destructive hill of dishonesty. The world's work is done by men of honor and integrity. It is the priceless worth of this virtue that brings life, spiritual prowess and ability.

Careful Selection in Picking Employees Today Pays Well

There was a time when picking employees was a hit and miss job, a trial and error matter which few employers believed could be corrected. This is the day of doing things right and the modern employer is now selecting his associates from the office boy to the man highest up with as much care as he would launch on an entirely new business venture. William Marvin Jackson, Director of the Personnel Development Service, writes:

"If employees are carefully selected, with an eye to their real adaptability and fitness for the work to be done, it goes without question that they are much more likely to take an interest in their work, and hence, the business itself. If they are interested, they will get along well with their fellows and co-operate with their superiors. All of which means that they will grow, and there is no satisfaction for the employee greater than that which accompanies the knowledge that he is getting somewhere. Patting him on the back may make him feel good, and paying him a good salary may make him work harder. But giving him a new job and bigger job will alone make him supremely happy—will alone make him work with complete abandon, with thorough-going enthusiasm."—Forbes Magazine.

BEVERLY HISTORICAL SOCIETY'S home, corner of Cabot and Central streets, will be open from 2 to 6 on Thursdays and Saturdays this season. The house was built by John Cabot in 1770 and is an unusually good specimen of architecture. It contains a most interesting collection of Indian, Colonial and war time history.

John Cabot who built it was a brother of George Cabot, great-grandfather of Henry Cabot Lodge. He was a leading member of the Mass. Constitutional convention in 1788, a U. S. senator, and president of the Hartford convention. George Cabot's house was taken down about five years ago. Among other treasures in the house are the fine portraits. There is one of Stuart's portraying an esteemed merchant in Beverly. This was lost to the knowledge of collectors for some time and was called "the lost Stuart."

This summer when everyone is interested in the Pilgrims and Puritans, it may be interesting to note that the records of the "First Parish," now Unitarian church of Beverly, are in a safe in the Historical house. Also all records of the Sunday school, the first one in the United States, probably in the world, are within this safe.

OPPOSITION TO SUNDAY SPORTS

At Special Meeting Manchester Votes to Reject Measure — Other Business Transacted

The matter of whether Sunday sports shall be legalized in the town of Manchester was the chief article discussed at a special town meeting held Monday evening of this week in the Town hall, Manchester. A lively discussion developed on this matter, much oratory being expended by some of our citizens. When put to a vote Sunday sports in Manchester met defeat by 63 to 44, or nearly 3 to 2.

Raymond C. Allen, moderator, called the meeting to order at 7.40 o'clock, there being a quorum of voters present at that time.

Lyman W. Floyd, town clerk, read the warrant for the special meeting, which contained the following five articles:

Article 1—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $2,500 to pay jointly to Frank P. Knight and the estate of Geo. L. Knight; a further sum of $800 to Frank P. Knight, individually; and a further sum of $291.44 to Richard L. Cheever; in each case for damages caused to property by the taking of easements by the town in 1914 for sewer purposes. The same to be paid only upon proper certification by the Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners.

Article 2—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $300 for replacing and painting buoys in Manchester harbor.

Article 3—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $650 for interest on temporary loans.

Article 4—To see if the town will appropriate the sum of $1,000 for maintenance of the park department, as per request of the Park Commissioners.

Article 5—To see if the town will accept Chapter 240, of the Acts of 1920, entitled "An act to permit, under public regulation and control, certain sports and games on the Lord's Day." As per petition of Eugene F. Wogan and others.

Action on Articles

Under article one, the finance committee recommended paying the sums of money mentioned, and Samuel L. Wheaton, chairman of the board of selectmen, made a motion to appropriate the three sums specified in the article for the purposes aforesaid. This motion was seconded and passed without debate.

On motion of Mr. Wheaton, acting on article two, the sum of $300 was appropriated for replacing and painting buoys in Manchester harbor. The finance committee favored this appropriation.

Article three: Mr. Wheaton moved that the sum of $650 be appropriated for interest on temporary loans, and as this met with the approval of the finance committee, Mr. Wheaton's motion was carried without any argument.

Article four: Wm. H. Till moved that the sum of $1,000 be appropriated for the maintenance of the park department as per the request of the Park Commissioners, and with the approval of the finance committee. It was so voted.

Including the reading of the warrant and action on the first four articles, only seven minutes' time had been consumed. The only life of the meeting was shown on the last article which related to sports on the Lord's Day. Considerable discussion was indulged in by local orators, who expressed their opinions pro and con.

Sabbath Sports Starts Something

For the edification of the voters, Moderator Allen read the entire act as passed by the legislature relating to Sunday sports. The matter was then placed before the house and the excitement commenced. George S. Sinnicks asked to have the petition of Eugene F. Wogan and others read by the moderator. Capt. Allen read the original petition, together with the names of all the signers.

George R. Dean, Selectman, at once moved the acceptance of the article.

Thomas Baker expressed the hope that the town would not vote favorably on this matter. "In a Christian land," said Mr. Baker, "I can hardly understand this attitude toward Sunday sports. If there is anything holy about playing baseball on Sunday, I'd like to hear of it. It may not be awfully wrong, but I am opposed to it."

Alex. H. Sjorlund: "I am one of the signers of this petition. Other towns are giving this thing a trial and I'd like to see Manchester try it. If it doesn't work out just as we would like to have it we can rescind the vote at some future date."

Desired by Club Members

Mr. Dean: "I, also, was one of the signers of this petition and would like to see Sunday sports tried out in Manchester. It is desired by most of the members of the Essex County club, and I think we should do all we can for them. There isn't anything of a vicious nature in this bill. It was signed by the governor. We know that for many years golf players were playing golf illegally on the Sabbath, and they were not molested because they had more or less influence. Later they were prosecuted under the 'Blue Laws.' This act which we are now discussing was framed to give equal rights to rich and poor. I've heard ministers who favored the adoption of this act. Recently, I read of a pastor in Lexington, who was heartily in favor of the bill. I hope that this will be given a chance in our town."

Can Law Make Right of Wrong?

Mr. Baker: "I fail to see how law can make a right out of a wrong. A person cannot go to a ball game and keep from shouting. I'd rather stay at home if I couldn't make any noise at a game. Neither do I understand how any minister can favor Sunday sports. We have existed in this state for 300 years without baseball on the Sabbath day — and let's not have it now."

Mr. Sinnicks: "Gentlemen, I don't think that the town of Manchester is ready at this time to accept such an act. As I understand the law, we could not have on Sunday such a game as we saw last Saturday afternoon, because no player could be hired for money, there could be no admission charged, and all noise would be prohibited. It seems to me that we have done nearly everything possible for the young people. We have daylight saving, which gives an additional chance for sports and recreation every night. It has been said that the members of the Essex County club are in favor of the town adopting this act and thus legalize the playing of golf on Sunday. If this is so, it would seem that some of the members of the club should be here tonight and give us their opinion."

Mr. Dean requested the moderator to read a letter from S. P. Bremer, a member of the Essex County club. Mr. Bremer expressed his regret at his inability to be present at the special town meeting, and went on record as favoring the adoption of the act in Manchester.

Mr. Sinnicks: "I would like to inquire if we accept the provisions of this act whether the members of the club will be allowed to play golf at any other time on Sunday than between the hours of 2 to 6 in the afternoon? We never have molested the Essex County club members, and probably never will do so. They are always quiet and orderly."

Arthur E. Olson asked for some information concerning how the provisions of the bill affected the playing of Sunday golf.

Mr. Sjorlund: "Personally, I am not much interested in these sports, but am talking in behalf of some of

Cash Register So Correct It Was Suspicious

Cash registers became an institution as a means of compelling honesty among employees handling money. There was a time when their installation was taken as an affront by every clerk concerned, but a new generation has accepted them as a matter of course. That they still have their use in the original sense, however, was demonstrated recently by one employer—a grocer—who was telling his story over the counter the other evening to a belated customer.

"Last summer," the grocer said, "my family was living down at the beach and I used to leave early in order to get down there for a late dinner. I had a clerk that I trusted to lock up and put the money in the safe. Naturally the cash register would show in the morning what he had rung up.

"For a few days I thought it was working fine. He was a good clerk and I thought he was honest. Then when I got to thinking about it I decided he was too—honest. For 10 days that register and the cash agreed to a penny. Now that's better than I could make it do myself. It ain't natural.

"Then I decided to try a little scheme. Just before I left I rang up $2.75 on the register and put nothing in the till. Next morning the cash and register agreed, as usual. That was enough for me. Any man who is so honest he will make up mistakes out of his pocket must have plenty of money to do it with.

"No, he isn't working me me now."

Entertainment at Baptist Church Next Thursday Evening

Next Thursday evening, July 1, there will be another of the series of entertainments at the Baptist church, Manchester. These programs have been well attended and very popular; the proceeds are used for church purposes.

The special attraction next Thursday evening will be "The Old Family Album." This is presented by a cast of 20 young people from the Calvary Baptist church, Salem. The entertainment has been given in several of the churches and has met with success everywhere.

Louis Mirami will sing, and there will be other vocal solo selections. Remember the date and place.

Fine Concert at Baptist Church Wednesday Evening

A concert of unusual excellence was presented on Wednesday evening of last week at the Baptist church, Manchester, under the auspices of two of the classes of the Baptist Sunday school. The auditorium of the church was comfortably filled for the entertainment, and a generous sum was realized as proceeds to be used toward the "organ fund."

G. Allyn Browne, always a favorite with Manchester audiences, assisted by the Trinity sextet, and Miss Mary Silveria, soprano, of Gloucester, and Mrs. Charlotte Brown, of Manchester, reader, were the entertainers. A splendid program was presented, each number being especially fine and well given.

The sextet included Pauline Harvey, Olive Crocker, Clara Hodgkins, Bernice Stanley, Owen Lowe, Roland Decker. Miss Mary Silveria, a junior in the Gloucester High school, has a sweet soprano voice of high merit and much promise. Her solos were very nicely rendered.

The readings by Mrs. Brown, with piano accompaniment by Mr. Browne, were pleasing features of the evening. The following program was given:

Organ solo, "Angelica," Martel
Mr. Browne
"The Evening Wind," Saint-Saens
Sextet

How To Tell Wool From Cotton

Suppose a chemist's wife or his mother or sister buys a number of yards of cloth to be made into a gown. It is to be a winter gown, and its purpose, as distinguished from a summer garment, is to keep her warm. She wants it to be of wool, because she knows by experience that wool is warmer than cotton or linen. In making the purchase she asks the clerk in the store if it is all wool, and she is assured that it is. The clerk does not know except that the buyer said so, and the chances are that the buyer does not know except that the jobber from whom he purchased it said so. And the jobber does not know except that ,a manufacturer's agent said so, and he may have been at slight pains to find out. We know very well that if we boil a little sliver of the goods in a test-tube in a solution of caustic soda the wool will dissolve and the cotton will not; it is one of the simplest tests that can be made, and it can be accomplished in five minutes. But I doubt if one in a thousand chemists does this thing. So the wife or mother may buy goods supposed to be woolen that are in large part cotton, and she may and often does, catch cold because of this fact.—Ellwood Hendrick in Harper's

ODD FELLOWS' MEMORIAL SERVICE AT MANCHESTER

Fitting Tribute Paid to Memory of Deceased Members — Appropriate Sermon

ABOUT 75 members of Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., and Liberty lodge of Rebekahs, I. O. O. F., of Manchester, were present Sunday morning at an Odd Fellows' memorial service held in the Congregational church, Manchester. Rev. Frederic W. Manning, pastor, delivered the sermon. There was special music by the choir and a solo by Abbott Hoare.

Magnolia lodge has lost four members by death the past year: Nathaniel Morgan, Jan. 16; George L. Knight, March 17; Augustus M. Killam, April 30; and John R. Cheever, June 11. While the pastor read the names of the deceased, the members of the orders present stood with bowed heads as a token of respect to their memory.

The program of the memorial service was as follows:

Organ prelude
Doxology
Solo, "Day of Peace" Abbott Hoare
Violin obligato, Miss Bella C. Porter
Responsive reading, "The Greatness of Love"
Hymn, "Love Divine"
Scripture Lesson, Luke 10: 25-38
Prayer Pastor
Anthem, "Consider and Hear Me" Choir
Reading of names of deceased members
Announcements
Offering
Hymn, "For the Beauty of the Earth"
Sermon Pastor
Hymn—
"What a Friend We Have in Jesus"
Benediction.

Rev. Mr. Manning preached a fine sermon on the principles of Odd Fellowship, a large portion of his address being based on references to passages of scripture, particularly from the 15th chapter of the gospel according to St. John. His text was taken from John 15 : 15, "I have called you friends."

Christ's Followers Related to Him

Mr. Manning said in part: "It is interesting to know the relationship between Jesus and His disciples. Followers of Christ are related to Him as a building is related to its foundation. The building rests on its foundation, so do followers of the Master rest on Him. However, this is a mechanical relationship.

"'A better illustration is found in the passage 'I am the vine, ye are the branches.' Christ's followers are the branches of which He is the vine. The very life of Jesus flows into the hearts of His faithful disciples.

"Another illustration, perhaps the best of any, likens us to members of His body. The great Head of the church has His plans for His people, and we, as members of His body, are to carry out these plans.

"'Ye are bond servants of Christ,' said the apostle Paul, but Christ says: 'I call you not servants, but friends.' The Christian religion is of the spirit, essentially of the spirit of friendship.

Friendship, Love and Truth

"I am told that Odd Fellowship stands for friendship, love and truth. What a poor Odd Fellow he would be, indeed, who does not stand for friendship, love and truth! What a life it would be if friendshp, love and truth were omitted. It is well that these principles should be emphasized and that organizations should exist for the purpose of promoting them."

The speaker made use of several allusions to scripture during his talk and made his points clear by illustrating them in an able manner.

Three Great Human Institutions

"There are three great human institutions," he continued. "The first is the family which exists by the love of man for woman. The family life is the chief bulwark of the nation.

"The second is the State. The State stands for law and order, rightfully constituted. Our great Governor has rightfully taken the stand that the State must enforce law and order. As you know, he has just been honored by the nomination as candidate for Vice-President. Gov. Coolidge is a man who upholds the right and is fearless in championing the cause of truth. Our children should be taught the necessity of obeying the laws of the land in which they live.

"The third great human institution is the church. The church stands for the presence of God on earth and for a better world. What would the world be without the church and the vast benefit which the world derives from the church!

Bible Greatest Book on Friendship

"Is there any greater book on Odd Fellowship than the Bible? Read the beautiful story of the friendship of Naomi and Ruth. This is summed up in the passage in which Ruth says to Naomi: 'Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me.'

"Then again, there are the two youths with arms around each other's neck: David and Jonathan. For real, unselfish friendship read this account in the Old Testament. We also have the account of the friendship of Paul and Timothy. But the greatest of all is the friendship of Jesus Christ with those who love Him.

"How will you measure this friendship? It measures all the way from a feeling of good will towards your fellow being to a feeling of passionate love for him. A narrow-minded, selfish-hearted person cannot be a truly good friend.

"Then, again, a person who does not reverence truth cannot long be your friend. When his interests conflict with yours, he will sacrifice truth to the detriment of any who cross his pathway.

Christ Is the Truth

"'I am the truth,' said Christ. Another time He said, 'I am the light of the world." He was not boasting when He made these statements. So far as I know, there is no other teacher who has ever said these things.

"'The truth shall set you free.' In these days we hear a lot about freedom. There is freedom of several kinds, but the real freedom which is a blessing is that which comes to him who knows the truth, who loves the truth and who obeys the truth.

"Members of Magnolia lodge of Odd Fellows and Liberty lodge of Rebekahs: I prize this opportunity of addressing you at this memorial service. I prize every opportunity of addressing a congregation in the house of God. Religion is the life of God in the soul of man, true friendship between God and man. Because we do believe He is our friend, because He gives us the very air we breathe, we want to be friends with Him. That is religion as I understand it.

The Golden Years of Life

"I believe the golden years of life are those when we most enjoy our earthly friendships. Many times we fail to cultivate our friendships. The more noble of character, the better is one qualified to have friends of true worth. Is it not true that you live most and best as you enter most into the possibilities of friendship?

"Implanted in our very nature at creation is the possibility of friendship with God, for we are created in His image. The world is sadly in need of a revival of religion and I believe it is coming.

"In closing, I plead with you for loyalty to friendship, loyalty to truth, and loyalty to the God of love. 'For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.' His religion is for time and eternity."

Under such adverse weather conditions as have prevailed for the past few weeks it seems little short of a miracle to have anyone tell us that they picked peas out of their garden for dinner on June 17, but nevertheless that is precisely what happened at the Philip Stockton estate. A fine mess of this toothsome vegetable was gathered from the garden on the 17th by Dennis Conlon, the gardener.

A car belonging to Philip Stockton, in charge of the chauffeur, ran into and badly damaged a limousine belonging to W. B. Hornblower, of New York, Monday. The accident occured near the Stockton entrance. The chauffeur did not see the other car approaching in time to stop, and hit the side of the car a swiping blow, badly wrecking the running board as well as doing other minor damage. Fortunately the occupants of neither car were injured.

the young fellows who cannot vote on the matter."

Howard Standley: "I think the parents are fully competent to talk for these young fellows, and the parents can voice an opinion for their sons who cannot vote."

E. P. Stanley: "I think the best we can do is to 'set on' this matter at once. It is a well-known fact that boys cannot play baseball without making a noise, and that's only natural, too. We don't want a lot of noise in our town on Sunday."

Opposed to Sabbath Desecration

Rev. H. E. Levoy: "Between golf and baseball there is much difference. To have baseball played in town on Sunday afternoon with its noise and hilarity would be a flagrant desecration of the Sabbath. If we tonight take the stand which some of the voters wish us to, we will be flying in the face of Almighty God, and just as surely as Germany is paying for her sins, we will have to pay the penalty."

The moderator took the opportunity of asking Rev. Levoy if silent sin is any different from noisy sin.

Charles C. Dodge: "If it is perfectly right and proper to have Sunday sports between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon, why isn't it all right to have sports all day long?"

Mr. Till: "I am very much opposed to the town allowing the members of the Essex County club to play golf on Sunday and preventing the poor man from playing baseball."

'Raising Thunder' Out of Town

Curtis B. Stanley: "I did not sign the petition, but I think it is for the best interests of the town to try this act here. If we have legalized sport in Manchester we can keep our young men at home instead of allowing them to go elsewhere and 'raise thunder.' I hope the motion will prevail."

Abbott Foster: "I cannot understand how this is called an 'emergency bill.' Most of the young men in Manchester are through work at 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon. If they work in Boston and return home at 6 o'clock they still have a couple hours of daylight six days in the week. The majority of them have Saturday afternoons free from their work. God in His infinite wisdom decreed one day's rest in seven. What was good enough along this line for our forefathers should be good enough for us."

The moderator asked if the voters were ready for the question, and as several responded that they were, he appointed Wm. W. Hoare, Joseph Lipman and Thomas Baker to serve as tellers.

Walter B. Calderwood: "I hope that this bill will not be accepted tonight. I believe it would be a sad thing to have Sunday sports in our town, and I wish to go on record as opposed to our adopting this measure."

Sunday Sports Killed

The motion was then put, with the following result: Affirmative 44, negative 63, and Moderator Allen declared that the negatives had won the decision. There was liberal applause from all who had opposed the passage of this act. As there was no further business, the meeting adjourned at 8.25 o'clock.

Lotus Male Quartet Gives Program in Manchester

The Lotus male quartet and reader, of Boston, gave an entertainment Wednesday evening at the Town hall, Manchester, under the auspices of the local lodge of A. O. U. W.

The United Workman's lodge is to be commended for bringing such a high-class entertainment to Manchester. The attendance was not as large as it should have been for such a first-class program. Several of those present expressed their appreciation of the excellence of the entertainment.

The quartet included Robert Martin, first tenor; William Hicks, second tenor; Nelson Raymond, baritone; Frank Cannell, basso; Susan Ellis, accompanist. Miss Bertha Morgan was the reader. The selections by the entertainers were of a high grade, and gave universal satisfaction, receiving liberal applause.

The following program was presented:

Wakefield will Oppose Manchester Tomorrow

Manchester will play Wakefield tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon on the Brook st. playground, Manchester, the game starting promptly at 3.15.

Wakefield will have many of last year's players in the line-up: Reid, ss; Mills, cf; Young, 2b; Branch, 1f; Walsh, 1b; Bliss, rf; Barry, 3b; Bennett, c; O'Neil and Connolly, p.

Lothrop will be in the box for Manchester. With the exception that Francis will hold down third base, the line-up will be practically the same as last week.

It will be remembered that Manchester defeated Wakefield last year by the score of 2 to 1. Wakefield put its lone tally across in the fifth; Manchester's winning run came in the seventh.

P. H. Boyle Entertains Members of Gilbert Club

The Gilbert club, of Gloucester, composed of past and present officers of the Gloucester fire department, enjoyed its annual outing at Tuck's Point, Manchester, Saturday afternoon as guests of Patrick H. Boyle, of Summer st., Manchester.

The afternoon was most enjoyably spent in a social manner. An old-fashioned New England corned beef dinner was served, to which everyone did full justice.

Mr. Boyle has been entertaining this club for a number of years. About 75 members were present at the outing Saturday to partake of his hospitality.

Self-confidence is the first requisite of human greatness.

ODD FELLOWS PLAY BALL

Magnolia and Ocean Lodges Cross Bats—Some Game

The first of a series of baseball games between members of lodges of Odd Fellows in this vicinity was held Wednesday evening at Manchester between Magnolia lodge, of Manchester, and Ocean lodge, of Gloucester.

If the players enjoyed the game as much as the spectators did, they had a great time! Baseball suits were conspicuous by their absence. Although only nine men played at one time on a side, the final line-up shows that a total of nearly thirty participated during the game.

Manchester easily won the victory, the score being 22 to 2. A 7-inning game was played and the home team put its runs across the plate almost at will. We do not know how many hits were made, but it is certain that the number was a liberal one. Errors? Well, yes, there were some—due probably to the wet condition of the ground and not to any shortcomings of the players. Dr. Tyler "officiated" as umpire.

Manchester line-up: A. Cool, c; G. Cool, p; McDiarmid, 1b; A. Walen, 2b; Stanley, 2b; W. Walen, ss; Grey, ss; Willis, 3b, 1b; Hutchinson, 3b, 1b; W. Cook, lf; H. Hoare, lf; E. Smith, cf; W. Craig, rf, p; J. Noyes, p, rf; A. Dennis, rf.

Gloucester line-up: Flygore, 1b; Martin, 3b; K. Webber, 2b; Anderson, 2b; Parkhurst, p; Steele, p; Dutton, rf; Sofford, lf; J. Webber, cf; Foley, c; Nichols, ss.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Manchester	1	0	3	2	5	7	4	—22
Gloucester	0	0	1	0	0	0	1	— 2

The Ocean lodge baseball team will again cross bats with Magnolia one week from this evening, July 2.

It is desired to form a baseball league between the Odd Fellows lodges of Salem, Beverly, Gloucester and Manchester. All games will be played on the Manchester grounds.

Program for Fourth of July Celebration at Manchester

The following program has been announced by the committee in charge of the Fourth of July celebration at Manchester: The morning events will be held on Brook st., near the playground. Commencing at 8.30 o'clock the boys will have a chance to show their ability in various sports, the winners of which will be awarded silver and bronze medals. The events and classes will be grouped as follows:

75-yard dash
High jump

Class D

For boys weighing over 135 lbs.
100-yard dash
High jump
Running broad jump

Class A—Boys 120 lbs. and under Class B—Boys weighing over 120 lbs.
Relay race

Class A—Boys weighing 120 lbs. and under Class B—Boys weighing over 120 lbs.

Events for Girls

50-yard dash
Potato race

There will be first and second prizes for all events, except the relay races. The prizes for the girls' events will be a 1-lb. box of Page & Shaw chocolates as first prize, 1-2-lb. box as second prize.

All contestants are requested to present their names to Dr. Frank A. Willis, chairman of the committee, on or before the 4th, as the celebration takes place on Monday, July 5.

Following the races there will be a ball game between Manchester and Danvers on the Brook st. grounds, the game being scheduled to start at 10 o'clock.

At 1 o'clock, in the inner harbor, Alex Sjorlund will give a demonstration of his miniature power boats, cruisers, battleships and hydroplanes.

At 2.30 and 7.45 o'clock there will be concerts by the Salem Light Infantry band.

The officials at the morning events will be: Carleton Coffin, clerk of course and starter; Dr. F. A. Willis, chief scorer; Clarence Mackin and F. R. MacCallum, judges.

Chester Crafts arrived home Tuesday after attending the commencement exercises at Norwich university, and also visiting his son, Gordon, at Amherst Agricultural school.

Word has been received from Mr. and Mrs. Murdo MacKay (Alma Baker) telling of their safe arrival at Glenmeaine House, Strath Canon, Scotland, the home of Mr. MacKay's parents.

William Edwin Andrews, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wm. Andrews, Pleasant st., was operated upon at the Beverly hospital last week, from which we are glad to hear he is improving.

E. L. Valentine is now running a daily express service, by truck, between Gloucester and Boston. He bought out the Eaton Express, running from Essex and Gloucester to Boston, as well as putting on a new truck of his own.

At the annual outing of the Bay State Automobile association, held at Rye Beach, June 17, Wm. Francis was the particular bright star in the amateur athletic events of the day. He carried off two firsts, two seconds and a special prize.

Although the Manchester Food Centre has been given up, the classes in dressmaking, millinery, dietetics, etc., will not be discontinued, as Miss Marion Parker, who is now living in Beverly, will come to Manchester for two afternoons and evenings a week. The exact time and place of meeting of these classes, which are to begin in the early fall, will be announced later.

The Congregational parish basket picnic will be held at Tuck's Point, Thursday, July 1; if rainy, on Friday. The house will be open all day, but since many are busy at noon a special effort is made to emphasize the supper at 6 p. m. Conveyances will leave the Common at 2, 2.30, 3, 3.30, 5 and 5.30 and returning leave Tuck's Point from 7 p. m. on. Children, up to 10 years, may ride free; the regular fare is 10c. Ice cream, lemonade and coffee will be on sale. Games and sports are planned for the afternoon. Cards have been sent out as far as possible to those interested in the church, but all are welcome and it is hoped a large number will join in this church family outing.

Senior Class Reception at Horticultural Hall

The annual reception given by the members of the graduating class of Story High school, Manchester, was held Friday evening last in the Horticultural hall, Manchester. Music was furnished by Long's orchestra of seven pieces.

The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion. The class had engaged the services of a professional decorator, but received word on Friday noon that he had met with an auto accident and was unable to come to Manchester. This left the matter of decorating until a rather late hour, but by hustling on Friday afternoon the class was able to have the hall make a very pleasing appearance to the throng of guests who attended the affair.

In the receiving line were Supt. and Mrs. John C. Mackin, Prin. and Mrs. John O. Matthews, and the officers of the Senior class. The reception was held from 8 until 8.30 o'clock, followed by dancing until 1 o'clock.

Many Manchester Graduates will Continue Studies Next Fall

It is gratifying to note that about half of the members of this year's graduating class at Story High school, Manchester, are planning to continue their studies next fall in more advanced institutions of learning. Among those who are planning to continue their education are Helen Beaton, Wellesley college; Ruth Bullock and Ruth Carroll, Salem Normal; Janet Height, Boston university; Alice Henneberry, Salem Commercial; Bernice Lee, post graduate course at Story High; Violet Read, business college; Ernest Lucas, Mass. Agricultural college; Arthur Miguel, Bowdoin college; Lester Peabody, Norwich university; William Singleton, Bentley school of accounting; Mark Sinnicks, Mass. Institute of Tech.; Wm. Murray, Norwich university.

MANCHESTER DEFEATED

Hawley-Folsom the Winners Last Saturday, 9-6

Manchester met defeat last Saturday afternoon on the Brook st. playgrounds, Manchester, being forced to take the count to the tune of 9 to 6 by the Hawley-Folsom Co. baseball team, of Boston. The visitors put the game on ice in the first two innings, rolling up a total of eight runs, mainly by clean and well-placed hits.

Leon Lothrop succeeded Brawley in the second and held the Boston men safe to one run, a gift in the eighth. Lothrop surely pitched great ball, and if he had started, Manchester probably would have won.

"Jimmy" Cassell, Boston College High twirler, was on the mound for the visitors and pitched airtight ball for three innings. He began to go bad in the fourth and was continually in trouble from that time on, but the big lead given him by his teammates in the first two innings proved good enough to win.

There were two out in the first before Hawley-Folsom started on the rampage. Ware, first up, walked and Cousens sacrificed. Chick was thrown out at first and then the fireworks started. Flynn and Murray singled, and Wogan capped the climax by driving the pill into the brook for a homer. In the second, the visitors collected three more runs on a pair of singles and a double. With one down, Lothrop went to the mound and retired the side without further scoring.

Manchester started scoring in the fifth, getting two in this frame. Abbott hit one into the brook for the circuit in the sixth. In the ninth, Andrews walked, Harrison popped out, and on Warner's single to center, Andrews went to third. Kelley doubled to right, scoring two runs. Kelley scored on Abbott's rap to the shortstop. Joyce, who had received a walk, was forced at second, and Sanford ended the game by flying to left.

Sanford, Manchester's new third baseman, gave a splendid exhibition of taking care of the hot corner. He started and completed a double play with Andrews in the ninth, participated in another double in the fourth and by his all-round play made a hit with the fans. At the bat he hit the ball hard despite the fact that he was handicapped by playing with a bad thumb, which pained him all through the game. In the eighth, a decision which was questioned by many robbed him of a two base hit, a drive that would have given Manchester two more runs and might have changed the result of the game.

JUST TAKE HIM AT HIS BEST

When your brother man you measure,
Take him at his best;
Something in him you can treasure,
Overlook the rest.
Though of his some trait or fetter
May not suit you to the letter,
Trust him—it will make him better;
Take him at his best.

Praise will make him worth the praising;
Take him at his best.
Keep the fire of purpose blazing
Ever in his breast.
Do not frown upon or scold him;
In the strength of faith infold him,
To his highest yearning mold him;
Take him at his best.

Recitals by Pupils of Miss Dennett in Salem and Manchester

Miss Lucy Dennett, who has been teaching the violin in Manchester the past year, gave a recital for her pupils at the House of Seven Gables in Salem, Tuesday evening, June 8. The pupils taking part were Irene Opokka, Pauline Talkowska, Florian Ostrowski, Joseph Nowak, Zenon Zbyszynski, Paul Paszkowski, William Morday, Anna Paszkowski, Stacia Kohn, Alexander Melenski, Alexander Ochlakowski, Stella Dubiel and Francis Racioppi. At the close of the program Miss Dennett gave a group of solos accompanied by Miss Dunham.

On Tuesday evening, June 15, Miss Dennett gave a joint recital with Miss Ethel M. Junkins, at Academy hall, Salem. Among the violin pupils who appeared on this program were Eric Wetterlow, Axel Magnuson, Florence Allen and Catherine Bullock, of Manchester.

Miss Dennett will give a recital for her Manchester pupils on Wednesday evening, June 30, at the Congregational chapel, Manchester.

New Rules Regarding the Printing of Tickets

According to a new ruling from the Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, a printer cannot furnish any tickets for a customer without complying with certain requirements. One of them is that on every printed ticket shall be stated the amount of regular admission to be collected, the amount of tax and the amount of the total, unless the affair has a certificate of exemption.

To quote from a circular issued by the department: "Tickets of admission must show the name and address of the place to which they admit. All tickets must show the 'established price' of admission, the amount of tax and the total of the two on the part of the ticket that is taken up at the door, as in the following example:

Established price	25c
Tax paid	3c
Total	28c

"Stock tickets must not be used in any form."

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

"In December, 1918, there was held in Boston a notable exhibition of portraits of New England aviators; a collection so imposing as to create a demand for its permanent preservation." A committee was appointed and the result of its work is "New England Aviators, 1914-1918, — Their Portraits and Their Records." This is a two-volume work containing about four hundred and fifty portraits and the records of 542 men. No one could look into the faces of these men without being proud of our New England youth. Some 95 of these men made the supreme sacrifice. This work is a gift to the library from Mrs. Russell S. Codman.

A great deal has been written about Theodore Roosevelt, but without doubt the best biography to date is "Theodore Roosevelt, an Intimate Biography," by William Roscoe Thayer. Be sure and read it.

"The Road to En-dor" has been truly called "An Amazing Story." It tells how two British officers, who were prisoners in a Turkish prison camp, took up spiritualism to amuse their fellow prisoners and through the use of a ouija board so worked on the minds of the Turkish officials in charge that it was not long before the "spook" was running the camp. Later they effected their escape through this means.

"Old Plymouth Trails," by Winthrop Packard is a beautifully illustrated volume giving interesting information about Plymouth and the surrounding country; very apropos in this tercentenary year.

Sarah Ware Bassett, who is well-known to the boys and girls as the author of "The Story of" series containing "The Story of Wool," "The Story of Lumber," "The Story of Cotton" and others, has started a new series called the "Invention Series." The first volume in the series is "Paul and the Printing Press." The young people will find this a very pleasant way of adding to their knowledge of the art of printing.

"The Great Desire," by Alexander Black, is one of the new novels. The late William Dean Howells spoke very highly of this book in a review in the New York Times.

"The Cross Pull," by Hal G. Evarts, is a story of the western forests. It has to do with the great outdoors and with animals in the woods. It has been called "the best animal story since 'The Call of the Wild.'"

"The Last Leaf, Observations During Seventy-five Years of Men and Events in America and Europe," by James Kendall Hosmer. This is a volume of highly pleasing reminiscences. This book was published in 1912. It has been very little read, no doubt because it is not known. The author came in contact with many prominent men in this country and in Europe. He was in Germany during the Franco-Prussian war, and his observations on that event make very entertaining reading. There is not a dull page in the book.

Another very readable book is "Studies in Contemporary Biography," by James Bryce, author of that excellent political history of the United States called "The American Commonwealth." The studies are twenty in number. They are short sketches of well-known people such as Anthony Trollope, John Richard Green, author of "A Short History of the English People," and Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Next week there will be a short note on some works that should be better known and more read than they are at the present time.

WHAT TO DO IN A THUNDER STORM:

IF you are out-of-doors in a very severe electrical storm, it is well to observe the following rules for your own protection:

1. Keep away from wire fences. They may carry a dangerous electrical charge long distances. Cattle in pastures are frequently killed through the neglect of farmers to ground the wire of the fence.
2. Keep away from hedges, ponds and streams.
3. Keep away from isolated trees. Oak trees are frequently struck; beech are seldom struck. It is safe in a dense forest.
4. Keep away from herds of cattle and crowds of people.
5. Do not hold an umbrella over you.
6. It is safer to sit or lie down in an open field than to stand.
7. Drivers should dismount and not stay close to their horses.
8. Do not work with any large metal tool or implement.

If you are indoors:

1. Keep away from the stove and chimney. The hot gasses from the chimney may conduct the lightning to and down the chimney.
2. Do not take a position between two bodies of metal, as the stove and waterpipe, for example. An exception to being near metals is the case of an iron bed. One of the safest places is on a matress in an iron bed, provided you do not touch the metal. The metal surrounding you makes a safe cage, which will prevent the lightning from reaching a person inside.
3. Do not stand on a wet floor nor draw water from the well or faucet.
4. Do not stand directly under a chandelier, near a radiator, nor on a register.
5. Do not use the telephone in suburban districts. In cities there is practically no danger, as the wires are placed underground.—Science and Invention.

POLL TAX MUST BE PAID

Provisions of New Law Make Evasion a Risky Venture

Edwin P. Stanley, tax collector for the town of Manchester, has sent out the 1920 poll tax bills, the same being put into the mails recently for distribution among the voters. According to the provisions of the law recently passed by the Massachusetts legislature, every poll tax must be paid within two weeks of receipt of bill. The special act requires that constables shall be employed to enforce collection of all poll taxes not paid within one month after the bill has been received.

Veterans of the Civil war and the World war are exempted from paying this tax. It will be quite useless for any person to attempt to claim exemption unless he has a lawful right to do so, as the board of assessors will carefully scrutinize every such claim. There may possibly be some people who would wish to request that they be placed in "Class Five," but it is understood that there will be no "deferred classification" on the matter of paying this assessment.

For those not exempted, the poll tax this year is $5, of which $2 is retained by the town and $3 is turned over to the state to contribute toward the expense of the $100 veterans' bonus.

Tax Collector Stanley states that many Manchester men are paying promptly, but issues a warning to those who are delinquent thus far that two weeks is a short time and "the constable will get you if you don't watch out."

BEVERLY FARMS

Rev. Neilson Poe Carey and Alfred Moffit have returned home from a two weeks' vacation trip in the west.

Miss Florence Connell has gone to northern Vermont, where she will spend the summer visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Anderson, of Schenectady, N. Y., have been among the visitors at Beverly Farms the past week.

Over 40 young people of St. Margaret's church received confirmation last Saturday morning at a special service conducted by Bishop Anderson.

Living quarters at Beverly Farms have all been occupied. There are many men employed here for the summer who would like to bring their families to town, but are unable to find any kind of a tenement.

George G. Hamor, of Beverly, has commenced his duties at West Beach. He will have charge of the pier and grounds at this popular bathing resort. Supt. Henry Perkins will, as in former years, have charge of the pavilion.

Beverly schools closed on Wednesday for the summer vacation and the young people are especially happy over the fact. The teachers at the Farms school, with one exception, live out of town and most of them have left for their respective homes.

Wedding invitations are out for the coming marriage reception of Miss Margaret Grey Lee, of Beverly Farms, and Charles Elmer Thomas, of Salem. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon, June 30, followed by a reception at 4.30 o'clock at the First Baptist church, Beverly Farms. Mr. Thomas is a well-known and popular young man in his home town. Miss Lee is the daughter of Jacob W. Lee, of Manchester, and niece of Mrs. Lillian Standley, of this town.

There is a very apparent need of improvements to the sidewalk on West st., from a point at Haven corner, so-called, to West Beach. This sidewalk, for the next few months, will probably be used as much as any in the village outside of the business section. Little or nothing has ever been done to it and the travel, combined with the weather, has now given it a surface similar to the "rocky road to Dublin." Large stones, boulders and roots are most numerous, also holes and hollows. In these days of high cost of shoe leather, if one wishes to economize in footwear, he should travel some other road. The public works department would do well to resurface this side-walk at once, until permanent improvement could be made.

George S. Day and Miss Mary W. Warren Married

A very pretty June wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warren, Breezy Bend farm, Leicester, on Saturday afternoon, June 19, when their daughter, Mary Whittemore Warren, became the bride of George Stearns Day, of Beverly Farms. The bride has been in the government service the past nine years and during the World war was stationed in Tours, France.

The groom is a well-known Beverly Farms young man who served during the war as sergeant in the quartermaster's corps at Plattsburg, and who became acquainted with the bride at Washington while he was a patient at the Walter Reed hospital. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Reginald Marvin, of Franklin, a cousin of the bride, assisted by Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, of Beverly Farms.

The double ring service was used. James Sewell Day, a brother of the groom, was the best man, and Miss Eleanor Warren, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid. Miss Anna, another sister, played Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride was given away by her father.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white embroidered georgette crepe and wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The home was prettily decorated with peonies and rhododendrons.

After the ceremony a reception was held, attended by many relatives and friends of the happy couple, who were the recipients of many beautiful wedding gifts.

It was an interesting fact that the dining table used at the reception was one that James Otis, John Adams and Gen. Joseph Warren used in the American Revolution. The bride's ancestry dates back to General Warren. After a wedding trip to Quebec, Ottawa and Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Day will be at home to their friends at 12 Oak st., Beverly Farms.

Marshall Woodbury is at Beverly Farms for the summer. He is chauffeur for Miss Mary Amory and has been in New York since last fall.

Beverly has 5940 polls assessed for the $5 war poll tax, according to the figures of the assessors. Ward 6, the Beverly Farms section, with 414, has the smallest number.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Braden (Bessie Williams), of Phillips, Me., are planning to come to Beverly Farms next week and will probably spend the summer here.

Loring Cullen has resigned as managing clerk of the local wholesale distribution store, on West st., to accept a position in the Gould store in his home town at Hamilton.

Daniel Linehan, Jr., James Connolly and John Lawlor, students at St. John's Prep., have finished their school year and are at their homes here for the summer vacation.

It is understood that Wm. Till, of Manchester, is the new owner of the Linehan property, on West st. This property, which consists of a frame dwelling house and quite a large lot of land, was transferred last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peterson are to occupy an apartment in the house on Hale st. owned by Mrs. Peterson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Neville. The present tenants, Peter McLaughlin and family, will soon vacate.

The local American Legion ball team will play the "Old Timers," of Beverly Farms, at the playground tomorrow, Saturday, afternoon. The "Old Timers" have plenty of material to present a strong team. Augustine Callahan is the captain.

More than 2000 people visited the peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural society at Boston this week, the principal attraction for most of the visitors being the orchid display from the estate of Albert C. Burrage, of Beverly Farms. A silver medal was awarded to Mr. Burrage for the specimen plant of Cattleya Mossiae, which was one of the finest exhibits in the show.

The following are those from Beverly Farms who were graduated in the 1920 class from the Beverly High school this week: Virginia Linehan, Phyllis Culbert, Ellen O'Brien, Margaret Rourke and John Watson. The week has been one of exceeding interest and also a busy one for the graduates.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on hand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

Miss Winnie Brooks, of Lowell, has been a guest of Mrs. Peter McLaughlin, Hale st., this week.

Mrs. William R. Brooks and daughter, Hester, will go to Augusta, Me., next week, for a vacation stay of from four to six weeks.

Quite a large addition is being built to the James J. Nugent garage, on Vine st., which is to be used by the new firm of Nugent & Peterson, for auto supplies and accessories.

Plans have been made to open the Beverly Farms playgrounds for summer instruction of the children soon after the Fourth. The selection of an instructor will be made next week.

Miss Amy Striley has gone to her home at Danvers Highlands, where she spends the summer vacation. In a few days Miss Elizabeth Harding will leave for her home at Union, Me., for the summer. Both young ladies are teachers at the Beverly Farms school.

It looks now as if there would not be any sort of a celebration of the Fourth at Beverly Farms and those who want to celebrate will probably have to go out of town. For years Beverly Farms had the best program of sports, music and evening display that could be arranged, but it cost money and it had to be raised by popular subscription. The coming of the World war and the use of money for purposes in connection with the war, put an end to the Fourth of July celebrations.

Potatoes at Twenty Cents per Pound

The potato of other days, while respectable and highly esteemed in its place, never gave evidence of being aspiring. It was, in fact, groveling and gave the impression of having made rather a hash of its life. Boiled with the jacket on, it had a boarding-house air that was a good deal of a handicap to a career. Baked, it rose somewhat in the scale and was deemed worthy to associate with codfish and cream gravy. Fried in the French fashion, it had some pretensions to position in the world. But never until now, we believe, has the potato boldly asserted its claim to be classed as a hothouse fruit.

This is a species of Bolshevism that can not be tolerated. This is a social upheaval that threatens the entire fabric, structure, and framework of civilization itself. If this thing spreads the turnip, the parsnip, ay, the carrot even, may rise up and pass themselves off as oranges, pears and grapes. The potato must be put down. It has become a malefactor of great wealth, a combination in restraint of dinner, a trust, a merger and an octopus. It ought to be mashed. — Kansas City Star.

Federal Theatre, Salem

Plenty of safe parking space for autos is available for summer residents of the North Shore who attend the Federal theatre, Salem. With all of its 1300 seats on one big floor, with no posts to obstruct the view, and a big orchestral organ,—the largest of its kind on the coast, — it is easy to understand why this Salem playhouse enjoys a big patronage from the summer folk.

Next Monday the double feature bill at the Federal includes Cecil B. DeMille's big special production, "Old Wives for New." Mr. DeMille's big successes like "Why Change Your Wife?" "Everywoman" and others which have been shown at the Federal, prepare the theatre-going public for something equally as masterful. Wm. Faversham's first motion picture, "The Man Who Lost Himself," will be shown on the same bill.

Next Thursday for three days will be shown the big Mack Sennett comedy, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin."

MAGNOLIA

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Boyd spent the week-end at Derry, N. H., visiting relatives.

The Moodys have returned to one of the Magnolia Inn cottages for another summer.

Mrs. Frank Dunbar will take the place of Mrs. Symonds as matron at the Men's club this season.

Owing to the heavy fall of rain this spring and of late the hay crop in this vicinity promises to be a very large one.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pierson and family are again occupying the Wm. Symonds cottage on Magnolia ave., for the season.

Mrs. Tait and little girl left here Wednesday morning for Montana, where they will join the former's husband and parents.

Frank Dupont, of Cambridge, and Nelson Butler, of Manchester, a recent graduate of the high school, have positions at Foster's drug store for the summer.

Services will be held in the Union chapel, Sunday morning, at 10.45 o'clock, and they will be conducted by Dr. Eaton, the minister of the Union Congl. church of this place.

Mrs. Fred S. Lycett, who has been teaching in Hudson for some months past, and her little daughter, Elizabeth, have returned for the summer to their home on the corner of Norman ave. and Fuller st.

Owing to the union service in the Union chapel next Sunday morning there will be no service in the Union Congl. church at that hour. The Sunday evening services at the Union Congl. church will be resumed July 4, at 8.15 o'clock.

Mary Boyd returned to her home Wednesday from Stowe, where she has been teaching in the high school of that town. Owing to her splendid success as a teacher and disciplinarian she has been invited to return to the same position for another year. Thus one by one our Magnolia boys and girls are making good in the world and to record this fact is always a great pleasure to us.

Among the places in the village that have been greatly improved in looks of late are the Stanley cottage on Western ave., and the D. C. Ballou home and grounds off Magnolia ave. People generally here seem to take pride in the appearance of their places of residence and this is as it should be. Judging, however, from the three unsightly objects that are still here it would seem as though there are people who care little for the beautiful.

The Women's Club

The Monday night dance was largely attended. The music was furnished by Messrs. Griffin and Johnson, two of the bell boys at the Oceanside, and was enjoyed by all present. The membership of the club to date is 81, somewhat in advance of last year at this time.

Miss Abbott's assembly was a very pretty party on Tuesday. Anderson's orchestra furnished the music. At the Friday evening dance ice cream will be on sale at intermission.

Miss Margaret Cahill, the well-known dressmaker, has arrived at the clubhouse for the season. All of the rooms are rented and will be occupied by the last of next week.

A community sing is being planned for Sunday evenings beginning a week from this coming Sunday. It is hoped that this will prove a pleasant hour for both girls and boys.

The Men's Club

The Men's club held its opening dance on Wednesday and it proved as successful as in former seasons. Bowling is also proving as popular as it was last year. The alleys will be in charge of Wm. Hunt in the evening. There will be the usual dance on Saturday night.

The membership to date is about 40 and is steadily growing. Some of the rooms are occupied and a good season is expected.

Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.

Those who cannot do as they would, must do as they can.

Was Proprietor of the Town

Not long ago, the story runs, a traveling salesman visited a certain small town and sold the proprietor of its general store an order of jewelry. When the jewelry arrived it was not as represented, and the merchant consequently returned it. But the wholesale house nevertheless attempted to collect the bill, and drew a sight draft on the merchant through the local bank, which returned the draft unhonored.

The wholesaler then wrote to the postmaster about the financial standing of the merchant and the postmaster replied laconically that it was O. K.

By return mail the wholesalers requested him to collect the account and they received the following reply:

"The undersigned is the merchant on whom you attempted to palm off your worthless goods. The undersigned is president and owner of the bank to which you sent your sight draft. The undersigned is the postmaster to whom you wrote, and the undersigned is the lawyer whose services you sought to obtain for your nefarious business. If the undersigned were not also pastor of the church at this place he would tell you to go to the devil."—Rehobeth Sunday Herald.

THE SERGE-CLAD MAID

A serge-clad maid so fair to see
Once sought the surge-clad shore;
And underneath the rolling waves
The maid made dives galore.
The color ran from out her serge
That looked at first so gay.
It was not made for wear of surf,
But surface wear, they say.

MOVIE CENSORSHIP

Statement of the Situation Regarding the Future of the Bill

The state committee on motion pictures, at a special meeting held in the Twentieth Century club rooms, appointed a sub-committee to draw up a statement of the situation regarding the future of the bill for a state censorship of moving pictures. The committee begs leave to make the following report:

We regret that Attorney-General Allen, after having given the committee of the legislature which drew the bill an opinion that it was constitutional, subsequently changed his mind and found a part of the bill which seemed to him unconstitutional, and that the governor, basing his decision upon the attorney-general's second opinion, vetoed the bill too late to allow any further action this year.

As for the future, we intend to present a bill which will be satisfactory to the revised opinion of the attorney-general and beyond all question constitutional. We know that this can be done, as this bill followed closely the language of censorship laws in four other states which have been declared constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

We wish to call attention to the fact that the moving picture industry has thus far stood together against a censorship which would eliminate the filth from the films that are presented before the young people of the commonwealth; that the industry has carried on an active campaign against all the agencies for character building in the state; that they have shown no sign of changing the type of films which they are presenting; and that in this last week some of the most objectionable sort have been advertised.

We express to all those who have been interested, our appreciation of those representatives and senators who have stood so solidly with us in this fight for decency and of all those other agencies and individuals in the state which have helped us. We believe that very shortly the cause of right in this matter is going to triumph over the cause of greed and shame, and we urge your hearty support in every way possible to carry through this very necessary measure next year.

Approved and accepted by the executive committee, B. PRESTON CLARK, Chairman.

Whether one intends to loll on nearby beaches watching the bounding surf, or to invade the mountaineers' fastnesses or to spend lazy summer days in the quiet, so-called peacefulness of one's own home, there must be, in the well-planned vacation wardrobe, plenty of SPORTS CLOTHES. Destined to cause more than an occasional flutter among feminine hearts is the Oh, So Swagger Sports Suit. SOCIETY NOTES

WITH musicales, conferences, lectures, bridge parties and the like already scheduled, the season of 1920 is on. It's going to be a typical North Shore summer. There is going to be some serious work thrown in between the pleasures, both among the younger as well as the older sets. With the coming of July we can see the season's advance and all plans seem to forecast a summer of pleasure and profit for everybody.

Miss Nancy Carnegie and Miss Mabel Bremer have been two busy Manchester girls this week. Miss Carnegie, of Manchester Cove, was the maid of honor at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Lucy Carnegie Ricketson, of Pittsburg, and Robert Weeks Ferguson, of New Bedford, while Miss Bremer, of Smith's Point, was one of the bridesmaids. The wedding took place Tuesday afternoon at New Bedford.

Sen. and Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt, of Providence, R. I., and their two young children, are living in the Ahl cottage, located in one of the attractive wooded and rocky sections of Pride's Crossing. Mrs. Lippitt, a sister of Mrs. Wm. H. Taft, has her two sons, William and Thomas Laughlin, with her, as usual. The coming wedding in the family of Miss Helen Taft and Frederick J. Manning at Murray Bay, Canada, on July 15, is not only of interest in the Lippitt family, by on the Shore generally, for Miss Taft is well remembered when she and her parents occupied a summer place at Montserrat while her father held the presidential chair.

Mrs. M. G. Haughton, of Pride's Crossing, is taking her usual interest in the series of conferences planned by Mlle. Germaine Cossini, of Manchester, so well-known to North Shore people.

The Paine Whitney family, of New York, are expected to come to the Cochrane cottage at Pride's Crossing next Monday. Last year they were in the Ellis L. Dresel cottage at Pride's.

Rummage sale, Saturday, July 10, at 7 Washington st., Beverly, to benefit the New England school for deaf mutes. Mrs. Samuel Vaughan, Mrs. Bayard Warren and Mrs. Everett Dodge in charge.

The Ayer home and "Swiftmoor" are two big estates that will be closed this season it is said. Both of these are among the show places at Pride's Crossing.

SOCIETY NOTES

"ROCKMARGE," at Pride's Crossing, and its dinner party Wednesday evening was the culmination of a day of one round of gardens for the Garden club of America. Mrs. William H. Moore had her beautiful terrace and piazza filled with tables for the 150 delegates who were her guests. Each table was centered with a shallow dish of roses of all the shades and tints that could be found in the exquisite display now on in her rose garden. The clusters were of the same color on a table so that the two dozen or more tables represented about that many different hues.

The terrace with its vine-covered iron railing, Dorothy Perkins roses and several white marble boxes and urns filled with pink geraniums, made a lovely setting for the tables. The piazza had two great clumps of hydrangeas for decorations. The garden view was all that could be desired, but it is to be regretted that a fog hung over the water, thus shutting out the charming view over the islands toward Marblehead.

The tea which preceded the dinner, the tea for all the 400 guests, at Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane's in Manchester, was the only time the sun looked out from behind the clouds on the first two days of the meeting. All of the al fresco luncheons and dinners, however, were carried out according to plans.

"Pompey's Garden" must have been a surprise to the Garden club when they crossed the pretty little beach back of "Pine Hill," the Pride's Crossing estate of Judge and Mrs. W. C. Loring, on their way up the rocky and natural ascent to Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw's place. The wildness of the place is charming and the club must have come upon the little gem of a garden in a most surprised manner. Hardly anyone would dream of a garden spot there, but once found and entered "Pompey's Garden" stands out prominently as one of "the beautiful pictures that hangs upon memory's wall."

Judge W. C. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, was caught by the sudden squall that came up Tuesday evening while coming into the shore back of his home. The waves dashed his little boat around with a will, but it managed to hold its own and the party remained in it until the storm abated and it was considered safe to land.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tudor Gardiner (Margaret Thomas), son-in-law and daughter of the Washington B. Thomases, of Pride's Crossing, are spending the summer at Gardiner, Me.

ESSEX COUNTY CLUB, Manchester, is having its first dinner dance tonight. On Wednesday 110 Garden club visitors had luncheon at the club.

Mrs. Lester Leland, of West Manchester, had a most unique showing of strawberries planted in a small barrel at the recent flower show. Luscious fruit hanging from vines growing out here and there through the barrel as well as from the top made a fine showing.

Mrs. Maynard Ladd, of Beverly Farms, will have her studio open for visitors every Thursday afternoon this season. The studio is a charming room made out of a barn at their new home in Preston place. Sculpture is what Mrs. Ladd works upon.

Mrs. George Washburn, of "Oak Ledge," Manchester, is entertaining the Rev. Dr. Geo. F. Herrick, of New York, over the week-end. Dr. Herrick formerly spent many years in Turkey.

MR. AND MRS. WM. H. COOLIDGE, of Manchester, turned beautiful "Blynman Farm" over to 90 of the Coolidges who came from far and wide last Saturday, a week ago, for a family reunion. Swimming, and walking over the grounds and through the gardens were thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Holbrook, of Newton, who have spent several seasons in the Manchester Cove section, are now in Mrs. Robert de Wolfe Sampson's house, formerly occupied by Mrs. Sampson. Mrs. Sampson has not yet come upon the Shore. She has reserved the little cottage across the road from her house for her own use this season. Last year Mrs. J. L. Chalifoux, of Lowell, had this cottage. The William R. Roscoe Thayer family, of Cambridge, have always spent the summers with Mrs. Sampson.

THE NAVY FESTIVAL to be held tomorrow (Saturday) at Beverly Farms will be one of the greatest events ever staged on the North Shore. As a "night before" celebration it will surpass anything of a semi-public affair yet presented in this section, serving to usher in the "great and glorious Fourth." The Haven estate is ready for its "one round of pleasure." Do your shopping tomorrow at the festival and help the Charlestown Navy Y. M. C. A.

From the North Shore estates have come liberal donations of dairy products and vegetables. Mrs. I. R. Thomas, of Ipswich, will have charge of the dairy booth. Her assistants, Mrs. F. J. Alley, Mrs. Ben P. P. Moseley, Mrs. Wm. Sheafe and Mrs. C. P. Curtis, Jr., have secured a wonderful hoard of dairy products. Mrs. Thomas has also given a thoroughbred pig and calf that will be auctioned.

The day's program includes a horse show, whippet races, a tea dansant, supper dance and cabaret, music by a naval band, drilling by a squad of jackies and a number of innovations for children.

There will be plenty of gold lace in evidence for Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards and his staff, and Rear Admiral Dunn and his staff, have accepted invitations to be present. The Navy department has ordered Submarines O-1 and O-2 to anchor off the Beverly Farms shore on the day of the festival. The committee will arrange for motor boats to make frequent trips to these undersea crafts.

Frederick Ayer is chairman of the horse show committee. Much interest has been shown and the hundred boxes have been sold. Bayard Warren is chairman of the committee planning the supper dance. Mrs. George von L. Meyer, chairman of the booths committees, has had scores of helpers from all along the Shore. So shop tomorrow at the Haven estate in Beverly Farms.

Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, of Manchester, has always been intensely interested in gardening. Her daughter, Mrs. E. Laurence White, of Beverly Farms, is assisting her in plans for the lecture to be given at the Lancashire home on Friday, July 23, by Mary Rutherford Jay, noted garden architect, of New York. Miss Jay is spending the latter part of July with Mrs. Walter Brewster in Lake Forest, Ill. Mrs. Brewster was on the Shore attending the Garden club meeting this week. Miss Jay has delivered these lectures in many of our principal cities and the slides shown are especially interesting, being reproduced from photographs made by her personally of many gardens in this country, including California, as well as in England, India, China and Japan. Full information will be announced later, but everyone who is interested in gardens should set aside July 23d for this lecture.

A band concert will be given by the Salem Cadet band, tomorrow (Saturday) evening, in front of the Town hall in Wenham, from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels, of "Old Farm," Wenham, and the other ladies connected with the Improvement society are interested in this concert.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Hyde, of Philadelphia, have arrived at their summer home, "High Popples," on Atlantic ave., Bass Rocks, and will remain for the season. Their grandson, Edward Hyde Cox, is with them for the summer. Many friends of Mrs. Stanley M. Cox (Isabel D. Hyde), wife of Lieut. Stanley M. Cox, will be grieved to hear of her death during the past winter. Lieut. Cox is in the west this year and will not return to the North Shore.

"The Sumacks," the Manchester home of the late Mrs. Henry S. Grew, of Boston, will be open as usual this summer. Miss Amy White, who long made her home with Mrs. Grew, will be in it for the season.

Miss Virginia Wainwright, of Boston, will have a set of musical discourses this season, with musical illustrations, on the North Shore. A part of the proceeds will go to the Fatherless Children of France. The first talk, "Swedish Music," will be at Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart's, Manchester, July 20. The second, "Norwegian Music," will be at Hotel Tudor, Nahant. The third, "Music of Denmark, Iceland and Faroe Islands," will be at Mrs. Bayard Warren's, Pride's Crossing, August 17. A violinist will perform at the third musicale.

A special thermopak container for ice cream at Page & Shaw's Tea Room, Pride's Crossing, will keep contents hot or cold. Good for auto parties and will last for years. adv.

BEVERLY HOSPITAL held its graduation exercises late in the afternoon, Tuesday of this week. Five nurses received diplomas. John L. Saltonstall, of Beverly Cove, president of the board of directors, presided. Mrs. Saltonstall, who is a most charming violinist, gave several selections, accompanied by Miss Millicent Chapman, L. R. A. M., A. R. C. M. (London), of Salem. Rev. Edward Chase, of the Washington st. church, Beverly, offered prayer and the address of the occasion was made by Miss Sara E. Parsons, superintendent of the training school at the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston. Her subject was "Principles Deducted from the Life of Florence Nightingale."

The beautiful grounds surrounding the hospital, the nurses' home just like any North Shore summer cottage, and the hospital itself were greatly admired by the visitors. Surely this is an ideal hospital and ought to be one of the most sought-after training schools in the country.

Mr. Saltonstall said, in presenting the diplomas to the class, that the school had graduated 83 nurses since it opened and that never had one failed to pass the state examination. Very graciously he wished the nurses good luck and said the blessings of the hospital corps would always follow them. He then urged the public to visit the hospital frequently. Mr. Saltonstall believes in the Beverly hospital most thoroughly, but he said they were not setting themselves up as a 100% perfect institution, and he welcomed the criticisms that might come from visitors. These suggestions, he said, should be given to the superintendent. Beverly hospital, Mr. Saltonstall says, belongs to the people of all the surrounding towns where there is no such institution. It is Manchester's hospital, Wenham and Hamilton's and everybody's as well as Beverly's.

Mrs. Saltonstall's program included the following violin numbers: "Madrigale," by Simonetti; "Melodie," by Gluck; "Berceuse,"—Mlynarski; "Liebslied,"—Kriesler.

Miss Parson's address was a masterpiece in the way she handled the subject of nursing as it exists today in this time of unrest. She was overseas during the war at the head of the Massachusetts General hospital unit. Much credit is due to the nurses and doctors who stayed at home and helped win the war, as much as to those who went across, is Miss Parson's opinion. Especially have the training schools gone through much tribulation during the past three years, while our 1920 nurses have been in training, she also explained.

In celebration of the centenary of Florence Nightingale's birth, Miss Parsons based her talk on the life of that noble woman, whose vision of health work we, even now, have not yet caught up with. Briefly, she sketched her life. "It is not so much as a nurse that she will live," said Miss Parsons, "but her wonderful work as a sanitarian and her writings in which she perceived and made others perceive that nursing is an art which will live to keep her memory fresh. She believed in a God of work and had no sympathy with the times when certain religious aspects were so prominent in regard to hospitals."

Miss Parsons told of her farseeing care for the health of the animals used in war, and of the need of publicly advertising philanthropic work, stating needs of an organization and giving thanks for needs supplied.

Miss Parsons, in speaking of the great shortage of nurses all over the world, emphasized the need of the community, churches, women's clubs and the like to use their influence in drawing young women into the profession. She told of the great opportunities in the nursing field now. Hospitals have many openings formerly filled by young doctors which are now open to the well-trained nurse. Training and education were strong points made. Miss Parsons has no sympathy with a short-cut training, but believes that a nurse would be handicapped all her life if she did not take the required number of years at some up-to-date training school.

MRS. RICHARD SEARS LOVERING (Mary Eliot) and four children came to Manchester last Saturday from their southern home. Mrs. Lovering and younger children are with her sister's family, the Frederic M. Burnhams, the Burnhams occupying the former Lovering home on Old Neck rd. The older children are visiting with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Amory Eliot, Manchester. Mr. Lovering is deeply interested in his new peach plantation at Pinehurst, N. C., and will remain there the entire summer.

The Gerald A. Bramwells, of Boston, again have "Brookside," the Hutchinson cottage at Beverly Farms. The brook runs along merrily in the rear of the house close to a stone wall and also through the Hutchinson gardens and orchards.

Mrs. Charles Bradley, of Morristown, N. J., is attending the annual meeting of the Garden club and is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Sea st., Manchester. Mrs. Bradley will not have a cottage upon the Shore this year. Her grandchildren and nurse are now settled in the small cottage in West Manchester occupied last season by the Robert E. Brewers. The children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, Jr., of Morristown, will join their children a little later.

Sydney E. Hutchinson, of Beverly Farms, is salmon fishing on the Moisie river in Canada. The Hutchinson boat, "Cintra," is expected back soon from southern waters. The "Cintra" made a remarkable trip this winter, going all the way to Miami, Fla., by its own power, the inland waterways being chosen for its journey.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Motley and Mrs. F. B. Lothrop and son, Francis B. Lothrop, of Boston, are guests at Essex County club, Manchester.

Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren, of Detroit, and Mrs. Edw. Lowe, of Grand Rapids, Mich., have been guests at "Graftonwood," the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Lancashire, in Manchester, the past week, coming on for the Garden club meetings. Mrs. Lowe is a sister of J. W. Blodgett, who usually comes to the Shore, but who has gone to the Pacific coast this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Royce and family, of 140 Naples rd., Brookline, have arrived at "High Cliffe Lodge," their summer home on Atlantic rd., Gloucester.

The Breeze representative who "covered" most of the gardens visited by the Garden club of America talked with many a gardener while making the rounds. In not one case was anyone disgruntled or talking about extra work. Each was getting his place spic and span in anticipation of the visitors. One gardener, after it was over, said he was eating his supper at 9.30 that night in place of six. But all were happy and good natured over it and truly the gardeners had their day this week with the big show on in Manchester and the Garden club visitors spinning around everywhere over the Shore. Why can't all workers be as pleasant, happy and enthusiastic as the gardeners? Suppose we all take a lesson from them.

The real official start of the summer season, in the eyes of a large number of the summer visitors—the children—is announced with the arrival of "Bunny" Woods, the children's friend, from Boston. Classes are already being organized and will be started at once. Mr. Woods is to have an assistant this year. Joe Finneran, well-known as the former New England all-round champion—a very competent and able man—will take charge of the swimming classes, and will be at West Beach every day with the "kiddies."

Mrs. Maynard Ladd's studio at Preston pl., Beverly Farms, will be open every Thursday afternoon, when the fountain figures and portraits exhibited in Paris, New York and Philadelphia will be shown.

Miss Grace Horne has sent out invitations for the opening of her Gallery in Library hall, Magnolia, on Tuesday afternoon, July 6, from 3 until 6 o'clock. North Shore people will perhaps better remember Miss Horne's Gallery in connection with the Sargent-Murray-Gilman house at Gloucester last season. Her winter studio is in Trinity ct., Boston. Through this season the Gallery will be open daily, Sundays excepted, from 10 to 6. Nearly a hundred leading artists will be represented, including Hobart Nichols, George L. Noyes, Wm. M. Paxton, Albert Henry Atkins, Arthur Goodwin, Felicio Waldo Howell, Francois Verheyden and others.

"Swiftmoor," Pride's Crossing, vacant this year because the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Aksel P. C. Wichfeld, are abroad, has its great lower lawn planted in potatoes, a marked contrast to the velvet-like appearance of this stretch of green in former seasons.

"Netherfield," Pride's Crossing, has a garden that the Garden club should have seen. Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, a devoted gardener, has one of those strictly formal gardens that looks like a perfect geometrical design when viewed from the terrace by the house. Centered with a sundial, box-bordered beds, gravel walks, it lies down below in its strong, clear-cut design, a perfect picture of a formal garden.

MRS. R. T. CRANE, JR., of "Castle Hill," Ipswich, gave a dinner for the 150 delegates to the Garden club of America on Tuesday night at seven o'clock. At eight-thirty the presidents of the various clubs, between fifty and sixty throughout the country, held a business meeting in the casino, a great room built near the gardens and swimming pool, and one that will hold several hundred people. The gardens were visited by all of the visitors, about 400, during the afternoon.

Guests at the Crane home include Mrs. Horace H. Martin, president of the Lake Forest, Ill., club; Mrs. Horace Bulloch and Mrs. H. Y. Lloyd, delegates from Delaware and Montgomery counties, Pa.; Mrs. Frank Sumner and Mrs. Robert Gray, of Hartford, Conn. Mrs. J. M. Patterson, sister of Mrs. Crane, has also been on from Chicago. The dinner party was held on the lawn, guests sitting at small tables laid for eight.

Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, of Pride's Crossing, entertained house guests this week, including Mrs. Charles Biddle, a Garden club delegate, from Andalusia, Pa.; Mrs. Bayard Henry, president of the Philadelphia Garden club, of Germantown, Pa.; Mrs. Henry R. MRS. GARDINER MARTIN LANE gave a tea for the 400 Garden club visitors Wednesday afternoon. Assisting Mrs. Lane and her daughter, Miss Katherine Lane, to show the visitors around the grounds, were the Misses Ellen Curtis, Eleanor and Katherine Abbott, Betty Beal and Mary Meeker. The sun came out for the tea party and cast a golden glow over the iris and many beautiful flowers, making it one of the prettiest affairs of the week. Tea was served from the west piazza.

Mrs. Lester Leland, of "Old Tree House," West Manchester, is entertaining Mrs. John S. Newbury, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., a member of the bulletin committee of the Garden club; Miss Jessie Hendrie and Mrs. Edwin Potter, of Lake Geneva, Wis., Garden club delegates. Mrs. Potter is president of the Geneva club.

Mrs. M. S. Bernheimer's place in Newburyport is one of the handsome old estates on High st. that the Garden club visitors, no doubt, admired much in their trip through the town. The gardens lie in the rear of the house located so charmingly beneath the big trees. The little shop, kept open during war days, and "markets" held on the grounds for war relief made this a much-sought place in recent years.

Signora Brambilla (Julia Meyer), wife of the counsellor of the Italian embassy, will be eagerly welcomed tomorrow if she appears at the Navy Festival at Beverly Farms, where she will no doubt be assisting her mother, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, at the booths.

"Apple Trees," the West Manchester home of the S. V. R. Crosbys, has not been mentioned in any special way in connection with the Garden club meeting. This is the home of the president of the North Shore Garden club. Mrs. Crosby's garden is one of unusual interest.

"Apple Trees" fittingly names the place, for the whole front lawn well up to the house is a fine old apple orchard. The driveway to the house has on either side a hedge of English hornbean. Two terraces are in front of the attractive white cottage which, with its green blinds and big, white chimneys, is set in a dignified simplicty among the hedges and flowers that surround it.

Hedges of lilacs and general shrubbery are around the lower terrace while the upper one is edged with barberry. From the piazza and terrace at one side of the house the sunken garden is reached directly. It makes a fair picture to look down upon. Blue is the color chosen for it. A white picket fence surrounds the plot and around this is an old English mixed border, one of the chief features of the garden. A fountain centers the place.

At the front entrance a noticeable clump of lilies, a collection of hibiscus and of blue plumbago were much admired. Mrs. Crosby's formal garden was laid out over twenty years ago.

HON. AND MRS. ALBERT J. BEVERIDGE and children are occupying their large stone house this season at Beverly Farms. Last year they spent in the cottage on the estate, while Mrs. Marshall Field, aunt of Mrs. Beveridge, had the stone house. This season the cottage, which stands near the avenue entrance, has been taken by friends of the Beveridges from Indianapolis, Mrs. Eli Lilly and Mrs. Bowman Elder.

MISS LILIAN OWEN gave a charming and novel studio tea at her shop Thursday afternoon. Hosts of her North Shore friends attended and all had a delightful time. One is always sure to find Miss Owen doing something original and interesting. Among the clever features of the afternoon, the musical offerings of the two youngest members were a rare treat. Forrest Haring played upon the flute, while Miss Gertrude Roth played the piano. The charming Miss Turner, who has been busily engaged for the last week arranging an aeroplane trip she is going to take next week with Lieut. Bonnell, of New York, was also present. Knowles Entrikin, the author, and Theodore Wilde, the well-known traveler and humorist, gave truly artistic and amusing impromptu bits with some of the puppets. Miss Owen looked radiantly happy to be entertaining friends. Her guests enjoyed every minute of the social and all look forward to the next one with a great deal of anticipation. Studio teas such as Miss Owen gives are bound to be very popular and we feel certain that her Marionettes will be equally enjoyable.

MRS. SYDNEY EMLEN HUTCHINSON, of Beverly Farms, returned early in the week from Detroit, where she attended the wedding of her step-brother, James R. H. Cromwell, of Philadelphia, and Miss Delphine Dodge, of Detroit. The Cromwells were expected at the Hutchinson home this week, but the death of Mr. Roberts, grandfather of Mr. Cromwell, brought the honeymoon trip to a close and they hastened on to Philadelphia.

Mrs. Hutchinson is entertaining the following Garden club visitors from Philadelphia, her home town: Mrs. Randall Morgan, Mrs. George Willing, Jr., Mrs. Adolph Rosengarten, Mrs. Lewis Neilson and Mrs. Stacy B. Lloyd.

Ye Balch Arms will be visited by many folk this season. Those wishing to get a good luncheon, or the daintiest gift possible, and also see one of the oldest houses in the country, can have their desires satisfied at the old Balch house on Cabot st., Beverly. It is conveniently located by the roadside and has a large lawn with ample shade. The house, built in 1638, is the only one standing which was the original home of one of the old planters of Cape Ann. When you are motoring through North Beverly on the Wenham road stop for tea or to get some fine linens from Denison House, Boston.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL
MAGNOLIA

OCEANSIDE, in July, ever the "beckoning month," finds the influx of guests to be rapidly assuming record proportions. This mammoth hotel, famous since its opening in 1880, and peerless provendor of seashore pleasures catering to the most exclusive patronage, is having one of the busiest seasons in its history.

Here one is afforded rare beauty of scenery and true quietude. One's eyes, fixed in any direction, fairly revel in gorgeous scenes of a typical New England "stern and rock-bound coast." Seething waters bare their fangs at startled rocks; impetuous waves doing constant battle with jagged reefs, whose wrinkled countenances betray their countless years, and furnish sights of imperishable splendor.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Levis, of Newark, N. J., are again at the Oceanside for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Levis are well-known at the Oceanside, having spent a number of summers here.

Miss Gertrude T. Ream, of Newark, N. J., is registered at the Oceanside.

Mrs. James McLean, of New York city, is also registered at the Oceanside.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMurtrie, of New York, have arrived at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain until August 1. From Magnolia they will go to their farm at South Kortright, N. Y., for the balance of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Green are again at the Oceanside for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Green have been coming to the Oceanside for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Smith, of Detroit, Mich., are again at the Oceanside for the season. They are accompanied by Mrs. M. S. Smith and Mrs. Frank Titus, relatives of Mr. Smith, also of Detroit, who are spending their first season here.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Gordon, of Detroit, Mich., were among the first members of the Garden club of America to arrive at the Oceanside.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Reeves and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Todd and son, Webster Todd, all of Summit, N. J., also members of the Garden club, are at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain for a week or ten days' visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Brainard and family, of Pittsburg, Pa., who have spent many seasons at the Oceanside, have taken a cottage at Bass Rocks for the summer. Mr. Brainard will not spend much time on the North Shore this season, as he and his son, "Bud," will spend the greater part of the summer touring in the west.

Alfred Morrell, of Greenwich, Conn., has arrived at the Oceanside. Mr. Morrell is manager of the Magnolia branch of the Dreicer & Co. store, of New York city. Mrs. Morrell will join her husband early in July for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ellison and baby, of New York city, are at the Oceanside for the season.

Richard W. Smith, of New York city, is registered at the Oceanside.

Miss A. M. Sessions, of Natchez, Miss., is being welcomed back to the Oceanside after an absence of two seasons. Last year Miss Sessions spent the summer at Bass Rocks.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

By Alex. G. Tupper

CAPE ANN.—There were large numbers of arrivals at the Cape Ann resorts the present week, although the corresponding number of tourists at the hotels to a year ago is not as large. The cottages yet vacant, however, have been engaged for the season and a great influx of people is expected the coming weeks. A celebration at Stage Fort Park is planned under the auspices of Wingaersheek Tribe of Red Men for Fourth of July observance on Monday. There will be band concerts and other attractions and amusements to terminate with a big fireworks' display at night.

BASS ROCKS.—Considerable interest will center in an open lawn tennis tournament for the championship of the North Shore in men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles, on the courts of the Bass Rocks Golf club, July 1 to July 9, under the auspices of the rules of the United States Lawn Tennis association. The North Shore championship cups for men's and women's singles will become the property of any one winning them three times, not necessarily in succession. Prizes will be given to the winners and runners up in each event. Play will begin in the men's singles on July 1 at 10 o'clock and in the women's singles on July 6 at 10 o'clock. Play in men's doubles and mixed doubles will be announced later and the committee will endeavor to arrange matches as nearly as possible at the convenience of the players. Ralph L. Pope, E. B. Miles and T. Barnet Plympton comprise the tournament committee. The courts, situated near the clubhouse, are being put into good shape for the season. The attractions for golf are to be announced later.

The Bass Rocks bathing beach attracts hundreds of bathers daily. The big bathhouse is now open for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heaton Brainerd and family, of Pittsburg, Pa., have arrived at Bass Rocks, for the season. They are located in the pleasant Souther mansion, corner of Brightside and Beach roads.

Mrs. E. H. Doyle, of Detroit, Mich., has arrived at "Tragibigzanda," the Scott estate, which she has leased for this season, at Bass Rocks. Mrs. Doyle was located in the H. B. Warner house on Page street, last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pogue and family, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are occupying the Way house on the heights near Haskell st., Bass Rocks, for the season. The Pogues occupied the cottage of Miss Emily McGuckin last summer.

Mrs. Edward Rotan, of Waco, Texas, who has spent a number of summers at Bass Rocks, where Mr. and Mrs. Rotan owned a house, and later at Grape Vine Cove, where they owned a big house, is spending the summer at the Thorwald, Bass Rocks. Mrs. Rotan has many friends in the colony who are glad to greet her.

The Misses A. B. and F. L. Evans, of Oak Park, Ill., are old-time guests at the Thorwald who are here again for the season at Bass Rocks.

The Hotel Thorwald opened the past week for the season and a large number of guests have registered. Among the late arrivals are Mr. and Mrs. Wm. W. Cutler, Maude L. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Leonard, Mrs. A. F. Friel, all of Boston; Mrs. L. P. Hoster, Theodore

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

EASTERN POINT.—The outlook for July and August at the hotels at Eastern Point is bright, indeed. Hawthorne Inn has the largest number to date, over a hundred being registered. No house has less than 50 guests and the present week-end there will be quite an influx of season's guests to be here by the holiday.

The Eastern Point golf links have been put in good condition for playing and the clubhouse now open will be the center of pleasure for members and guests from now on. On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Stephen Vickery, of Baltimore, Md., a guest at the Hawthorne Inn, who entertained considerably last summer, gave a tea for seven, at the Eastern Point golf clubhouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stewart, of Louisburg sq., Boston, the former who is manager of the Boston office of the Cunard Steamship Line, have arrived at their Eastern Point cottage near "The Ramparts," for the season. Mr. Stewart recently returned from England.

The Misses Gammin, of New York, are occupying the bungalow, "El Nido," of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Steele Gray, at Eastern Point, on the hill near the golf clubhouse, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip M. Tucker and family, of Dean rd., Brookline, have arrived at "Outlook," the attractive Tucker estate, situated near Sunset Rock, Niles Beach boulevard, Eastern Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Howland Twombly, the former a well-known Boston attorney, have taken occupancy of "Heathercrest," the Eastern Point estate of Mrs. George Croghan Reid, of Washington, D. C. The Twomblys had the Reid place last season.

Mrs. J. Murray Kay, of Brookline, is at Eastern Point for the season, occupying her estate near "The Ramparts."

Mr. and Mrs. John Greenough, of New York, are again at Eastern Point, as has been their custom for so many years and they are occupying their house on the road leading to the lighthouse.

Mrs. Wm. H. Davidge and daughter, Mrs. Randall MacIver, it is understood, will not be in the Eastern Point colony, at their cottage, this summer.

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Beach Olmstead and family are expected in a few days from Pomfret, Conn., to occupy their cottage overlooking Niles beach and harbor. Dr. Olmstead is head master of the Pomfret school for boys.

Rev. and Mrs. M. W. Jacobus and family, of Hartford, Conn., have arrived at their handsome Eastern Point estate on the hill near the Taft and Mills estates. Dr. Jacobus is dean of the Hartford Theological seminary.

ROCKPORT.—The Land's End colony was enlarged the present week by many arrivals at the hotels Straitsmouth Inn and Turk's Head Inn and at cottages. The Land's End people are pleased over the announcement of the new road to be laid along the Shore from Bass Rocks, connecting Rockport. The convenience will be recognized as well as the attractive shore boulevard that will make this section of the North Shore more of a unit as a resort. The extraordinary natural beauty of this eastern section of Cape Ann will be enjoyed by motorists from all parts of the North Shore and a boom in real estate is expected.

Mrs. Henriette M. Gaunt, of New York, one of Rockport's pioneer summer residents, has arrived at Gaunt Manor, her charming estate at Land's End. Mrs. Gaunt has been staying in Atlantic City.

William J. Hobbs, vice-president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and family, of Malden, are located at their summer home, Gully Point, Land's End, Rockport.

Mrs. C. L. Higgins and Miss Annie S. Wheeler, of Springfield, are occupying the Rugen cottage on Sandaba ave., Land's End, Rockport.

John Graham Moseley, the well-known ship broker, of Boston, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Helen Graham Moseley, arrived at their summer home, "The Red House," on Marmion Way, Rockport, several days ago. They have been joined by Mrs. Francis A. Pierce, of The Tudor, Boston. Mrs. Pierce was formerly Miss Carrie A. Moseley. The family came to the Rockport shores among the very first to spend the summers in this ideal spot. The Moseley cottage commands a fine view of the bay and harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Crams, of Newtonville, have arrived at their cottage on Marmion Way, Rockport, for the season.

The Charles J. Rosebaults, of New York, are among the late arrivals at Marmion Way, Rockport. They have leased the Cameron cottage.

Miss Mary G. Davis is occupying "The Anchorage" cottage on the Headlands, Rockport, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shippen Barnes, of New York, who are at Rockport for the summer, are entertaining Miss Marjorie Mathews, of Providence, R. I., sister of Mrs. Barnes.

Mrs. G. W. Nott and daughter, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at The Edward, Pigeon Cove, for the summer.

ANNISQUAM.—The arrangements for the holiday pleasures at the Annisquam Yacht club are complete and as is the usual custom of opening the house and activities for the season, a yacht race will be held on the afternoon of Monday, July 5, the start to be made at 3.15 o'clock. The four classes will participate. An afternoon tea will be held at the clubhouse, with Mrs. George Andrew, chairman of the ladies' committee. A dancing party will be held in the evening with orchestral music and an attractive social time is expected. The people of the colony usually turn out in large numbers to the festivities at the club, as it is the real social center for things of an enjoyable nature.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. White and child, of Jackson, Tenn., have arrived at the cottage, which they have leased for this season, at Annisquam.

Rev. Pitt Dillingham, wife and daughter, of Boston, are occupying Beach cottage, Annisquam, for the season.

Herbert P. Grayson, an artist, of Lakewood, N. J., is occupying the new Ames cottage at Bay View this season.

Mrs. Paul Butler, of Lowell, will arrive the present week at the Spencer Borden cottage, Bay View, for the season.

Mrs. Oakes Ames, of Easton, is expected to spend the summer at the attractive Ames estate, Bay View.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Manley Ives, of Winchester, have arrived at the Bott cottage, Annisquam, for the season.

James Guiler and family are located at their summer home at Norwood heights, Annisquam.

Schuyler B. Eddy and family, of Springfield, are located at their cottage on Cambridge ave., Annisquam, for the season.

Mrs. Robert Cushman, of Boston, has taken occupancy of the W. H. Pear cottage at "Rockholm," Annisquam. Mrs. Cushman has leased this pleasant house for the season.

HOTEL EDWARD COTTAGES and GARAGE
BEST ON CAPE ANN
A LA CARTE RESTAURANT FRENCH CUISINE MUSIC
Telephone Rockport 8210

PIGEON COVE.—Hotel Edward has opened for the season and everything within and without appears fresh and attractive. The French cuisine, the a la carte restaurant are attractive features of the hostelry and the lovely, spacious dining porches overlooking the sea and landscape are already attracting dinner parties from places along the North Shore and motorists. There has been a fine booking of prominent people, who will spend the season at The Edward.

Charles West and family, of Pittsburg, Pa., are to spend the season at The Edward.

During the past week, the following have registered at The Edward, Pigeon Cove: Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lelong, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Wood, New York city; Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Chase, Brockton; B. B. Clark, Mildred Hall, Rochester.

A charming little tea garden is "Janet's Garden," located at 88 Prospect st., Gloucester, near Prospect st. Methodist Episcopal church. A unique and delightful little spot this is, too, for a cool resting place, where one may enjoy the quiet and the beauty of a typical New England garden. The artistic arrangement of things gives one a most comfortable feeling. Small black tables with the lovely yellow china brought here from Vevey, Switzerland, by Mrs. John Clarence Lee, mother of "Janet" (for whom the garden is named), is a delight to the eye. An apple tree with its branches gracefully turning outward and upward and covered with luxuriant green foliage lends its homey, New England feeling and underneath are brown-stained settees. Touches of color come from bouquets in the center of the tables, but in time the vines and plants will be covered with bloom. Here the birds sing overhead, the sky shows blue through the tree branches and it is a treat to be in such a place on a summer day. Quaint signs at the entrance of the garden mark the way, at one side of the Universalist church parsonage, the home of the Lees. "Janet's Garden" is a little venture of Janet Lee. She is going to school in sunny France and she is eager to do something in an independent way. The garden will be open from 10 a. m. till 7 p. m. A sample of Russian tea, imported from Ufa, or Brizilian coffee, with those delicious French cakes and the delicious home-made doughnuts will make one desirous of coming again to Janet's Garden.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE, Swampscott, is preparing for a record business for the July 4th week-end, and already the house is rapidly filling with guests, who plan to remain during the season. The first in the series of formal balls will be given July 5 and it is expected that the ball-room will throng with guests from the hotel and friends from the North Shore colony.

The first children's party of tre year will be held on the afternoon of July 8, Miss Jean Grabow will be the hostess of the day.

Sunday concerts are on the program for this year and these are always anticipated with much pleasure. The One Hundred orchestra of Boston will provide the music for the year at this hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Geinsinger, of St. Louis, have arrived with their family, for another long season at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Penfield and Miss Virginia Penfield of Washington, D. C., are at the New Ocean House for July and August.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hanna, of Philadelphia, have returned to the New Ocean House for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Zenas Sears, of Boston, who have spent many seasons at the shore, are at the New Ocean House for the season.

W. H. Dwelly, of the American Woolen Co., and his wife, are established at the New Ocean House for the season.

Charles H. Carter, of the Hotel Kenmore, Boston, Mrs. L. G. Burnham, of the Hotel Somerset; Mrs. E. B. Carleton, of the Hotel Somerset, and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Currier, of the Hotel Kenmore, are registered at this North Shore hostelry for the season.

Porter Johnson, of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, is established at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Garland and Miss Dorothy Garland, of Brookline, are at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Livermore and daughter, Miss Muriel Livermore, of Boston, have returned for another season at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson Scott and Miss Marie R. Scott, of New York, have arrived at the New Ocean House.

W. C. Steigers, editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, is at the New Ocean House for the season.

SWAMPSCOTT is alive with pleasure-seekers and those who seek the cooling breezes and waters of this section of the North Shore. Every house is open, and this place; which is noted for its gardens, is more beautiful than ever with early summer flowers.

The New Ocean House, a center of social activities, is well filled with guests, and dances, teas and dinners are on the list for the week-end. The Hotel Preston, a few miles further down the shore, also has its plans for the Fourth of July, and the guests will all take part in the activities.

The Tedesco Country club is very near to the hotels and to the summer folk, and all day long the club is the scene of golf and tennis, while luncheon parties are in vogue with bridge on the broad verandas. Dinner dances in the middle of the week and tea dances for Saturday afternoons, are on the program for this year, as they proved most popular last season.

E. P. Brown, president of the United Shoe Machinery Co., and his father, George W. Brown, vice-president of the same company, are at the New Ocean House for the summer.

TEDESCO COUNTRY CLUB at Swampscott was the scene of much activity Tuesday when 100 members of the Boston Real Estate Exchange enjoyed an outing at the club. Baseball, tennis and golf took up the afternoon and in the evening a banquet was served in the clubhouse.

The second dinner dance of the Tedesco club was held Thursday, with a large group of summer visitors in attendance. Among those who entertained at dinner were G. C. Dempsey, R. B. Kearns, S. Farquahar, W. S. Libby, E. W. Ong, J. H. Lennox, J. F. Langmaid, Lt.-Col. O. F. Brothers, F. P. Cox and W. A. Barton.

Tennis is taking on a great boom at the Tedesco and a live committee composed of Henry W. Forbes, F. Ward Paine, John Craig, Jr., and George A. Dill, have planned for handicap tennis tournaments in men's singles and women's singles beginning today and lasting through Monday. The first prize for men's singles will be a handsome silver cup, second prize also being a silver cup. For the women the first prize is a handsome glass bon-bon dish with hammered silver and cloisenne decorations. The second prize is a cut glass water pitcher, with silver trimmings.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ingalls, of Atlantic st., Lynn, are spending July at the Sunset Hill House, Sugar Hill, N. H. From Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 they are also due at Sugar Hill.

MARBLEHEAD is in all its pre-war splendor and the old town swarms with summer visitors, many of whom are residents of the town for the warm weather or else are across the harbor at the Neck. The shops in town are very busy and along the waterfront there is a gaiety in yachting circles which reminds one of the good old days.

The hotel season at Marblehead is excellent and the various hostelries have many guests who annually visit them, as well as a horde of newcomers to this shore. Marblehead cottages have rented very easily, in fact, it is now practically impossible to locate in the town if reservations have not been made.

The Henry Cabot Lodge estate is now open. The grounds are in first-class order, the gardens are planted with early summer blooms and the right of way around the point, which was closed during the war, is now open to the public. Senator Lodge will be at the Shore this summer after a strenuous season in Washington.

Mrs. Mabel Lockwood and sons, of Boston, are at the Dunlap cottage, Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

The first dinner dance of the season of the Eastern Yacht club will be held July 8.

Judge Albert D. Bosson, of Chelsea, who has been with his wife in the south during the winter, is now at the Rose Rocks bungalow on Ocean ave., Marblehead Neck, for the season.

Dr. Edwin P. Richardson, of Boston, has arrived at the Manning cottage, Harbor st., Marblehead Neck.

Tuesday evening the Webb Foot Crew, the new Tuesday evening dining club of the Eastern Yacht club, held a dinner ,the guest of honor being Capt. Reginald R. Belknap, who is now at the destroyer and submarine repair plant at Squatum. He talked on the North Sea mine barrage of war times.

GARDEN CLUB OF AMERICA VISITS NORTH SHORE

Royally Entertained by North Shore Residents—
Gardens and Estates in All Sections Visited

The Beautiful Pergola Garden at "Castle Hill," the Estate of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr., at Ipswich

THE GARDEN CLUB, of America, has been in its annual meeting this week with its North Shore friends. The North Shore Garden club mapped out a most interesting program for the 150 delegates, 200 non-delegates and a few invited friends. The president, Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, of West Manchester, has given the closest attention to every detail and the weather, although not all that could have been desired, has been fairly favorable to the event.

The guests began arriving on the Shore Monday evening, many motoring out from Boston to their destinations in private homes or at Magnolia hotels or elsewhere. Members of the North Shore Garden club entertained the delegates, the presidents of the various clubs throughout the country, and the executive and bulletin committees, in their homes. Each member had her avenue marked with a small green tag-board flag bearing the name of the club and her own name. This made it easy for strangers to locate themselves.

On Monday evening there was a meeting of the executive committee at the home of Mrs. Crosby. Officers stayed mostly at the Crosby home and at Mrs. Gordon Abbott's close by.

Tuesday's program opened with a visit to Mrs. Abbott's charming gardens at "Glass Head." Here were seen the blue garden, yellow garden, wild garden and rockery, all marvels of beauty and special design. The blue garden shows such plants as violas, delphiniums, anchusa, ageratum and others of various tints of blue. A little white is introduced, also roses and hollyhocks give a tone of brightness along the edge. The rockery is a new feature and is now showing up in blue, yellow and white. The visitors passed through the place and spent much time on the terraces admiring the fine water view, one of the fairest over Salem way and out toward the broad ocean that there is along the Shore.

The club then motored to "Oberland," Pride's Crossing, the extensive farm-like place of the Harold J. Coolidge's. This estate is hidden away in among some typical North Shore forests. The approach to it through Common lane, off Hale st., makes an ideal drive. Large veg-

A GLIMPSE OF THE FAMOUS CHERRY HILL NURSERIES

(Contributed)

A Glimpse of the Cherry Hill Hedges and Mountain Laurel

ONE of the places of interest to all flower lovers in Essex county is Cherry Hill Nurseries in West Newbury. Here are grown in abundance the finest peonies from France and England—Therese, Solange, Tourangelle, Le Cygne, Kelway's Glorious, Exquisite, Lady Alexandra Duff and many others which make up the superior varieties. The choice American varieties are also here, including the famous Shaylor seedlings, the wonderful new varieties produced by this nursery and the best from all parts of the country which are here undergoing critical examination as to their merit. A sight of these large, yet exquisite flowers sends a thrill through the heart of the peony lover—and who would not be one after seeing these colors? The Massachusetts Horticultural society awarded the Appleton Gold Medal to the Cherry Hill Nurseries for its "exquisite and comprehensive display of peonies" shown at Boston last Saturday.

Some wonderful specimens were shown at the exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural society at Manchester on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the Garden club delegates viewed a private display from Cherry Hill at "Maudesleigh," the estate of F. S. Moseley in Newburyport. Many expressions of admiration and appreciation of the flowers were heard on the verandas of "Maudesleigh."

Hill, as T. C. Thurlow became interested in them over fifty years ago and collected all the varieties he could obtain at that time. Cultivating and caring for these became a life study with him and his knowledge was passed on to his sons. The years of patient endeavor have borne fruit in the new varieties which have been originated here. Cherry Hill, a tall-growing, dark red is classed among the best in the world and Pride of Essex, Nymphaea, Thomas C. Thurlow, James R. Mann, Edwin C. Shaw, A. P. Saunders, President Wilson and others as yet unnamed and not offered to public sale.

A charming setting for the flowers at Cherry Hill lie in the large beautiful evergreen hedges which surround the peony beds. These hedges have been growing for over fifty years and are solid, compact walls of green. Set among the low hills of the Merrimac valley the whole effect is charming and well worth a visit.

DANVERS AND TWO OF ITS MOST HISTORIC OLD PLACES

The Endicott Estate and "The Lindens" Visited by the Garden Club of America

Mrs. Wm. C. Endicott, of Danvers Highlands, opened her old historic place for the Garden club of America. Living with Mrs. Endicott are her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Endicott (M. Louise Thoron). Mr. Endicott is president of the Essex Institute in Salem, of the Massachusetts Horticultural society, and also of the society for the preservation of antiquities in New England.

The house was built in 1812 by Mrs. Endicott's father, Joseph Peabody (1757-1844), a famous merchant of Salem. His portrait is hanging in Peabody Museum, Salem. Mrs. Endicott, his granddaughter, a lady well advanced in years, but young in the keen interest she takes in everything around her, came to the house when a little girl and has grown up along with its charming old-time atmosphere.

The garden facing the house is just as it was in her grandfather's day. The house she has altered somewhat to make it more airy. Partitions have been taken down and two rooms thrown into one, thus making a great dining-room, living-room and hall space besides the library and smaller parlor. The same old furniture and carpets are in many of the rooms as in the old days. The dining-room is noticeable for its handsome old gray paper with illustrations of Cupid and Psyche. This is made from some noted blocks and was purchased by Mrs. Endicott in Paris. On either side the main entrance the busts of the old merchant, Joseph Peabody, and his wife are standing, inside the hall. Hospitably they seem to speak a welcome to the passersby over that threshold which has borne the footsteps of so many folk linked with Salem's old days.

The three-story house of light color with green blinds stands in the midst of its 200 acres. Ingersoll, Forest and Newbury streets pass through the farm. Big red barns of modern looking appearance, broad hayfields, orchards and the like show what a well-kept farm it is.

But the gardens! From five to six acres are beautifully laid out in various kinds of gardens. The old Salem merchant had excellent taste when he planned that first garden so near the house. But now we see beside the general flower garden, a perennial garden, a rose garden and one for shrubbery—four great plots of ground with walks, fountains and statuary. Indeed, each section seems more fascinating than its neighbor. It is hard to decide which is fairest. The white statues throughout the place lend a rare charm to it. The white tea-house overlooking the walled-in rose garden is a most striking feature. In this two-story affair tea is made on the first floor in a kitchenette and served upstairs in a little room having a charming outlook over all of the gardens.

The rose garden with its central fountain, wall-fountain, lily pond and wealth of roses would, perhaps, attract more praise than the other sections, but each one seems the fairest while walking through it. The one with the sundial and fountain and statue of Diana is a noteworthy garden for any estate.

Hedges, great trees, a large planting of rhododendrons near the driveway, a duck pond in which lilies are growing, and a driveway of unexcelled beauty are some of the other features of the place.

The driveway turns off from Ingersoll street and is arched over by wonderful old elms. These shade it down to the house. Hedges, stone walls, apple trees planted along fence rows, and plenty of orchards everywhere show it to be a typical New England country estate of the olden time. This week the haying season has been on at the farm.

At the beginning of Ingersoll street is a training field given to the inhabitants of Salem village as "a training place forever" by Deacon Ingersoll (1634-1713).

Not far from Mrs. Endicott's place is Burley farm, the estate of her brother, Hon. George Augustus Peabody, the president of Peabody Museum, Salem. "Oak Hill," the attractive home of her cousin, Mrs. Jacob C. Rogers, is also in the neighborhood. And close by is "Oak Knoll," on Summer street, where the poet Whittier spent many summers.

"The Lindens," on Sylvan and Collins streets, the former the old Ipswich road, built in 1648, is an estate of more historical interest than, perhaps, any other visited by the Garden club.

Built in 1753 by Robert Hooper, of Marblehead, it yet stands a solid and stately memorial to King Hooper, as he was commonly called. During the Revolution, Mr. Hooper, a Tory, turned this country home over to General Gage for his headquarters, his office being in the old Page house in Danvers. The latter is now the home of the Historical society. It was from these houses that plans were issued by General Gage in 1775 for the advance of British troops under Colonel Leslie to seize munitions. This was repulsed by the Salem people and is known as the first armed resistance to the royal authority, the affair taking place at the North Bridge, North street.

After the Revolution "The Lindens" went to the Collins family, 1796 to 1832, from then till 1860 it had various owners until it fell into the hands of Francis Peabody. From him it has passed to the present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Thoron (Louisa Chapin Hooper). Mr. Thoron, of New York and Boston, is a brother of Mrs. Wm. C. Endicott, Jr., of the Endicott place.

The Thorons have had "The Lindens" five years and are restoring the gardens to their old-time beauty.

Visitors to the place pass up a short walk under lindens that make a tunnel of shade over them. These ten or more great lindens are typical of the fine trees throughout the grounds. Mr. Hooper set out the lindens.

The three-story gambrel roofed house was done in a period when wooden houses were made to look like stone. It was known as the "Great House" from the time of the Revolution to 1840. The first reference made of the house in general writing is in June 1754, when a Harvard student and his tutor were traveling and spoke of passing the house of King Hooper, so-called, of Marblehead.

It is done in one of the purest forms of Georgian architecture in America. Mantels by Salem's master carpenter, McIntire, have been placed in the house at a later period. Floors are made of wide boards reaching the length of the room. Doors are heavy and window shutters are close fitting and may be fastened by wooden locks securely.

The front door is charming in its simplicity and exquisitely carved facade. It still bears the bullet hole shot through it years ago. The key in the great lock weighs about a pound and is the only one for it.

The halls, both upper and lower, are a marvel of fine carvings. The stairway is broad and of easy tread while the banisters exhibit the luxuriance of those days, and even the back stairway has a finely carved post. Paper on the halls is of a rare kind put on by Francis Peabody 60 years ago, and depicting scenes from the French novel "Les Incas," by Marmontel, and some Grecian adventures.

All of the rooms are panelled, the old ballroom being in white, the reception room in green with red hangings, the dining-room in white, also. An upper room, formerly the best chamber, is now the library, the books overflowing out into the hall. The upper hall, lighted by a great arched window, makes an ideal place to sit and read.

The garden is reached from the rear of the house. The great box hedges that so long adorned the place were frozen two years ago. Young box is growing now around the borders of beds laid out in a most interesting fashion. Much space is given over to the garden. A wide walk centers it, running to the long arbor at the end of the garden.

Flowers are planted in plots on either side, while narrow walks wind among the beds in a pleasing way. A row of tall pines extends crosswise through the middle of the garden. Ornamental trees seem to have been planted in opposites throughout the place. Fruit trees of an ornamental nature are here and there around it. A green section on either side the walk, between the sections devoted to flowers, help to emphasize the general scheme of an attractively planned garden of the old days.

Slave quarters were formerly on the place, standing until 1830.

NEWBURYPORT AND WEST NEWBURY

Included in the Itinerary of Garden Club—Description of Moseley Estates

DEAR old town of Newburyport!

"Its windows flashing to the sky,
Beneath a thousand roofs of brown,
Far down the vale, my friend and I
Beheld the old and quiet town;
The ghostly sails that out at sea
Flapped their white wings of mystery;
The beaches glimmering in the sun,
And the low wooded capes that run
Into the sea-mist north and south;
The sand-bluffs at the river's mouth;
The swinging chain-bridge, and, afar,
The foam-line on the harbour-bar."

So the old town appeared to the poet, Whittier, long ago.

Newburyport spells all that signifies a mystic charm. Travel the length of High st. and you see old-time stately three-storied houses set far back from the curbing under wide spreading elms—homes so rich in recollections that it would seem that their bewigged former owners might at any moment look down upon us from some open doorway.

The Garden club of America saw, this week, all that High st. has for a show and two of the great estates in that region, at one of which they were entertained for luncheon.

Indian Hill, West Newbury, was visited on the way to Newburyport. This is an estate of about 150 acres and is owned by the Moseley family. Used as a landmark in olden times, by the Indians, it stands most conspicuously high, and can be told for miles around, as the hill is half wooded and half shorn of trees. The old house and barns lie on the side or rather foot of the hill.

The house was built in 1688 and shows a rambling English style. It was built by the Poore family, of Newburyport, and is occupied during the summer by Miss Poore, of Newburyport, aunt to Benjamin Perley Poore Moseley, of Ipswich, whose birthplace it was, and whose mother died many years ago. She was the first wife of F. S. Moseley.

Perhaps the whitewashed fences and barns are the most striking features seen as the place is approached. The house is somewhat hidden by trees, but the great barns come into full view. A walk through these buildings shows some relics of training days in Revolutionary times when one Major Ben Perley Poore trained his men out on the hillside. The lodge, or superintendent's cottage, joins the barn, which also joins the house in a most unique manner.

A rare picture is seen in the front. Here the house shows two low stories of stucco and stone, with small, heavy casement windows set in walls of unusual thickness. A low stone room projects at one end in a somewhat rounded fashion. This is the study. Seeming to balance this effect on the opposite side of the house is the stone lodge of the same rich workmanship. Over the lodge and between the house and barn to which both are attached is a low tower bearing a clock and a bell, the latter used one time to call the men to work. Cedar posts a hundred or more years old are along the front entrance to the great house to support the vines.

But the inside is not for stray wanderers. Relics from Europe as well as rich and rare curios, from Indian times down to our later days, are stored within these impenetrable walls. The collection was made by the Poores and is sacredly kept by the Moseleys. The Garden club may consider itself fortunate in being allowed to go through the old house. The dear old house of bygone days may also consider itself fortunate in having a person like Mr. Moseley to care for it and to keep it from the merely curious in its ripe old age.

Opposite the house and out upon the wide lawn is a little summer house, which contains a life-size Indian wooden statue. Braving all the storms of many winters it still shows up its bright colors gayly. The Indian house is shaded by a mighty elm. This elm was planted at the beginning of the Revolution by Rufus King, of New York, then a student at Harvard. The college was closed at the beginning of the war and he went to Indian Hill with his classmate, one of the Poores. And what a wonderful tree it is now!

Back of the house and the barns the garden is found. A long, flowing spot of loveliness, it stretches in a most alluring way between two tall hedge rows of pine. The wide gravel walk runs through the center, bordered on either side by box and between the box and the high hedge are the flowers. Old-fashioned ones they are with a rose-bush here and there. Do you get the picture? Imagine plenty of ground to spare but a simple garden stretched out in one long broad walk with a little shelter house at the end from which a vista of fair fields is seen. It would take milady about fifteen minutes to walk the length of this secluded garden walk, if she stopped now and then to examine the flowers on either side.

Close to Indian Hill are the famous Cherry Hill Nurseries. No lovelier sight is to be seen in the whole country than their sunny hillsides capped with seas of rich blooms of peonies and other flowers. The men who own the nurseries live right in the midst of their wonderful industry. Here they oversee an army of workmen and here are produced the choicest and rarest peonies either in this country or abroad. They are seen in nearly every North Shore garden and, of course, are known from coast to coast.

F. S. Moseley has in "Maudesleigh," his Newburyport estate, a place of unsurpassed beauty. Park, gardens and farm land are spread along the Merrimac river for about a mile. On the opposite side of the river lies Pleasant valley, the poet Whittier's "Pleasant Valley," with Haverhill seven miles up the river and Amesbury three miles down the river. And here, on what was, less than twenty years ago, a bank of sand, Mr. Moseley has laid out his place. The name is derived from the old English form of the name and signifies "the mossy bank."

Mr. Moseley has always consulted the best of landscape gardeners in making his plans, but more often than otherwise he has then gone ahead with his own ideas, perhaps tempered in a measure by the expert, and has created some of the most artistic and pleasing features imaginable throughout the place.

The house itself, a long, rambling modern form of English architecture, seems to hug the ground securely on top of the great terrace fronting the river. Formerly a small house it has been added to until it now makes commodious quarters for the Moseley family. Rooms and halls of rich wood panelings and soft harmonious hangings and furnishings seem to blend into one whole that gives a feeling of rest and charm not always felt in houses.

The great gardens are hedged in with growths eight to fifteen feet high. The flower gardens are laid out in squares surrounded with hedges. The Italian garden and rose garden are special features of much beauty. An old well is near the garden entrance, a cool recess at one side of the garden covers a wall fountain, while a bird-bath completely covered with vines stands in a sunny spot, all doing their best to cheer the many birds that are heard everywhere.

Two greenhouses, one specially for show flowers, and fruit houses, besides many fan-trained fruit trees and regular orchards are seen. The gardens are watered by the Skinner system.

A "thorn" walk is a choice spot. Here various thorn trees display on a sunny hillside their blossoms and fruits, making beauty for all seasons. In this orchard of thorns are beehives covered with a thatched roof and having each hive proetcted by an ornamental cover as is done in England. The housekeeper says that when she wants to make believe she is in England she goes down among the thorns.

The vegetable gardens, great squares of ornamentally planted food, look good to the eye as well as to the mouth. Down past these gardens by degrees that are a charm in themselves one is taken through the highest of cultivation to the woods. On the way acres of trees are seen protected and urged to grow in the most perfect manner possible.

Through the park-like grounds on both graveled roads and grassy roads one may ride miles through this estate of nearly one thousand acres. Roads and trails are laid out everywhere, but it takes one who can keep his bearing to find the way through the intricacies of the place. Many rustic bridges are crossed and trees of marvelous beauty are everywhere.

But "the laurels," Whittier's laurels, the laurels where Wm. Lloyd Garrison and his anti-slavery friends used to go for picnics, the community picnic grounds, are a leading feature of the Moseley estate. About 40 acres of land along the river bank in one section are covered with a growth of laurel that is not excelled anywhere in New England. Laurels blossom profusely every seventh year or at least every other year while the intervening years are given over to growth. This year more new growth is seen than blossoms with some rare exceptions. No one knows who planted these laurels. They must have been growing a century or more in their present location. Mr. Moseley's father purchased the laurel section some time ago and made it a part of the estate where they will be preserved like Indian Hill.

Near the laurels is an extremely high point on the river bank called "Castle Hill," from which a most picturesque view of Deer island and its bridges on either side make a delightful picture. The island contains some eight acres. Also near the laurels is the estate of Charles Moseley, a brother of F. S. Moseley.

At this wonderfully beautiful show place in Newburyport is where the Garden club of America had a business meeting and were entertained at luncheon on Tuesday, the 150 delegates, 200 non-delegates and a few friends making about 400 in all.

The ladies may like to read over Whittier's "June on the Merrimac," in which he speaks of the place and of Harriet Prescott Spofford, of Deer island, and of Pleasant valley (just across from where they lunched) and of "pictured artichoke," the small river emptying into the Merrimac just below the Moseley terrace.

Here where the entire Garden club feasted how fittingly his lines read from "The Laurels:"

"Make room, O river of our home!
For other feet in place of ours,
And in the summers yet to come,
Make glad another Feast of Flowers!

"Hold in thy mirror, calm and deep,
The pleasant pictures thou hast seen;
Forget thy lovers not, but keep
Our memory like thy laurels green."

The Garden club of America has the following objects in view: To stimulate the knowledge and love of gardening among amateurs; to share the advantages of association, through conference and correspondence in this country and abroad; to aid in the protection of native plants and birds; and to encourage civic planting.

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD'S HOME

Visited by BREEZE Writer—Deer Isle in Merrimac River; a Most Alluring Spot

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD'S Deer Isle, in the Merrimac river, between Newburyport and Amesbury, has long been the home of one of America's sweetest and rarest writers.

For many years we have wished to see this literary shrine. Not being exactly literary ourselves we hesitated about approaching Mrs. Spofford, dreading to go out of mere curiosity to such a busy, gentle soul as we had always heard she was.

But the Garden club of America happening to visit our Shore this week helped us out. Why not visit Deer Isle and ask to see the garden? So we found ourselves jangling over the one-time old "chain bridge" from Newburyport and stopping at Mrs. Spofford's door.

Very attractive is the approach to the island from that side. High and rocky it stands, with the house nestling in among the old trees. On the opposite side of the road the island is much lower and here lies the old-fashioned garden, small hay-field and out buildings of the place.

We lifted the big wooden latch at the rustic gate set in the stone wall that fronts the house. In some book we remembered reading that "only the favored few are privileged to know Mrs. Spofford in her own home, where she seems half like some woodland sprite and half the shy invalid, poet, and novelist." Would she see us? The maid took us around to the side piazza where Mrs. Spofford was conversing with a gentleman. We gave our name. She rose with queenly grace and extended her hand—the softest one we have touched in many a day—and said, "I don't know you," but, upon hearing our errand, said, "Sit down" in a most cordial fashion. The other caller left in a moment and Mrs. Spofford gave her attention to us.

We told her we had been visiting the Moseley gardens and Indian Hill in Newburyport in anticipation of writing a little about them. She did not know of the meeting of the Garden club, saying brightly, "There are lots of things going on that I don't know about."

Gardens were then forgotten and she talked of her beloved isle. She told how Mr. Spofford had made the house out of an old tavern and finally had turned it sideways so that it now faces the water instead of the roadway. Mr. Spofford died many years ago.

She spoke of her early youth in Newburyport. Born in Calais, Me., she was sent to a private school in the former place and liked the old town so well that she persuaded her folks to move there. So they came and jolly times the young folk had.

When we spoke of her sea stories in "The Amber Gods," she said, "O, that is ancient history, but all founded on facts." She said that she and Mr. Spofford had a long courtship and spent much time boating around the old place. In this way she came in close contact with the fisher folk and gathered material for her stories. Mr. Spofford, whom she married in 1865, lived in Newburyport, and practiced law in Boston.

Mrs. Spofford, now 85 years old, says that in the 80 years in which she can remember she never has experienced such a winter as the past one. This winter she spent in Boston near Trinity church in the apartment of her niece, Miss Katherine Prescott Moseley. This niece and a brother of Mrs. Spofford, Otis Livingston Prescott, make up the household at Deer Isle. A sister is visiting with her at present. Mrs. Spofford says she has never found any spot in this country or in Europe to equal the island's alluring charm. It holds them until November nowadays. When asked if she came early in the spring, she laughingly said that from June 1 was now her season since cooks' and maids' wages had flown so high that it seemed more practical to remain in town as long as possible.

True New England woman that she is she spoke of one time living in Washington a short time, but upon her return she thought things grew more heavenly as she approached home and felt the difference even when nearing Connecticut.

Writing is easy for Mrs. Spofford. Her stories are written in the midst of family talk, out on the piazza or anywhere she happens to be. She insists upon a deep black lead pencil as now she cannot see the writing unless it is very noticeable. Her latest book (1920), "The Elder's People," is an interesting collection of New England tales of home folk. She has been writing them at odd times for the past ten years.

A form of nervous prostration has afflicted Mrs. Spofford for several years interfering with her "business of writing stories." Her work began while in the early twenties when she wrote something for the Atlantic Monthly which attracted attention and has continued down to the present. It is a record of novels, stories and poems. These reflect an elusive charm like that which pervades the personality of the mistress of Deer Isle.

When asked if she ever allowed a stray visitor like us to see through her house she said, "Yes, if they want to." She then conducted us quickly through the little hall running over with books from her late husband's adjoining study, through the long drawing-room, the dining-room and through a den. We passed through all too quickly for we would fain have lingered over some of the objects of interest in the homey looking rooms. Mrs. Spofford apologized for her slow movement, however.

She was a charming picture in her soft black dress made with a short train and having a black lace shawl thrown carelessly around her delicate shoulders. Her 85 years have not bent the body in any way. She walks as straight as a girl only very slowly. While in the dining-room she summoned a maid to take us over to the garden. With another hand-shake she bade us good-bye on the piazza. The one who wrote of her long ago saying that her "delicate head and high-bred, spiritualized face is often seen at the best concerts and at the opera" in Boston, although shunning social functions as a rule, should see her now when the face has grown almost ethereal in contour.

The garden across the way from her house has two gateways, each covered by a shingled archway. Noble trees, old-fashioned flowers placed picturesquely in groups, a bird bath, some low, soft sod steps and plenty of rustic seats make up the pretty place. A boathouse is at the lower end. The niece, Miss Moseley, takes special care of the flowers and spends much time among them in actual work.

We boarded our car with a last glance at the old place. Through the shrubbery along the stone wall we caught a glimpse of Mrs. Spofford and her brother serenely reading the evening papers on the front porch. The old greenish-brown house with its gay window boxes seemed to give us the same God-speed that the mistress had.

(Mrs. Spofford's sister, Katherine Prescott, married a brother of F. S. Moseley. In that way she is related to the Moseley family, where the Garden club had luncheon Tuesday.)

It doesn't make much difference how wise a man is, his wife can prove in five minutes that he's a six cylinder idiot.—American Motorist.

BOBBIE'S FOURTH

By GWENDOLYN RALEIGH

(The Breeze will print as often as practicable, this season, a fiction article. Manuscripts solicited for acceptance.—Ed.)

IT was the day before the Fourth, and little five-year-old Bobbie Longley wanted very much to have some fire crackers. He didn't want the little ones that mother approved of, but the great, big ones!

He sat in the shade of one of the big, friendly trees that dotted the smooth, velvety lawn surrounding the big house, patiently waiting for his mother to appear, for he knew that the car was waiting to take her away. The car was always waiting to whisk his mother away, it seemed.

Pretty, society mad, little Mrs. Longley shook her curly blonde head at Bobbie's request.

"No, Bobbie," she said, "you must be content with the small ones. Mary will get some for you, and she will show you how to set them off. Please don't tease, darling, for mother is in a great hurry." As she spoke the last words she kissed Bobbie a hasty good-bye and stepping into the car was soon whirled away, out through the large iron gate, and so lost to sight.

Bobbie's red lips pouted and tears, which were manfully winked back, persisted in filling his eyes. He wandered dejectedly along the driveway and just as he reached the gate, which was invitingly open, a large shaggy dog bounded after him, barking with delight at having been set free. Bobbie turned his head and stamped his foot.

"No, no, Rover, you must not come! Go back, Rover!" he said, imperatively, and the dog reluctantly, but obediently, turned back to the driveway, where he sat, staring anxiously and wistfully after his little master. Bobbie was not exactly running away; he was going to the store, where he had seen the dandy big fire crackers yesterday, when he and Mary, his nurse, had passed there.

"Pease, thir, I want thom fire crackers," he kept repeating over and over again as he hurried along.

Suddenly a fluffy little kitten scampering away across the field attracted his attention, and he hurried after it as fast as his little legs could go.

The kitten got quite away from him, and Bobbie continued on his way to the little "tore" for his fire crackers.

He felt very tired now, and the fire crackers didn't seem to mean so much to him after all. He wished his mother and father were not away all the time.

"'Course Mary is nice," he reasoned aloud, "'course she's nice, but she doesn't wike to p'ay wif me as my pretty mother does. Even mother doesn't wike to p'ay any more. She's a'ways tho busy."

The store was a long way off. He hurried along a little faster.

Why, he didn't remember any big trees near the store, and there ought to be a sidewalk, too.

Bobbie was lost! He broke into a run; why, he didn't even know which way home was! He didn't know how to get back!

Slow tears gathered in his eyes. He winked them back resolutely. He wouldn't cry, he declared sturdily. Uncle Jack had told him that only babies cried; and he was a little man, for mother had said so. She always called him her "little man," and he wanted to be a little man if it would make mother love him more, and then maybe when she loved him a lot, she wouldn't go away all the time.

In spite of his brave resolution not to cry, tears stole down his flushed, hot little face, and suddenly he sat down and dug his grimy little fist into his eyes.

He was so tired! Mother wouldn't mind if he sat down to rest a little while.

"Please, thir, I want thom fire crackers," he murmured drowsily. The sand man had claimed him. Bobbie was fast asleep, lost, no one knew where.

Back home Mary had distractedly gone to everyone on the place. They had found the gate open, but no one had seen him go out; indeed, no one had seen him at all.

Mrs. Longley was met upon her return with the news that "Master Bobbie has disappeared. We have hunted high and low for him, ma'am, but he can't be found."

"Bobbie? Why, he surely must be around somewhere. In the garden, perhaps." But her lips paled, and an anxious look came into her eyes.

"No, ma'am," the maid declared positively. "We have looked everywhere over the grounds and he is not there. Oh, I'm afraid that he is lost, ma'am, for no one has seen him since you left three hours ago," and the maid burst into tears.

A look of terror came into Mrs. Longley's eyes:

"Lost! Have you looked everywhere? Wait, he can't be lost! Let me go and see, I know I shall find him."

But though another thorough search was made of the grounds, Bobbie was not found.

An hour later, when the search of the grounds had just been completed, Mr. Longley returned.

"Tom, Tom," Edna Longley clung to her husband desperately, "my baby is lost. Oh, Tom, I am glad you are here! He's lost, and it's just what I deserved for neglecting him so! Tom, find my baby for me!"

For another hour the search continued without result. Mrs. Longley was distracted with grief, and her husband's face was pale and drawn.

"Yes, Edith," he said gravely, "we have neglected the little chap shamefully; but if God will only give us another chance—" He broke off suddenly, his voice choked with tears.

"He, He thinks we don't deserve him, Tom," Edith said brokenly, "and He is right. We don't! But I want my baby back again! Please God," she prayed, "give me back my little baby again."

As if in answer to a prayer Rover came bounding in. Everyone had forgotten about Rover, but the dog had not forgotten about his little master, and he had gone off on a still hunt of his own.

"Why, here's Rover. Rover, Rover, tell us where Bobbie is!"

"Woof! woof!" Rover replied . "Come with me." And away he trotted, out of the house and along the driveway that led to the street.

They found Bobbie sound asleep near one of the great granite rocks which made the grounds so attractive. He had not wandered far, but, tired out, he had slept a very long time, hidden by the huge rock.

Bobbie's parents had learned their lesson.

"'Low, mother," he said, as his mother gathered him close into her arms, tears of relief falling on his upturned face.

"Mother is cwying," he said wonderingly, "I sha'n't get the old fire crackers if it's going to make my pretty mother cwy," he declared.

"You shall have all the fire crackers you want," his mother said, "and mother shall stay home and help you set them off!"

"Father will be home, too, old chap," his father said, "and we'll have the best fire cracker party ever!"

"Big ones?" Bobbie questioned cautiously.

"The biggest ones we can get," replied his father, while Bobbie's eyes were round with wonder and delight.

Suddenly he cuddled closer to his mother, and his wistful little voice interrupted her kisses:

"I wouldn't mind so much about the fire crackers," he announced, "I want mother to love me and p'ay wif me."

"Love you, darling? Mother loves her little man, though she never knew how much until she thought she had lost him."

"And you'll p'ay wif me, mother?"

"Yes, my darling, always."

THE END.

A FISHING TRIP

By A. E. P.

THIS seemed to be William Henry's party, and unpremeditated, because he came along in that jerky haphazard way he has and said:

"Whadda ya say? Go fishin' in the morning?" This being last Friday and the next morning being Saturday, of course, and the busiest of the whole week!

We, that is, the old crowd, haven't been fishing this spring. Everybody seemed to be busy, nobody had any time, there was too much work to be done, and there you are; we'll go next week sure, and next week never came. But here was William Henry all primed to go, and says he:

"Don't forget to tell the big fat feller down tother end of the town, and we'll get away at half-past four by the clock,"—being in reality half-past three. The extra hour seems to be more noticeable at that time, too, than it does at noon.

Accordingly the next morning the big feller was sitting on the doorstep when I dropped in for him at ten minutes of four as arranged. He was puffing away at an old black briar and looking in the darkness like a real sure enough farmer with an old pair of overalls on and a slouch hat. How a man can smoke an old black pipe at that hour, provided he's just going out and not coming in, I don't know.

Joe had hot coffee all ready for us when we got down to the boathouse and we got away at 4.30, the same old crowd with the exception of a couple of Canadians that had been over in France last year.

Have you ever been out between the islands just before dawn on a perfect morning? Last Saturday morning was one of them; they are rare. There is usually a disturbing element, wind or fog or ground swell, too cold or too hot. Saturday morning the sky was a huge pearl split in half and we were inside it on a reflecting mirror of grey ocean. Perfect? The whole crowd was awed with the beauty of it.

By the time we got out to the Breakers, to landward, Beverly and Marblehead were beginning to show in outline against a bank of blue gray haze, so soft and impalpable that it seemed like a dream.

In the east the color began to come, down close to the sea, shading out to pale straw color, and right overhead clear grey. Never have I seen a more perfect sunrise. Just outside of Eastern Point the clear dividing line between sky and sea began, absolutely straight and perfect. Over Eastern Point the line was sharply broken, and here the color began to glow and deepen, from palest green yellow into chrome and pink, down through orange, and orange-scarlet, crimson-lake and dull red. The whole eastern sky was a glory to behold, and then in one place it began to intensify and come to life.

Watch in hand we waited for the resurrection and at eight minutes past five the upper edge of the sun shot up. One second and there was a huge glowing crimson spot, the next it seemed as though the whole east was going to catch fire. The sun does not come up slowly. It comes up with terrific speed. It gives one that sensation when it breaks through. One moment it is not, the next, it overwhelms one. Just three minutes it took by the watch till the lower edge was clear and on the instant a broad, golden path spread across the sea to within a hundred yards of the boat. Half a mile to the east a lobsterman hauling pots drifted across the path, every contour of man and boat standing out in sharp outline, and the wet buoy describing a glistening arc of silver as he flung it clear.

Over went the lines, the big man sitting immobile in the bow of the boat one minute and then he appeared to be electrified. That was a fish! Presently the line sagged again and in he came hand over hand, only a little one, three pounds or so. Then I got one, smaller still, and William Henry began to haul steadily a four to five pounder. For ten minutes we caught fish as fast as we could put over, then a lull and—always the lure of getting a big one, perhaps.

We got about sixty pounds, little and big, nothing over five or six pounds, had a lunch of bread and cheese and "home-made," the Volstead act not worrying us at all—and we were ashore to work at 7.30.

Oh! the lure and the thrill of it! The good comradeship of the old crowd, the clean air and smell of the sea; the riot of color and line; the joy of not living in a city. And if it so be that one lives by the sea as well as in the country what more can be desired, except that the place may be Manchester-by-theSea, with its curve of Singing Beach, and rocky headlands, and the dawn, and sunset over the islands to east and west!

FOOD FISH LAW ENFORCEMENT

(Excerpts from address by Arthur L. Millet, State Inspector of Fish, given at summer meeting of Essex County Associated Boards of Trade.)

THIS special subject to which your attention is invited for a few moments, has to do basically with furnishing the public with the opportunity of buying only good fish and with knowing exactly what they are buying, and on this is based the assumption that with this achived, public confidence in the use of fish as a food staple will be greatly increased, thereby bringing about an increased demand for, and consumption of, Massachusetts-caught fish, to the end that the time-honored one-fish-day-a-week will be relegated to the discard and that two and even three Fridays may become the rule and not the exception in the food week program of every family.

It is not necessary to dwell here upon the value of fish as an article of diet. That it is as necessary and sustaining as meat has long ago been definitely shown.

Three fundamentals have long handicapped the more extensive use of fresh and frozen fish—poor transportation, the sale by some dealers of fish of an inferior and at times unfit-for food quality; and the seeming reluctance of a considerable portion of the public to grasp the fact that fish is of equal food value with meat and much cheaper.

With the matter of transportation, it is not the purpose of this paper to deal. It is a big subject by itself. It is contended here, however, that if the public mind can be educated to the fact that in buying its fish dinner it is buying only good, fresh or frozen fish and that the dealer is, under the law, not allowed to expose for sale fish unfit for

NOTES OF INTEREST

A TRIP to the North Shore is never complete without a visit to the Magnolia shops. Delightfully cool and inviting, with their unrivalled displays of accessories both for the home and for the wardrobe, and with colors and decorations that blend soothingly and beautifully, these little shops afford a real treat to the shopper, whether one is buying or merely "looking around."

There are also captivating little places where one can stop to rest and for luncheon, tea or dinner. Oh, yes, there are many, many things we must do when visiting Magnolia, for there is the beach, with its smooth boulders, carved into queer figures by the washing of the waves, and the waves, themselves, breaking gently on the beach, coquetishly inviting one to remain, on clear days, and frowningly demanding one's attention on stormy days; there is the Oceanside, around which Magnolia society life revolves; but to enjoy all of these things fully, we must be thoroughly at ease about our wardrobe, and so first of all the Magnolia shops call to us, and, as at the waving of a magic wand, we find our little difficulties vanishing into thin air.

The short shopping tour of last week did not allow of our "taking in" all of the shops, so this week the tour will be to some of those not already visited.

L. P. Hollander Co., of Boston, opened their Magnolia store a couple of weeks ago. At a distance we admire this attractive little shop, and on nearing it our admiration increases, but it is upon entering and beholding the inside, and the display of smart wearing apparel that our admiration reaches its height. Hats, skirts and gowns—as well as the tub dresses and sweaters, are found here. The gowns and hats at this shop are made to order, and all designs and styles are original. This season they are showing an unusually smart skirt of jersey in various colors. This skirt is trimmed with woolen embroidery in harmonizing colors. There are also the sweaters to match, and one can give an order for a skirt and sweater in any colors desired, confident of having a correct and becoming sports costume. A hat, too, can be made to match the costume, and we are assured that there will be no long delay in making up this costume, for Hollander's have their own fitters right in Magnolia, as well as a well-equipped work-room.

Another thing worth mentioning en passant is that each gown or skirt or hat is either their own original design, or French models.

And the lingerie! Here indeed is a sight to delight the soul of woman! One lingers lovingly over each dainty piece. Pretty, tasteful and very new, are they, and we exclaim in pleasure as each new wonder is brought to view.

Directly across the street from Hollander's we see the sign, "Lamson & Hubbard," of Boston. Furs! We hastily wend our way across to this little shop, for à tout prix one must have furs—oh, a great many furs—at all seasons of the year. There are the alluring chiffons, fur-trimmed and piquantly correct, as well as other fur-trimmed wraps so essential to the well-selected wardrobe. This season the Canary Jap Martin in single and double skins is finding favor. This is distinctly a summer fur and very striking in effect.

Here again we find many pretty frocks, gowns and hats. There is a dress which is being received à bras auverts by the well-dressed woman. This dress is made of sateen in various colors and designs, and is one of the little tub dresses that are pretty as well as comfortable and practical.

Walking along the avenue, undecided where to go next the name on a little sign protruding into the walk attracts our attention, and upon nearing this shop we are confirmed in the suspicion that it is just what we are looking for. Ruby's is one of the most exclusive shops in Boston, and the home of French "pretties." Blouses, exquisitely embroidered, that could be only French, beckon, and we willingly answer, succumbing to their allure as one after another is brought to our attention, each one seemingly more beautiful than the last.

This season Ruby's are displaying a lace coat in pretty colors. So unusual, and so evidently "the thing" is this coat that reluctantly leaving the blouses, we turn our attention to the coat, which is made of woolen lace and comes from Gaupy, France.

Let us not forget the gowns at Ruby's, for here, too, are the smart French models, as well as gowns made to order and of their own design, and we are assisted in selecting the most suitable colors and material, as well as the most becoming designs.

We are told that we may also have a hat to match our gown, for they make their own hats here.

We find that Schmidt & Son have again opened their pretty little shop in Magnolia this season. Schmidt is well-known along the Shore, for it is here that North Shore patrons turn when seeking the correct thing either in the antique or the new and unusual silverware and china. The store itself is quaint and attractive in appearance, and the tastefully arranged display changes the task of selecting to real pleasure.

This season they are showing a splendid selection of antique and modern silver and Sheffield plate, and a big new shipment of fine English china and rock crystal glass has just arrived.

Our shopping here completed and a promise to ourselves to visit this delightful little shop many times during the summer tucked not too far back in our minds, we hasten to "do" one more shop before luncheon.

One of the greatest problems in selecting the wardrobe is shoes. "What kind of shoes should I wear with that particular gown in order to set it off to best advantage," is ever near the surface of one's thoughts, and what a relief when it is solved! At Cammeyer's we find that our troubles along this line are at an end. Correct shoes for all occasions are on display here, and buckles in novel designs, as well as the dainty mules in various colors. Very smart and altogether pretty are the little novelty slippers which fasten on the side or with a strap with buttons or tiny buckles. These are just the thing to set off a pretty afternoon frock. They are of the modified French style and are being received with enthusiasm. Those on display are made of suède, suède and kid and suède and patent leather, and can be made in any combination and color.

We also find shoes for evening wear that are both pretty and smart, and we experience no difficulty in selecting just what we need for various gowns.

It has taken some time to select our evening shoes, but we are not yet ready to leave, for here are the sports shoes! We simply must have loads of shoes to go with our pretty new sports costumes, but we must be very careful to choose wisely. For the golf enthusiast there are the waterproof oxfords with the combination cork and rubber soles, and the golf stockings to match. Shoes in brown and white, black and white or all white in quanities of styles are produced at our request. Riding boots are next inspected and decided upon, and by this time we are all "stocked up"—for the present.

Our tour would be very incomplete without a visit to Dreicer's, so the remainder of our morning will be spent among their exquisitely set jewels. Before going in we can take a preliminary peep at the window, and among the winking, blinking diamonds there is a unique little brooch which "appeals" very strongly. It is about one and one-half inches long; is composed of one long diamond, with a square-cut emerald on either end, and there is absolutely no setting showing.

Lured on by this pretty piece we enter the store and eagerly drift from one case to another in an attempt to see everything at once.

In each case a lovely display of rare and beautiful stones in fascinating settings greets the eye — a smiling, gleaming temptation.

Among many other beautiful bracelets we find one of square cut graduating emeralds, with a row of diamonds on either side. This bracelet is distinctive in appearance, and altogether desirable. There are rings of every conceivable shape and with all kinds of settings. A ring which is especially attractive is set with a pure pink diamond. This stone is very unusual, and a truly valuable asset in one's jewel case. There are quantities of pearl rings, and diamond rings, and rubies and emeralds.

For men there are the flat square sapphire-set rings or the round seal stones.

A ring that is finding favor with North Shore patrons is the "twin" sapphire and diamond ring. The stones are set side by side, and are of the same shape and cutting.

Another attractive little piece is the jade hatpin. Delicate pieces of jade surrounded by diamonds form the head of the pin, which is light in weight because of the extreme thinness of the jade.

Truly here we find all kinds of stones, set in the most beautiful and most effective settings. How reluctantly we tear ourselves away! But there will be other visits during the summer and we had almost forgotten about luncheon!

Edna Ferguson's T House. Why, that means luncheon! And it is time, too, after our strenuous morning! There are large friendly trees dotting the lawns, their branches waving a graceful welcome, and the verandas look cool and inviting, so we wend our way up the short walk to the house. The Misses Ferguson are charming hostesses, and somehow we find ourselves thinking that there is something especially nice in store for us—and we are not disappointed.

At the end of our shopping trip we are more than ever convinced that a trip to Magnolia is never complete without a visit to the Magnolia shops. Quand on voit la chose, on la croit.

food (as has too often been the case), and also that the dealer is obliged by law to indicate to the purchaser just what grade of fish he is buying and also just what species of fish he is buying, all in truthful terms, either by printed signs or word of mouth; it is contended and it would seem reasonably so, that a state of confidence will be set up in the minds of the buying public with the inevitable result that this same public will buy more fish, will eat more fish and that the average home will have more fish days and that fish as a food staple will come into its own.

This then is the ground work of the act to regulate the sale and cold storage of fresh food fish, passed by the legislature of 1919.

It should be emphasized right here, that this new law imposes no burden. It does, however, protect the public and also the honest dealer. Because it will lead to increased consumption of fish, it will be a direct financial benefit to the dealer and also by reason of some of the provisions cannot fail it would seem, to make several lines of fish cheaper than at present to the consumer.

Briefly, the bill which affects both wholesale and retail dealers in fresh and frozen fish and also in a lesser degree, dealers in salt fish, provides the following salient points:

All fresh food fish must be divided into three grades before being offered for sale or placed in cold storage. Naturally the first is to be known as "new fish," while term "off-shore" fish will designate the second grade fish. Under the law "fish of the third grade shall include all fish which are suitable for splitting or salting, but are not suitable for sale of fresh fish;" and also, fish of the third grade cannot be sold at retail for food.

The law provides for the designations of fish of the various grades, and also, that only truthful terms shall be used in the designation of the fish represented to the consumer. For the purpose of enforcing the law, regulations have been decided upon whereby with the assistance of a system of invoices and receipts the exact grade and quality of the fish can be truthfully represented and traced way down the list from wholesaler and commission men through the retailer to the buying public. This is one of the prominent features of the regulations under which the act will be enforced. The dealer has the choice of marking his fish by signs or by truthfully distinguishing it by word of mouth.

Quite a lot of fish which appeared to be below standard have been observed and also little or no attempt to distinguish between the grades has been noted. This is more noticeable in markets of the cheaper class than in others. In many types of markets, however, has been seen what at least can be termed evasion of truthful terms; for instance, lowly pollock is masqueraded as "Boston Bluefish," "Boston Bay Blues," and in some cases baldly and boldly labelled "Bluefish."

These few cases are merely cited to show what this law, properly enforced, can do away with, to the benefit, financial and otherwise, of the consumer.

OUR HOLIDAYS

Their Significance

By GWENDOLYN RALEIGH

INDEPENDENCE DAY JULY 4TH

Observed this year, Monday, July 5th

ONCE more the time has come to celebrate the Fourth of July, Independence Day. This day is our one distinctive, universal, national holiday. The birthday of our nation, it is a legal holiday in every state of the Union.

On this day we celebrate the signing, on the 4th of July, 1776, of the Declaration of Independence, which declared this country forever free from the British rule. For some time the people of this country had been considered as rebels, and England thinking that they should be treated as such, did not pay much attention to the petitions that were made. Though in the beginning the aim was not toward independence, but only to have the wrongs of the mother country against her colonists righted, yet it was pointed out by prominent statesmen that reconciliation with England was impossible, and that some definite action must be taken in order to change the people of America from outlaws to safe, free, honorable citizens.

America was in the position of acknowledging her people subjects in arms against her sovereign, or declaring her independence, for she could not hope to win from England a recognition of her rights by petitions or threats. Long did Congress discuss the pros and cons of this move, but finally, chiefly through the work of Thomas Jefferson, independence was established beyond any reasonable doubt.

Today this is the holiday most loved and the one which appeals most strongly to that sentiment of patriotism and national pride which glows in every loyal American heart.

Poems have been written and songs sung about the "Liberty Bell," and justly so, for was it not this bell that announced to the American people their freedom? On the day that Congress met (July 4, 1776) at the State House in Philadelphia to take final action upon the Declaration of Independence, which had been under discussion for three days, the streets were filled with eager men anxious to hear the first news of the outcome. Business was forgotten in the momentous crisis which the country had now reached. A boy was stationed below to give the signal to the bellman, who had mounted to the belfry, as soon as the final vote was passed.

Hour after hour went by without appearance of the sign so anxiously looked for by the multitudes gathered around the entrance to the State House. They grew impatient. The old bellman leaned over the railing, straining his eyes downward, until his bright, expectant hope had yielded to fear, but at length, about two o'clock, the door was opened and word was given.

"It has passed" leaped from lip to lip in the shouting, cheering throng, intoxicated with their joy in the newfound freedom.

The bell? It sounded the joyful tidings to every person in Philadelphia, and its cry was caught up and echoed in every part of the country.

In the southern and middle cities and villages, the news was greeted with wild celebrations. Images of the monarchs were torn down and dragged through the streets with ropes around their necks, cannon thundered, bonfires blazed, and the opulent feasted, drank toasts and joined in the hilarious celebrations.

In New England the joys of freedom manifested itself in prayers and sermons, and in religious rites.

Since that time the Fourth of July has been solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations without limit, until the "Glorious Fourth" became one of the noisiest—and most dangerous—of all our holidays. Indeed, so many people were killed and maimed by these celebrations, that, of recent years, there has been a growing sentiment for a "safe and sane" Fourth—with more music and parades, and less powder.

In commemorating the day in Westminster Abbey, on July 4, 1880, Phillips Brooks said, in part:

"It is not for me to glorify tonight the country which I love with all my heart and soul. I may not ask your praise for anything admirable which the United States has been or done. But on my country's birthday I may do something far more solemn and more worthy of the hour. I may ask for your prayers in her behalf; that on the manifold and wondrous chance which God is giving her,—on her freedom (for she is free, since the old stain of slavery was washed out in blood); on her unconstrained religious life; on her passion for education and her eager search for truth; on her zealous care for the poor man's rights and opportunities; on her quiet homes where the future generations of men are growing; on her manufactories and her commerce; on her wide gates open to the east and to the west; on her strange meeting of the races out of which a new race is slowly being born; on her vast enterprise and her illimitable hopefulness,—on all these materials and machineries of manhood, on all that the life of my country must mean for humanity, I may ask you to pray that the blessing of God, the Father of man, and Christ, the Son of man, may rest forever."

SURF SONG OF LIBERTY

By Alex. G. Tupper

OH fairest land, America—
The dear land of the Free!
Thy shores are christened with the flood—
The pure and boundless sea!
The steady beat but marks the pulse
Of men who bravely ride
The span withholding liberty
To them beyond the tide!

I dip my hand within the foam
And feel devotion's thrill:
The power of a mighty throne
Controlled by God's own will!
He guided men who saw the birth
Among the countless stars;
Who ne'er forgot the emblem's light
And placed it with the bars.

The flag shall float with beaming folds
Against the azure blue!
So beautiful the colors breast
Where liberty prowed through—
The white, the pure shall mingle there
With ocean's mighty foam,
Above the Pilgrim's trodden path
To shore, where they sought home!

Oh, let me fill the crystal glass
With ocean's sparkling wine
Right from the vineyards of the blest—
Crushed purely and so fine!
The grandeur and the beauty rare,
My lips can ne'er explain—
My thoughts just mingle with the song
Upon the mighty main!

EDITORIAL

THE MAYOR OF BEVERLY, at the graduation exercises of the high school in that city, made an effective and commendable address in which he gave his unqualified endorsement of the city's policy of making adequate appropriations for the maintenance of the schools. Specifically, he placed himself on record to support any reasonable plan to remedy the congestion at the high school. The management of the institution is in competent hands, supported by an efficient teaching force, but the faculty is hampered in its work because of the need for room. Instead of a continuous session, with all pupils in attendance, two sesssions of the school are necessary with the corresponding injustice to the teaching force and to the pupils.

The waste of time and energy because of poor building facilities is folly. The citizens of the Garden City are awake to the fact that it is a poor policy that permits students of the high school age to have free morning hours that should be devoted to work, and then deprive them of one and one quarter hours of school work each school day. There are forty school weeks in each year, with five school days in each week, affording high school pupils each year approximately two hundred school days. If a student loses one hour and a quarter each school day, the loss in work each week is six and one quarter hours, or more than one entire school day each week. In the year that the pupil attends the high school in the afternoon, his loss is two hundred and fifty school hours. This is equivalent to fifty school days or ten school weeks in the year. All for the need of an adequate plant.

Money will construct a building, but it cannot measure the loss to the youths of that city in training in the formative period of their life. The school authorities are meeting their problem with commendable zeal and initiative. The war and post-war conditions have prevented building operations, but now the mayor will be supported in his position by the citizens who wish the young men and women to have a thorough high school training. Taxpayers and business men will be quick to appreciate the necessity of providing a modern equipment for high school work. The authorities vested with power should at once give their attention to the problem and present plans to remedy the situation.

Education is not a luxury. It is a debt which every community owes to its youths. To rob a young man or young woman of an opportunity to study is unjust to the student, the faculty of the high school, the school committee and the parents. The condition will be remedied; only the war has caused the delay.

A DISPATCH FROM Pawtucket, Rhode Island, says the "old Slater Mill, the birthplace of the cotton textile industry in America, is to be preserved as a show place and a museum for textile machinery. A committee of manufacturers has taken title to the property, and will later turn it over to the city or to a memorial association. The mill was erected in 1793 and in it, Samuel Slater started the manufacture of cotton fabrics. The plans call for the restoration of the mill property to its original condition. The plant has not been used for some years, and is much in need of repairs." The North Shore of Massachusetts, however, has a claim to put in for the first cotton mill erected in America. It was built at North Beverly and the bricks used in the construction of the cellar partition walls of the foundation of the first church built at Beverly Farms were taken from the old mill building when it was torn down. The city of Beverly has always taken a just pride in its inheritances and does not permit the statement to go unchallenged. It is certain that the first cotton mill in America could not have been established in both Pawtucket and Beverly. Beverly has the honors.

WHEN A MAN has the time he does not have the money; when he has the money he does not have the time. So perverse is life!

CHANNING COX should have the support of the Republican party in his aspirations for the gubernatorial chair. The policy of the party has always been to select a candidate for the lieutenant-governorship who has served an apprenticeship warranting the nomination, and who would become a formidable candidate for the governorship when nominated. The Massachusetts Republicans have accepted the general policy. It has proven acceptable to the voters as the records of the party for the last two decades prove.

An effort has been made by certain individuals to influence voters in favor of a break in the policy. Such a letter was sent to a leading Boston newspaper, signed by Robert M. Washburn, and having the support of Grafton Cushing and Jos. Walker, both of whom were once in the line of succession. Mr. Washburn has taken a position that would inevitably be challenged by the rank and file of the Republican party and the letter of the former mayor of Beverly, Herman A. Macdonald, was to the point. "The real humor of the letter comes in the signatures of Mr. Cushing and Mr. Walker, of Brookline," says Mr. Macdonald. "Both served a long time on Beacon Hill as members of the Massachusetts legislature and later as speakers. It never occured to them when they later ran, one for lieutenant-governor and the other for governor, that 'succession,' so-called, was a bad thing and that they should step aside for a 'business man.' What is more to the point, they didn't and nowhere in their speeches do I find them advocating the position they now assume. Their principal argument in their own behalf was the great experience they had acquired in their service of the commonwealth. Mr. Washburn should be the sole author of his communications hereafter. They become too stiff, formal and dignified when he associates himself with Mr. Cushing and Mr. Walker. To save his reputation as a writer and advisor in business matters, he must travel alone."

Cushing and Walker ought not to be surprised if their position now is challenged. How are they warranted in opposing the policy of succession now? There is no reason why the Republican party cannot choose another candidate if they wish; if an emergency arose the voters would demand it. Such an emergency has not arisen. Cox is a capable man. His nomination should be assured and with the strong Republican tide in a presidential year his election is probable. There is no reason why the Republican party should reverse its policy now.

FORTUNATE IS THE land whose politicians seek duty and honor to serve their country well and not to satisfy their ambitions.

The Development of large business interests has not only created larger resources, but has compelled a new study of the just division of the profits of industry. The method of buying everything in the lowest market, including labor, and with no heed to the moral obligations involved is in disrepute. Organized industry owes a moral responsibility to the community in which the industry is located, to the consumer that purchases the goods and to the men and the women whose brain and brawn contribute to the commercial success of the organization. Society, through laws, is compelling industrial reforms. Reorganization and readjustment, or the policies of large industries are assuring justice to the workers. On this point the late George W. Perkins in an address before the National Civic Federation and quoted in the New York Sun says concerning the place of reorganization of industry and the value and justice of profit sharing:

"A good many years of actual experience have made me optimistic regarding profit sharing plans worked out along the following lines:

"First—Every business has, first of all, to earn operating expenses, depreciation and fair returns on honest capitalization.

"Second—I believe that every business should consider that the compensation paid employees is for the purpose of earning a sum of money sufficient to pay the above-mentioned items.

"Third—That any profits over and above such sum should, on some percentage basis, be divided between the capital used in the business and the employees engaged in the business.

"Fourth—That in neither case should these profits be immediately withdrawn from the business; that they should be left in the business for a reasonable length of time, to protect and increase its financial strength and safety; that in the case of capital its share of these profits should be carried to surplus; that in the case of employees their share should be distributed to them in some form of security representing an interest in the business, and that each employee should be required to hold such security for a reasonable length of time, say, three to five years.

"Fifth—That the employees' share should be allotted to them as nearly as possible on the basis of compensation they receive. Up to date this has proved to be the best method."

Where profit sharing plans have divided profits on a cash basis, failure often has been the result, Mr. Perkins, pointed out, because the objective of the scheme, to get workmen interested not only in their own rewards, but in business efficiency, had been ignored. Accordingly he advocated publicity with regard to the details of the business or industry which would acquaint the employee with the exact financial situation and show him the way to aid in improving it by his personal efforts, with the resultant reward as his incentive. To cement this interest he urged that employees become security holders, financially interested in their concerns.

To the objection that owners would hesitate to let it be known publicly how little or how much they earned, Mr. Perkins offered the answer that a business "merely getting by" would be improved were its true condition known so that its working organization might better it, whereas a business reaping huge profits could not expect to enjoy that privilege secretly for long.

"The day of secretive methods is passing rapidly," said Mr. Perkins. "The day of publicity is at hand. Any profit sharing plan without an open, honest balance sheet and detailed annual report will never succeed. I am convinced that labor is entirely willing that capital should have its fair reward and proper protection, but in this country we have too many instances where capital has demanded improper protection and taken exorbitant reward; and one of the main reasons why the serious problems confronting us today are so difficult of solution lies in the fact that too many men of capital are still arrogant and unreasonable."

The essential requirements of justice demand that every contributor of brains, brawn or money to an organization should enjoy a just return upon the invested strength, time or money. All factors must be justly remunerated. The problem is still an acute one and the best minds may well give time and thought to its consideration. Progress is being made in profit sharing plans and the future of profit sharing is bright. When all the contributors receive a just return for their labor and time there will be peace in the industrial world. Discontent and labor troubles will be adjusted by arbitration and their possibility minimized by a new order of financial adjustments.

The Man Who discovers early in life that he can earn a livelihood and make a life as well has discovered a great secret.

Young People Should be Taught to choose a vocation early in life. The decision should not be left to chance. Too many people are unhappy because they are bound to uncongenial occupations, affording opportunity neither for self-expression nor for self-development. Young people do not appreciate the responsibilities of life early enough, or realize them too late to begin and to complete a training which their capabilities warrant. They may be aided in coming to a decision by outside influence, —journals, teachers, friends and parents. The influence of teachers is limited. Journals have an opportunity that is not neglected. The parents have the best opportunity and the greatest obligation, despite the usual perversity of youth to disregard parental advice and influence. Young people often decide too late in their high school course to prepare for college or a technical school. The elective system has made it possible for students to choose subjects that appeal at the time they are chosen without regard to their future benefit and value to them in their work. When college requirements are considered their preparation may be incomplete. Then comes the dilemma. It is too late to go back; without the equipment it is impossible to go forward. The youth is unprepared for the higher institution because of the poor judgment exercised in selecting school studies.

Parents and friends cannot render a greater service to a young friend than by leading him to an early decision of a life work. High school students should not delay their decision to enter college. Those who intend to seek employment at the end of their course should begin early in the course to prepare for the vocation desired. Such decisions steady students in their student days and contribute immeasurably to the student's life. A clear purpose and an aroused ambition are valuable aids in guiding youths through the important years in high school. Young people should be taught at home to choose a vocation early in life and then every effort of parent and pupil should be made to gain success.

John, of the Jordan, knew nothing about Masonry and its instructive principles in forming character, but he did know what the foundations of true character were. Well did he plan for life with draughtings for a life plan that every man must heed. He taught the fundamental character of self-restraint, self-discipline and self-expression. Asceticism is not desirable, but self-discipline is. Social power comes through personal strength. Only the man who is thoroughly disciplined, possessing poise, can radiate influences for good and exert a power over the lives of others.

SUCCESS

ABRAHAM LINCOLN said:

I will study and prepare myself, and some day my chance will come.

Success does not so much depend on external help as on self-reliance.

I don't think much of a man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday.

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.

I am always for the man who wishes to work.

I say "try." If we never try, we shall never succeed.

A Business Man's Creed

I believe in the stuff I am handing out, in the firm I am working for, and in my ability to get results. I believe that honest stuff can be passed out to honest people by honest methods. I believe in working, not weeping—in boosting—not knocking, and in the pleasure of my job.

I believe that a man gets what he goes after and that one deed done today is worth two done tomorrow, and that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself.

I believe in today and the work I am doing, in tomorrow and the work I hope to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds. I believe in courtesy, in kindness, in generosity, in good cheer, in friendship, and in honest competition.

I believe there is something doing somewhere for any man who is ready to do it. I believe I am ready right now.—Walkover Factory Prints.

Hundreds of Workers are Worn Out by Routine

Medical men are very fond of recommending "a change of air." Sometimes they add "and scene." And you, when you feel a bit run down, regret that a "change" cannot be managed until your annual holiday is due. But it can. You can change your daily routine. There is nothing so deadening as routine. Hundreds of thousands of workers, manual and mental, are being run down, not by work, but by routine. They get up at the same hour, eat the same sort of breakfast, read the same paper, catch the same train, travel up with the same people, smoke the same old pipe, and the same old tobacco, go to the same place for lunch, and—well, they are routinists!

And on Saturday they go to the same old picture house in the evening, or take the same old walk.

Go in for "a change." Get up earlier and walk to work.

Put yourself and your habits into a bag and shake yourself up. Why be a snail in a ditch? What you want is change. And less of air than of habits.

A New Department Devoted to the Younger Members of the Breeze Family

Conducted by Lillian McCann

HURRAH! It's coming at last. What? Why "The Book Caravan," of course.

The Bookshop for Boys and Girls, conducted by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston, will send a caravan to the North Shore beginning Monday, July 5, in East Gloucester. The caravan of books will be in charge of two college girls.

There will be books for everyone, but you Junior Breezes want to go and spend all the money you possibly are allowed and urge Mother and Daddy to go and spend some more for you, too. Lay in a supply of books for the summer and also for the winter. You know your money is well spent when you put it into good books.

The caravan will be at the following places: East Gloucester, Monday, July 5, opposite the Arcade, near the Fairview. Magnolia, Tuesday, July 6, Norman ave., near Union chapel. Beverly Farms, Wednesday, July 7, West Beach. Phillips Beach, Thursday and Friday, July 8 and 9, the Neighborhood club. Nahant, Saturday, July 10, the Lightship Tea room, Nahant rd.

A Junior Breeze told us this week that a little fairy story had been written for this page and was on its way from Philadelphia. Who else of our Junior Breezes will send in an original poem, short story or something about their pets or books they like.

THE WORD OF GOD TO LEYDEN CAME

THE word of God to Leyden came
Dutch town by Zuyder Zee:
Rise up, my children, of no name,
My kings and priests to be.
There is an empire in the West,
Which I will soon unfold;
A thousand harvests in her breast
Rocks ribbed with iron and gold.

Rise up, my children, time is ripe!
Old things are passed away.
Bishops and kings from earth I wipe:
Too long they've had their day.
A little ship have I prepared
To bear you o'er the seas;
And in your souls my will declared
Shall grow by slow degrees.

Leave, then, the hammer and the loom,
You've other work to do;
For Freedom's commonwealth there's room,
And you shall build it too.
I'm tired of bishops and their pride,
I'm tired of kings as well;
Henceforth I take the people's side,
And with the people dwell.

Tear off the mitre from the priest,
And from the king, his crown;
Let all my captives be released;
Lift up, whom men cast down.
Their pastors let the people choose,
And choose their rulers, too;
Whom they select, I'll not refuse,
But bless the work they do.

The Pilgrims rose, at this, God's word,
And sailed the wintry seas;
With their own flesh nor blood conferred,
Nor thought of wealth or ease.
They left the towers of Leyden town,
They left the Zuyder Zee;
And where they cast their anchor down,
Rose Freedom's realm to be.

—Jeremiah Eames Rankin.

Lament who will, in fruitless tears,
The speed with which our moments fly;
I sigh not over vanished years,
But watch the years that hasten by.

—Bryant.

CHILDREN'S story-hour classes conducted by Rev. Neilson Poe Carey of St. John's Episcopal church, Beverly Farms, are beginning for the season.

Tuesday—July 6—at 3 p. m. the younger children meet in the church and every Tuesday after throughout the season.

Thursday—July 8—3 p. m., older children meet Mr. Carey at the church, and every Thursday during the summer.

North Shore children find these classes very entertaining.

JUNIOR BREEZES, here is a special message to you from your old friend, Matt Campbell, at the Essex County club, Manchester. Although the weather has been against him, yet Matt has been able to do some coaching in golf and tennis. Charles Stockton has been one of the faithful young tennis players, while his sister, May, who is older, takes to golf. Charles and May are now with their parents at Westport, N. Y., but have told Matt they will be back in a month.

Hélène and Phyllis Ellsworth are old-time tennis players, who are again with Matt. Fred Ellsworth and his cousin, Bordie Harriman, of New York, are golf students. Wm. and Edwina Campbell, the children of Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Campbell, of New York, are coming on next week. They are always among the enthusiastic followers of Matt.

So get ready to see Matt, the genial Scotchman, beginning his sixth season at the club.

Place yourself in the middle of the stream of power and wisdom which flows into you as life, place yourself in full centre of that flood, then you are without effort impelled to truth, to right, and to perfect contentment.—EMERSON.

Guard well thy thoughts that they be all kindly, and thy deeds will take care of themselves.

Enjoy the 4th, but beware of accidents.

GARDEN CLUB VISITS NORTH SHORE

etable and fruit gardens and its pretty flower garden have always been features of the place.

"Indian Hill" and the F. S. Moseley estates, in West Newbury and Newburyport were then visited. (See description of these noted places in another article.)

At one thirty Mrs. Moseley served luncheon on her beautiful terrace under the pines overlooking the Merrimac river. Delegates and non-delegates and friends were entertained. After luncheon a business meeting was held and then the gardens and famous laurels were visited.

"Castle Hill," Ipswich, was the next objective point. Here upon more than 2500 acres of sand dunes Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Jr., of Chicago, have built up one of the show places of the Shore. The hill was granted to Governor John Carver's son in 1634. The Rufus Choate birthplace is also a part of this section. The exquisite Italian gardens are noted far and wide. The rose garden is itself worth going miles to see. The ornamental features, such as Bela Pratt's last marble group, and other handsome designs enhance the charm of the place about which much could be written.

The casino, the great swimming pool, the bachelor quarters, the terraces, the wide strip of green sward that bends down over three undulations and runs like a ribbon to the beach, and the surroundings everywhere are parts of one great whole that make up a gentleman's country estate that is seldom found so near the sea. "Castle Hill" will be open this Saturday and Sunday for any who wish to go through. A fee will be charged that will benefit the Benjamin Stickney Cable memorial hospital in Ipswich. This was given to the town in memory of their friend by the Cranes. The late Mr. Cable was killed in an automobile accident while on a visit to "Castle Hill."

Mrs. Crane served a seven o'clock dinner to the delegates. After which a council of Garden club presidents was held in the casino.

Wednesday's program opened with a business meeting at "Villa Crest," West Manchester, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Denègre. Here in a large coach house the club convened. After which the grounds and gardens were thoroughly examined. Terraces with a garden on the sloping rocky hillside, a pond, fountains and exquisite roses were noticed. A grape arbor under which was a delightfully soft grass walk was a feature noted at this, one of West Manchester's most admired places.

The club then motored to Horticultural hall in Manchester to the flower show. From there they went to "The Narrows" on Smith's Point, Manchester. Here the beautiful garden on Manchester bay belonging to Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, was opened for their inspection. The lily pool, tea house, pergola and statuary are striking features of her garden. St. Francis and Birds, and the sundial are noted works of Mrs. Maynard Ladd, of Beverly Farms.

Luncheon time drew nigh so these gardens were left to their own charm while hungry sight-seers sought their place of entertainment. "Apple Trees," the Crosby home, was where Mrs. Crosby gave a luncheon, while 110 partook of luncheon at the Essex County club. There were other smaller affairs for non delegates, the largest of which was, perhaps, the one given by Miss Margaret L. Corlies, of "Att-Lea House," Magnolia. Miss Corlies, herself a devoted gardener, entertained fifty including the Philadelphia Garden club and "The Weeders," also from Philadelphia.

After luncheon the motors headed Gloucester way, where Eastern Point was visited. The garden at "Villa Latomia" was sought. Here, upon a rocky, sun-kissed point, Miss M. L. Davison and Miss T. de R. Hawley, of New York, have long had a garden which is their special pride. Secluded from all passersby it lies serenely behind its stone enclosures.

The club then motored back to Manchester Cove, where they left their cars near the entrance to the F. M. Whitehouse place. A walk was taken along the rocky shore through "Sharksmouth," the Charles Hopkinson place, and through "Rookwood," the home of the Misses Sturgis. The Misses Sturgis are bent toward the artistic in everything, while Mrs. Hopkinson, an enthusiastic gardener, is the wife of a noted Boston artist, so that speaks for itself about this particular part of the Shore.

Dana's Beach was crossed and then came "The Chimneys." This strikingly beautiful spot belongs to Mrs. Gardiner Martin Lane, of Boston. Everybody was served tea and a truly delightful affair it was. The water gardens here are the largest on the Shore. The tea house, wall garden, general garden and wild garden with its delightful paths, and the charming sea views, make Mrs. Lane's place long-to-be-remembered by the visitors.

Here the club was met by their motors and taken to Pride's Crossing, alighting at the avenue leading up to "Burn-side," the home of the Misses Loring. They walked up, passed the fine showing of rhododendrons, past the ferns, over the noisy little brook and on to Plum cove beach. Here they crossed up to a rocky path which led to "Pompey's Garden," the home of Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw. This house is ideally situated and seems to be a part of its high, rocky surroundings. Rhododendrons of massive growth cling to the rocks around the house. The little Italian garden walled in, with its pretty tea house, its fountains and flowers make it one of the most unusual spots on the Shore.

From here they were met by their motors and taken to Pride's Crossing. In leaving the Shaw residence they passed out that wonderful avenue shaded by ancient elms, a show avenue of the Shore.

At Pride's "Rockmarge," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, of New York, was their destination.

To many "Rockmarge" suggests horses and shows, for Judge Moore's thoroughbreds are of international fame. His private race track near the Pride's Crossing station is one of the show places of the Shore and has afforded pleasure for thousands of people at a time in various seasons past. Here were given some of the greatest Red Cross benefits in the country during war days.

But Mrs. Moore's flower garden was, of course, what the ladies were enraptured with this time.

The stately white cottage with its tall white pillared porch and its extensive terraces faces the water and the gardens below. One great garden, a covered walk made from bending willow trees, a rock and water garden and rare lawns and fruit gardens are features of the place.

Dinner for the 150 delegates was served on the terrace by Mrs. Moore.

Thursday the ladies met at Horticultural hall, the central place in Manchester from which they started daily, and went to Salem and Danvers. There, in the midst of the region about which Salem witchcraft centered, they rode past the old Rebecca Nourse house to visit the Wm. C. Endicott place and "The Lindens," and were themselves bewitched with the charm of the old places. (See article on these places.)

Nahant was then visited. The S. Eliot Guild garden was seen, after which the club motored to the Country club in Brookline, for luncheon. Hostesses for the luncheon included the following: Mrs. W. B. Thomas, Mrs. D. L. Pickman, Mrs. S. E. Guild, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. H. J. Coolidge, Mrs. Lyman, Mrs. W. C. Loring, Mrs. E. P. Motley, Mrs. R. P. Snelling, Mrs. W. D. Denègre and Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick. Delegates and non-delegates were entertained.

After a short business meeting of the new executive committee the Arnold Arboretum was visited. A medal was then presented to Prof. Chas. S. Sargent at the administration building after which the annual meeting for 1920 disbanded.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Fawcett, of Newton, are in the Bowers cottage, this year, at Marblehead Neck.

Arthur C. Lawrence, of the A. C. Lawrence Leather Co., has opened his home on Nanepashemet st., Marblehead Neck. He has with him his sister, Mrs. M. Lawrence Higgins, Boston, who is one of the active workers in the Y. W. C. A. movement in that city.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—Samuel C. Payson, of Boston, together with his wife and three children, are at Marblehead Neck for the summer.

Francis H. Richards, of Newbury st., Boston, has taken the Claflin house at Marblehead Neck for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel K. Snow, of Boston, are at Harbor ave., Marblehead Neck, for the season. Mrs. Snow is chairman of the tea committee at the Eastern Yacht club.

Capt. and Mrs. Robert E. Stone, of Kingsbury rd., Chestnut Hill, with their children are established at their Ocean ave. cottage, Marblehead Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence K. Underhill, Miss Barbara and Slayton, are with the J. S. Evans family, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Warren Walker and family, of Mt. Vernon street, Boston, are at "Sunny Ridge," Marblehead Neck.

Mrs. Frank C. Wells, of Chicago, Ill., is in the Wilbur cottage this season, at Marblehead Neck.

Charles B. Wheelock, of Brookline, is established in his Nashua ave. cottage, Marblehead Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Williston, of Lynn, have rented their home and are at Juniper Hill, Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar N. Wrightington, of Boston, have arrived for their second season in their new bungalow on Harbor ave., Marblehead Neck. Mrs. Wrightington is active in the Tuesday festivities at the Eastern Yacht club.

"The Ariadne," F. C. Fletcher's handsome yacht, is now anchored in Marblehead harbor, but will leave soon for the international races.

G. W. Dittman, of Cambridge, is in the Pitcher cottage for the summer months, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Pitcher returning to Easthampton.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Stevens and son, of North Andover, are at Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

Mrs. Minerva Felton, of Boston, has arrived at "Park Hill Lodge," Marblehead Neck.

Mrs. Ransom B. Fuller, of Brookline, and daughter, Mrs. C. T. Hodges, have arrived at their Ocean ave. house, Marblehead Neck.

The Radcliffe College club which has opened a tea room on Beach st., Marblehead Neck, plans to cater to the summer trade this year, the proceeds of their teas going to the college endowment fund.

Mrs. William P. Fowle, of Marblehead Neck, is ill in the New England Baptist hospital, Brookline.

George B. James and Miss Adelaide James, of Brookline, are at "Gray Rocks" for the season.

Miss Rachel Hardwick, of Boston, physical director at Boston university, Miss Katherine Hardwick, a well-known Boston social worker, arrived this week at Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lansing Day, of Boston, and two young children are at the Neck for the summer months.

Mrs. Ellis Hollingsworth, of Fairfield st., Boston, has arrived at "Driftwood," Marblehead Neck. This great house looks very attractive this year and the flowers are in full bloom. The truck garden, one of the assets of this place, supplies fresh vegetables for the house.

MANCHESTER

The local Legion post will hold a dance this evening at the Town hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Knight are on from the west to spend the summer.

Mrs. Vassal Stevens, of Boston, is visiting Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Reid of Allen avenue.

This is the month of picnics and Tuck's Point is in demand. It is indeed a fine location for gatherings of this kind.

While riding on his bicycle along School st. yesterday noon, William MacMurray had the misfortune to fall from the seat and break his left leg above the knee. The accident occurred near the engine house. The ambulance was called and the injured man removed at once to the Beverly hospital. Mr. MacMurray is an employe at the Essex County club.

Mrs. George S. Sinnicks entertained about 100 members of the Order of the Eastern Star at a picnic Wednesday, held at Tuck's Point. Guests were present from Salem, Newburyport, Chelsea and Danvers. An orchestra furnished music during the day and dancing was enjoyed. Although the weather appeared rather cloudy and a storm threatened in the morning, by afternoon the skies were sunny and the picnic proved a great success.

One of the most serious automobile accidents of the season occured last evening about 7 o'clock when a Ford delivery truck owned by the Davis Fish market came in collision with a touring car owned by a resident of Jamaica Plain. Both cars were smashed almost beyond repair, but fortunately no one was injured. The Davis car, in charge of Herbert Noyes was on its way back from Gloucester with clams, mackerel and other fish. It was just leaving Ocean st. at the foot of Crafts' hill as the touring car was coming down the hill. The Ford hit the larger car a full blow in the side. A basket of clams passed through the windshield of the Ford and into the other car; Douglas Foster, riding with Noyes, was slightly bruised.

George W. Knight is at a summer camp for boys—Camp Wildmere—at Harrison, Me., for July and August.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Menkin, formerly of Manchester, will be sorry to learn of the illness of their two small children at their home in Lynn, with scarlet fever.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Morse and son, of Allston, and Miss Irving, of Lowell, came down over the road in their new car Sunday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. David Fenton. After luncheon they went to Singing Beach, which they enjoyed very much, it being four years since they visited here.

Fourth of July Plans

Manchester's official Fourth of July celebration will start at 8.30 next Monday morning, when there will be races and other athletic contests at the playground, for boys and girls.

There will be first and second prizes for all events, except the relay races. The prizes for the girls' events will be a 1-lb. box of Page & Shaw chocolates as first prize, 1-2-lb. box as second prize.

All contestants are requested to present their names to Dr. Frank A. Willis, chairman of the committee, before the events take place.

Following the races there will be a ball game between Manchester and Danvers on the Brook st. grounds, the game being scheduled to start at 10 o'clock.

At 1 o'clock, in the inner harbor, Alex Sjorlund will give a demonstration of his miniature power boats, cruisers, battleships and hydroplanes.

At 2.30, at Horticultural hall, there will be a free movie show.

Band concerts will be given on the Common at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 7.30 in the evening.

SHOULD ADOPT SUNDAY SPORTS ACT

Says Manchester Summer Resident—Favors Any Healthy, Manly, Out-Door Game on Sunday

Editor North Shore Breeze:

In the report in your paper of the recent town meeting in Manchester where the question of Sunday games was voted down, I notice one remark which should hardly stand without challenge. It is the following—"we have existed in this state for 300 years without baseball on the Sabbath—let's not have it now."

Let me suggest to that speaker through the medium of your paper that we existed in this state for several hundred years without airplanes, wireless telegraph, automobiles, trolley-cars, and last, but not least, without national prohibition. I have heard on many occasions arguments for and against Sunday games, but never a less pertinent or more meaningless statement than the above quoted. It would seem, if indeed it can be said to hold weight at all, to be an unreasonable block set against progress and innovations of every description. We've never done it before, let's not do it now! If such a piece of asininity were the slogan of the United States we would be about on a par with Russia.

Let me say here, Mr. Editor, that I am most heartily for any healthy. manly, out-door game on Sunday or on any other day. I do not advocate for one minute gambling or any such rowdyism. Nearly all American games played in public by Americans are full of such; all games can be made so. Is there, after all, any more harm in playing baseball or golf on Sunday than in going in for a swim or for a sail in a boat? The town keeps its bathhouses open on Sunday both morning and afternoon, the beach is thronged with people—noisy people, too. There is apparently no harm in that. What is the moral difference? There is no difference, except this town is not used to seeing Sunday baseball. I say, let them get used to it. Let us remember that ancient Puritanical narrowness spoiled as many lives as any other fanatical agency. We have no more right to spoil a man's play than to spoil his work—while he is fair and clean-acting.

In my legal residence in a far-western town we have Sunday ball and other games—in the afternoon only, as most men go to church in the morning. There has never been occasion for an arrest at any Sunday contest there. The clergymen of four different denominations have never opposed, knowing as all broad-minded men do, that out door games are invaluable to the brains and muscles of men confined in office buildings at indoor occupations during week days. the question of prohibiting baseball, football, or track contests on Sunday would be received there with utter astonishment were such a question ever brought up. I am reasonably sure in saying that it never will be brought up.

If many other communities cannot only tolerate but indorse them, Manchester, a progressive community, might give them a try.

Ball games generally take place between the hours of two and six; and can anyone state the difference between noise on a public beach or recreation ground and noise in a ball-park? As a summer resident and admirer, I'd hate to admit that Manchester was narrow minded and bigoted over the matter of a decent, athletic game—of, for and by the people!

Sincerely—

A. G. Bartlett.

Devotion to one's church, lodge or club is indeed a creditable attribute, but when that devotion keeps two lodge members in the lodge room until the wee sma' hours it becomes an object of true admiration. At a recent meeting Magnolia lodge conferred a degree on a large class of canidates; the meeting was interrupted by a false alarm of fire and all members of the fire department who were in the I. O. O. F. hall hastened to respond to the call of the whistle. After the "fire" two of the good Odd Fellows, along with others, returned to enjoy the "feed," a good smoke and a social hour. Feeling rather drowsy, one of them—a Past Grand of the order—fell asleep and was "dead to the world" until his friend—also a prominent officer—aroused him at quarter to four o'clock in the morning by saying: "Wake up, Will, I guess it's time we were going home!"

Our readers often go into movie theatres to laugh; but did not ever realize that you can get many a good laugh by reading the funny wording of some of the signs out in front and in the lobby. We have noticed how audiences enjoy these funny signs which have been shown on the screen in The Literary Digest "Topics of the Day." So we have compiled the following list of signs which brought roars of laughter when screened in both vaudeville and picture theatres:

Varied Assortment of Goods Sold at Drug Store

Ships in distress send out "S. O. S." Households in distress send out frantic telephone-signals to the corner drug store. And the drug store responds with any commodity known to inventive genius, be it canned heat, ice cream, or fish hooks. These are a few of the articles displayed in the show windows of Minneapolis drug stores:

Soap, scissors and soda.
Shoe horns, curling irons and gum.
Magazines, shoe polish and lunches.
Pie, picture frames and glue.
Cameras, hairpins and corn plasters.
Flashlights, peanuts and shoelaces.
Pocketbooks and chafing dishes.
Alarm clocks and fireless cookers.
Mirrors, stamps and baby bottles.
Newspapers and shampoo concoctions.
Candy, toothpaste and colored spectacles.
Paint, toys and picture books.
Postal cards and furniture polish.
Perfumery, fountain pens and napkin rings.
Fly-swatters and hair-restorers.
Crutches, calendars and money belts.
Insect powder and vanity cases.
Sponges, films and cigarettes.
Fish hooks and bathing caps.
Razors and vacuum bottles.
Nipples, knives and nail files.
Pencils and toilet powder.
Bath mats, belts and brushes.
Ice cream and shaving mugs.
Cake, soft drinks and humidors.
A public telephone.
A free directory.
And drugs.

No Minneapolis drug store ever has been known to sell a battleship, a locomotive, or a tank.—Minneapolis Journal.

FLOWER SHOW A BIG SUCCESS
Held This Week at Horticultural Hall, Manchester — Roses and Peonies in Profusion

THE unanimous verdict of all who attended the annual rose exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural society, held on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at the Horticultural hall, Manchester, was that this year's exhibition was the best for quality and arrangement. The backward season is responsible for a smaller showing than usual, but this was more than compensated by the excellence of the specimens shown.

The Garden club of America visited the rose exhibition on Wednesday and the members were enthusiastic in their praises of the showing made by the North Shore Horticultural society. This was a splendid opportunity for North Shore residents to show their friends from all over the United States what could be grown in the east, and the gardeners made the most of their opportunity.

The best feature of the show was the collection of rare and costly orchids from Orchidvale, Beverly Farms, owned by Albert C. Burrage (Douglas Eccleston, gardener). This exhibit occupied one entire side of the upper hall and received a large amount of attention.

A choice collection of tuberous begonias of both the standard and the hanging varieties from the Lester Leland estate (Eric Wetterlow, gardener) occupied a space near the stage. The display was most attractively arranged and received much favorable comment.

Three miniature gardens, each occupying not over five square feet of space, were exhibited by Miss Helen Burnham, of Wenham, and Mrs. E. B. Cole, of Wenham Neck. The little statues, seats, trees, etc., were all in place, and in the opinion of many this exhibit was a most pleasing feature.

The table decorations, perfectly appointed, with the snow white linen, shining silverware, and floral arrangements, merited the praise accorded them. The idea of these displays was to show the artistic skill of the decorator in the arrangement of flowers.

The rose classes were well filled, a large number of varieties being shown. The special prizes, cups and medals awarded met with keen competition.

In the lower hall was a profusion of peonies from Cherry Hill Nurseries, T. C. Thurlow's Sons, Inc., of West Newbury. This exhibit won the prize for the largest and best collection of peonies in the show. Cherry Hill Nurseries are specialists in peonies, iris, phlox, ornamental evergreens and shade trees. The display included many standard varieties, also varieties originated at the Cherry Hill Nurseries.

About 75 plants of Lilium Regale exhibited by R. & J. Farquhar Co., of Boston, against an evergreen background, made a most beautiful showing. This company also received a silver medal for eight specimens of the Abies Albertiana Conica.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, received special prizes for his showing of herbaceous and other flowers, hemlocks from Japan, picea from China and for Juniperus Virgiana.

Axel Magnuson, of Manchester, and Ralph W. Ward, of Beverly, received honorable mention for their displays of annual and perennial herbaceous flowers.

The vegetable display caused one to wonder how so many fine specimens were grown this year in spite of the backward season. Beets, cauliflower, cucumbers, cabbages, radishes, beans, peas, lettuce, string beans, carrots, tomatoes, asparagus and strawberries were shown.

Thomas Coles, of Dedham, gardener for Mrs. Stephen Weld, and Thos. Roland, of Nahant, were the judges and awarded the prizes as listed in another column.

Frank Foster, Jr., of Smith's Point, a sub-freshman, has been studiously at work most of the year in his manual training course on a china cabinet. It is a thing of beauty and shows much skilled workmanship. He has presented it to his sister, Marion.

With the closing of the public schools the out-of-town teachers have returned to their homes, Miss Edna Parker to Nashua, N. H.; Miss H. Adele Howe to Needham; Miss Olive Jenness to Dorchester; Miss Helen Crocker to Wareham; Miss Anna Coffin to Marblehead and Miss Mary Clarke to Centerville, R. I.

Liberty bonds of the 1st, 2d and 3d issues, left with the Manchester Trust Company up to June 15th, are now ready for delivery upon presentation of receipts. The bank is anxious to make deliveries of these bonds, owing to the congested condition of its vaults. adv.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

Those of a literary turn of mind would enjoy looking over "Amenities of Literature" and "Curiosities of Literature," by Isaac Disraeli, father of the Earl of Beaconsfield. In these volumes you are told about many curious things. The articles are all short, and you have a great variety from which to make a choice.

This year we will hear much about the Pilgrims. I wonder how many who are reading this note could tell who Anne Bradstreet was, when she lived and why she was a famous woman. There is a small book in the library, "Anne Bradstreet and Her Time," by Helen Campbell, that gives a good picture of the life lived in those early times. Some of the more interesting chapters are "The Voyage," "Beginnings," "Some Phases of Early Colonial Life," "Village Life in 1650" and "A Legacy."

The theology of our forefathers like the coast to which they came —"stern and rock-bound" — had a large influence on their lives. New England's greatest theologian was Jonathan Edwards, who was pastor of the church in Northampton, 1727 to 1750. There is an attractive volume in the library giving many facts about this noted preacher. A few years after leaving Northampton he was elected president of Princeton university. Shortly after going to Princeton an epidemic of smallpox broke out. At that time vaccination had not been discovered by Jenner. However, many lives were saved by inoculation. The noted divine decided to try inoculation, but unfortunately he died from its effects.

It is quite a jump from old New England theology to light opera, but those who have enjoyed "Pirates of Penyance," "The Mikado," "The Yoeman of the Guard," "The Gondoliers" and "H. M. S. Pinafore" will find much about these works and their authors in a finely illustrated volume, "Gilbert and Sullivan and Their Operas."

The reading of biography is not as popular as it should be. Most everyone likes to read fiction, but sometimes it is a good thing to know something about the people who write the stories we like so much.

Those who have enjoyed reading "Pride and Prejudice," "Sense and Sensibility" and "Persuasion" should know a few facts, at least, about this gifted author. "The Story of Jane Austin's Life," by Oscar Fay Adams, if read by you, will add much to your knowledge of this noted novelist.

"The Life of Charlotte Bronte," by Mrs. Gaskell, is the fascinating story of the life of the author of "Jane Eyre." Notwithstanding the fact that this book is a biographical classic, it has never been taken out, though it has been in the library for many years.

A good many years ago such novels as "A Daughter of Heth," "The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton," "A Princess of Thule," "Madcap Violet," "Green Pastures and Piccadilly," "Shandon Bells" and "Strange Adventures of a Houseboat" were much read. The author was a brilliant Scotsman named William Black. "William Black, Novelist," by Wemyss Reid, is a very pleasant sketch of the life of this writer of many entertaining novels.

Another biographical work that should be read more is "The Life of Clara Barton." How the timid, sensitive New England teacher became "The Angel of the Battlefield" is related in such a way that makes fascinating reading.

"Village Life in America," by Caroline Cowles Richards, is a very readable diary written by a school girl. The author lived in New York state. She has much to say about the Civil war from the viewpoint of the North. A companion volume to this is "A Confederate Girl's Diary," by Sarah Morgan Dawson. In this book you get a view of the Civil war as seen through the eyes of a bright Southern girl.

Next week we hope to have some more new books.

Strand Theatre, Lynn

Wm. S. Hart's latest western masterpiece, "Sand," a thrilling narrative of the great outdoors, will be the principal screen attraction at the Strand theatre in Lynn, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Magnificent scenery and daring feats of horsemanship give unusual color to the romance. Elaine Hammerstein in "The Woman Game," Burton Holmes' motion picture of "The Battlefields of France," a new Mack Sennett comedy, "By Golly," featuring Charlie Murray, Strand Topical Review and other films will also be shown.

Wm. Dorriani, a celebrated New York tenor, will sing at every performance and musical features will be contributed by the Strand symphony orchestra of 12 pieces, Byron S. Ricker, director, and Miss M. Frances Doughty, organist.

Marjorie Rambeau in "The Fortune Teller," and Taylor Holmes in "Nothing But Lies" will be featured next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Sunday's program, continuous from 4.30 to 10 p. m., will include Billie Burke in "Peggy," Gloria Joy in "The Fortunes of Corinne," Mr. and Mrs. Carter de Haven in "Moving Day" and Strand Topical Review.

Modern ventilation keeps the Strand comfortably cool at all times and plenty of safe parking space is provided for autos adjacent to the theatre.

Olympia Theatre, Lynn

The Lynn Olympia theatre management has arranged to bring on some excellent vaudeville acts and the best motion pictures that money can procure during the summer months. The high class vaudeville which Greater Lynn patrons have enjoyed during the past season, will continue during the summer season.

In addition to the best of vaudeville talent, as well as photoplays that have no equal, patrons of the theatre are always treated to a refined musical program. Dr. Trainor's selected orchestra, assisted by Winthrop Danielson at the organ, have made a reputation in the musical world during the past year that has reflected unstinted praise on the Lynn theatre.

Next Sunday there will be a complete change in the vaudeville and picture program with two concerts, the first commencing at 5 and the second at 7.15. On Monday, July 5th, there will be four continuous performances with a new change of vaudeville and pictures. The feature picture for the first half of next week is "The Best of Luck," a screen classic, while the feature vaudeville act will be, "The Four Morak Sisters" in "Queens of Aerial Artists." The vaudeville program changes again on Thursday, July 8th. A new ventilating system has been installed in the Olympia in order to make the playhouse as cool as possible for the patrons.

MANCHESTER BOY SCOUTS HAVE PLEASANT MEETING

The Boy Scouts, of Manchester, had an interesting meeting last Friday evening at the Scout House. F. M. Whitehouse and H. W. Purington were the speakers. Mr. Whitehouse, who has recently returned from a trip to Europe, told the boys about some of the places he visited while abroad. He spoke of seeing the Italian fortresses and defences in the mountains, of being at the Italian front, and the Flanders front. Mr. Whitehouse has first-hand information concerning these places and his talk was educational and instructive.

Mr. Purington has recently returned from a business trip to the west. He took the boys "on a trip" from Manchester to Arizona, telling of the entire route travelled, including the stops along the way and of the interesting places to be visited. He described the west as it appears to an easterner, speaking of the customs of the people and relating something concerning the extensive mines in Arizona.

Refreshments were served during the evening, the affair being in charge of Scoutmaster Allan P. Dennis.

HOW TO RECEIVE FULL BENEFITS OF YOUR VACATION

To the question, "What will you do during your vacation?" some might reply, "Nothing."

That would be as wrong as doing too much. The perfect holiday for the average worker should be on the crescendo and diminuendo lines.

You pass into your fortnight or three weeks quietly. Your body is, literally, a machine. It has been doing work—hard, monotonous work—for a year. To switch it on suddenly to something quite different is to ask for trouble.

So whatever you are going to "do" on your holiday do it slowly and quietly at first so that the machine of your body may "change gears" without jar, break or mishap. Then by the middle of your holiday you will be in good trim and the best of health.

And it is necessary, if your holiday is to do you real good and build you up for another year's work, that you should gradually slow down with your holiday activities so that again without jar you can resume your work without, as it were, having to make yourself do it.

Who has not known that post-holiday feeling of not being able to settle down? It is the result of living a holiday at high pressure and ending at high pressure. Let the steam off gradually so that you may pass from your holiday back to your work without effort.

"My father used to give me this advice: 'Always think before you speak.'"

"But didn't he want you to talk at all?"

Squelching Brother Lawyer

By means of hard work and clever cross-examination, the lawyer had managed to get his client acquitted, although things looked very black against him.

The opposing solicitor was very wroth, and couldn't hide it when next he met his victorious colleague. It happened to be in a club, of which both were members.

Going up to the winner, the loser said, in loud tones:

"I'd like to know if there is any case too black or any criminal too deeply dyed in crime for you to refuse to defend him?"

The listeners wanted with bated breath. What would be the outcome of this direct insult? But the other lawyer was quite calm and cool as he replied:

"It all depends what you have been doing."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

MANCHESTER WINS

Wakefield Easily Defeated — Score 21-0

Manchester and Wakefield staged an exhibition baseball game on the Brook st. playground, Manchester, last Saturday, in which Manchester piled up 21 runs and Wakefield failed to score once. The game lacked all semblance of a contest, and was clearly a walkover from the first inning, when the home team went through the batting order once and a half for nine runs.

Leon Lothrop easily shut out the visitors and held them to five scattered hits. Wakefield made a poor showing to the fans who enjoy seeing a good game of ball. Besides the poor pitching, the outfield made a half dozen bloomers on fly balls that should have been outs, but were misjudged, and went for hits. The infield made many errors of omission and a couple of short bounders to right field caught the first baseman sound asleep, the batters getting credit for hits. After the third, the Manchester players did not try very hard.

Among Manchester's 19 hits there were plenty of luscious swats. Joyce hit a homer with the bases choked in the third, Harrison tripled to right center in the sixth and Andrews, Warner, Kelley and Abbott made some fine singles. Joyce played his usual good game at short, handling seven chances, a putout and six assists without an error. The score:

Gloucester Telephone Team Defeats Manchester Odd Fellows

The ball teams representing Magnolia lodge of Odd Fellows, Manchester, and the N. E. Telephone Co., of Gloucester, played a 7-inning game on the Brook st. playground, Manchester, Monday evening of this week. The "Hello" men gained a lead in the first, which they gradually increased, the final score being Gloucester 6, Manchester 2.

Forgetting for a time some of the few (?) troubles incident to their business, Mgr. McDermott and his telephone men met the Odd Fellows in another of the "sunset league" games which are becoming popular. One of the players wore a regulation uniform, at least a part of it was regulation—but a majority of the men performed in "civies."

The annual picnic of the Friendship circle of the Baptist church will be held at Tuck's Point on Thursday, July 15,—if stormy the picnic will be held the next day. All members can bring their families; if they do not have any family it is permissable to bring friends. More particulars next week.

Baptist church, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor. Sunday morning at 10.30 the pastor will deliver the second of a series of sermons on the Lord's Prayer. His subject will be: "Honoring God's Name." Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, subject: "Jesus, the Efficient Savior." The Lord's Supper will be administered after the evening service. Notice change in time of the Sunday services.

And Now Trees Violate the Volstead Law

According to Congressman Gallivan every tree is violating the Volstead law, as its sap contains more than one-half of one percent alcohol.

This is a very serious matter. Think of all the beautiful trees in Prospect Park making moonshine in direct violation of the law, and laughing at the prohibition officers. And it entails a great responsibility on Park Commissioner Harman. Now that the fact has become known that each tree is an illicit still, they will have to be carefully guarded to prevent them from being destroyed by men with gimlets and augurs. Tree planting will now probably receive a great boom, and backyards will in course of time become little forests, where a man can invite his friends to tap a peach, a cherry or plum, and have a good time.

Instead of corkscrews, the antidry will carry a gimlet, and a tin cup, and be happy. Five o'clock tree parties will undoubtedly become very popular, and man, instead of going from bar to bar will go from tree to tree.

This new system has the good feature of eliminating the saloon, and doing away with the cash register. It will create a great demand for homes in the suburbs.

Of course, it is hoped that the trees will be used in moderation, otherwise we shall probably have new temperance songs issued by the Drys, going somewhat like this:

Father, dear father, come home from the trees,
The clock on the mantle strikes two.
You said you were coming right home from the woods,
When you'd tapped a cherry and yew.
You've tackled the birch, you've tackled the plum,
The apple, too, I do believe.
O, please heed the lesson taught by the trees,
They all know when it's time to leave.

If this tree tapping habit becomes general, we will probably hear of a league starting a drive for a fund to buy axes to destroy these demons of the forest, parkways and backyards.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

Dummer Academy Proposed New School Building

DUMMER ACADEMY is to have a new school building, also many improvements are to be made in its present equipment. Announcement of these plans was made at a large gathering at the recent commencement held in South Byfield.

During the past few years this Essex County school has outgrown its accommodations which provide for only 80 boys, of whom about 70 are boarding students. In fact, over a score of boys were turned away last season for lack of room and there is now a waiting list. The present accommodations are wholly inadequate to the need. The assembly room is too small for the present numbers and the class rooms, the dining hall and other quarters are crowded.

The proposed new school building is to be constructed of brick with stone trimmings and will be colonial in design in keeping with the other buildings. It will be two stories high and contains a large assembly or study hall with nine additional recitation rooms. It will be located at one end of the campus where with other domitories, to be built later, it will form the new quadrangle.

PRE-WAR COMFORTS SHY IN EUROPE

Identification Is One Vexation Americans will Find — Train Service Is Said to be Poor

THE thousands of American tourists who are expected to visit Europe this summer will be disappointed if they look forward to all the comforts of the days before the war.

This verdict has been expressed to the Associated Press correspondent by many much-harassed Americans who, in overcrowded trains between stops at overcrowded hotels, have run the gauntlet of passport bureaus, frontier controls and police registration offices, institutions which still prevail in many countries, only in a slightly less degree than during the war.

Passports and passport vises are necessary everywhere. Even to make the five-hour trip from The Hague, Holland, to Brussels, Belgium, requires days of preparation, and the days generally lengthen into weeks, if one expresses the most extraordinary whim to make a round trip, or several round trips.

An American, for instance, having obtained in the United States a Dutch vise which permits him to land in Holland for a brief stay, desires to go to Brussels—just five hours away. On arrival in Holland he has had to register with the police, securing an identity card, permitting him to have a bread card, etc. (for bread is still rationed in many countries).

Desiring to go to Belgium, he must first go to his own legation or consulate, to have his American passport amended so as to be valid in Belgium. This done, after a solemn oath that it is necessary to go to Belgium, the would-be traveler visits the Belgian consulate or legation, finds a long waiting line of persons with a similar desire, finally is attended to, and speeds off to the Police Bureau to have his identity card stamped in order that he may leave the frontier. But he must surrender his bread card first—at still another bureau, which is probably closed for the day. Armed with a receipt from the Bread Card Bureau, he returns to the Police Bureau, gets his stamped identity card and probably finds the last train to Belgium for the day has gone.

Even when they get aboard the train which may be so overcrowded that even with a first-class ticket he may have to ride in a second- or third-class compartment, his troubles are far from ended. There are waits and passports and customs examinations at both the Dutch and Belgian frontiers —one examination to get out of Holland and another to get into Belgium, waits in rooms like bullpens, in which, if the train happens to be crowded, the scramble for a subway at a rush hour is play in comparison.

This condition, typical of travel between Holland and Belgium, is as nothing to the difficulties of getting from Holland into Germany.

Rapid progress is being made, particularly in Belgium, to restore railway traffic to normal, but the shortage of equipment, due to war losses, or shortage of coal, due both to strikes and war, has reduced the number of trains operated to a figure far below that of before the war, and all generally are overcrowded. As a rule, no reservations of seats, except on very long trips, are possible. — Boston Globe.

OPTIMISM

We have our troubles, all of us—
The cost of living's high,
And few of us can save a cent,
No matter how we try.
We must economize some more,
Although we don't know how—
But none of us will mind a bit
A hundred years from now!

The landlord may increase the rent,
It troubles us today;
The butcher charges for a steak
Much more than we can pay;
The milkman makes us pay for milk
Enough to buy a cow—
But all that will not trouble us
A hundred years from now!

Cheer up! The years are fleeting fast;
Our day of peace will come,
With freedom from the ills that now
We find so troublesome.
So cease to fret and fuss, and smooth
The wrinkles from your brow—
Our troubles will be at an end
A hundred years from now.

—Somerville Journal.

AND NOT TILL THEN

Two Irishmen were walking up the great marble stairway of the public library, when they stopped on the first landing to gaze at the two great carved figures. "Wonder how often they feed those big lions, Pat?" said one. "Whenever they start roarin', I belave," responded the other, dryly.— Boston Transcript.

ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING is found to be, in the last analysis, merely commercial propaganda. The use of this propaganda, then, must be of the highest possible type, or otherwise it will defeat the very purpose for which it exists.

The written word, the most common form of advertising, very often does not produce beneficial results and advertisers wonder why. There are many reasons for this lack of success, but the most common is that faulty construction of "copy," involving much ambiguity of speech, has tired the prospective purchaser, rather than interested him.

The secret of advertising success, as in all other lines of commercial endeavor, depends, primarily, upon the "salesmanship" of the "copy." Individual taste, evidencing itself in this more than in any other phase of business, dictates the general "set-up" of your advertisement. Brevity and strength are to be desired whenever possible; not brevity of space, but of words, for space properly arranged assures one that the most casual observer will not pass it by. Make your "ad" brief and to the point.

The BREEZE is an admirable medium for advertising, reaching the eyes of a most discriminating class, and having a wide circulation. Let the North Shore know what you have to sell. People will buy, if the article for sale is attractively called to their attention.

A RECITATION

What is the best a friend can be
To any soul, to you or me?
Not only shelter, comfort, rest—
Inmost refreshment unexpressed;
Not only a beloved guide
To thread life's labyrinth at our side,
Or with love's torch lead on before;
Though these be much, yet there is more.

The best friend is an atmosphere,
Warm with all inspirations dear,
Wherein we breathe the large, free breath
Of life that hath no taint of death.
Our friend is an unconscious part
Of every true beat of our heart;
A strength, a growth, whence we derive
God's health that keeps the world alive.

Can friend lose friend! Believe it not!
The tissue whereof life is wrought,
Weaving the separate into one,
No end hath, nor beginning; spun
From subtle threads of destiny
Finer than thought of man can see.
God takes not back His gifts divine;
While thy God lives, thy friend is thine.

—Lucy Larcom.

MAGNOLIA

Victor Nelson is planning to enter M. I. T. next September.

Donald Story and Wm. Commerford were among those who were graduated from the Gloucester High school last week.

Mrs. Ralph Story, of Akron, Ohio, arrived here recently to spend a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McLean, Western ave.

Fred Gardner, who is serving an apprenticeship in the U. S. navy as a carpenter, at Newport, R. I., recently visited relatives and friends in this village.

Services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 8.15 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach. Morning subject: "The Christian Philosophy of Living." Evening subject: "Patriotism." Communion at the close of the morning sermon.

Women's Club Notes

The membership of the club is 120 now and it is growing every day.

The members and their guests enjoyed a merry dance on Monday evening and a very pleasant surprise, late in the evening, was the appearance of the North Shore Orchestra, which kindly volunteered to play a half-hour for dancing. Their kindness was certainly appreciated by all.

Thursday evening will be given over to the whist players. An interesting game was played last week when Mrs. Tekla May carried off the souvenir of the evening.

Afternoon tea will be served on the porch Saturday aftrnoon, and fortunes will be told.

Miss Gertrude Cleveland, who conducts a successful gift shop on the avenue, will make her home at the club as usual this season.

Newcomers to the club this season are Miss Ware, Miss Ashe and Miss Underwood who will manage the tea room at the swimming pool.

The Misses Ferguson, of Worcester, are spending a vacation at the club.

On Sunday evening the first of the community sings will be held in the living room of the club. We hope to make these a very pleasant way of spending an hour each Sunday evening.

Next Monday we shall celebrate the Fourth with a dance, and on Tuesday Miss Abbott will hold her assembly and dancing class. Anderson's orchestra will furnish the music.

Men's Club Notes

The membership of the Men's club is 70, and each day sees new names added to the list.

The Wednesday and Saturday evening dances are very successful; good music is always the rule at these affairs.

Bowling is very popular. Tuesday evening is ladies' night at the alleys. There are many good players among the ladies, as well as among the men.

Magnolia library on Lexington ave. is beginning to welcome its former patrons and hopes to make many new ones this coming season. Forty new books have already been added to its collection.

Preachers for Union Chapel Magnolia

The following list of preachers have been secured for the services at Union chapel, Magnolia, this season:

July 4—Rt. Rev. Samuel G. Babcock, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of Massachusetts (Episcopal), Boston.

July 11—Rev. Abbott Peterson, First Parish (Unitarian), Brookline.

July 18—Rev. Edward Tillotson, Church of the Holy Name (Episcopal), Swampscott.

Thomas—Lee

The wedding of Miss Margaret Grey Lee, daughter of Officer Jacob W. Lee, of Manchester, and niece of Mrs. Lillian Standley, and Charles Elmer Thomas, of Salem, took place on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Beverly Farms Baptist church. The double ring service was used and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Clarence S. Pond, pastor of the church.

The bride was given away by her father. The bridesmaid was Miss Bernice Lee, of Manchester, sister of the bride, and Harry Thomas, of Salem, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Abbott Foster, of Manchester, and Harlane Crowell, of Salem. Six young ladies, members of the Girls' club—Misses Margaret and Dorothy Ianson, Mary and Charlotte Chapman, Mildred Gerrish and Edith Williams held the bridal chain of flowers and later served at the reception.

The bride was lovely in a wedding gown of white georgette over taffeta and her bridal veil was caught with clusters of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore pink satin and pink hat to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a handsome platinum pin.

After the ceremony at 4.30 a reception was held. The couple received the congratulations of their guests, standing against a bank of heliotrope, palms and roses, and refreshments were served by the six young lady friends of the bride.

There were many beautiful presents of gold, silver, and cut glass. Their wedding trip will include a visit to Nova Scotia and home by the way of Canada. They will reside at the corner of Greenwood ave. and Webster st., Beverly Farms.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on nand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

Beverly Farms Baptist Church Notes

An interesting service was held at the Beverly Farms Baptist church last Sunday morning at 10.45 a. m. There were present members from the Wenham Baptist church and the Centreville Christian Endeavor church. The union service was conducted by the minister, Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, assisted by Rev. Rial Benjamin, the minister of the Wenham and Centreville churches. The sermon was by Rev. Mr. Benjamin. The ordinance of Baptism was administered to candidates from the Wenham and Centreville churches.

The Bible school meets at noon. The evening service has been changed to 8 o'clock. This later hour is proving very popular among the attendants. The service lasts one hour.

The Ladies' Sewing circle will hold their annual fair to raise funds for the purchase of the coal for the church from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., in the chapel, on Thursday, July 15.

The Ordinance of the Lord's Supper is observed on the first Sunday of the month.

The annual Sunday school picnic will be held in July.

Members of the boys' classes are planning to be at a summer camp, probably in July. Parents of boys are requested to confer with the minister as soon as possible, as the vacancies are limited.

The Girls' club, after a very successful winter, recently held an at home. The work of the club was on exhibition and a very successful evening was spent.

The Ladies' Sewing circle meets every Thursday evening.

The Men's Forum, which met every month during the winter, has been discontinued for the summer. Every month an interesting and attractive program was presented, which was appreciated by the men who were able to attend.

The inclemency of the weather has added to the expense of the church buildings, but the committee is planning the needed repairs, which will involve repairing the roof, re-tinting the inner walls of the church, and the refinishing of the floor and seats, and the repair of the steam heating pipes. The extreme winter caused much damage. The matter is having the thoughtful attention of the committee.

Miss Ellen Devine, of Boston, has been assigned to the Beverly Farms station for the summer by the B. & M. R. R. She will assist Agent McDonald as an operator and ticket seller.

Mrs. Hershel Lutes (Nellie Preston), who has been in town enjoying a three weeks' vacation, was this week joined by her husband, who plans to stop for a time. Mr. Lutes' visit is a combined vacation and business trip. He was formerly the private secretary of ex-Senator Beveridge, was in the service during the war, and attained the rank of lieutenant. Mr. Lutes is now employed as an advisory manager for a large New York mercantile house.

Miss Jennie Hanson, formerly of Beverly Farms, is one of the applicants for the position of school nurse in the Beverly public schools which carries a salary of $1200 per year. Miss Hanson has had three years' training at the Faulkner hospital, Jamaica Plain, a post graduate course at the Infants' hospital and the Massachusetts General hospital, and for a long time has been in charge of ward departments at the Beverly hospital. She has also attended the Sargent school at Cambridge.

At last Monday evening's meeting of the Beverly Board of Aldermen an order calling for an appropriation of $3000 for the proposed new entrance from Hale st. to the playgrounds, was adopted. This improvement has been contemplated for over two years. The city of Beverly purchased the James Bennett estate for the purpose of taking a portion of the land for this proposed roadway, but nothing has been done as yet in the way of starting the work.

When Her Friends Smiled

The story is told of a dowager whose wealth and education were of exceedingly recent acquisition. According to her accounts, the trip around the world that she had completed had been socially most successful. Some of her friends were questioning her about the places of interest that she had visited.

"Did you see the Dardanelles?" asked one.

"And the Himalayas?" inquired another.

"Why certainly," replied the dowager, "I dined with them both in Paris."

Rise and Fall of Tides

Sun and Moon Responsible for Disturbances

For a long time it has been known that the moon is a large factor in causing the tides, but it was not known that the sun also is a factor. There are two principal tides during each season—the so-called "spring" tides and the "neap" tides. The spring tides are the high tides and the neap tides those which are especially low.

The high tides occur during the new moon, and of course the moon, being so much nearer the earth, has a greater influence than the sun. The theory in a few words is simply this:

When the sun and the moon pull in the same direction we have especially high tides on that side of the earth in which this double gravitational pull is exerted; while, if the sun and the moon pull in opposite directions, or at right angles to one another, then the tides will be low. The theory is that when the sun and moon pull together, in one straight line, their combined pull causes the water on that side of the earth to rise higher than it usually would; while if their pulls are in different directions they will tend to neutralize one another to a certain extent.

It is a curious fact that full lunar tides occur on the side of the earth opposite the moon, at the same time as on the side nearest to it! The reason for this is not at first clear, and ine would incline to believe the contrary. The reason is that the gravitational pull exerted upon the water is also exerted to a certain extent upon the solid earth, and the whole earth is pulled toward the moon, with the result that the water on the opposite side of the earth is, as it were, "left behind."

It is also a little known fact that the surface of the ocean—the "sea level"—is not the same the world over, but that the water is influenced by the mountains and bodies of land. Prof. Hull has estimated that the gravitational attraction of the Andes mountains is sufficient to raise the sea-level on the west coast of South America 2000 feet higher than the sea-level at the Sandwich Islands!

Tidal phenomena are modified where rivers enter the sea, and by configuration of coast line and depth of water. Tidal waves should not be confused with ordinary tides.—Leslie's Weekly.

WHEN Success starts a'dodgin',
An' Dispair seeks a lodgin'
In your heart, kick it out.

After you've drunk all that's bitter,
Hang on, don't be a quitter.
Be game and stick it out.

When all seems gone to the devil,
Keep straight and on the level,
An' play the game for all there's in it.

Tho' the way be rough and full of thorns.
Go to it take the bull by the horns,
An' you cannot help but win it.

EYES—RIGHT!

There's a sunny side to the darkest road
On the difficult journey of life;
There are golden hours when we slip off the load
Of the blackest hours of strife.
Yet some queer folk seem to like the gloom
And the discord of strain and stress;
They look upon life as a step to the tomb
And the world as a wilderness!
Life's much what we make it; then let us steep
Our hearts in the joys that last;
And if sorrow assails us we still may keep
The gold of glad days that are past.

SOCIETY NOTES

GARDEN DAYS are coming for the North Shore. Last Saturday "Castle Hill," Ipswich, the R. T. Crane, Jr., place was opened as a hospital benefit; tomorrow "Rockmarge," the William H. Moore place at Pride's Crossing, will be open, a benefit for the National Civic Federation. On July 17, Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, of Manchester, open their places for the federation. Through the courtesy of the Misses Hunt, the Evans place in Beverly Cove will be open on July 24, and on July 31, the J. Henry Lancashire gardens in Manchester. Every Saturday in July is a "garden day" for the Shore. Watch for further announcements in the BREEZE. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., is in charge of this work on the Shore.

Miss Margaret L. Corlies, "Att-Lea House," Magnolia, entertained at luncheon Saturday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, of York Harbor. Miss Corlies also entertained several times this week in honor of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, of Washington, a house-guest at the Corlies home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Polk, of New York, who have the Arthur Stevens estate, Summer st., Manchester, have a happy little family with them. Jack, Lily, Frank, Jr., James and Alice make up the group that is enjoying the fine, woody hill on which the house is located. Last year Mr. and Mrs. Polk were at the peace conference in Paris.

Mrs. Samuel Vaughan will be at 7 Washington st., Beverly, today and evening, to take rummage for the sale tomorrow.

Raymond Hall, son of Mrs. George Gardner Hall, of Manchester, is on an auto trip with some boy friends to Bretton Woods. Raymond is a student at St. George's school.

Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth, of Manchester, is leaving next Tuesday to spend the midsummer at Jackson, N. H.

The Misses Marion and Marjorie Dakin have returned to Magnolia from Northampton. The Dakin girls are Smith graduates and are always interested in the meetings of the Gloucester College club, of which Miss Nancy Flagg, of Annisquam, is president. Their friend, Miss Ethel Bradley, of Boston and Gloucester, will be welcomed back by the club in August from her trip around the world.

SOCIETY NOTES

MR. AND MRS. ISAAC T. MANN, of Washington, will arrive tonight by motor at their home on Coolidge Point, Manchester. They will be accompanied by their daughter, Miss Alice Mann, Miss Elizabeth Hickey, Mrs. C. Hibberd, H. Meyers, brother to Mrs. Mann, and Percy Brown from New York. The son, W. T. Mann, arrived Wednesday.

Mrs. Charles W. Amory and son, George G. Amory, of Boston, are in the white cottage on the Coolidge estate, Coolidge Point, Manchester.

T. Jefferson, 3d, Amory and William Coolidge are now with their mother, Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., Coolidge Point, Manchester.

Mrs. Robert de Wolfe Sampson is now in the small cottage on her estate, Manchester Cove, coming on from New York only last week. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Thayer and Miss Margaret Thayer are with her, as usual.

Dr. James H. Anderson, of Coolidge Point, Manchester, entertained Henry K. Pomroy, of New York, last week. Mr. Pomroy was en route to Mt. Desert, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, their daughters, Ruth and Elizabeth, and son, Richard C. Paine, are all at their home on Coolidge Point, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Livermore and three children, of Boston, are now settled in the Foster cottage, Coolidge Point, Manchester.

Miss Ruth Foster is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Foster, Coolidge Point, Manchester. Last season Miss Foster was with the Grenfell mission in Labrador.

F. C. Dumaine and his four daughters, of Concord, are now in the cottage on Coolidge Point, Manchester, that Colonel House occupied while on the Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Wright, of Boston, who have the Rabardy cottage, Manchester Cove, have their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. Wright, of Boston, with them for the season. The Wrights were formerly at Fishermen's Cove, Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Longfellow, of New York, are settled for their usually quiet summer at "Edgecliff," Coolidge Point, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Sherwin (Constance W. Perkins) are spending the mid-summer at the Clarke cottage, West Manchester. Though Boston is the home of the Sherwins, they are now making their temporary home in Albany, N. Y. Mr. Sherwin was a Harvard '99 man.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot's daughter, Miss Rosamond Eliot, and William Gorham Rice, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. G. Rice, of Albany, N. Y., were quietly married last Tuesday at the Eliot summer home at Asticou, Me. The Eliots have numerous relatives in Manchester and along the North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marble, of West Manchester, have the latter's mother, Mrs. J. Hood Wright, and brother, Wm. Moore Robinson, and Mrs. Robinson with them. Miss Bertha Hessenbruch, of Australia, a niece of Mrs. Robinson, is also with them.

Bryant Baker, the noted English sculptor, formerly of East Gloucester, is now opening up a studio in Magnolia.

Mrs. H. C. de Rahm, of Coldspring-on-Hudson, N. Y., has been on for a visit along the Shore and spent some time at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Maynard Ladd, Beverly Farms. Mrs. de Rahm and her sisters and brothers have always spent much of the summer with their father, R. H. Dana, in Manchester, in the home place now rented to the Carl Pullen Dennetts.

Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, of Cambridge, who preaches in the Unitarian church in Manchester, Sunday morning, will be the guest of the Misses Loring at Pride's Crossing. Dr. Eliot is soon sailing to Europe to preach in Holland, on account of the Pilgrim celebrations, and also in other countries. He is a member of the commission for interchurch friendship. This will be an excellent opportunity to hear him before the sails.

Inquiries are coming in about various things. Some have asked if the Shore is planning anything for the Italians. Mrs. Allen Curtis, of Beverly Farms, says that nothing is yet planned.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Post and their daughters, the Misses Mary and Madaline Post, of Boston, have the Weston cottage, known as "The Uplands," on Storrow Hill, Beverly Farms. This is one of the delightfully wild and wooded sections at the Farms.

The death of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich's little five-year-old daughter, Madeleine Boardman Goodrich, occurred Wednesday morning at the West Manchester home. She had been ill for two weeks. The cause of the death is not known. Funeral services will be held this Friday noon from the Emmanuel Episcopal church, Manchester, where the little girl was baptized. Burial in Manchester.

The Reginald Foster home on Coolidge Point, Manchester, again has its four fine four-footed watchmen—two dark brown and two a light brown. Each season they seem to grow a handsomer coat of shaggy fur and are some of the best specimens of dogdom seen on the Shore.

"JUNIOR BREEZES" are planning some work days and pleasant things for the Shore. Their plans began two weeks ago today at the home of Mrs. B. C. Weld, Beverly Farms. About 25 tiny tots met to hear Mrs. Cummings, a speaker from Boston, tell of the need of work for the Children's hospital. The next hour a group of older children heard Mrs. Cummings. Units have been formed of children all along the Shore. These units, as far as possible, will be managed by the children themselves. If a group is too young an older person will be a leader. Raising money and making things for hospital use will be the object and each unit will try to raise $100, for the support of a bed.

Athletic events and little plays and other features are being planned by the various units. As plans mature they will be published on the special page devoted to "Junior Breezes." It is said that nearly 100 children are helping in the work at Marblehead.

MRS. T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, JR., at Coolidge Point, Manchester, has a terrace and view combined of which much could be written if North Shore loggias and terraces adjoining were made the subject. Large grassy terraces edged with perennials lying next the long brick house add much to the charm and dignity of the handsome place. This is one of the largest and most noticeable houses on the Point. It makes a striking appearance from the front with its massive white colonial pillars.

Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Coolidge Point, Manchester, has a rose garden of exquisite blooms. The lateness of the season seems not to have been felt among his roses. The pretty Italian garden and the little brook with its bridges seem never to change at this fine old place. Besides the display of tea roses there is a fine showing of foxgloves and canterbury bells; also lilies in the pond at the entrance to the Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, of "The Wayside," Convent, N. J., have taken the Gorman house, Bridge st., West Manchester, for the mid-summer. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley are parents of Mrs. Samuel Eliot, of Manchester.

Mrs. Chester Guild and her young daughter, Miss Mary-Chester Guild, have arrived from Boston for the season and are at the Oceanside, Magnolia. Miss Mary-Chester's older sister, Miss Carolyn Guild, will be remembered as one of the most popular of the younger set three seasons ago. She was married last winter to Mahlon Philip Bryan, also for many years an habitué of the Oceanside. They are residing in Philadelphia.

M. Hamburger, who spent 27 years at Beverly Farms doing tailoring work for people all along the Shore, is now in Magnolia. For the past two years he has been at Camp Devens, employed by the government to make officers' uniforms. He will be glad to receive his friends at 22 Fuller st., Magnolia village.

NAVY FESTIVAL—the event de luxe of the past week, held on the Haven estate at Beverly Farms—was postponed last Saturday, after it had been auspiciously opened, because of the rain. It was continued again on Monday, and most successfully consummated. On pages 50 and 51 will be found a full account of the affair.

Such a lot of smart sports clothes as came out Monday afternoon at the Navy Festival! Saturday, rain togs were in evidence everywhere. But the day and "night after" the Fourth brought all the natty clothes to the front.

A tan dress with which a brown hat and brown veil were worn; a lavender knitted suit, rose-colored hat and a rose scarf; a light green Jersey suit worn with a white sports hat; a pink suit and white hat trimmed in black velvet were samples of the pretty showing of sports clothes. One striking suit in black and white was seen, the skirt and sweater in black, and white ruffling at the neck and sleeves and on the crown of the black rimmed hat. White shoes were worn with this. Of course, the riders and some others always are in the strictly tailored suits favored by sportswomen like Miss Mary Curtis, Miss Alice Thorndike, Miss Eleanora Sears, Miss Polly Proctor and others of the Hamilton riding set.

Admiral S. S. Robison and Mrs. Robison and Comm. Hayward, senior aide to the commodore, were visitors at the Navy Festival on Saturday.

The pig donated by I. R. Thomas, of Ipswich, went to Frederick H. Prince, of Wenham. Mr. Thomas also gave a canary bird. This was won by A. L. Daniels, of Wenham, and given by him to one of the little daughters of Col. and Mrs. R. H. James, at Brownlands, Manchester.

Many expressions of surprise were heard at Mrs. S. Parker Bremer's booth. Folk in general did not know of the extensive reconstruction work still carried on by Mrs. Bremer at the naval hospital. Mrs. Bremer has many plans for the extension and permanent basis of the good work.

The committee of management of the Y. M. C. A. in Charlestown for the army and navy includes such well-known men as Henry L. Shattuck, Harry J. Carlson, Chas. K. Cummings, Arthur S. Johnson, Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Joseph G. Minot, Grafton D. Cushing, Bertram H. White, James A. Burgess, Edward M. Pickman, Alvin F. Sortwell, James R. Hooper, Jr. and J. Harleston Parker, two-thirds of whom are North Shore residents.

Charles K. Cummings, of Rye Hill, Pride's Crossing, is treasurer of the Charlestown Y. M. C. A. This is known as the Boston branch, the committee in charge being under the direction of the central organization in New York. In all ports where there is an Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. the sailor, when he goes ashore, finds practically the same kind of homelike building operated in practically the same manner.

"Rockmarge," Pride's Crossing, home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moore, will be open to the public tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon, from 2 to 6, under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. A small fee will be charged. A week later — on Saturday, the 17th—the gardens of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, at Manchester, will be open for the same purpose.

Essex County Club in Manchester had a most enjoyable dinner dance last Friday night. Mrs. F. L. Higginson entertained twenty guests; Carl P. Dennett, a table of ten; Herbert Hughes, sixteen. Other smaller dinner parties were given and sixty or more came in for the dance. The open golf tournament, under the auspices of the Mass. Golf association, is in progress the last three days of this week.

The summer home of Mrs. Charles Edmund Longley and family, at Atlantic ave., Phillips Beach, is one of the most delightful places in that section of the North Shore. The property comprises some five acres, with a fine type of cottage, looking out over the ocean. Mrs. Longley has been on the Shore since mid-June, and her sons, Ronald S., V. C., and Chas. Edmund, and the latter's wife will join her for part of the summer. The Longleys' winter home is Pawtucket, R. I.

F. G. Norris, of the Essex County club, has resigned his position as inside superintendent to take effect August 1, and with Mrs. Norris and family will sail for his old home in County Surrey, England, perhaps to make their permanent home, as they own a place there. Mr. Norris has been at the Essex County club over six years, and previous to that he was at the Myopia Hunt club. He will be succeeded by Joseph Dufton, at present at the Salem club, but associated with Mr. Norris both at Myopia and Manchester, in the past.

To play more than a hundred parts before reaching the ripe age of nine years would seem to be a unique record, a record possessed by Violet Turner, the young Englishwoman, who plays the title role in "Jack and the Beanstalk," with Lilian Owen's Marionettes. Born of actor parentage she started on the road in a few weeks, making her début when she was two and a half years old. She played in her childhood in all the much-played Shakespearian plays in the child parts or ran on as a page where no important business fell to a youngster. She has been murdered in the person of both the princes in the tower at different times, escaped massacre as Fleance in Macbeth and as a bloody apparition warned that wicked monarch of impending doom. Though Miss Turner is not out of her teens she ranks as a veteran on the professional stage.

OPENING OF GRACE HORNE'S New Gallery at Magnolia.—On Tuesday last, with a private view that brought together many folk from manywhere, the great hall in the picturesque library building at Magnolia came for the first time under the art critic's purview.

Miss Horne is no stranger to art and artists, of course. Having for several years had charge of various exhibitions in Boston and New York, she last summer organized an exhibition at the Sargent-Murray-Gilman House in Gloucester and last winter opened her own gallery in Boston. A generalized impression as one comes through a narrow door from Lexington ave. into a cheerful grey gallery is that this is an admirable setting for some of the brave, vigorous work that American artists keep on producing.

One of the incidental pleasures of a visit to the Horne Gallery is that of getting acquainted with several artists whose work is more or less unfamiliar to the North Shore. One of these is Wm. M. Paxton, who has a splendid interior in this exhibition. All the well-known Gloucester artists are represented including Hayley-Lever, Parker Perkins, Henry B. Snell, William Baxter Closson, George L. Noyes, H. A. Vincent, Martha Walter, Marion Boyd Allen, W. L. Palmer, Louise Upton Brumback, to mention only a few.

The Gallery will be open daily from ten to six. The present exhibition will continue, with a few changes from time to time, until August, when there will be a new exhibition.

Rowley Powley Tea House—what a merry name! This Rowley Powley is on the Rowley Common and is run for the benefit of the Rowley Historical society. It is open every day except Sunday. Luncheon is served when ordered in advance. Tel. 33 Rowley.

This Historical society was organized in 1918 and now has 65 members. Anyone who feels an interest in this old historic town is invited to join the society. Their first work has been the purchase of one of the ancient houses in Rowley, the Platts-Bradstreet place on Main st., near the centre of the town. This is doubtless a 17th century structure and will be restored gradually for a home for the society. Officers of the society include Charles A. Houghton, A. Everett Jewett, Rev. J. Joseph Fowler and Harlan C. Foster. The directors are Miss Gertrude W. Carleton, Mrs. Knight Dexter Cheney and Joseph N. Dummer.

Wenham's Tea House is again ready for its usual busy season. Mrs. Philip Downes is in charge, this year assisted by Miss Helen L. Kendall, of New York. The exchange department is continuing with Miss Mabel Welsh, who is devoting her whole time to Wenham interests.

Miss Welsh has taken an old house across the way from the tea house. The Wenham Village Improvement society was recently entertained there. Miss Helen Burnham, of "Overlook," is president of the society. Among other officers are Mrs. Edward B. Cole, Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels and Mrs. H. P. McKean, Jr. Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, who lives on the border line between Beverly Farms and Wenham, has been recently elected a member of the society. It now numbers over 90 members.

The tea house was run as a community centre during the winter, with gymnasium work, Scout activities and kindred things for the young folk. In all of these activities Miss Welsh, who is a sister of Mrs. A. W. Pollard, of Eastern Point, Gloucester, takes a prominent part.

Professor Henry W. Foote, of Harvard Divinity school, will preach Sunday, July 4, at First Unitarian church, Masconomo st., Manchester. Service at 10.30, followed by Communion after the service. All seats are free.

William C. Endicott, of Boston and Danvers, entertained a group of 10 friends at luncheon one day this week at the Eastern Yacht club.

Arthur P. Tarbell, of Boston, Arthur F. Benson, of Salem, and William T. Andrews, of Boston, are at the Eastern Yacht club for the season.

MANCHESTER'S Horticultural hall basement is the cool and airy place in which 30 or more workers met Tuesday morning to make surgical dressings for the Children's hospital in Boston. Owing to a shortage of nurses the welfare committee has made a call for help. The North Shore committee and most of the workers who did so much for the Fund for French Wounded during war times will carry on this work. They will meet each Tuesday morning in the hall. "Will you help?" Hours, 10 to 12.30. Contributions will be gratefully received by Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman, Beverly Farms. The committee includes Mrs. Timothée Adamowski, Mrs. Wm. W. Caswell, Miss Elaine Denègre, Mrs. Henry S. Grew, 2d, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. Geo. H. Lyman, Miss Harriet C. Rantoul, Mrs. R. Paul Snelling and Miss Alice Thorndike. Mrs. Lyman is in charge as formerly, when so much work was turned out at the workroom in West Manchester.

Among those who were out Tuesday were Mrs. Chas. P. Curtis, Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, Miss Ellen Curtis, Mrs. Jesse Koshland, Mrs. Oliver W. Mink and the Misses Rantoul.

THE "Book Caravan" planned by Miss Bertha E. Mahony, director of the Bookshop for Boys and Girls of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston, is now upon the Shore. Christopher Morley's "Parnassus on Wheels" is the source of the inspiration which brought about such an unique experiment. Traveling libraries are old, but the Union claims the credit of being the first to inaugurate the idea of a traveling bookshop in the country.

Miss Genevieve Washburn, the driver of the car, is a Wellesley graduate and drove a car in France for the Fund for French Wounded during the war. Miss Mary Frank is the chief of the extension division of the New York public library and a Pratt Institute graduate. These two compose the "caravaners."

On Monday books were sold in East Gloucester, where the car stopped opposite the Arcade. Tuesday the caravan was near the Union chapel, Magnolia; Wednesday, at West Beach, Beverly Farms; yesterday and today at Phillips Beach, Swampscott, where it stopped at the Neighborhood club; and Saturday it will be at the Lightship tea room, Nahant rd., Nahant.

Books for the boys and girls and for everybody, for that matter, are on sale or may be ordered. After a visit to the South Shore the Maine resorts will be visited in August and the White Mountains in September.

THE WEDDING of Miss Lillian Johnson and Richard Hemmons Halsey at Beverly Farms on June 23 was the first of the season on the Shore. Miss Johnson made her home with her brother, Thomas J. Johnson, of Boston. Mr. Johnson now occupies his remodeled summer house at 64 West st., Beverly Farms.

Mr. Halsey is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Halsey, of Bridgeport, Conn. Over forty witnessed the ceremony, members of the Johnson and Halsey families. It took place at 10.45 in St. Margaret's church, the Rev. Nicholas R. Walsh officiating. A breakfast followed at the Johnson cottage.

The bride wore white chiffon satin with an overdress of silk net embroidered in crystals and pearls. Her veil was held with a coronet of pearls and crystals and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Genevieve Lennon, of New York, a niece of the bride. She wore peach colored chiffon, a lace hat to match with blue ribbon streamers and carried a bouquet of peach colored flowers edged with blue ones. Julian Halsey, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

On the 26th the bridal couple sailed on the Noordam from New York. They will return in the autumn and spend some time at Beverly Farms in the Johnson home, one of the most charming remodeled Colonial houses on the Shore.

North Shore folk were interested in the wedding last week in Milton of Miss Ada Johnson, daughter of the Samuel Johnsons, and Lincoln Wallace Pierce, son of Dr. and Mrs. M. Vassar Pierce.

Re-opens July 9

PLANS are well underway to make the illustrated lecture at "Graftonwood," Manchester, Friday, July 23, by Mary Rutherford Jay, noted garden architect, one of the red-letter days of the season. Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire and daughter, Mrs. E. Laurence White, have the work in hand.

Many are interested in knowing something about Miss Jay personally. Her war work, for instance.

Miss Jay organized and took a unit of farmerettes to France in June, 1918, for the American committee for devastated France. She expected to work in the Aisne with the French peasants, showing American methods to them. Germans were in that sector, so Miss Morgan loaned the unit to the American army garden service at its headquarters farm in Versailles. The farm was worked by slightly wounded and shell-shocked men, all casuals, separated from their outfits, most of them not having the slightest interest in farming. The presence of these American women was very beneficial and helped to keep up the morale of the place. After hours the villa used by the farmerettes was a social center for these lonely boys.

Good results were obtained, as from that one farm alone about ten tons of fresh vegetables were sent to the men at the front, daily. After the farm work closed in October Miss Jay went into canteen service.

Opens Its 5th Season

The North Shore people, who through years of pleasant association have many good friends at Magnolia, will be glad to know that with other returning vacationists comes the Family of Fashion. They have the same charming white residence overlooking the ocean and their home is unquestionably the Mecca for all people of exclusive taste in dress, as all old friends know. People vacationing at the North Shore for the first time may be sure of a cordial welcome there and every day is "At Home Day" at this little salon by the sea.

MAGNOLIA will have a very interesting wedding tomorrow, at 5 o'clock, in the Union chapel. Miss Isabella Wadsworth, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Chas. Wadsworth, Jr., of Philadelphia, will become the bride of John Sharman Zinsser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Zinsser, of "Locust Wood," Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.

The ceremony will be performed by Dr. Wadsworth, father of the bride, assisted by Dr. Walter S. Eaton, pastor of the Village church, Magnolia. Miss Wadsworth will be given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Chas. Wadsworth, 3d, of Hastings-on-Hudson, and will have Mrs. Chas. Wadsworth, 3d, as her matron of honor. She will be attended by Miss Ellen Zinsser and Miss Peggy Zinsser, sisters of the bridegroom, as maids of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Dorothy Grammer and Miss Ailsa MacColl, of Philadelphia. Mr. Zinsser's father will act as best man and the ushers will include Wm. Zinsser and Rudolph Zinsser, of New York, cousins of the bridegroom; Dr. Wm. B. Breed, of Boston; Lewis Douglas, of Arizona; and Chauncey C. Loomis, of Texas. Malcolm Lang, of Boston, will play the organ.

Rev. and Mrs. Wadsworth, Jr., have as their guests for the wedding of their daughter Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Zinsser, Miss Ellen Zinsser, Miss Peggy Zinsser, John Sharman Zinsser and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, 3d, of Hastings-on-Hudson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Jr., entertained the bridal party and other guests at dinner Thursday evening, the first course being served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stevens, the main course at the home of the hosts, and for dessert the party was received by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Sr.

On Friday (today) Mr. and Mrs. Costello C. Converse are entertaining at luncheon Miss Wadsworth and Mr. Zinsser, Miss Ellen Zinsser, Miss Peggy Zinsser and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, 3d.

Friday evening Rev. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, Jr., will entertain the bridal party at dinner at Del Monte's, having as additional guests Mr. and Mrs. Costello C. Converse, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Jr.

The wedding will be followed by a reception in the clubhouse of the North Shore Swimming Pool.

Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian association, will preach Sunday, July 11, at the First Unitarian church, Masconomo st., Manchester by-the-Sea. Service at 10.30 a. m.; all seats free.

DEL MONTE'S, that delightful rendezvous of the North Shore smart set, where wit and beauty meet to dance and while away the hours of the evening, is having a very busy season, as usual. Nor are the people attracted here only during the evening, for many stop for luncheon or tea, when in Magnolia on a shopping or sight-seeing trip, and indeed the cool portico, with its row of snowy white tables, is hard to resist. Delicious viands are served here, masterpieces of men well versed in culinary arts, and one visit to Del Monte's leads to many others. Del Monte's has the same orchestra as last year, which means that there is good music, and there is a beautifully large space in the center of the dining room for dancing.

Mrs. Mary Scantan, president of the Margaret Brent Catholic association, of Boston, entertained twenty-five of the officers of the association last Friday at Del Monte's.

Among those who entertained at Del Monte's Monday night were Mrs. F. H. Hopewell, of Newton, a party of five; Mr. and Mrs. Percival Graham, of New York, party of ten, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tresler, of Chicago, a party of six.

Miss Lavinia H. Newell, who has been at the Bradley home, Pride's Crossing, is spending July with Mrs. David Crocker at Barnstable.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Walker, Mrs. Charles P. Searle, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Endicott, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, Miss Helen Frick, Richard H. Dana, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Phillips (Mr. Phillips is Minister to Holland), and Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Merrill are among North Shore folk abroad for all or part of this season.

Miss Sophia C. Hart, a professor at Wellesley college, spent the week-end and holiday at "Eaglehead," Manchester, the home of Ambassador and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris.

Mrs. A. M. Thomas and daughter, Elise, of St. Louis, spent the week-end and holiday at the Isaac R. Thomas home in Ipswich. Mrs. Thomas is visiting her people in New London and will come later in the season for her usual visit on the Shore. She assisted at the Navy Festival, in the dairy booth, Saturday.

North Shore folk are always interested in the Newport dog show—this year, August 21.

Dr. George H. Washburn, of Manchester, will not see much of his sons this season. His son, George E., is with the library bureau in Cleveland, Ohio. Arthur H., a student at Columbia, also a teacher in the boys' school at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, will spend two months at Marienfeld camp in New Hampshire, as one of the masters in charge. The younger son, Alfred H., has gone to Dr. Grenfell's mission in Labrador, where he has been stationed at St. Anthony's on the tip of Newfoundland. Dr. Washburn's daughter, Mrs. Basil Hall, of Hunt's Point, N. Y., will come on for her usual visit early in August. The doctor's many friends regret that he has been confined to his bed the past week or more, but at this writing he is rapidly improving.

MAGNOLIA

NEVER has Magnolia looked so beautifully attractive as it does this season! After the severe winter the trees have taken on added luxuriance of foliage, and the grass of the smooth lawns seems to have assumed a deeper shade, seemingly conscious that their charms are viewed and appreciated by people from the four corners of the world. One of the most attractive places in Magnolia is, of course, the Oceanside hotel, the largest and best-known hotel in New England. Known for the natural beauty of its surroundings, for the gay society life which revolves around it, and for the simple luxury of its appointments, its charm never fails to appeal whether one is merely there for a short stay or for the season—or, indeed, for many seasons. Nor is that its only allurement, for there are always little nooks which are blissfully quiet and restful and where one can sit to read or write at will. Truly it may well be said that the Oceanside hotel and its cottages are situated at one of the prettiest spots on the New England coast.

Mrs. Charles Acer, of Montreal, Canada, is at the Oceanside for an indefinite stay.

Justice and Madame A. A. Bruneau, of Montreal, Canada, will again spend the summer at the Oceanside hotel. They arrived last week.

Mrs. Frank D. Hurtt and Miss Nancy Truax, of New York, are at the Oceanside for a few weeks' stay.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Fitzpatrick, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are at the Oceanside for a short visit. With them are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kerr, Miss L. E. Gallaher and Frank McCue, of New York.

MR. AND MRS. T. J. TOURTELLOTTE, of Chicago, Ill., are occupying apartments in "Sea Crest," one of the attractive Oceanside hotel cottages, for the season. In a few days they will be joined by Mrs. Tourtellotte's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Brockway, also of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Keys, of New York, who are making a brief visit to the North Shore, were registered at the Oceanside for a few days this week.

Miss Helen Butler, of Tunbridge Wells, England, was the guest, during the past week, of Mrs. A. F. McArthur, of New York, who is occupying the Winslow cottage, one of the Oceanside group, for the summer. Miss Butler came to the North Shore in connection with the visit of the Garden Club of America.

Registered for a short stay at the Oceanside are Mr. and Mrs. Myron Schafer and their son, Robert, of Boston.

The Misses W. L. and A. G. Saunders, of Lawrence, are registered at the Oceanside for the month of July.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Reeves, who have been spending a week at the Oceanside, left Saturday for their home in Summit, N. J. During a part of their visit they entertained G. O. Hunter, of Boston.

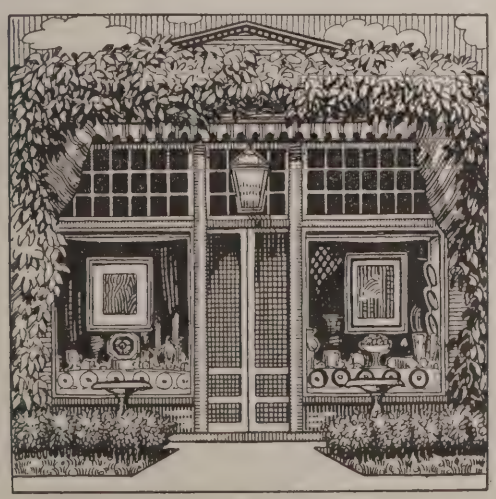

H. A. Royce, of Boston, is registered at the Oceanside for an indefinite stay.

Mrs. Julius H. Haass and her daughter, Miss Constance Haass, and Miss Kate McDonald arrived last week from their home in Detroit, Mich. They are guests at the Oceanside for a short visit.

Mrs. Frank Gorton, of New York, is registered at the Oceanside for the season as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Cahoone, of Providence, R. I., are at the Oceanside for a brief visit.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL, at Magnolia, was gay with prettily dressed women on Saturday night, when the first dance of the season was held. This dance was followed up by another on Monday evening. Tomorrow night the Oceanside will give its usual Saturday night dance. During the summer dancing will be held at the hotel on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Halmi, of Boston, have taken apartments at the Highland cottage, and are registered at the Oceanside for the summer. Mr. Halmi is an artist; this is their first season at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Mather and family will again spend the summer on the North Shore. They are expected to arrive at the Oceanside on the fifteenth, from their home in Cleveland, Ohio, and will occupy apartments at the Breakers Cottage. They will have as guests during the summer Mrs. Ralph S. Harman and her daughter, Miss Sue W. Harman, also of Cleveland, who have already arrived at the hotel.

Mrs. George H. Jackson, of Butler, Pa., spent a few days in Magnolia during the past week. While here Mrs. Jackson was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wallace, who are occupying apartments in the Highland cottage, one of the Oceanside group.

Mrs. George K. Garvin and child, of New York, have arrived at the Oceanside, where they will spend the entire season.

Miss Lucy H. Eaton, of Boston, has returned to the Oceanside for the season.

AMONG the prettily gowned women who were playing bridge in the lobby of the hotel Tuesday night was Mrs. E. M. Binney, who was becomingly gowned in brown net over silk of brown and blue, the shades of silk showing through the net, making a very charming contrast. Mrs. Binney has spent a number of seasons at the Oceanside and has many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Cahoon, of Providence, R. I., season guests at the Oceanside, entertained their daughter, Miss E. H. Cahoone, over the week-end and holiday. Miss Cahoone is spending the summer at Bass Rocks.

Among the recent arrivals at the Oceanside are Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Jackson, who have taken apartments for the summer in the Perkins cottage. The Jackson winter home is in Atlanta, Ga.

Week-end guests at the Oceanside included Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Manchester, of Providence, R. I.

Early in the evening, last Monday, three sturdy, handsome little boys and one dainty little girl attracted the admiration of the Oceanside guests. They are the children of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Kenney, of Worcester, season guests at the hotel, and they were seated with their mother in the lobby. Mrs. Kenney's gown was of green satin and she also wore a becoming, large black hat.

Mrs. D. B. Hussey and her daughter and son, Miss Helen Hussey and J. Edward Hussey, arrived at the Oceanside the past week from their home in St. Louis, Mo. They have taken apartments in the Covel cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Walker, Dean Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wheeler, all of Plainwell, Mich., were among the visitors who took luncheon at the Oceanside on Tuesday.

MISS SUZANNE ANDERSON and Yandes Wheeler were among the attractive couples at the Oceanside dance Saturday night. Miss Anderson wore a charmingly pretty gown of a well-chosen and becoming shade of green. She is spending the summer at the Oceanside, together with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Wendell Anderson, and her brother, Wendell Anderson. The Andersons come from Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. C. V. Wheeler, who wore a white lace ruffled gown, was among the most beautifully dressed ladies noticed at the bridge tables in the lobby of the Oceanside hotel Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Charles Fleischmann, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is spending her first season on the North Shore. She is registered at the Oceanside and has taken an apartment in the Sea Vista cottage. Mrs. Fleischmann is entertaining Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Snell and children, of Ottawa, Ont., who are here for a two weeks' stay.

Among the many parties who enjoyed the Oceanside gaieties over the week-end and holiday were Misses Margaret Walker and Laura F. Barton, of Buffalo, N. Y.; C. Corcoran, of Lakefield, M. Haggerty, of Dorchester, and Mrs. George B. Walker, of Worcester; Miss Mabel Brown, Providence, R. I.; Dr. and Mrs. Chas. Grapek, Boston; Frank J. Payson, Providence, R. I.; Wm. N. BASS ROCKS.—The holiday, with its bright sunshine and invigorating atmoshere, gave the people of the Bass Rocks colony a great opportunity to golf, and the bathing beach also was sought by a great many people. The open tournament on the tennis courts of the Bass Rocks Golf club called out a large gallery during the early week. The two hotels—Thorwald and Moorland—received scores of guests each day during the past week, both permanent and transient, especially during the holiday. At the Thorwald, but few rooms remained on Monday and the Moorland at present has over 300 permanent guests.

Miss Myra Tutt, of New York city, has arrived at the picturesque McGuckin cottage on Page rd., Bass Rocks, for another season at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Hubbel and family, of Rochester, N. Y., have arrived at the Baker cottage onAtlantic rd., Bass Rocks, near the Moorland, for the season. Mr. Hubbel is vice-president of the Eastman Kodak Co.

Mrs. Lea Thom, of Baltimore, is occupying the Cutler cottage on the Dr. Jarvie estate, Atlantic rd., Bass Rocks.

Prof. William G. McGuckin, who for many years was an instructor at New York City college, has arrived at the Thorwald, Bass Rocks, for his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip H. Duprey and family, of Worcester, have taken occupancy of their house on Atlantic rd., Bass Rocks.

Rev. and Mrs. John McGaw Foster, the former who is rector of the Church of the Messiah (Episcopal), of Boston, have arrived at their pleasantly situated cottage at the junction of Nautilus and Atlantic rds., Bass Rocks. The Fosters have spent a great many seasons at Bass Rocks.

Late arrivals at the Moorland, Bass Rocks, include: Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Grubb, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Crump and two children, of Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Reeves Lewis,—all old-time guests; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Jackson, of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Alfred E. Hunt, D. L. Gillespie, of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Donovan and daughter, Dorothy, of Toledo, O.; Mrs. R. E. Edwards, of Washington, D. C.; Z. W. Vardell and two daughters, of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. Clinton T. Fisher, Edgewater, N. J.; Mrs. George T. Wothur and two daughters, of Little Rock, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Swindell, Rockville, Conn.

A holiday dancing party was held for the Moorland guests, in the casino on Monday evening and many of the cottagers also attended.

General and Mrs. Mansfield, of Boston, have arrived at the Thorwald, Bass Rocks, for their annual visit.

Late arrivals at Hotel Thorwald, Bass Rocks, include: Mr. and Mrs. John Lowry, Jr., Judith C. Waller, George E. Fleischman, of New York city; Katherine C. Puder, of Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T. A. Thomson, Austin, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Maples, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. M. C. Stuyvesant, Mrs. M. R. Collins, St. Louis, Mo.

The exhibition of paintings and sculpture at the Magnolia library building to be conducted this season by Miss Grace Ross Horne, of Boston and East Gloucester, opened on Tuesday afternoon. The gallery will be open daily from 10 a. m. till 6 p. m., Sunday excepted, free for all visitors.

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

EASTERN POINT.—The holiday brought a great advance of summer guests to the East Gloucester and Eastern Point section. Every hotel has a good registration of guests. Hawthorne Inn, especially, is nearly filled. The holiday dance at the casino on Monday evening marked the opening of social gaiety. It was very attractive, a large number of the inn guests and their friends from the cottages along the shore participating. The casino was prettily decorated with red, white and blue colors.

Jean Nutting Oliver, the Boston painter is again at Hawthorne Inn for the season, in company with her sister, Miss Oliver. Her studio is on the inn grounds.

Jane Peterson, of New York city, is another artist spending her season at Hawthorne Inn. Miss Peterson has her studio located at Rocky Neck, near the marine railways.

The shocking news comes to old-time Hawthorne Inn guests as they arrive, of the death of Alice Preble Tucker (de Haas) Carpender, the artist, of New York city. Mrs. Carpender, before her marriage three years ago, was the widow of de Haas, the prominent marine painter. She had been coming to East Gloucester for many years, where she had a studio, and she had a wide acquaintance among the hotel and colony people.

The death of Alexander Pearson, of Middletown, N. Y., formerly of Lexington, Ky., at his Eastern Point summer home, on Sunday, July 4, is deeply regretted by the people of the colony. He was 79 years of age. Mr. Pearson, with his family, occupied Beach End cottage, owned by George O. Stacy, of Hawthorne Inn, and situated at the southerly end of Niles' Beach and the boulevard. Mr. Pearson, with his wife and daughters, had been annual guests at the Hawthorne Inn for a great many years. He possessed a genial nature and he had a host of friends at the hotel.

Miss C. A. Northam, of New York, is spending her summer at the Hawthorne Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lawrence Smith are spending the season at the Hawthorne Inn. They have rented their Ledge rd. cottage, near the Gallery-on-the-Moors.

James L. Thompson, a Boston artist, is occupying the Terrace studio on Rocky Neck, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Tener and family, of Sewickley, Pa., have arrived at their handsome Eastern Point estate, located on the height overlooking Niles' Beach and the harbor.

Harry de Maine, of Yorkshire, England, is located in a studio on Terrace st., Rocky Neck.

Anne Fisher, a New York artist, is registered at Hotel Rockaway, East Gloucester.

Miss A. H. Pemberton, a landscape painter, of Boston, is occupying one of the studios in the Fenn building on Rocky Neck ave.

A. Frank, a figure painter, of Philadelphia, is situated in a studio in the Fenn building, Rocky Neck ave.

Henry B. Snell, the New York painter, is stopping at Hotel Rockaway for the season. He will conduct his classes in painting this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Nordell, of Boston, both painters, are again occupying the Parmenter studio on East Main st., East Gloucester, situated at the edge of Rocky Neck cove waters.

Wm. McVey and family, of Brookline, are occupying the Colby house, Rocky Neck, near the Hotel Rockaway.

Wm. Guckenberger, a Cincinnati, Ohio., banker, and his family, are registered at Hotel Rockaway for the season. They are old-time guests at this hostelry.

Late Rockaway arrivals are S. F. McIntosh and family, Providence, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Cleeland, Springfield; B. G. Bronson, Mrs. James N. Heald and family, Albany, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Z. Klander and family, Philadelphia; Alice M. Simpson, New York; Mrs. Jane Harmon, Miss Jessie Gardner, Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. V. O. Chase, Eleanor P. Curtis, Mrs. L. D. Greene, Washington, D. C.

Merrill Hall, Eastern Point rd., has a large number of guests. Among those recently arriving are Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Foehl, East Orange, N. J.; Miss Sallie Aston, Madeira, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Zuber, Mrs. S. E. McFarlin, Lawrence; Mrs. Delos R. Moon, Elizabeth and Laura Moon, Eau Claire, Wis.; Martha Oliver, Englewood, N. ANNISQUAM.—The summer season opened most auspiciously at the Annisquam Yacht club on the holiday. A large number of members and friends, from the colony, visited the club during the afternoon, watching the yacht races, and tea was served from prettily decorated tables, while bouquets of handsome flowers were placed about the rooms. Mrs. George C. Andrew was matron. In the evening, the dance was an attractive affair, with orchestral music, and the yachtsmen and their ladies and groups of young people thoroughly enjoyed the occasion, a fitting finale to the day's events.

G. Phelps Brown and family, of Springfield, have arrived at Annisquam for the summer.

Mrs. J. B. Williams and Miss Emily Williams, of Cambridge, are occupying the Williams cottage, at Annisquam.

Miss L. C. Rulison, of New York, has arrived at her cottage on Chester sq., Annisquam, for the season.

Miss Annette P. Rogers, of Boston, has opened her Annisquam estate, "Tideway," for the season.

Mrs. Dayton and Malcolm Steer, of Montclair, N. J., are occupying the Steer homestead on Leonard st.

Miss Bessie Muzzey entertained a number of friends the past week at her summer home on Walnut st., Annisquam.

ROCKPORT.—Along the Rockport shore, the cottagers have very nearly all settled for the season. Since the Saturday preceding the holiday, the arrivals have been steady at Straitsmouth and Turk's Head Inns. At the Rockport Country club, on the holiday, the clubhouse furnished sociability with the teas and dancing and the golf links were extensively used all day.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Babbitt, of Brookline, are occupying "Pineledge," their attractive estate at Land's End, near Turk's Head Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dutton, of Boston, have arrived at their Marmion Way cottage, "The Rocks," at Rockport, for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Morgan and family, of Dorchester, are occupying the Littlefield cottage on Sandaba ave., Land's End, Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Morgan, of Brookline, have arrived at the Mills cottage, Marmion Way, Rockport, for the summer.

Mrs. H. M. Wright, of Detroit, Mich., is occupying the Goodwin bungalow, Rockport, this season.

The death of Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett, in Baltimore, during the past winter, is learned with deep regret by members of the Land's End colony, as they gradually arrive in this section. Mrs. Garrett had been coming to Rockport for a great many years and she owned an attractive estate at Land's End. She entertained considerably, oftentimes at The Edward at Pigeon Cove. Last summer her son, who was American ambassador to the Netherlands, was her guest, with his family.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE at Swampscott was well filled with guests over the holiday and with the pleasant days clock golf and tennis were enjoyed and many went into the water. This year Wm. Scalley is life guard and swimming instructor and he keeps a special lookout for the children who are arriving in large numbers at the Shore.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Jean Grabow was hostess at a pretty children's party in which the hotel guests and the children along the North Shore took a prominent part. Dancing and games were enjoyed with dainty refreshments and favors for all.

A black and white ball will be featured July 24 and everyone admitted to the ballroom must be in either black or white or combinations of the two. This is to be the biggest ball of the season and invitations are extended to the summer folk of the North Shore.

Mrs. V. L. Hamlin, of Boston, who has summered several years at the New Ocean House, has returned for the summer. Miss Doris Hamlin will be much missed at the hotel this season; she is at a girls' camp.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Foye, of Boston, arrived for the holidays, at the New Ocean House, and will remain until September.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Edwards, of Boston, are installed at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Parker and Miss Mildred Parker, of Atlanta, Ga., are enjoying life at the New Ocean House.

Canadian visitors to the Shore are arriving and among them Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Jackson, of Montreal, and Mrs. H. W. Pillow and Miss W. E. Mitchell, also of that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Welch, of Chicago, are also at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Lawton, of Syracuse, N. Y., are honeymooning at the New Ocean House.

Dr. and Mrs. Somers Smyth and daughter, of Brookline, are installed at the New Ocean House for the season.

Mrs. F. L. Tilton, West Newton; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Cox, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davis, Boston, are season guests at the hotel.

Mrs. E. C. Gaffield and Miss Eleanor Gaffield, of Boston, are spending the month of July at the New Ocean House.

Mrs. J. P. Walworth, of Lawrence, and Miss F. E. Aldred, of Andover, are also at the New Ocean House for July.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Wightman, of Brookline, are spending the season at this lovely Swampscott hotel.

Mrs. L. G. Fairbank and Miss E. E. Brooks, of Boston, who have spent several seasons at the New Ocean House, returned this week for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Martin, of Cambridge, have been joined at the New Ocean House by H. C. Martin, also of Cambridge, for the month.

Mrs. J. T. Lodge, Roland H. Boutwell, Miss Elizabeth H. Gilman, Miss M. Corinne Dana are Bostonians registered at the New Ocean House for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Crimmins and R. G. Crimmins, of West Newton, are at the New Ocean House for a stay of several weeks.

R. V. Facey and wife, of London, with maid and chauffeur, are spending the summer at the New Ocean House.

John F. Gately and mother, Mrs. A. E. Gately, of Brookline, are installed at the New Ocean House for the entire season.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Norton, Miss Jane and Miss Margaret, of Brookline, are at the New Ocean House for the season.

Among the New Yorkers at the New Ocean House are Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Litton, Miss Bessie E. Mack, Mrs. H. T. Davison, Miss E. H. Davison, Miss L. K. Graves, Mrs. Michael Blake, Miss Helen M. Blake, Mrs. Joseph H. Colyer, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin J. Burnham, G. C. Plummer, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Bundy and Dr. and Mrs. William Lindsey.

Mrs. G. R. Wallace and Miss Rachel Wallace and Master G. R. Wallace, 3d, of Fitchburg, are at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Mrs. Walter E. Parker and Miss Mildred E. Parker, of Detroit, are newcomers to the Shore this season.

B. L. Hollander, of New York, has arrived at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Dickson and Miss Virginia Dickson, of Troy, are spending July at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, of Washington, D. C., have arrived at the New Ocean House for a portion of the season. They are very well-known in North Shore society.

Mrs. J. A. Chadwick and the Misses Catherine and Mary H. Chadwick, of the Hotel Somerset, Boston, are at the New Ocean House for the season.

Mrs. George Holden Tinkham has closed her house on Commonwealth ave., Boston, and will spend the summer at the New Ocean House.

SWAMPSCOTT.—Anna T. McAleer and Mary E. A. McAleer, of Swampscott, have recently purchased a house at 405 Beacon st., Boston, which they will occupy after improvements are made. The house formerly belonged to Mrs. F. Richard Fuller, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. A. A. White, of Boston, has opened her cottage near the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

The annual ladies' night of the Budget club of Lynn was held recently at the Sunbeam tea room, Swampscott, the club members being the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Little. During the evening Mrs. Little was presented with a handsome silver muffin dish.

July 5, the Sunbeam tea room was a busy place, dancing being in order on the specially constructed floor, added this year. Edwin Gerould, of Lynn, who has spent many months in Europe, returns today from England on the Rotterdam.

Dr. and Mrs. Ellis F. Morse, of Swampscott, have gone on a short trip by motor to the White Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Cate, of Swampscott, are in the White Mountains for a few days, returning the latter part of the month to the Shore.

William A. Paine and family, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, have arrived at "The Farm," Beach Bluff, for the season. The playhouse which has for so many years been a source of joy to the young people of the family is open, and the miniature, old-fashioned garden is in full bloom.

The handsome lawn which replaced the unsightly bog, is coming along in good shape and almost every day sees one of the gardeners with the old, white mule, busily cutting the grass. Shrubs and young trees have been planted as a border and facing the street.

Mr. Harfax: "So your son left us to go into a bank in the city? How did he acquit himself?"

Mr. Timbertop: "He didn't acquit himself. It took the best lawyer in the county to get him acquitted."—Boston Globe.

SALEM.—Mr. and Mrs. George W. West, of Chestnut st., Salem, have opened their summer home at Petersham.

Mr. and Mrs. David M. Little and son, David M. Little, Jr., of Salem, have gone to Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H., for the summer. Mr. Little has busied himself this winter by making a hydroplane which he will soon launch at the lake.

Mrs. William H. Ramsay, of Salem is at Cotuit for the summer months.

Mrs. Henry G. Hall, of Salem, who is summering at Magnolia had as her guest last week Miss Lucy Perry, of Salem.

Carter White, son of Judge and Mrs. Alden P. White of Federal court, Salem, who was graduated from Amherst this spring, will spend the summer in the state of Washington.

Dr. and Mrs. Octavius Shreve of Chestnut street, Salem, are at Contuit for the summer months.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward L. Pierson of Barton square, Salem, are also at Contuit for the summer.

Gen. and Mrs. William A. Pew, of Salem, who usually go to Land's End, Rockport, have gone west this summer, making Vancouver their chief stopping place.

Miss Mary H. Pew, of Salem, has gone to the I. X. L. ranch, Dayton, Wyoming, for the summer months.

LYNN.—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Heys, of Lynn, have returned from a few weeks at Poland Springs, Me.

Donald Black, of Lynn, has gone to Long Island, Me., for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Estes, of Lynn, have been visiting friends in Mattapoisett this week.

Thomas H. Logan and family, of Kimball rd., Lynn, spent the holiday at Bretton Woods, N. H., making the trip by automobile.

CLIFTON.—Mr. and Mrs. George C. Dutton, of Brookline, who are summering at Clifton, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Gertrude S. Dutton, and Robert C. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown, of Cambridge. Miss Dutton is a graduate of the Lowe-Heywood school at Stamford, Conn. Mr. Brown is a Harvard 1910 man.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Kaiser and family, of Brookline, have arrived at Clifton for the season.

HOTEL PRESTON, BEACH BLUFF

HOTEL PRESTON, Beach Bluff, was well-filled with guests over the holiday, many of whom arrived for the summer. Among those registered for the season are: Mrs. Hulda G. Miller and Miss Clara G. Miller, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Ellen T. Treadway, Stockbridge; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Harlow, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. McGowan, Brookline; Mrs. Samuel C. Howell, Miss Florence Conger, Newark, N. J.; Mrs. A. E. Dickerman and daughter, Minneapolis; W. C. Wheeler, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Chester D. Johnstone, Providence; Mrs. Horace A. Kimball, Providence; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Holden, Boston; Miss Ruth E. Atkins, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Breed, Swampscott; Francis E. Page and son, Philip Page, Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Thayer, Wakefield; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Eliot, Newton Centre; Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Webber, Boston; Dr. and Mrs. Albert August and daughter, Cambridge; Mrs. Lewis Morris and family, Amsterdam, N. Y.

Miss Helen Eveleth, of Lowell, is being entertained at the Hotel Preston by Mrs. Lewis Morris.

BEACH BLUFF.—Mrs. William B. Buckminster, of Malden, is at her handsome Beach Bluff house. The garden which sets off the house is planted with borders of old-fashioned flowers and roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Sydney R. Green and family, of Brookline are at their summer home, Sea View ave., Beach Bluff. Last year a new formal garden was laid out and this year it is a delight to the eye. The silver sun ball and the rustic seats add to its pleasantness.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Carpenter, of Beach Bluff, entertained a dinner party of seven covers at the Tedesco Country club, Wednesday. Golf playing has begun in competition for the president's cup given by W. A. Paine, of Beach Bluff.

North Shore society is looking forward to the wedding of Miss Ruth Dill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Dill, of Clifton, and F. D. Beard, of New York, who is spending the season at the Tedesco Country club.

NAHANT, that beauty spot on the North Shore jutting out into the bay nearly two miles from the Lynn shore, is having a busy season. The Hotel Tudor, so picturesquely located, with the waves almost swashing its foundations on one side, and with a background of trees on the other, is entertaining to capacity again this season. The hotel is under the proprietorship of William Catto, who conducts the Hotel Logan in Iowa Circle, Washington, in winter. Some of the season guests at the Tudor this year are:

Mrs. J. S. McCarthy, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Miss Minnie Zimmer, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Miss Katherine Fay and A. J. and Charles Steiss, Palo Alto, Calif.
Prof. J. H. Davis, Lynchburg, Va.
Mrs. M. E. Johnson, Syracuse, N. Y.
Mrs. H. H. Trowbridge, Cambridge.
Mrs. A. E. Moses, Washington, D. C.
T. H. Barden and family, Hyde Park.
Mrs. Edward White and Mrs. A. H. Taylor Plainfield, N. J.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Cradock Simpson, Montreal, Can.
Mrs. Macdonald MacCarthy, Montreal, Can.
Mrs. A. E. Durnford, Montreal, Can.
Mrs. W. E. MacInnes, Montreal, Can.
Mr. and Mrs. Elmer G. Foster, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Denny, of Boston, and Mrs. Denny's sister, Mrs. George Inches, are at Nahant for the season.

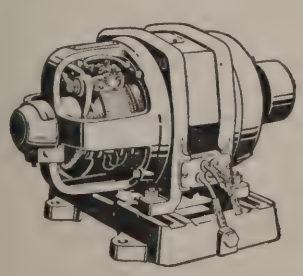

Edwin N. Curtis, Boston police commissioner, and Mrs. Curtis, are at Nahant this season.

Mrs. John Craig, who is summering at "Craig House," Beach Bluff, was the speaker before the Hull Women's club, one day last week, giving her "Drama of the War."

"How is your sister getting along taking boarders?"

"Oh, splendidly! She hasn't heard a complaint from one of her boarders yet."

"Why, I did not know she was getting as deaf as that!"

Corinthian Yacht Club was the scene of festivities over the Fourth and the clubhouse never looked better than during the holiday. Monday night a dinner dance at which 300 people were present was the chief festivity. The house and tables were decorated with flags and flowers in red, white and blue, perhaps the most splendid decoration being the huge silver bowl, a Corinthian Yacht club Class R trophy, which was filled with larkspur, peonies and spirea.

The fireworks, which were to have been one of the features during the evening, were spoiled, owing to the fact that cinders from the second bomb which was sent up fell on the other fireworks on the float opposite the clubhouse and the fireworks exploded at once, the men who were operating them being forced to take to the water.

This year Lawrence F. Percival is commodore and Frank C. Paine is vice-commodore, and both gentlemen were present during the Monday evening festivities.

Miss Elizabeth Webb, of Marblehead Neck, entertained a dinner party on Sunday, it being a birthday affair.

Monday evening F. R. Bogardis, of Beach Bluff, entertained a dinner party of 36 covers. The table was decorated in sweet peas of varied colors and the ladies had corsage bouquets of the same.

There is a large list of house guests at the Corinthian Yacht club this season, among them being S. W. Wise, G. H. Thompson, A. K. Simpson, C. L. Parkhill, R. W. Sawtell, D. B. Hallett, D. A. Gardner, R. P. Hoagland, P. L. Fish, J. G. Odie, H. B. Lewis, P. L. Young, R. E. Hall, C. W. Cheeney, F. W. Weed, A. L. Dole, C. M. Munroe, H. W. Poulson, G. D. Loud, F. S. Hodges, F. A. Flood, C. G. Johnson and W. I. Fearing.

Among the North Shore summer colony who are working for the annual bazaar in aid of the Florence Crittenton League of Compassion to be held in the Copley-Plaza ballroom, Dec. 1 and 2, are Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, of Marblehead Neck; Mrs. Simon E. Hecht, Swampscott; Mrs. W. I. Palmer, Phillips Beach, and Mrs. W. I. Badger, Jr., Swampscott.

The Rosary at Devereux is one of the beautiful sights of the Shore, and hundreds of people visit the garden every day to see the thousands of roses of every hue in full bloom.

A New Club at the Eastern Yacht club is that called "Webb Foot Crew," a dining club, which meets Tuesday evenings for dinner and entertainment and which bids fair to be most popular. The officers of the club are Henry A. Morss, captain; Nathaniel F. Ayer, first mate; Theodore Jones, second mate; Howard Whitcomb, boatswain; Robert A. Leeson, purser; James M. Hunnewell, yeoman; Graydon Stetson, chief cook; John Lawrence, cook; Albert G. Duncan, cook, and Walter L. Abbot, Jimmy Legs.

According to the by-laws or "shipping articles," the objects of the organization are to encourage the use of the clubhouse by its members, to help the club by increasing the use of the clubhouse and to have a good time at the dinners.

The duties of the officers are: Captain, to command the crew; the first mate to command the port watch; the second mate, the starboard watch; the purser, to collect and hold all dues belonging to the crew; the yeoman to keep a list of members and record of meetings; the boatswain, to pipe the crew to inspections before meetings and then to dinner; the chief cook and the other two cooks, to act as a committee to cook up schemes for entertainments.

MARBLEHEAD.—Mrs. Parker H. Kemble, of Marblehead, who is a member of the Women's Municipal league, of Boston, is interested in the cottage which has been taken from Boston Common and placed on Revere boulevard to be used as a tea room.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Schnitzer, of Chicago, are at Marblehead this summer, returning to the old town after several seasons' absence.

Augustus Hemenway, who is established in Marblehead for the summer, has a catboat with which he has considerable enjoyment in the harbor and bay.

The first in a series of summer talks on "Current Events" was given Monday at the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead. A goodly number of summer residents were present.

Mr. and Mrs. George Upton and family, of Boston, have arrived at Marblehead for the summer months. The King Uptons have gone to Europe for the season.

Miss Whitney, owner of the Brown Owl tea room, Marblehead, has gone on a motor trip to Canada.

The Radcliffe college endowment fund is being swelled by the proceeds of the Radcliffe club tea house, Beach st., Marblehead, formerly the Brown Owl. The house committee is composed of Mrs. Robert M. Blackall, Watertown; Mrs. Henry L. Morss, Marblehead Neck; Mrs. Frederic L. Day, Marblehead Neck; Mrs. B. N. Johnson, Lynn; Mrs. Sidney Peterson, Brookline; Mrs. Channing Williams, Marblehead; Mrs. George W. Vaillant, Boston; Miss Mildred Nason, Salem; Miss Margaret A. Fish, Brookline.

Frank Merriam, of Boston, has taken the Poole cottage, Marblehead Neck, for the season.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.—The Pleon Yacht club at Marblehead Neck, made up of junior yachtsmen, is officered this year by Richard Thayer, commodore; Francis Mullen, treasurer, and E. Arthur Shuman, secretary.

Miss Elizabeth Munroe, who is summering at the Sea Gull, Marblehead Neck, is much interested in the Radcliffe endowment fund.

Miss Charlotte Hibbard came on from Brooklyn, N. Y., for the graduation of her brother, Ford Hibbard, of Harvard, former manager of the baseball team. Miss Hibbard is the house-guest of Miss Frances W. Kemble, in the Parker H. Kemble home, Marblehead Neck. Miss Kemble was one of the débutantes last winter in Boston. The Kembles and guests are soon leaving on a cruise to Maine.

Hance Hamilton and family, of Salem, have arrived at Marblehead Neck for the summer months.

Eunice Avery, of Springfield, will commence her series of "Current Events" talks at the Eastern Yacht club, next Tuesday at 11 o'clock. Luncheon will be served following her lecture.

Owing to the departure of the many boats of the Eastern Yacht club of the annual cruise, the clubhouse is practically deserted this week. The New York club having extended the courtesy of space on their official tug for the international races, several of the members are availing themselves of the wonderful opportunity of following the boats competing for the cup.

Hon. and Mrs. Henry P. Benson, of Salem, have opened their attractive home at Marblehead Neck for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. White, of Brookline, arrived the past week at their summer home, Marblehead Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mobes, of Washington, D. C., are at the Hotel Boylston, Marblehead Neck, for the summer. They spend much of their time at the Corinthian Yacht club, Mr. Mobes being much interested in yachting.

The Oceanside hotel, Marblehead Neck, was filled to overflowing during the week-end and holiday, among the guests being: Mrs. A. S. Knight, of Gladstone, N. J.; Mrs. Arthur P. Abbott and Dorothy Abbott, of Montclair, N. J.; Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Anderson, Haddonsfield, N. J.; Charles R. Richardson, Boston; D. E. Bingham, Dubuque, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Congdon, Waban. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Houston, of Holyoke, arrived this week in their motor for the greater part of the season at the Oceanside hotel.

Master Arthur Shuman, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Shuman, of Marblehead Neck, was operated upon Thursday night for appendicitis, but is resting quite comfortably. Master Shuman is secretary of the Pleon Yacht club.

Osborne Howes and family, of Chestnut Hill, have arrived at Peach's Point for the summer. Their houseboat swings at anchor in Marblehead harbor.

Mrs. Carl A. deGersdorff and her daughter, Mrs. Frederick J. Bradlee, motored to Marblehead last week from Lenox.

Dr. and Mrs. Harold W. Dana and two children, of Centre st., Brookline, are at their handsome Ocean ave. house, Marblehead Neck, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren K. Emerson and two daughters are at Marblehead Neck, having come down from Boston the past week.

NORTH SHORE GARDENS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Series of Garden Days Conducted This Season—"Rockmarge" to Open Tomorrow

The Willow Walk, at "Rockmarge," a Perfect Tunnel of Shade, Formed by the Interlocking Willow Trees.

THE GARDEN COMMITTEE of the National Civic Federation has conducted a series of Garden Days every Saturday afternoon from 2 to 6 p. m. during May and June, and contemplates extending this work to some of the beautiful estates on the North Shore and Cape Cod for July and August. Among the gardens which have already been opened to the public for the benefit of the Federation have been the Longyear, Douglass, Dane, Brandegee and Anderson estates in Brookline, the Weld estate in Dedham, and the Hunnewell and Baltzell estates in Wellesley.

Mrs. Bayard Thayer is the honorary chairman of the committee and Mrs. John S. Ames, chairman. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., of Pride's Crossing, is chairman of the North Shore committee and Loring Underwood of the Cape committee. Other members are John S. Ames, Mrs. Charles Boyden, Mrs. Frederick S. Mead, Mrs. Ernest Lovering, Mrs. Frederick B. Cutler, Mrs. William S. Patten, Henry H. Richardson, Mrs. Homer B. Richardson, Henry S. Sleeper, Charles C. Walker and Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell.

The first garden to be opened on the North Shore will be that of Judge and Mrs. William H. Moore at Pride's Crossing, tomorrow—Saturday—July 10th, from 2 to 6 p. m., when an admission fee of 50 cents per person will be charged. The entrance opposite the Pride's Crossing railroad station will be used. The other gardens which have already been arranged for are as follows:

July 17, "The Chimneys," estate of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Dana Beach, Manchester, and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Smith's Point, Manchester.

July 24, "Dawson Hall," the Robert D. Evans place now occupied by Miss Hunt.

July 31, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Lacashire's gardens at Manchester.

"ROCKMARGE," the Pride's Crossing estate of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, has a rock garden that always has seemed to our amateur eyes the height of perfection. Shaded and naturally situated among the rocks on the hillside all that it was necessary to add seemed to be the water and rare flowers. The water trickling through the ledges into the lily pools looks as if it belonged there always, while the flowers seem all that they should be.

But Mrs. Moore's gardener has other notions about a rock garden. He dreams of one upon bare rocks where the sun has full sway. In that way a rock garden would be like an open mountain, and flowers liking both rocks and sun could be grown to perfection.

Very reluctantly did Mrs. Moore consent to the removal of two trees from the rockery this year. Their removal, however, gladdened the heart of the gardener, who thinks now his Alpine treasures can have a better showing. But what if they don't grow as strong as on a mountainside! Let shade, cool, rocky, flowered nooks and secluded lily pools ever be the charm of the rock garden at "Rockmarge."

Here, on Saturday afternoon (tomorrow), the gardens will be open for a small charge from 2 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. This is under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, of Pride's Crossing, has charge of the work upon the Shore.

At the various garden inspections in other places many landscape gardeners and architects avail themselves of the privilege to see these show places.

At "Rockmarge" the long and handsomely planned

A View of the Perennial Garden at "Rockmarge"

perennial garden laid out in four great sections, each centered with a lily pool; the rock garden; the sunken peach garden; the rose garden which is centered with a fountain, and the great lawns are all show features of unusual interest.

The willow walk, a perfect tunnel of shade formed by interlocking willow trees is the only one of its kind on the Shore and perhaps in the country. It is a most charming experience to walk through this tunnel of soft greenery from the terrace below the house down to the bathhouse, the way leading past the perennial garden and into the plot of shrubbery beyond.

So naturally placed are all of the gardens that very little artificial ornamentation is needed at this estate.

Grass like velvet covers the place. Trees are all trimmed high, thereby allowing all the sunshine possible to steal beneath their branches. Indeed, one of the most pleasing sights at the Moore home is the shadow pictures made by the trees on the lawns. The wide stretch of greensward below the house and running down to the water, where it is edged with shrubbery, is as interesting a part of the place as any.

All who go to Mr. and Mrs. Moore's place tomorrow will have a rare treat in gardens. Perhaps there will be some who will be interested in Judge Moore's stables, but that is another story.

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE OF

NORTH SHORE ESTATES

MR. AND MRS. S. PARKER BREMER, of Smith's Point, Manchester, had some improvements made this winter upon the little bungalow near the beach at their home. The place is now fitted out with a furnace and is in good shape for winter week-end parties.

Black and orange is the striking and pleasing note in the big living-room. The adjoining chamber is in deep blue and white, while the kitchenette is a cozy corner in white.

The massive rough stone chimney is the chief attraction in the living-room. A plain black wooden slab is used for a mantel.

Chairs in black and bronze, and narrow benches or seats extending the length of the room and also in the windows afford ample opportunity for comfortable seats. Pillows in plain black and orange and in flowered cretonne of the same colors alternate closely on the seats and are used profusely in the chairs. A tea service, candlesticks and other knick-knacks of similar shades carry out a most charming scheme. The casement windows have orange hangings.

The Bremer place is always noticeable on the Point for its ornamental stone wall covered with gay nasturtiums later in the season. A bed of foxgloves, canterbury bells and other flowers near the center of the lawn is also attractive to passersby. For two seasons the lawn facing the house was planted in potatoes. The usual vegetable gardens and more space devoted to flowers are now taking a prominent place. A new rock garden planted with the low mountain pines is a pleasing feature.

An interesting group of flowers and shrubbery is now growing near the front entrance. This was once a rocky ledge which the gardener blasted out and turned a waste spot in to a truly artistic flower bed.

Many handsome trees are scattered throughout the grounds. One old oak is especially appealing to those who like to see how scientific methods can prolong the life of such a venerable friend of man. The tree is probably 200 or more years old. Last fall a tree doctor took it in charge. The trunk and limbs, both large and small, were cleaned out ready for their filling. At this time Manchester was struck by the small hurricane which many recall. Trees on adjoining estates were blown down. The gardener stood on the lawn feeling and fearing that he would at once see the sad, but thrilling sight of the empty shell of a tree crash to the ground.

But the elements were good to it and it weathered the blast with not a scar extra. It stood to be filled with more than a ton of cement and to be chained and riveted together in a most embracing fashion. Before being filled three men could stand within the trunk.

We think of the poet's words:

"A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray."

So the old tree seems to be doing.

THEIR VARIED INTERESTS AND ACTIVITIES

I

IRA NELSON MORRIS, the United States ambassador to Sweden, chose one of the most beautiful spots on the North Shore when he selected "Eaglehead," the McMillan estate at Manchester, for the summer home of the embassy. The family is now established for the season. It includes Mrs. Morris and daughter, Miss Constance Irene Morris, a student at Wellesley, and Ira Victor Morris, a Milton academy boy.

Charmingly located in a secluded part of Manchester it is yet in the very center of all that wonderful stretch of water frontage which makes Manchester's shores so alluring. From the great living room, piazzas and glassed-in breakfast room the sea view is unsurpassed. A long vista out to the open sea lies directly in front, while to the right is the huge rocky cliff or "head" beyond which is Singing Beach, one of the Shore's most select bathing spots. To the left is Dana's island and Coolidge Point. Boats passing from Gloucester to Marblehead or Boston and those bound for Maine may be seen in the wide unobstructed sea-view afforded.

In this respect "Eaglehead" resembles the home in Stockholm occupied by the family for the past six years. Over there they live at "Oak Hill," a beautiful place built by the king's second son, Prince Wilhelm, who lived in it with his wife, a Russian princess. The Morris family occuped this from the opening of the war, when they went to Sweden. Built on a hill overlooking the town it gives a country-like atmosphere to the embassy, otherwise one of the busiest places in the city. Beautiful Italian gardens arranged in terraces on the hill are features of the place. Beneath the windows of the embassy the great battleships passed in war days, as well as all regular steamers.

Stockholm was a much-sought city during war times. The American embassy opened its doors most hospitably to Russian refugees. Very interesting people were among these escaping Russians and Mrs. Morris learned to know them very well.

Mrs. Morris was and is still a busy woman over there. During the war she carried on a large Red Cross workroom in her home. She is president of the American Red Cross society, which turned out products for all the allies. The Queen of Roumania presented Mrs. Morris with her portrait and gave her the decoration of the highest order that mania can give.

Last winter Mrs. Morris carried on the work for refugees from Poland and other inland countries. She will continue with it when she returns, for, "although the war is over," she says, "there is yet so much to be done."

The poor children of Stockholm have been much upon Mrs. Morris' heart and for these she has planned various entertainments and benefits. One noteworthy one was a fairy play translated from the Swedish into English by Mrs. Morris and given by English-speaking children in Stockholm. The two Morris children took a prominent part in the performance. As a token of regard the late Princess Margaret gave her portrait to Mrs. Morris, under which she wrote, "In remembrance of your play for the poor children of Stockholm, Xmas, 1917."

The American Women's club also takes up Mrs. Morris' attention. She conducts the monthly meetings of that organization along with her other duties.

Sports, especially winter sports, are a strong feature with the residents of Stockholm and, of course, the American colony, usually numbering many hundreds, fall in with them. Horse-back riding is enjoyed by the Morris family in the delightful country and park near their home. But in winter every one must go skiing. An unusually fascinating way is to go skiing with a horse, having long reins attached, the sportsman skimming along behind.

Ladies' hockey teams, organized by the late Princess Margaret, have been interesting features introduced into the sporting life.

The Princess Margaret, whose death occurred in May, was a special friend of Mrs. Morris. She was wife of the Crown Prince of Sweden and daughter of the Duke of Connaught, and a sister of Princess Patricia, recently married to the naval attaché, Capt. Ramsay, of the British embassy, in France.

"Eaglehead," overlooking the Ocean, at Manchester. It is here Ambassador Ira Nelson Morris, and family, are established for the summer.

Princess Margaret not only organized sports for women, but has done much along the line of gardening. She is the author of two up-to-date books on gardening, the knowledge of which she gained at first hand. No man was ever allowed to work or even spade among the flowers in her garden. So interested did she become in the work that she was instrumental in organizing circles of women, who bound themselves together to carry out her unique idea of doing their own gardening.

A great work was also done by the princess during the war. She became especially interested in prisoners. and blinded soldiers. At a bazaar given as a benefit for the blind last October in Stockholm she took cold, resulting in an operation which eventually caused her death. Mrs. Morris was associated with her in much of this work.

The Morris daughter and son have spent the past two years in school over here. Previous to that time they had private instructors and attended a French school in Stockholm.

"Eaglehead" has some interesting portraits, souvenirs of their life over there. The King of Sweden, the Crown Prince, Prince Wilhelm, and other members of the royal family are now adorning the handsomely appointed living room.

A picture of the Royal Palace is of interest. The palace was built by a French architect in the 16th century. It stands in the center of Stockholm and the various royal families occupy different wings and apartments in it.

Court life in Sweden is old and delightful and has not had any radical changes made in its procedure since the war.

Our American Ambassador to Sweden has written in a most comprehensive and interesting manner of the economic position of Sweden at the present time. From this article, which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post on May 29, 1920, we take a few excerpts.

The Economic Position of Sweden as Viewed By Ambassador Ira Nelson Morris

FOR the twelve months immediately following the armistice a veritable tidal wave of traffic from America has beaten against the Scandinavian shores, drawn by the reopening of trade routes paralyzed for five years by the war. In the commercial maelstrom there have been many wrecked enterprises, countless financial disasters and ruined interests; and now that the storm is subsiding it leaves in its wake an aftermath of bitterness and misunderstanding. It has been a year of remarkable and bewildering events to these neutral states and especially to Sweden. Her people have watched a galaxy of new republics materialize out of the surrounding peoples, all taking upon themselves modes of government new and strange to this part of the world. Five years ago the whole of Russia was under a despotic rule, and south of Sweden lay the greatest of all militaristic empires.

Gone! All lost in a sudden giant convulsion, but here in the midst of it Sweden remains almost unmoved, a constitutional monarchy with a Socialist cabinet, the first, I believe, ever formed in the world without bloodshed. The smooth running of this difficult combination is a tribute to the tact and progressiveness of King Gustaf V, who has steered his government alike between the rocks of war and the shoals of anarchy, a feat deserving great credit in days when dynasties have fallen like houses of cards.

The whole course of events in the past two centuries brings Sweden up to her present position of unusual power for such a small nation. Her close alliance with Denmark and Norway and her position in relation to other countries in Europe, and the Western continents, make her an exceedingly important factor in the period of reconstruction. I am anxious that the great body of Americans should understand these things and not come driving eastward with the idea that Sweden is frozen up for ten months of the year and that her commerce is limited to one or two months in the summer when the inhabitants dig themselves out of their snow huts.

The business men from America who have come to me in recent months have shown clear ideas of Sweden's position geographically, but they had an entirely false idea that it was merely a country of transit and that her future was in no way involved with that of the United States.

They know that a great and profitable market lies to the east, but they stop not to study the great communicating links between that market and America.

A few months ago a large Western American factory sent a representative to Christiania to inquire into the fate of a shipment of goods that had apparently been lost on this side. The instructions given this representative were merely to go over to Scandinavia, trace the missing shipment and take the next boat home. This firm had never gone in for export and it was only through the exigencies of the war that they had produced one shipment for a Scandinavian purchaser. The directors of the firm had never even considered Scandinavia as a market. Being a keen business man the firm's representative took a look about the Scandinavian countries. After he had located his missing goods he proceeded to Stockholm, and in the course of three weeks he cabled back to the Middle Western factory the largest single order the firm had ever received, and mentioned casually in his closing words that there were a score or more such orders lying about which he would be glad to investigate if they wanted him to remain on this side.

In order to understand thoroughly this market it is absolutely necessary that the foreigner should learn to appreciate the Swedish temperament and psychology. The Swede is primarily a formalist; a formal act means more to him than its intent or result, and the same politeness rules the intercourse between two taxicab drivers that would distinguish an assembly of royal chamberlains. Usage forbids any address, except to the most intimate friends, with any form of the pronoun "you," and hence all conversation is carried on in third person and filled with repetitions of the exact titles of the parties: "Will the wholesale merchant pass the salt?" "Surely, if the professor's wife wishes" is a bit of dinnertable conversation that might be exchanged in Sweden between persons who have known each other for twenty years.

This emphasis on formality must not be interpreted to mean any lack of kindliness of geniality, for the Swedish people have the soul of hospitality, and delight to entertain without stint. In fact, this excess of kindliness and sensitiveness of this race, and their ardent desire not to offend anyone by undue familiarity. They are before all a gentle people. Cruelty to animals is unknown. Furthermore, there is perhaps no country with a more complete culture better sustained and supported by its possessors. The Swedish people delight in their literature, music, art and institutions, and foster their development and preservation in every way. The peasant culture is preserved for all time in a great museum outside of Stockholm, which records with minutest accuracy every form of wood carving and weaving known to the provinces of Sweden and which in the great surrounding park preserves perfect specimens of the native architectures complete in every detail. Such a culture is possible because there is almost no admixture of foreign blood in Sweden. Hence the whole Swedish people share their great traditions and have a common interest in their preservation and growth. These facts make the race justifiably proud, and to understand this pride, defer to it and observe it sympathetically is the first essential for any visitor to Sweden.

As an American citizen I want to see the United States in the forefront of all commercial developments of the future; I want to see her take her place with her splendid new merchant marine in the affairs of the new era that is being developed out of a war-torn world; and above everything else I want our American firms that are beginning to grasp the importance of foreign trade to extend their work into new fields. As such work and hard thinking and detailed preparation come to fruition, America must stand abreast the times and with all her strength and latent ability push every effort that is being made to better human conditions and give new life to the nations that have been weakened and drained by unprecedented strife.

THE NE'ER FORGOTTEN FIELDS

By Alex. G. Tupper

THE meadow flowers pure and white, show with the bluets fair
And heroes' blood has entered red in bloom of poppies there!
We hear the spirit-voices of the Sons of Freedom slain,
Whose sacrifice for justice they would gladly give again!
We can hear them! We can hear them!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

Ah! Those who know the absence of the tender, loving voice,
Will seek the spirit-meadows, where their loved ones now rejoice—
Where each blade of grass is golden, on a harp of countless strings
And we hear the soldiers' singing with every bird that wings!
We can hear them! We can hear them!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

To us the song grows dearer, by the hour and the years,
And the tune of Victory's triumph shall refresh us from our tears!
'Tis a song of world-wide triumph, that shall never fade away!
It will live through all the seasons—in a dawn of endless day!
We can hear it! We can hear it!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

We can hear the children singing with the choir of the dead!
We can hear them! We can hear them! And for them our hearts have bled!
But we know that they are happy with the Christ Who blessed them so!
How the tyrant soul must answer! God's offender—thus we know!
We can hear it! We can hear it!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

We can hear the mothers' voices coming softly on the breeze
Like the tender May-time zephyrs that sing through the budding trees;
Breathings like unto the sunshine—that shall blow the rose to bloom
With a presence that is holy—such as Mary's at Christ's tomb!
We can feel it! We can feel it!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

We will pluck the fairest flowers from the garden of the heart,
For the brightness and the fragrance of the soul can ne'er depart;
We'll transplant them where our loved ones planted theirs for Liberty!
Where the righteous tints of glory can be seen across the sea!
We shall know them! We shall know them!
On the ne'er forgotten fields!

NAVY FESTIVAL AT BEVERLY FARMS

Rain Last Saturday Put Damper on the Event, But Society Enjoyed Affair While It Lasted

The Navy Festival staged for last Saturday was to have been the most glorious day and night before the Fourth that the North Shore had ever had, but the rain caused the evening and late afternoon sports to be postponed for a better day.

Notwithstanding the dreary outlook in the morning every booth was filled and every worker on his or her job, and right well they worked and sold their wares for the benefit of the Charlestown army and navy Y. M. C. A.

The Haven estate makes an ideal place for such an event. The large field by the roadside next to the railroad at Beverly Farms and so close to West beach, gives all that can be desired as a convenient public place. Flags and electric lights, a big white tent for the cabaret, and a place for the horse show were features added to the attractive grounds.

Alvin F. Sortwell, of Beverly Farms, was chairman of the committee in charge of the affair. Assisting him were Frederick Ayer, Mrs. Gerald A. Bramwell, Charles K. Cummings, J. R. Hooper, Jr., Mrs. Geo. von L. Meyer, W. Gordon Means, Bayard Tuckerman and Bayard Warren.

Mrs. E. Laurence White, of Beverly Farms, had charge of the notion booth, having as assistants Mrs. James H. Lancashire, Mrs. Marshal Fabyan, Mrs. Samuel Vaughan, Mrs. Caleb Loring, Mrs. Alanson L. Daniels and Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge. Many friends had sent in articles, including the Grande Maison de Blanc, and Farr Co., of Magnolia, Maloof, of Boston, Whitcomb-Carter Co., of Beverly, and others.

At the dairy booth were Mrs. Isaac R. Thomas, of "Monstone Farm," Ipswich, Mrs. William Sheafe, Mrs. Fred J. Alley, Mrs. Ben P. P. Moseley, Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., Mrs. A. M. Thomas and little daughter, Elise, Mrs. James H. Proctor, Mrs. C. P. Curtis, Jr., Mrs. George Silsbee and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart. Very attrractive and appetizing was everything at this booth, many of the things being products of the noted farm of the Thomases. Small boxes of cheese had been made for the occasion and a pure-bred Hampshire pig was also donated by Mr. Thomas. These pigs sometimes sell for amounts running up to several figures beyond the thousand mark. Mrs. Mosely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, sold shares on the pig. Mrs. A. M. Thomas took shares for the pretty canary birds, while little Elise Thomas looked after the sale of a flock of downy chickens.

Mr. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., was assisted at the candy booth by Miss Olivia Ames, Miss Elaine Denègre, Miss Sylvia Warren, Miss Mary Wood, Mrs. Russell Burrage, Mrs. Neal Rice and Mrs. John Raymond.

Mrs. Francis P. Sears did a lively business at the cake booth. Her assistants were Mrs. A. Lynde Cochran, Mrs. John Heard, Jr., Miss Camilla Lippincott. Cleveland Perkins, of Hamilton, made himself generally useful at this booth as a "sub" chairman.

The grab booth with Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, of Pride's Crossing, in charge was well patronized. Her assistants included Miss Evelyn Sturgis, Mrs. Livingston Davis, and the Misses Emily Coolidge, Betty Bartlett, Evelyn Cummings, Eleanor and Jane Noble, Susan Cabot, Joan Higginson and Margaret Cummings.

Hats from New York and Boston shops and hats made by the committee from Bendel and Tappe models were shown by Mrs. Louis Bacon, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., Mrs. Robert S. Potter, Mrs. F. J. Bradlee, Jr., Mrs. Herbert Jacques, Jr., and Mrs. Edward Carpenter.

Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge was in charge of the flower booth, one of the most beautiful on the grounds. Ward's greenhouse at Beverly Cove donated a handsome cactus. Boxes of roses came from many, noticable among which were those from Mrs. George Cabot. T. Emerson Proctor sent over flowers from Topsfield and from Orchidvale, Beverly Farms, came some of Albert C. Burrage's rare orchids. These were sold at $2 a piece. Mrs. Coolidge was assisted by Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., Miss Helen Burnham, Miss Elizabeth Beal, Miss Katherine Lane, Miss Harriett Dexter and Miss Elizabeth Zerrahn. The latter four young ladies sold baskets of flowers through the grounds going bravely around through the rain in their rain togs.

Mrs. H. P. McKean, Jr., had a booth overflowing with antiques. In here were many workers including Mrs. Gerald A. Bramwell, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Spring, Mrs. Sidney E. Hutchinson, Mrs. James Huntington, Mrs. Henry S. Grew, Mrs. Charles Inches, Mrs. George E. Warren, Mrs. Herbert Mason and Leslie Buswell. Mrs. Inches sold chances on a rare old set of dishes.

At the farm products booth Mrs. Ernest Pentacost, of Topsfield, was assisted by Mrs. Arthur C. Mason, Miss Katherine Mosely, Mrs. Russell Burrage, Mrs. Robert Reece, Miss Anna Wheatland and Mrs. C. W. Taintor.

Athletic goods were sold by John R. Post, Charles L. Barlow, Chas. C. Walker, Miss Katherine Pollard, Miss Priscilla Pollard and Miss Mary L. Post.

Herbert W. Mason, Gerald A. Bramwell, Dr. Marshal Fabyan and Howard N. Doughty dispensed refreshments at the soda fountain.

Henry G. Crosby, of West Manchester, was the general manager of the side shows, including a fish pond, roulette wheel and electric maze. Very euthusiastic young folk beguiled the crowd to risk a chance and secure a fortune with them. G. S. Weld, S. Grew and P. M. Sears were at the maze; Tom H. Howard, Gerald Caner and Gordon Abbott, Jr., at the pond; W. Dexter, S. B. Kaiser, and the Misses Fessenden, Lyman, Crosby and Abbott at the wheel.

The navy booth was of special interest to the North Shore folk. Here Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, of Smith's Point, Manchester, graciously presided over the work done by "her boys" at tthe U. S. Naval hospital in Chelsea. Mrs. Bremer is at the head of the reconstruction aid work at the hospital, the corps including five workers. Mrs. Bremer had two of the aids, Miss Mary Quill and Miss Muldoon, with her at the booth. Some of the boys were present in the afternoon to show their process of weaving. Mrs. Bremer and her assistants wore their uniforms, blue dresses with big white aprons and white caps. Miss Ruth Bremer sold chances on an exquisitely beaded bag, carefully shielded from the rain while she made her way through the grounds.

Mrs. Bremer became much interested in this work in war times and is continuing with the same enthusiastic spirit. The work now is run on a business basis. Nowhere else could you find better woven beaded belts, necklaces, chains, leather goods, basketry, knotted work, raffia products and the like than these boys are making. The work has a strong fascination for convalescent patients. Last summer Mrs. Bremer brought some of the patients to her bungalow at the Manchester home for a period of recuperation.

Stirring music was given in the morning and in the afternoon by the Navy Yard band. The U. S. warship "Delaware" came down from Boston with its squad of blue jackets. Drills were given in the forenoon, but were cut short in the afternoon by the rain.

The band, sailors, blue jackets on parade, and the enthusiasts who braved the rain were huddled under the big canvass in the afternoon to watch the horses until everything was finally called off.

The children's hacks, shown at 11 a. m., had entries from John S. Lawrence, F. Ayer, Miss Janice Liggett, Turner Hill Farm, H. W. Mason, Albert Beveridge, Miss Charlotte W. Taintor, Miss Janice Vaughan, George C. Vaughan, Jr., H. J. Coolidge, Mrs. Helen Clark Hopewell, Miss Betty Moulton, Arthur Mason, R. H. Whitman, C. F. Ayer and Dr. Lambert. The class was divided according to size, the large class being won by Minnie from the C. G. Rice farm (Turner Hill) and Checkers owned by Herbert W. Mason; medium class: Berkeley Queen, ridden by G. C. Vaughan, Jr., owner Dr. Lambert, and Golden Bantum, owner, Miss Janice Vaughan; small class: Bounce, owned by Dr. Lambert, and Punch, owned by H. J. Coolidge.

Hacks to show, manners and conformation to count, were entered by Miss Katherine S. Crosby, F. Ayer, John S. Lawrence, Mrs. Geo. Burroughs, Turner Hill Farm, Miss Alice Thorndike, Mrs. Talbot C. Chase, Norman D. Vaughan, Miss Ellen H. Taintor, Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, A. C. Burrage, Jr., Dennis Upson, Frederick Bryan and Miss Eleanora Sears. Miss Sears took first place with her Radiant and Slumberer, owned by Frederick Bryan, second.

In the jumping classes, hunters up to carrying 175 pounds were entered by N. W. Rice, Robert H. Reece, F. Ayer, John S. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, Turner Hill Farm, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., Miss Alice Thorndike, A. F. Sortwell, Hiram I. Folsom, Miss Aileen Flannery, Miss Mary Curtis, I. R. Thomas, Frederick Bryan, Dennis Upson, J. H. Proctor, Miss Sears, and Miss Olivia Ames. H. T. Folsom's Metier and Dennis Upson's Col. O'Bannon tied for first place; Jocco from Turner Hill, second; F. Ayer's Traveller, third; N. W. Rice's James E. Pepper, came in for fourth.

Walter D. Denègre was judge of the hacks and Dr. Henry L. Morse and Col. Geo. S. Patton, Jr., U. S. A., of the jumping classes.

Prizes for the horse show were contributed by Commander Nathaniel S. Ayer, Ensign Fred Ayer, Com. Richard S. Russell, Lieut. John Reece, Lieut Com. Robert W. Emmons, 2d, Lieut. John Parkinson and the championship cup for hunters was given by Richardson, Hill & Co.

More Favorable Weather Favors Navy Festival Monday—Horse Show

BRIGHT and early Monday plans were laid for continuing the Navy Festival. Booths were again stocked with their wares, although some that nearly sold out on Saturday united with others. The horse show was called, the soda fountain did a rushing business, tea and ices were served under the big tent, and the cabaret and dance went off in the evening.

A postponement necessarily makes changes. The cabaret program as given included the Harvard-Yale boat race moving pictures, a dance by Miss Helena Adamowski, Ham and Bud comedy pictures, an original dance, "Herite," and popular songs by Mrs. Bayard Warren, of Pride's Crossing. She was accompanied by Alexander Steinert, Jr. A four-round boxing bout, given by two boys from the navy closed the entertainment. Music was furnished during the supper dance by Lowe's orchestra. Bayard Warren has been the chairman of the cabaret. He has been assisted in selling tickets by Miss Elizabeth Caswell, N. W. Rice, Frederick Burnham, Jr., W. A. Parker, F. I. Amory and Wm. de Ford Beal. And all the North Shore crowd—the Hamilton set and the Shore set—were there.

During the tea hour in the afternoon the Oceanside hotel orchestra, of Magnolia, played. Creed was the caterer for the day.

The horse show on Monday started off with hunters. Entries were made by N. W. Rice, R. H. Reece, F. Ayer, J. S. Lawrence, Mrs. Geo. Burroughs, Turner Hill Farm, Miss Thorndike, Miss Liggett, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burrage, Jr., Dennis Upson, F. Bryan, I. R. Thomas, J. H. Proctor, Miss Sears and Mrs. Herbert Hughes. The winners were J. H. Proctor's Bridget, ridden by Miss Polly Proctor; Miss Sears took second place; Dennis Upson's Revello, third; fourth, Buckthorne, from Turner Hill Farm.

In the class of teams of two hunters entries were made by Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, N. W. Rice, F. Ayer, John S. Lawrence, Turner Hill Farm, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., A. F. Sortwell, Miss Liggett, F. Bryan, Dennis Upson, J. H. Proctor, F. Ayer, Miss Curtis and Miss Thorndike.

Winners included Jocco and Jake from Turner Hill Farm, first; My Pal and Traveler, owned by F. Ayer, second; Briarwood, owned by N. W. Rice, and Archer, of Turner Hill, third; Blueridge, owned by F. Ayer, and Buckthorne, by Turner Hill Farm, fourth.

The championship awards went to Col. O'Bannon, owned by Dennis Upson; Jocco, from Turner Hill Farm; Buckthorne, Turner Hill Farm; Briarwood, owned by N. W. Rice.

Among those having boxes for the horse show were the following: Miss Katherine Crosby, Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, Mrs. Conover Fitch, Alvin F. Sortwell, E. P. Gavit, Robert H. Reece, Mrs. H. L. Chalifoux, Mrs. W. C. Loring, Mrs. Franklin Haven, Miss Amy Peabody, Miss Aileen Flannery, Mrs. John W. Prentiss, Admiral Robison, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Admiral H. F. Dunn, Miss Annie T. Rice, Mrs. C. G. Rice, F. Ayer, Mrs. James H. Proctor, Thomas W. Peirce, Miss Clara Winthrop, Mrs. S. Parkman Blake, C. K. Cummings, Mrs. Charles T. Parker, Mrs. George S. Mandell, Mrs. Albert Beveridge, Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, Dennis A. Upson, Mrs. George Burroughs, Miss Alice Thorndike, Mrs. E. S. Grew, George E. Warren, Frank B. Hopewell, Oliver Ames, C. P. Dennett, Mrs. C. D. Sias, William Hooper, Mrs. George Vaughan, Mrs. W. M. Wood, Mrs. W. M. Wood, Jr., D. H. Hostetter, Jr., Mrs. Walter Seavey, Mrs. W. T. Lambert, Mrs. W. B. Thomas, Mrs. S. J. Mixter, Mrs. Chas. Stewart, Mrs. W. G. Sharp, Mrs. Herbert Hughes, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Hiram T. Folsom and Ambassador Ira Nelson Morris.

THE MAGNOLIA SHOPS

NOTES OF INTEREST

FOR the lady of the North Shore colony the task of shopping is changed into a pleasurable pastime when she strolls along Magnolia's miniature Fifth avenue, and visits its ultra smart little shops. If she does not live in Magnolia she has the added pleasure of a delightful ride along the beautiful North Shore drive. Prettily and quaintly attractive, these little shops, with their stores of beautiful accessories for the home and for the wardrobe, afford true gratification to the lover of beautiful and correct attire.

We have at least one definite object in view when starting on this week's shopping tour. We must see the adorably attractive woolen capes in Bonwit Teller's which are causing so much favorable comment from the North Shore patrons.

The capes are of soft lamb's wool, striped or plain, and in various colors. The one on display is of white with a wide gray stripe, and soft adjustable collar. There is another with a wide navy stripe, and navy collar, and both the collar and the bottom are trimmed with a woolen fringe. These capes are warm without being heavy and "draggy"—indeed they are surprisingly light in weight. They are lined throughout with white crepe de chene, so that they will always hang properly and will not pull out of shape. Graceful and softly becoming, there is an air of simple elegance about these pretty capes that is irresistible. A similar cape, but one which has a hood shaped collar has completely won the heart of the young débutante.

Why, just think of it, the felt hats are "out" already! Who could help but succumb to the charm of these smart creations? Our attention is drawn to a semi-fall hat, which is a soft blue grey in color. It is rather large with a silver crown, a dear little twinkley silver bow on the side, and a tiny touch of silver around the edge. There is also a black sport hat, with a jaunty little tassel on the side. It is embroidered with large white brush wool dots, and is smart and appropriate for automobile wear—especially if one is at the wheel.

A unique idea for a window display, and one which was much admired last Saturday, was the red, white and blue effect at Thayer McNeil's. Morocco bound sport shoes formed the foundation. There were shoes of white bound in red, white with blue and all white, while hosiery in blue, white and red colors also aided in carrying out the color scheme. Perhaps we are betraying a secret when we add that the idea was a woman's, though it was carried out by a man, and, of course, the man gets the credit, as usual. However, let the credit rest where it may, the idea was a happy one.

Upon entering Thayer McNeil's one is immediately impressed with the attractiveness of the tasteful decorations. There is a general tone of soft blues and greys, with just a touch of rose, and the tout ensemble shows the careful discrimination exercised in their selection. That the same care is used in selecting their shoes is proven by the smartly distinctive styles on display. The morocco bound sport shoes mentioned above are attracting the admiring attention of the patrons. They are of white buck skin and are trimmed with various colors of morocco.

For evening wear there are the dainty new slippers, chief among which are the brocaded silver slipper, much in demand this season. Smart afternoon shoes are also found here, as well as many styles in sport shoes.

We might mention, en passant, their shoe cleaning department. Shoes can be left for cleaning, or they will be sent for and delivered. The work is done by a man who has been connected with this department of their Boston store for some fifteen years.

At Lemaud's attractive little hat shop, we find hats smart and unusual, and for all occasions on display. Here, too, the matron, as well as the younger woman, can find a hat that is "different." This pretty little shop is divided into rooms or departments, for various articles. There are charming little novelties, toys for the children and yarns in the popular shades for sweaters. The walking doll, new this season, is winning the heart of the little miss, as is the talking doll, who says "mamma" quite prettily. But the boy, and the girl, too, will be forever won by the new "band wagon." Wooden men with various instruments are perched atop the wagon, which, when wound, can be made to move along on its wheels, or stand still at will, while music issues from this unusual little toy.

We also find a delightful surprise awaiting us. Real maple sugar fudge, deliciously fresh and directly from Vermont. Just as we had despaired of finding the real thing, lo! it appears before us, as it were.

In addition to their Lynn store, Lemaud's will open a new Boston store next fall, at 367 Boylston street, for gowns, hats and novelties. The Lemaud shop specializes in hats and gowns for matrons, and is well known along the North Shore.

At Hodgson, Kennard & Co.'s we are enraptured by a pair of oriental pearl ear-drops of remarkable sheen, which would delight any lover of pearls. There is also an unusual little watch for men, of an extremely thin model, with square-cut sapphires set around the edge, and a platinum chain with the knife to match, which is exquisitely beautiful as well as practical. In every showcase we see diamonds and pearls galore, each seemingly more beautiful than the last. The store itself is spacious and charmingly inviting.

When choosing an unusual gift or something "different" in pottery or glassware for the home, the North Shore colony invariably turns to Ovington's, and it is here that we shall next direct our footsteps. This year they are carrying an even more extensive line of the rare and beautiful French and Italian potteries, which are ever a delight to their visitors, and these, as well as the flower bowls of all descriptions in various colors of glass, the china birds and Dresden figures, impart a uniquely attractive appearance to the shop.

The leather purses, card cases, cigarette and cigar holders in fine amber, of which there is a large and well-chosen display, make handsome and appropriate gifts for men.

At Jonas', that delightful little shop of hats and sport apparel, we find quantities of those wide hats so much worn this season, and so adorably becoming. Pretty, "dressy" hats, as well as the semi-sport hats are on display, many of the latter in white silk crush models which have the added advantage of fitting down over the hair without disarranging it, as well as looking smart and girlish.

Their sport apparel, too, is attracting the admiring attention of the shoppers, for they seem to have a distinctly new note in jerseys. There is a semi-sport costume which the North Shore patrons are receiving with enthusiasm. It is of crocheted front, and comes with or without sleeves.

Though this is the first season in Magnolia for this pretty little shop (of New York), yet it has already made many friends in the North Shore colony.

At E. T. Slattery's we find dainty little afternoon frocks in dotted Swiss muslin, and crisp organdie, cool and alluringly simple, and quantities of the little tub dresses so essential for morning wear. Pretty sweaters in various colors and designs, which are new and very smart, are also attracting the admiration of the shopper.

Slattery's are well-known in Boston and on the North Shore, and their dainty dresses and beautiful evening gowns have always met with the gratified approval of their North Shore friends. The shop is directly across from the Ocean-side hotel and is delightfully cool and inviting.

In searching for toilet accessories we find that there is a full line of Madame Rubenstein's goods as well as those of Elizabeth Arden and Marie Earle.

Leaving Lexington ave. and wandering down toward the North Shore swimming pool, a sign which reads "Mrs. Bill's Shop," brings memories of other seasons, and the pleasant hours spent in this delightful little shop. We walk along the long drive to the house, then around the broad and cozily furnished piazza to the door; but with our hand on the bell we pause, for here is a bit of Magnolia beauty. The piazza looks out over a wide expanse of clear-blue water, picturesquely dotted with sailing craft and yachts, to where the sky dips her mist-veiled edges into the ocean.

Opening the door, we are immediately plunged into the Orient. It would seem almost as if in some mysterious way, we had been transported down through the earth, and landed in China. Facing the door is a rare and beautiful teakwood day bed, heavily carved. One can picture an exquisitely garbed Chinese prince seated among silken cushions on this bed. An odor of perfumed incense permeates the atmosphere and he is smoking his pipe, his countenance expressing immobile calmness. His coat is there in reality —a seventeenth century tapestry coat, which belonged to an imperial prince of first rank.

Suddenly the prince rises and, walking to the shrine, which is on the left of the bed, reverently burns papers to the spirit of his ancestors. While he is thus engaged we snatch the opportunity of examining the shrine, which was taken from a Chinese temple, and is of beautifully moulded pottery in dainty blue and yellow and white colors. At the top is seated in mystic, awe-inspiring dignity the little god to whom the prince pays homage. In the same room is a magnificently beautiful screen, illustrating on one side old Chinese stories and legends and on the other snatches of their ever-delightful poetry.

Another little room reveals a set of red lacquer furniture, wonderfully carved. There are four chairs and a long narrow table—charmingly appropriate for a hall.

Over one of the doors is hung a sign in gold characters, which, of course, we cannot read; but, our curiosity piqued, we inquire of Mrs. Bill what it means, and she laughingly informs us that it reads "A shop-full of customers looks good."

We find that there are charming little surprises tucked away in unexpected corners, for the entire first floor of the cottage is furnished in real Chinese fashion.

One of these surprises is a ceremonial tea kettle over two hundred years old. This kettle is called "Furo," and is used only by the members of the royal family, or those immensely wealthy. The "Shikirin" is a kind of little stove used by the Chinese. It is square, yellow in color and could be put to practical use for making a fire out of doors or on the porch, and it is really quite attractive.

A great many more things equally as interesting are found in this unique little shop, and we shall pay another visit there very soon.

"TWO WOMEN"

By Helen Christene Hoerle

THE sun was perilously near disappearing in the west when Hudson Emerson stopped his long gray roadster before the portico of the Red Swan Inn. It was the fashionable tea hour, so the verandas were crowded with pretty, laughing women in filmy summer frocks or correct motor attire, and men, broad-shouldered, and sun-browned, in loose, comfortable, unconventional white flannels.

From the big entrance hall came the raggy strains of the jazz band, the Red Swan's latest acquisition in a bid for popularity over the many other inns along the shore. The uniformed attendant sprang forward to open the door of the low car and assisted Helen Hale to alight. Emerson descended quickly, his eyes beaming tenderly at the lithe young figure as he followed Miss Hale, who was carefully winding her way among the tiny tea tables, huddled tightly together.

Rather tall, her beautifully proportioned figure swaying like a young sapling tossed by the breeze, Helen Hale was a decidedly attractive figure. Her long white wrap blew open, revealing a simple frock of dainty blue. A close-fitting white hat was held firmly in place by a long blue veil, almost completely hiding her shiny brown curls. It was small wonder, indeed, that many eyes followed her. Hudson Emerson's heart beat with pardonable pride, as he noted the admiring glances cast in her direction. She had promised herself to him, the big white diamond on her finger was his gift, and in the winter she would be irrevocably his.

Miss Hale's eyes wandered curiously over the crowd in search of some familiar face. Suddenly she hesitated, the color rushing to her face. Then she deliberately stopped at one of the tiny tables, occupied by a man and a woman.

The man was dark, hair, skin and eyes blending into an indefinite brown. His was a refined face, aged beyond his years with fine lines of worry. The woman was a vivacious blonde, the type which smiles sweetly and constantly in public, but pouts and whines just as constantly in private. She was hardly a woman one would imagine this man would care for.

"Why, John," Miss Hale's low musical tones gave no intimation of the havoc in her heart, "this is a surprise."

The color receded from the man's face, then returned —staining it a brilliant red from the edge of his collar to the roots of his hair. For a fraction of a second his eyes sought the woman's, and then making a visible effort, he rose, mechanically clasping her out-stretched hand.

"Helen,—Miss Hale," he stammered nervously, "are you stopping here in town?"

"We have a cottage," she smiled unconsciously, at his too evident nervousness. "It is more quiet than at a hotel, and I can work better all summer." Then turning to her escort, "Hudson, I want you to meet Mr. Russell—Mr. Emerson."

The men shook hands perfunctorily.

"My wife," John Russell swallowed,—"May, this is Miss Hale and Mr. Emerson."

The little blonde eyed Miss Hale suspiciously, bowing in a manner she evidently considered haughty. Helen smiled imperturbably at her.

"Just week-ending?" she asked pleasantly.

Mrs. Russell nodded with pride. "Yes, we are at 'The Beachwood.' Jack has just bought a plane."

"Really?" Miss Hale's eyes widened. "Your latest acquisition is a plane, your wife tells me, John," turning to the men, who stood talking.

"Yes, this is our first try." John Russell was very plainly ill at ease.

The head-waiter hovered anxiously in the background.

"Come, dear, we are keeping the Russells from their tea," Mr. Emerson interrupted quietly. "Perhaps we will see you at the hotel tonight?"

"Learned to dance yet?" Miss Hale asked with laughing eyes as she prepared to follow her fiancé.

"No, he hasn't, that is, not very well," Mrs. Russell answered for him, wondering the while who this woman was who knew John so very well. She wasn't much to look at, anyway, she comforted herself.

Miss Hale laughed softly, "Poor man, I'm afraid he is hopeless in regard to dancing. Auntie is over at the hotel this afternoon playing bridge. Most probably you'll see her when you get back," watching Mrs. Russell's widened eyes at the intimacy with which she addressed her husband. "See you tonight," and nodding brightly she left them.

An unusual lassitude seemed to overpower her as she seated herself at the little green and white table, sinking her head wearily between her hands, her blue eyes staring vacantly into space. Hudson Emerson watched her with worried eyes.

"Anything wrong, dear?" he asked. "Who's the chap with the doll-baby wife?"

She raised her eyes, meeting his for a minute, and then permitting them to wander beyond to where John Russell and his wife were entering a luxurious, obviously new and inordinately expensive touring car. The woman fluttered and fussed, endeavoring to attract attention to herself and the car by her actions. Her efforts were so obvious as to be laughable. Her husband looked pained and worried.

"Looks like her, doesn't it?" she asked abruptly.

"What?" Hudson turned from giving their order to the waiter.

"Their car," she shook herself as if to shake off the oppression weighing her down.

"Who is he? I never heard you speak of a John Russell," her fiancé questioned.

Helen Hale smiled mysteriously. "A girl doesn't usually like to talk of a man, who has, in plain language, jilted her."

Mr. Emerson's jaw sagged perceptibly. Conversa-

A New Department Devoted to the Younger Members of the Breeze Family

Conducted by Lillian McCann

RALPH HENRY BARBOUR, known to all you boys and girls, is busily engaged at his Manchester home in writing a Pilgrim story for the American Boy.

Pilgrims are popular themes just now with editors; so the editor of the American Boy magazine ordered a Pilgrim story. It must be full of "pep," have a story interest that will appeal to boys and yet be true to history. Mr. Barbour is finding it rather a difficult job. With all of the available matter on the Pilgrims at hand he doubts very much whether the boy of that day did possess the pep the modern boy has. He says every time he makes his hero do something in his story he quickly examines Pilgrim records to see if he is conforming in spirit to those sedate times.

Mr. Barbour lives at "Journey's End," on Pine st., Manchester. There, in the midst of 11 acres of ground, his house stands on a high elevation. A dense growth of pines, hemlocks, oaks and beach surrounds him. The books and stories you like so well are written up in his study on the third floor, a small room having a window looking out on the tree tops and also a skylight. Mr. Barbour says he can write best with nothing to rest his eyes upon but sky or tree tops.

A few of his books have been written in collaboration with his friend, H. P. Holt, an English writer of short stories. Mr. Holt is now in England.

Before calling upon Mr. Barbour we looked over his books in the Manchester and Beverly libraries. Over thirty volumes are found in each place. In Beverly in the children's department they told us that scarcely a day passes without some of the books circulating.

In "Who's Who" we found that Mr. Barbour was born in Cambridge in 1870. He told us he drifted into story-writing from his newspaper work carried on in Boston, Philadelphia, Denver and Chicago. While in Denver he met his future wife. Mrs. Barbour was born in Pennsylvania and went to Denver when a little girl. Her father was a civil engineer, who built the Rio Grande railroad.

We asked Mr. Barbour if he liked boys. He said he did, but that he liked to select his boys. He doubts whether he could ever be a scoutmaster, for the individual boy appeals to him more than boys in great numbers. Boys and girls from all over the country, who have been charmed with his books or magazine stories, have often written to him asking if there were really such schools as he pictures, expressing their wish to attend such a school if he would send them the address.

His pen name, under which some stories appear, is Richard Stillman Powell.

Samples of letters received by Mr. Barbour from his young readers:

"I am a boy fifteen years old. I am attending high school in ——. I work in a store when not in school.

"I have written to you to show my gratitude toward your college books which I have enjoyed very much. I go to the library in town twice and sometimes three times a week to find out if they have any of your new college books.

"I am working hard am going to try to go through college. I hope you will send me a letter telling me of the new books you have written.

"P. S. I secured your address from the librarian."

A girl wrote the following:

"My sister Evelyn and I have enjoyed your books so much that I thought I would write and tell you. We have read "Four-a-Foot," "The Half-Back," "New Boy at Hilltop," "The Crimson Sweater," and we are reading "Tom, Dick and Harriet" in the "St. Nicholas." We like "Tom, Dick and Harriet" best. Harry reminds me of my sister Evelyn. She has red hair, a temper and is just fourteen. I am a year older. We are reading "The Crimson Sweater" to our little brother and he is very much interested in the games. We think Roy is fine and is he a real boy? We hope you will keep on writing the story until Roy and Harry fall in love with each other.

"In summer time we live on ——— Island, New York, and this year we went to see the Yale-Harvard boat race. In winter we live in Pennsylvania (near Lehigh university) and we often go to football and baseball games.

"Hoping you will write many more stories, I am your constant reader."

SOME young folk who are going camping told us they had a scheme of keeping a memorandum of the books read while in camp.

They jot down the title, author and kind of story; where and when it took place; the chief characters, designating the favorite ones; and sketch of plot, also stating whether the book was enjoyed or not, and why. Any specially interesting word pictures or scenes are noted, also.

In this way two or three pages in an ordinary note book will contain valuable material to freshen the mind with in going over the summer's reading.

Suppose you write the BREEZE about some of the interesting books you read or some of the experiences at camp this summer.

Misses Helen and Elizabeth Richardson, of Magnolia, are enjoying camp life in N. H.

Miss Almira S. Foster, of Coolidge Point, Manchester, is at Kuwiyan camp, N. H.

EDITORIAL

THE DEMOCRATS, in arranging the planks of their platform for the campaign this year, were at an advantage in having the platform of the Republican party with which to compare their own efforts and to plan an attack. The advantage was not lost in their committee room. The platform of the Republican party presented them the material for a working program and the result is that the present Democratic program lacks originality, constructive character and independence of thought. If one excludes the minor planks, which come at the end of the platform, the main body of the paper takes three lines of development:—First and primarily, an arraignment of the Republican party for their political shortcomings and obstruction policies in Congress; second, a defence of everything Democratic, which, of course, includes "Wilsonianism," and finally, a defence of the League of Nations as presented by the Democrats.

Around these three principles of action the platform is written. The defense of the Democratic management of domestic and foreign affairs is as strong as the inefficient management of national affairs would warrant. The skillful politicians marshaled such material as they had to work, with skill and acumen. The attacks on the Republicans and the defence of the party policy were expected.

The real weakness of the platform, however, is the pronounced efforts made to placate the varied elements in their constituency and to rally a support by petty village politics. The hooks thrown out for the Irish and agricultural vote are not even adroitly hidden. The defence of the conduct of the party in power is an admirable example of "stand pat" conservatism. The wet planks and the dry planks did not appear. The issue of Prohibition is dead and is not a matter for discussion. The two great parties accept the decision of the past, and the elimination of the question will break the ranks of neither organization. The Irish plank, so-called, was a colorless support of every effort which could be made to give justice and liberty to the Irish people. It did not satisfy the demands of the Irish sentiment that has been at work for a "republic." The plank will harm the Democratic influence with that element in their organization. It would have been better to have eliminated the plank entirely. The radical Irish policy was "dismissed with faint praise." The Wilsonian tactic of trying to raise the League of Nations to a place of major importance was seized, yet the arguments brought forward are the stereotyped appeals which have been heard for months. The humorous thrust was the plank for a change in the rules of the Senate. After the years of power that the party has enjoyed, such a search for greater opportunity for the exercise of autocratic power was not unexpected.

The missing feature of the platform was reference to the tariff question which for so many years afforded both parties a "campaign cause." The effort to explain away the party's responsibilities relative to the H. C. of L. are naive and unconvincing. There are economic laws at work which have added to the high prices, and there have been profiteers; but can the party in power dismiss their responsibilities by a party plank? In short, the platform, while a success as a political assault upon the Republican party, fails entirely in its purpose of stating the party and political policies of the organization.

The Democratic party is a respectable and powerful element in our national life and it is regrettable that it did not rise to the situation and issue a platform more creditable to the record and political influence of the organization. In truth the organization wages a losing battle, but that should have been the signal for the strengthening of the lines by the formulation of a strong, positive platform.

THE NORTH SHORE was never more beautiful, and the present indications are that the season will surpass any that the Shore has ever enjoyed. Visitors from all over the land are here. The automobile number plates indicate registrations from Florida and California, Maine and Texas. The Shore is the mecca of summer tourists. The hotels are unable to accommodate all their guests, and registrations are being made for the entire season. The cottage sections are also feeling the increased summer population. The number of cottages that are available for rent now is small. While there are some who are attracted by the opportunities for travel in Europe, more prefer the comforts of the cool North Shore to the questionable pleasure of seeing the devastation and ruin caused by the war. It is much better, far better, to send funds to the stricken fields of the old world. A travel trip overseas that becomes an errand of mercy to aid the distressed and the sorrowing, becomes a Samaritan's mission; but an idle trip to find recreation in viewing the fields of battle, the destruction of war, cannot appeal. The answer is found in the activities of people. The vacation places are attracting those who in prewar years have enjoyed the instruction and pleasure of European travel, but who can see the profit or pleasure of such visits now? The result has been inevitable and the North Shore is enjoying an unprecedented summer; the number of people going to Europe from the North Shore is unusually small.

PLEASANTLY SITUATED on Bass River, in Beverly, on our North Shore, there is a wonderful institution doing welfare work for the deaf mutes of New England. It is an educational institution where children are too deaf to develop in the ordinary schools. It is not a hospital, but a training school. Children must be well to attend and be endowed with capabilities for development. Its chosen field of labor is for the handicapped intelligent children who cannot receive the training in ordinary schools. The success which has attended the work of the faculty of the New England Industrial school for Deaf Mutes has been surprising. Pupils are admitted at six years of age and "if they continue to make progress they may remain for a period of ten years." The North Shore is justly proud of the success which has attended the work of this organization. It has an efficient board of directors, with Dudley L. Pickman, of Beverly, serving as the president; Benjamin A. Patch, of Beverly, treasurer. There is an auxiliary organization which aids the work of the school. This year they are to hold a Rummage Sale at 7 Washington st., Beverly, on Saturday, July 10, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. The friends of the school may help by attending the sale and by sending clothing for the sale. Mrs. Samuel Vaughan, of Beverly Farms, Mrs. Bayard Warren, of Pride's Crossing, and Mrs. C. B. Burnham, of Beverly, are serving as a committee for this work. The institution should have the loyal support of everyone. In common with all other organizations it has felt the increased costs for running expenses.

The North Shore has Many attractive and pleasant houses of worship with clergymen of all denominations working for the good of the communities wherein they dwell. The past year has been a most difficult one for all of the church organizations, "of whatever sign or creed." The inclement winter weather made travel conditions difficult and the maintenance of church work hard. The expenses of the building committees have been unusually heavy because of the repair expenses caused by the unusual winter. The summer time, however, has come and in every village the services of worship are being maintained by the people who live on the North Shore throughout the year and by those who spend only the summer here. The population of the North Shore is not large enough during the year to maintain the North Shore churches. The character of the district as a shore resort has prohibited the introduction of manufactures and the consequent increases in population. If the North Shore had become a manufacturing district there would be a large permanent population to maintain all of the congregations. The attractive beaches and beautiful woodlands have made the North Shore a garden. To it people from all parts of the land have come for a brief season. The changes in the population resulting from the transformation of the shore has threatened the very existence of most of the churches. Those that do prosper have been able to master the situation because of the fortunate aid of summer people. The churches exist for the community and not the community for the church. Yet if the church is to be maintained the community must maintain it.

The old, historic churches on the North Shore have had difficult times during the period of the war and a crisis has been inevitable. Such a crisis has come this year to every ecclesiastical organization on the Shore that finds it necessary to pay more for ordinary and extraordinary expenses. Many of the churches have heroically met the crisis by additions to the salaries of the church workers. In no case, however, has there been an increase in salary to any minister that has been commensurate with the increased costs of living. If the churches of the North Shore are to maintain their work, it must be through the generous and willing aid of the people who enjoy the delightful summers here.

Nothing is more distressing and condemnable than a run-down, dilapidated church building in a community. In these days repairs mean money. The changes in population has thrown the responsibilities upon a smaller number of people within the church organizations. In one North Shore community that has been transformed by summer residents purchasing farms and establishing estates, two churches have actually combined to call a minister who teaches school five days a week to meet expenses. Fortunately the value of the church is recognized more and more by summer residents. The stabilizing influence and power of the churches cannot be allowed to wane. Consequently, each year the churches are beginning to feel the help which comes from the personal attendance of summer residents and from their financial support. This is as it should be. Every North Shore church finance committee should have funds enough to maintain the work to be done honorably. It cannot be done and in justice it should not be done by the permanent populations alone. The permanent and the summer populations should unite in maintaining the churches of the Shore.

The Strawberry Season has been delayed, but the berries are unusually good. The successful small fruit farms of Montserrat and Essex produce strawberries that are unrivaled in New England and have earned for them a just reputation for flavor and size.

All Roads now lead to the North Shore.

There are Economic Changes in the industrial and mercantile world which cannot be overlooked. The closing of mills and factories in many places, some for a definite period and others indefinitely, indicate this. It is unwise to generalize too quickly from the meagre facts which are available for discussion. The American people are apt to jump to conclusions that conditions do not warrant. A few mills may close their work for many months and not indicate a general disturbance in the land. When, however, these changes follow an unprecedented period of prosperity and inflation of values both of labor and the product of the skill of the managers and the laborers, there is reason for thoughtful attention. There are no reasons, however, for morbid prophecies. For the present, economic retrenchments may mean the salvation of the industries affected. There are many factors involved in the problem and it is too early to determine how much importance is to be placed upon the overpaid help or upon the overstocked market. The coal situation, undoubtedly, is a factor that must not be disregarded. The market places may have an abundant supply of materials for sale and the people be under-supplied with the very materials of which there is a surplus on the market. The high prices have put a check upon purchases and have inspired economies that have at last made their inevitable impression upon the market. The manufacturers of shoes are discovering that the dealers are returning their shoes to them because there is no sale. The people are refraining from making purchases. Economies have been enforced by high prices and it is being discovered that large profits taken infrequently do not stabilize business so successfully as small profits taken often. It would appear that consumers have been on an economy "strike" for several years and that finally the protests are being felt in the marts of trade.

The North Shore has well deserved the attention which it has been receiving from vacationists and attendants at conventions and anniversaries. The Garden club, the Harvard classes and more recently the attendants at the Congregational convention have spent hours of pleasure in visiting places on the North Shore and in motoring over the roads that skirt the beautiful shore and through picturesque woods.

The Danger of the Republican party in this campaign is over-confidence. The plight which the Democratic party is in will stimulate their leaders to make a stand that will surprise the Republicans if they do not watch out. The influence and power of the party which is "in" cannot be underestimated. A laissez faire policy in the campaign will afford the opposing forces an opportunity to rally their voters and perhaps win out. The Republican party has an advantage this year in being united in the support of a capable man. It is one of the best signs of the times that the progressive element within the party, despite the defeat of their nominee, is supporting the organization. The Democratic organization is also united. There is no division wthin the ranks and the two parties will meet for a battle of ballots. To be successful it will be necessary for the Republicans to begin and maintain a progressive, educational and positive program. The American people are thoughtful and forward-looking. A negative policy of attacking the party in power will not suffice. The American voter has passed through a world war that has made him think. He will not sit idly by and permit any type of man to rise to power. He realizes that the form of government that does the work of society is important and that the men who exercise the functions of a free land must be of a high character and strong personal power. If the Republicans will meet the situation nothing can cause their defeat. If they fail the Democrats may again ride to power through the failure of the Republican party to grasp an easy victory. Let the policies of the Republican party be the just successors of the policies of the party of Lincoln and Roosevelt—virile, positive and progressive—and success is assured.

THIS IS A REPUBLICAN YEAR. Every sign of the times indicates the purpose of the voters to make a change in the personnel of the office-holders of the nation and in the policies which shall be maintained. The failures of the Democrats in European matters as well as in domestic affairs have been responsible for the state of mind which exists. The efforts made to throw the responsibilities upon the Republicans because of their greater power due to the elections two years ago are futile. It is needless to eliminate all responsibility for the present conditions. It is folly also to dismiss all charges of blame which are laid to the political manoeuvres of the Republicans. No one questions the responsibilities of certain elements in Congress. The American people holds the controlling party responsible for the conditions as they now exist; they are not satisfied with conditions as they are. The result will be a registration of disapproval at the polls and a displacement of the present organization in control. The failure of the Democratic party is apparent. Never has any political organization had a greater opportunity in modern times to rally to its support the voters of the land. Wilson has had a position that would have made him the idol of the people. He has been able, conscientious and determined, but withal he comes out of the war without the approval and support of the voters. The failure of President Wilson symbolizes the failure of the entire party policy. Wilson and the Democrats have had their golden opportunity and have lost. The war and war conditions presented an opportunity that will never come again and it is one of the political surprises of the century that with such a signal opportunity a great organization should have failed.

THE RESTRICTED SALE of fireworks and the increased costs conspired to make the Fourth of July a safe and sane holiday.

HAPPINESS IS THE gentle art of mastering one's self, one's circumstances and one's opportunities. He who seeks happiness as an end never gains it. It eludes him. He goes in quest of a pot of gold beneath the rainbow arch of desire. But he who loses himself in a cheerful mastery of himself, his circumstances and his opportunity will learn the art of winning the companionship of this winsome spirit of the inner life.

What We Spend Every Year for Luxuries

People of the United States spend $8,710,000,000 for luxuries annually, according to Miss Edith Strausse, head of the Women's Activities of the Department of Justice campaign against high living costs. She classes in her luxury list such articles as motor cars, pianos, carpets and "luxurious clothing," in addition to tobacco, candy and drinks.

Tobacco leads the list of luxuries Miss Strausse has prepared, and on it the people spend $2,110,000,000 each year. Cigarettes bring $800,000,000, snuff and loose tobacco a like sum, and cigars $510,000,000.

The Measure of a True Gentleman

The man that's clean inside and outside; who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor; who can lose without squealing and win without bragging; is considerate of women, children and other people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat and too sensible to loaf; and who takes his share of the world's goods and lets other people have theirs, has the characteristics of a true gentleman.—The Doherty News.

"TWO WOMEN"

tion lagged as the waiter served their tea. Helen engaged to another man! She had loved someone before him, had been held in another's arms, perhaps been kissed by him. Hudson Emerson shuddered. And to think the man had married a woman of the type Mrs. Russell evidently was. After knowing Helen Hale it seemed incredible.

"I never told you about it," Miss Hale began slowly, when finally the waiter withdrew, "because it seemed so unnecessary. It is all over. I had almost forgotten John, till I met him here today."

"But to marry her after knowing you!" her fiancé gasped incredulously.

Miss Hale smiled indulgently. "It is a shock isn't it, to see who is preferred to you. You see, dear, the difference is he thought he loved me and I thought I cared for him. We know we love each other. It is lucky he found out before it was too late."

"It happened this way," she continued, in reply to his unspoken question. "I had known John Russell for years, till suddenly we discovered we had mutual interests. He understood painting, though he didn't know how to wield a brush, so we were kindred spirits. Our interests led to greater intimacy and then it seemed so natural to drift into an engagement."

Carefully, she broke a piece of toast, bit into it with her pearly teeth, and sipped the steaming tea before continuing.

"Yes," the man prompted, leaning forward.

Helen Hale frowned. "It isn't pleasant to drag a skeleton out of a closet after two years, though I don't care any more. Meeting him here today made me realize that even more than before. Fortunatly we never announced our engagement. He called one evening, as usual, and I never saw him again till today. He married her the next week, I believe."

"The cur," her fiancé almost hissed through his teeth.

"We ought to thank him, Hudson," Helen reproved gently, covering the knotted fist with her soft, cool hand. "Just think how miserable we should have been, and then you and I—she hesitated shyly, "it was for the best, dear."

She finished her tea, and arranged her veil, as she went out. "It was a blow, though, I admit, to meet the lady and see what he preferred to me."

"But you loved him," he groaned, his anguished eyes meeting hers, and pleading for a denial.

"I thought I cared for him," she corrected, "I know now I didn't."

He pressed her hand surreptitiously under the table. "I love you, dear," he whispered, "I'm sure of that."

She smiled wistfully, "I'm sure of that. Come, let us go, dear, or I'll never have time to dress for dinner."

They threaded their way to the entrance and climbed into the low machine. Under cover of the fast-falling darkness, as they sped along the almost deserted road, their lips met for a second.

"My own dear," the man murmured, "tell me again you love me."

"I love you," she responded, her eyes telling the man the truth of what he wanted to know even more than her lips. Then Hudson Emerson was perfectly happy and contented.

Mrs. John Russell stood before the cheval glass in their expensive suite at the "Beachwood," admiring her green satin clad figure for the last time before removing her gown for the night.

"Who was she, that plain-looking Miss Hale we met at the Inn this afternoon?" she inquired suddenly, thinking to catch her husband unawares.

"I don't consider her plain-looking," Mr. Russell retorted with more asperity than was his wont. "I've known Helen Hale for years."

"You seem to know her and her family very well," Mrs. Russell accused jealously.

"I did," her husband smiled sadly into the darkness of the night, "ever since she was a little kid in pigtails and short skirts."

Something in his tones caught his wife's over-attentive ear, and sunk to the very depths of her shallow soul, fanning to life all the petty jealously of her nature.

"She seems to think she's some swell," she sneered, then suspiciously added, "were you ever in love with her?"

The darkness of the night hid her husband's face from her view, fortunately for the man, perhaps.

"I thought I loved her once," he replied, reluctantly, and then breathed so softly that not even the passing breeze caught the whispered words, "I know now that I did."

TAKE DRUDGERY OUT OF YOUR OCCUPATION

Regard It Not Merely as Means of Making a Living, but as Means of Making a Life

Respect it.
Take pleasure in it.
Don't feel above it.
Put your heart in it.
See the poetry in it.
Work with a purpose.
Do it with your might.
Go to the bottom of it.
Do one thing at a time.
Be larger than your task.
Prepare for it thoroughly.

Do it cheerfully, even if it is not congenial.

Do it in the spirit of an artist, not an artisan.

Make it a stepping stone to something higher.

Endeavor to do it better than it has ever been done before.

Do not try to do it with a part of yourself—the weaker part—be all there.

Keep yourself in condition to do it as well as it can be done.

Believe in its worth and dignity, no matter how humble it may be.

Accept the disagreeable part of it as cheerfully as the agreeable.

Choose the vocation for which nature has fitted you.

See how much you can put into it instead of how much you can take out of it.

Remember that it is only through your work that you can grow to your full height.

Train the eye, the ear, the hands, the mind—all the faculties—in the faithful doing of it.

Remember that work well done is the highest testimonial of character you can receive.

Use it as a tool to develop the strong points of your character and to eliminate the weak ones.

Remember that every vocation has some advantages and disadvantages not found in any other.

Regard it as a sacred task given you to make you a better citizen and to help the world along.

Remember that every neglected or poorly done piece of work stamps itself ineffaceably on your character.

Write it indelibly in your heart that it is better to be a successful cobbler than a botched physician or a briefless barrister.

Refuse to be discouraged if the standard you have reached does not satisfy you; that is a proof that you are an artist, not an artisan.

Educate yourself in other directions than the line of your work so that you will be a broader, more liberal, more intelligent worker.

Regard it not merely as a means of making a living, but first of all as a means of making a life—a larger, nobler specimen of manhood.—O. S. M. in The New Success.

SHORTER SHORT STORIES TO FIT PRINT PAPER SHORTAGE

Owing to the shortage of paper editors of magazines are advised to make their short stories shorter. They will be the easier read and the better understood. Examples follow:

She realized his value when dead. He was heavily insured.

A man gave his wife plenty of rope. She skipped with it.

A farmer ceased grumbling. Please omit flowers.—New York Evening Post.

FILL THE SAILS INSTEAD OF THE TANK

Gasoline has passed the thirty-cent mark and still ascends; new engines and even repairs to the old are out of sight; power boats must carry license, bell, whistle, horn, thermometer, pedigree, naturalization papers, maps, passports, lamps, chronicle, binnacle, monocle and what not. There is only one way out, and that leads us back to the happy days under canvas—the silent, swift, sunny days, with wet clothes plastered to your body by the windward spray and your arms one grand ache from the pull of the tiller; when flocks of little cotton clouds come herding out of the west, yet never hide the sun; when life and joy are too glorious, too abounding, for one heart's keeping.

Goodness knows what people would think to hear you shouting to yourself all alone out there, but who cares? And who wants an engine thumping in the cockpit, with its bilgy smell and its spasmodic cough? Who would steer stolidly and safely ahead when he might take his chances on suddenly coming about to the starboard tack with rush and rattle of boom and much "laying out" on the high side? The choice of boats is as wide as the waters. Your pet may be anything from a chummy little fifteen-footer to a dainty white-sailed creature of almost schooner dimensions; and she may have cost a fortune or a song, according to your purse; but once go back to her, and you will wonderingly revive old joys long dormant.

Then trundle her out, mates, from stable or barn or boathouse where she has drowsed among the cobwebs; scrape her keel, calk her seams, paint her afresh and christen her Water Lily all over again. Put her overboard—happy day! Step her sturdy old mast with just the correct rake, bend on her sail with its rattling rings and flapping reef points, and behold! There she swings ready at her moorings, all eagerness, you'll wager, to be up and away. So at last comes that thrilling time when all your labor and backache are forgotten; pull up the throat and raise the peak properly high, loosen the toppin' lift—she fills—she sways and leans—she is off with a swoop! And watch out for some lively moments with the sheet rope.

Oh, gorgeous, clean wind from far, sun-warmed spaces! Oh, splashing blue water! Oh, creaking mast, tackle, halyards! Oh, bliss of sailing once more! Bless the old ship—she has found herself anew.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

What Is "Pep"

It's the thing that makes the lambs gambol with glee, the colts prance with joy, the calves throw up their tails and run like fury, the birds sing in split-throat notes, the frogs croak upon the creek bank, the insects buzz and hum in the air, the milkman whistle as he jogs along, the blacksmith laughingly beat the iron into shape, the plowman urge his horse with a "gee-up-there," the engineer wave a kiss to his sweetheart as he throws open the throttle, the wood man smilingly plunge his ax into the giant tree, the banker and the merchant rush to their work with a cheery "bye-bye," the mechanic and the laborer fairly dance to their jobs, the soldier "goes over the top" with clenched fists and the courage that knows no fear, the life salesman hie to his calls with shoulders squared, pride in his heart, and nerves a-tingle with anticipation of new success. "Pep" is anything that puts happiness in the heart, energy in the body, determination in the soul and invincible courage in the will.—Insurance World.

OLD RHYMES ON WEATHER

Some, Founded on Cloud Conditions, Likely to be Correct as Forecasts

Whenever the official weather prophecy heralds fair, south to southwest winds, and the trustful venture forth umbrella-less and a shower catches them, some meteorological apostate will arise and say, "Why not be your own weather prophet? The farmers and the mariners have ways of forecasting the winds and the storms—why not follow their precepts and disregard the governmental predictions?"

Whereupon are heard in the land such pronouncements as "Bees will not swarm before a starm" and "if the cock goes crowing to bed, he'll certainly rise with a watery head."

"Some of these goosebone prognostications are founded on science," says J. H. Kimball, who calls off the fair and warmers with Forecaster Scarr at the weather bureau office in the Whitehall Bldg.

"Generally speaking," remarked Mr. Kimball, "amateur prophecies fall into two classes—those founded on the observation of atmospheric phenomena and those based on the alleged behavior of animals and insects. The first class contains many methods of forecasting that are usually accurate."

The old rhymes that were built on cloud conditions are likely to be valid. One of the most reliable guides is the old verse:

Evening red and morning gray,
Will set the traveler on his way;
But evening gray and morning red,
Will bring down rain upon his head.

Virgil might have obtained a position with the weather bureau on the strength of his observation that

When Luna first her scattered fear recalls,
If with blunt horns she holds the dusky air,
Seaman and swain predict abundant shower.

Sir Patrick Spens would have been better off had he heeded the meteorological wisdom of his assistant, who predicted a disaster because

Late, late yestereen I saw the new moon,
With the old moon in his arm,
And I fear, I fear, my master dear,
That we shall come to harm.

And the Hesperus might never have been wrecked (and what would the elocutionist do then, poor thing?) had it not been that

Last night the moon had a golden ring
And tonight no moon we see.

All of these doleful predictions are premised on lunar halos—which means that the light of the moon is reflected by moisture in the upper strata of the atmosphere, and that this moisture will condense into rain within a day. A useful warning of summer showers may be found in the New Testament, where it is told that "When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say: There cometh a shower; and so it is."

Forecasts derived from the behavior of animals are, for the most part, unreliable, added Mr. Kimball.

"There seems to be no reason for supposing that animals are endowed with any unwonted power of prognostication," he said. "Probably these traditions came down because they sounded well. Of course, it may be possible that animals occasionally have a keen sense of the weather, but it has yet to be proved."—New York Evening Post.

A Beauty, Truly Regal, Yet She Ordered Onion Omelette

Into the restaurant she came with the air of a princess, a truly regal figure, clad in brown from top to toe and looking as if she had just visited a Parisian modiste and a beauty parlor—a perfectly groomed, handsome woman. There was an air of refinement about her. She looked expensively turned out in the simple, deceptive way.

She seated herself at a table and there were little exclamations of admiration from other diners near. A waitress approached; every one hushed to listen to the beautiful creature speak.

In a high-pitched, East Side voice she ordered: "Bring me a onion omelette." It was brought, and she played it, golfishly speaking, with her knife.

Rules for Swimmers

Tom Robinson, veteran swimming coach, presents these rules for swimmers:

Wait at least an hour after eating before swimming.

Do not go in bathing alone. There is safety in numbers.

Never accept an invitation to ride in a canoe if you cannot swim.

In entering the water keep the hands under so if you step into a hole you can immediately start swimming.

In learning to swim, move toward the shore; never swim away from the beach.

Keep out of rough water if you are subject to heart trouble.

Never swim until exhausted. Don't "show off."

If caught in the undertow, try at once to float.

Learn them by heart.

Remember them when you come near the bathing beach.

Bear them in mind, boys and girls.

—Lynn Item.

DEW RESPONSIBLE FOR SWEETNESS OF THE MORNING AIR

Every one recognizes the sweetness and freshness of the early morning air and knows that these attractive properties disappear as the day advances. But so far as analysis goes the composition of early morning air is not different from that of air at any other time.

During the passing of night to day and of day to night several physical changes occur. There is a fall in temperature at sunset and a rise again at dawn, and consequently moisture is alternately being thrown out and taken up again, and it is well known the change of state is accompanied by electrical phenomena and certain chemical manifestations also.

The formation of dew has probably, therefore, far more profound effects than merely the moistening of objects with water. Dew is vitalizing, not entirely because it is water, but because it possesses an invigorating action due partly at any rate to the fact that it is saturated with oxygen, and it has been stated that during its formation peroxide of hydrogen and some ozone are developed. It is not improbable that the peculiarly attractive and refreshing quality that marks the early morning air has its origin in this way.

The difficulty of inducing grass to flourish under a tree in full leaf is well known and is generally explained by saying that the tree absorbs the nourishing constituents of the soil or that it keeps the sunlight away from the grass and protects it from rain. It is doubtful whether any of these explanations is true, the real reason most probable being that the vitalizing dew cannot form upon the grass under a tree, whereas as a rule both rain and light can reach it.—New York Sun and Herald.

INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATED

Good Program of Sports, Ball Game and Band Concerts in Manchester

"The Glorious Fourth" was celebrated in Manchester on Monday of this week, the observance partaking more of the "safe and sane" nature than of the old-time noise and fireworks. The weather was ideal during the day, indeed much cooler than usual, as in former years the Fourth has been remembered for its sweltering heat.

The church bells were rung early in the morning after which the first event was the program of sports on the Brook st. playgrounds. Dr. Frank A. Willis, chairman of the committee, was in charge of the sports. Silver and bronze medals were awarded for the boys' events, Page & Shaw candies for the girls' events. The winners were as follows:

35-yard dash—John Parks, 1st; Edward Foster, 2d.

Potato race—John Parks, 1st; Edward Foster, 2d.

50-yard dash—John Babcock, 1st; Frank Foster, 2d.

75-yard dash—William Smith, 1st; Edward Croteau, 2d.

100-yard dash—William Smith, 1st; Edward Croteau, 2d.

Relay race, Class A—L. Peters, J. Saulnier, R. Brooks, F. Harkins.

Relay race, Class B—G. Bullock, R. Foster, R. Butler, E. Croteau.

Standing broad jump—John Babcock, 6 ft., 11 3-4 in., 1st; Peter Scott, 6 ft., 9 3-4 in., 2d.

High jump, Class C—Wm. Smith, 1st; Gardiner Bullock, 2d.

High jump, Class D—Lawrence Croteau, 1st; Edward Croteau, 2d.

Running broad jump, Class A—Jarvis Saulnier, 12 ft., 11 1-2 in., 1st; Frank Foster, 11 ft., 5 1-2 in., 2d.

Running broad jump, Class B—William Smith, 15 ft., 11 1-2 in., 1st; Edward Croteau, 14 ft., 7 1-2 in., 2d.

50-yard dash for girls—Margaret Flatley, 1st; Doris Smith, 2d.

Potato race for girls—Margaret Flatley, 1st; Marion Thomas, 2d.

The Manchester baseball team lost both games during the day, Danvers taking the morning contest at Manchester, and Beverly winning in the afternoon at Montserrat. A more extended notice of the games appears elsewhere in this issue.

The demonstration of mechanical boats by Alex. Sjorlund was the first event in the afternoon, taking place at Manchester inner harbor. Mr. Sjorlund exhibited several classes of miniature boats including submarines, hydroplanes, torpedo boats, sailing dories, etc. The demonstration was particularly interesting to the children, and called forth many complimentary remarks from older folk as well.

Free movies at the Horticultural hall also proved a popular drawing card, Mgr. Sanborn presenting a pleasing program of motion pictures.

The Salem Light Infantry band furnished music for a concert in the afternoon and again in the evening. Features of the concerts were cornet solos by B. C. McSheehy, conductor, and a piccolo solo by Albert Wilkins. The band played with true Fourth of July pep and snap; its selections were patriotic and appealed to the crowd.

The committees in charge presented a day's program of enjoyment and pleasure and their efforts were crowned with success. While not so elaborate as usual, the observance was well carried out and the day was characterized by an absence of accidents. The holiday celebration is an annual feature of the summer season, many Manchester people entertaining friends and relatives for the occasion.

Singing Beach was popular during the day. Many picnic parties enjoyed the holiday on the Shore, with games, bathing, and picnic lunch.

Quite a Job for Some Wives

Said a cheerful matron of much experience to a young and anxious wife: "Don't take things so seriously; don't try to be a 'good' wife; don't try to reform your husband; don't bother about setting him a good example! If you want to keep his affection and really do him good make him laugh. Aid that will take some doing," she added, thoughtfully.—London Morning Post.

Prohibition has taught some of the boys nothing except that wood alcohol is a mighty poor spring tonic.

TRY-OUT GAMES FOR OLYMPIAD AT STADIUM NEXT WEEK

Boston is certainly fortunate in having the final Olympic try-outs and American championships combined here on the 16th and 17th—next Friday and Saturday. In ordinary years, the American championships are always to some extent either eastern or western, or far-western, because the distances in this country are so magnificent that it is impossible except for an extraordinary occasion for the entire country to be represented at any annual meet. Pennsylvania's relay races more nearly approach this than any other meet. But this year the Olympic committee are sending to Boston for the 17th the best men that competed in Pasadena, Chicago, New Orleans and Philadelphia.

The winners in these various try-outs will come together here and it should be the greatest athletic meet that has ever been held in this country. Not an event will be without its galaxy of stars.

Thus Bostonians must get their tickets early for the stadium should for once be to small to handle the great crowd that will no doubt desire to see the ultimate Olympic representatives in action. Never in the history of track sports in America was the demand for tickets as great as these try-outs. Applications for seats should be sent to George V. Brown at Boston Ahtletic association, Boston.

MANCHESTER CHURCHES

First Unitarian church, Masconomo st. On Sunday, July 11, at 10.30 a. m., Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian association, will preach. All seats are free.

Baptist church, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor.—At the Sunday a.m. service at 10.30 o'clock, the third sermon of the series on the Lord's Prayer will be given. Subject, "Thy Kingdom Come." Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the regular preaching service will be held. There will be a short sermon by the pastor. Archie Cool will sing Sunday morning.

There will be an entertainment at the Baptist church next Monday evening, July 12, for the benefit of the organ fund. The program will consist of music and readings by talent from out of town.

The ladies of the missionary society of the Baptist church are planning to send a barrel to the Florida Industrial institute. Articles of clothing, table or bed linen, pieces for patchwork, old linen, etc., will be gladly received for said barrel. There will be a meeting of the society held in the vestry on Tuesday afternoon from 2.30 to 4.30 o'clock for work. Articles may be brought or sent to this meeting.

The annual picnic of the Friendship circle of the Baptist church will be held at Tuck's Point on next Thursday, July 15,—if stormy the picnic will be held the next day. All members can bring their families; if they do not have any family it is permissable to bring friends. Each person is requested to furnish some eatables in a covered dish. Silva's bus will leave the Baptist church at 10.15. All persons desiring to go should be at the church on time.

Congl. church, Rev. F. W. Manning, pastor. Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach a sermon from the subject: "Power." The public is cordially invited to attend the service.

The Congl. parish held its picnic last Thursday at Tuck's Point. The weather was ideal for such a gathering and a large number of the members and friends of the society enpoyed the outing. The committees in charge arranged a program of sports and other entertaining events. Ice cream, lemonade and coffee were on sale. The picnic dinner was the big feature of the day.

MEDALS AWARDED AT SACRED HEART SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Sacred Heart Sunday school closed Sunday, June 27, with written examinations. Rev. Fr. Mullen awarded medals to the winners at the children's mass last Sunday. For the boys' Bible history class Edward Henneberry received first prize, Robert Singleton second; honorable mention, Javis Saulnier, Clarence Haskell. The boys' Sunday school medals were won by James Gallagher, John Neary and Morris McElhinney.

In the girls' Bible history class Catherine Neary received the medal and Margaret Ferriera and Alice Rudden, honorable mention. Ruth Mulvey received the medal for the girls' Sunday school, first twenty lessons of the Catechism, and Mary Hurley for the first ten lessons.

Many complain of their memory, none of their judgment.

Mrs. Ida Parker and two young daughters are visiting at Bridgewater.

Miss Margaret Fielding, of Boston, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Shaw, Summer st.

The Misses Ruth and Gertrude Prest are visiting at the home of their grandparents in North Beverly.

Mrs. David Little and three daughters, of Lynn, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Burke, Bennett st.

Prof. and Mrs. F. A. Reid, of Somerville, were guests of Capt. and Mrs. Chas. W. Reid, of Allen ave., over the holiday.

Axel Magnuson expects to leave sometime this month for a visit to his former home in Sweden. He will take his two sons, Herman and Axel, with him. This will be Mr. Magnuson's first visit home for nearly 20 years.

Mrs. Rebecca T. Hodges, of Indianapolis, Ind., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Andrews, of this town, is the author of one of the leading articles of fiction in the July number of Outers' Recreation. The title of Mrs. Hodges' very interesting story is "The Baxters' Vacation."

George Tucker, of Gloucester, a painter in the employ of E. A. Lane, fell from a ladder while working at a Smith's Point estate yesterday morning and received numerous bruises, but was not thought to be injured seriously. The ambulance was called to convey the unfortunate man to his home in Gloucester.

Frank G. Norris, for the last six years inside superintendent at Essex County club, has tendered his resignation to take effect the first of next month. For many years Mr. Norris has been eager to pay a visit to his old home in England, where he owns a place in County Surrey, outside London, so it is with this purpose in mind that he is giving up his position here, and with Mrs. Norris and children he will sail for England early in August. They may remain in England indefinitely. During their residence in Manchester Mr. and Mrs. Norris and family have endeared themselves to a great many people. Their daughters, both in grammar school, are violinists of no mean ability. Mr. Norris will be succeeded at the club by Joseph Dufton, now of the Salem club, but who has worked with Mr. Norris both at the Myopia Hunt club and at the Essex County club.

Last Sunday morning while Thos. O'Hara, coachman at the Wallace Goodrich estate, was driving home from church with three of the employees, the whiffletree broke while going up the Boardman hill, frightening the horse. The animal began to plunge and kick, throwing out the driver, who pluckily hung to the reins. O'Hara received numerous cuts and bruises. The other occupants of the carriage jumped and escaped with minor injuries, although it was thought one of the girls suffered a sprained ankle. The horse was stopped through Mr. O'Hara's efforts before doing further damage.

A driver of one of Anthony market trucks, of Magnolia, met with a near fatality yesterday morning at the corner near the Lily pond on Summer st. The driver put on the brakes when nearing the corner with such force that the car skidded across the road, a rear shoe blowing out at the same time, and the machine upset. Anthony Ferriera and William Murray, who were driving in the Ferriera truck just ahead, heard the smash and hurried back expecting to find the driver badly injured, but they were much relieved and surprised to see him emerge from the wreck uninjured. With the help of others the machine was righted, but was in a badly damaged condition.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

"God sent his singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heaven again."

THE new books did not arrive in time, so I cannot tell you about them. This gives me an opportunity to call your attention to the large and varied collection of poetry we have in our library. Though very few, if any, of us have the "vision and faculty divine" that enables us to write poetry, I trust that there are not many who do not enjoy poetry. Some of the greatest and best things in literature have been said by the poets.

Some of the many anthologies, worthy of mention, will be listed below:

"Days and Deeds," compiled by Burton G. and Elizabeth B. Stevenson for children, contains poems on most of our holidays and under a section called "Great Americans," the deeds of many of our heroes are celebrated in verse, and under "The Changing Year" there is much written about the seasons, and the book closes with "Poems Every Child Should Know."

"The Home Book of Poetry" is another good collection. Here you will find many well-known poems.

"An American Anthology," by Edmund Clarence Stedman, is undoubtedly the best collection of American poetry we have at the library. The editor was a New York man of business, with the mind of a poet. He was a member of the New York stock exchange from 1869 to 1900. He remained in business so that he might have the means to carry on his literary work. In this volume we have quotations from over 580 American poets. I wonder how many reading this could give the names of twenty American writers of poetry? A more recent anthology is "American Poetry," edited by Percy H. Boynton. At the close of this book will be found critical comments on the poetry of the authors quoted. It is really a short history of American poetry. Another very practical compilation is "The Home Book of Verse for Young Folks." The contents of this book is classified in an interesting way. Some of the divisions are—"In the Nursery," "The Duty of Children," "Rhymes of Childhood," "Just Nonsense," "Fairyland," "The Glad Evangel," "The Wonderful World," "Stories in Rhyme," "My Country" and "Life's Lessons."

"Library of Little Masterpieces, in Forty-Four Volumes" is very popular. Six volumes—19 to 24 inclusive—are poetry. The selection is an excellent one. The books are small and easy to hold and the print is good. The poems are classified, a different subject for each volume. Volume 19 contains "Ballads, Old and New." Here you may find ballads on "Love," "Fairyland," "Adventure," "The Sea," "War" and "Death and Sorrow." No. 20 is "Idyls and Stories in Verse" divided as follows: "Idyls," "Allegories and Legends," "Brief Epics and Tales' 'and "Short Stories in Verse."

Volume 21 is a collection of lyrics arranged under the following subjects: "Songs of Nature," "Love Songs," "Songs of Patriotism" and "Songs of Life's Pilgrimage." No. 22 has for title "Over Sonnets and Epigrams." "Descriptive and Reflective Verse" will be found in Vol. 23 arranged under "The Interpretation of Nature," "Portraits of People," "Poems in Character' 'and "Life's Philosophy." The last volume (No. 24) is a selection of "Eligies and Hymns. The first half is "Eligies and Poems on Death" and the last is "Hymns and Poems of Faith."

A book that has been in the library for a number of years, but has never been taken out, is "A Century of Ballads, 1810-1910," by Harold Simpson. In the preface the author says that the book "is the story of popular song." You may find out something about "Home, Sweet Home," "The Lost Chord," and other well-known songs. Without doubt there will be some new books for next week.

Manchester Odd Fellows Again Defeat Gloucester, 12-3

Another baseball game between Ocean lodge, of Gloucester, and Magnolia lodge, of Manchester, was played Friday evening on the Brook st. playground, Manchester, and the Manchester Odd Fellows again defeated the Gloucester aggregation. The final score was 12 to 3.

Levoy, of Manchester, started things going in the first, when with three on and two out he hit a pretty two-bagger and scored three runs. Jensen, of Gloucester, hit a long drive into center field, and in an endeavor to stretch it into a home run was caught at the final sack for a putout.

Manchester line-up: G. Cool, p; A. Cool, c; Walen, ss; McDiarmid, 1b; Stanley, 2b; F. Willis, 3b; E. Smith, rf; Hutchinson, lf; W. Cook, lf; Levoy, cf; J. Gray, c; J. Noyes, p; H. Hoare, 2b.

Gloucester line-up: Foley, 2b; Lindquist, c; Martin, ss; Steele, 3b; Lothrop, 1b; Jensen, p; Webber, cf; Dutton, lf; Mason, rf.

Score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Manchester	5	2	1	0	3	0	1	—12
Gloucester	0	1	0	0	0	2	0	— 3

Any teams desiring to play Magnolia lodge should correspond with S. Henry Hoare, Manchester, secretary of the baseball team.

K. of C. Defeats I. O. O. F. by Score of 4 to 1

Another game in the "Sunset League" was played Wednesday evening at the Brook st. playground, Manchester, between Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., and the K. of C., both of Manchester, the latter winning 4 to 1. This was the best game of the series thus far. The first score was made in the fifth inning. Hits were few and rather far between.

Twiss and Noyes pitched in great shape and the support accorded them was good. It was thought by many that poor umpiring marred the contest, the "umps'" decisions failing most decidedly in meeting with popular approval.

K. of C. line-up: Miguel, c; Twiss, p; Francis, 1b; Gillis, 2b; Murray, ss; Silver, 3b; Lockyer, lf; Flaherty, rf; Fraser, cf.

I. O. O. F. line-up: A. Cool, c; Noyes, p; McDiarmid, 1b; L. Walen, 2b; W. Walen, ss; Willis, 3b; Grey, lf; Smith, Craig, cf; Stanley, rf.

Score by innings:

SHOULD NOT MAKE SUNDAY A DAY OF SPORT AND PLEASURE

Editor North Shore Breeze,
Manchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:

In a letter printed on page 65 of last week's issue of your paper, the writer expressed some ideas which should be challenged.

While it is true that out-door exercise is invaluable to the brains and muscles of men, whether they are confined in office buildings or not, is it not also true that in a baseball game (which was the main question before the recent town meeting), only a very small percentage of persons take part? The large majority either sit or stand. Where do they get valuable exercise in watching a few do the exercising?

Furthermore, most persons who work in offices today have two or three hours or more after their work is done to play, if they wish to.

It seems to me that the argument "that healthful sports are needed on Sunday" is only an excuse to make Sunday a day of sport and pleasure.

Because the ministers of a western town think it right to have sports Sunday afternoon is no reason why we must think the same. Christ only is our moral guide, and if He reveals truth and duty differently to us than to others we will follow as He gives us light.

The writer inferred, perhaps unintentionally, that ministers were narrow who did not take the same stand as the four clergymen of the western town. Was Wendell Phillips and Henry Ward Beecher narrow when they preached deliverance from a cruel institution? All the ministers of the South before the Civil war preached that slavery was right, and no doubt believed it. I do not condemn, but no doubt they thought Phillips and Beecher fanatics, and they were. So also was Lincoln, who said when viewing the sale of a slave in New Orleans, "If I ever get a chance I will hit that thing hard."

If to be right means one must at times be narrow, thank God for those who have been narrow from Christ down to those of the present day. I'd rather be right than popular.

I agree with the writer that it is necessary to look after man's physical well-being, but I disagree in respect to the means toward attaining that end, for man must not sacrifice his moral or spiritual life. If he does he loses everything worth while. "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

Finally and most important, there are certain Divine Laws given to man to regulate his conduct. If we believe it is a rule of the Divine Intelligence given in Wisdom, not despotically, to keep His Sabbath day holy, should we not do so, believing it is for the "summum bonum?"

Let us not allow our town to legalize a thing that the Divine Ruler of the universe frowns upon and encourage people to stifle conscience.

Sincerely yours,
REV. H. E. LEVOY.

SOLEMN OATH FOR MOTORING WOMEN

A resolution has been passed by the American Federation of Car Owners, imposing the following oath of allegiance upon all women who frequent motor cars:

"1. With uplifted right hand I do solemnly promise that I will never be guilty of bothering my husband, at the wheel, with unnecessary talking.

"2. Particularly in thick traffic will I be kind and considerate and indulge in no nagging nor disconcerting remarks.

"3. Nor will I push the floor boards through in a sympathetic attempt to apply the foot brakes.

"4. Should I be guilty of violating this solemn obligation, let my beaver motor coat be given to the cook."—Toronto Globe.

Joseph Gates

Joseph Gates, of Manchester passed away Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at the home of his son, Alfred Gates, after a short illness of only a week. Pleurisy and congestion of the liver are given as causes of death.

Mr. Gates was a native of Portugal, where he was born 65 years ago. Since the age of 19, he has lived in Manchester, following the vocation of fisherman. For years he made many trips from Gloucester, and later attended to quite an extensive trade in lobsters.

During the past few years Mr. Gates had made his home with his son, Alfred Gates, and with his daughter, Mrs. Antone Silver. He is survived by four daughters and one son: Mrs. Lena Woodward, of Quincy; Mrs. Nora McGurdy and Mrs. Mary Parsons, of Salem; Mrs. Jennie Silver, of Manchester; Alfred Gates, of Manchester.

Funeral services were held Thursday from the Sacred Heart church. Burial in Rosedale cemetery.

Mrs. Horace Andrews

Mrs. Horace Andrews, of Essex rd., Manchester, passed away early Monday morning at the Beverly hospital, having been ill about a month with pneumonia. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the Crowell Memorial chapel, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating.

Mrs. Andrews was born in Manchester, England, 54 years ago. She was a devoted mother and wife, and in the home circle will be greatly missed. She is survived by her husband and four children: Mrs. Edgar Lovely, of New Hampshire; Mrs. John Lee, of Essex rd., and Virginia and Horace, who live at home.

LOSES TWO GAMES

Manchester Defeated Twice in Games on Holiday

The Danvers baseball team visited Manchester Monday forenoon and played a game with Manchester on the Brook st. playground. The home team was clearly outclassed, losing to the visitors by the score of 8 to 2.

The game was not particularly interesting to the spectators, many errors being made and the contest lacking the pep and vim of a real, live game.

We are unable to procure the box score of this game, although an effort was made to obtain it.

Monday afternoon the Manchester team played Beverly at Beverly, Manchester losing by the score of 7 to 6. This was an interesting game, attended by a large crowd. Lothrop, on the mound for Manchester, was pounded for 14 hits; Shea, pitcher for Beverly, was also hit freely for 11 safeties.

With the score 7 to 3 against them in the 7th, Manchester staged a real rally. Dee hit to left field; Lothrop was passed; Andrews drove one by Goldsmith, scoring Dee. Sanford lifted one over Goldsmith's head; Warner hit to short left, scoring Lothrop and Andrews, but the former United Shoe captain was caught trying to reach third, on a pretty throw by Ormsby to Goldsmith. Murphy flied to Leary and Joyce went out, Conlan to Leary. The other run was made by Manchester in the sixth after Murphy laced out a two-bagger to center, stole third and scored on an overthrow.

With the score 6 to 5 in favor of Manchester, Beverly came to the bat in the seventh. Bulger Lowe was the first man up and hit over Joyce. Goldsmith sacrificed. Murphy, the Dartmouth captain, who arrived late, hit toward second. Lothrop picked the ball up and shot it to Andrews in time to get the collegian. Shea connected for a sturdy smash to right, scoring Lowe. Conlan sent up a high fly to right field which dropped into Robertson's mitt, but the sun poked its head out from behind the clouds just in time to dazzle him and he dropped the ball. Shea scored and the game was won for Beverly.

METRIC SYSTEM

Would Create Confusion if Tried in United States

There is now a well-organized attempt to have this country adopt the metric system of weights and measures. The Iron Age is strongly opposed to it and publishes the following as what the system would mean in everyday life:

"In domestic life: Grocers' scales al: require new poise weights, all notched balanced beams scrapped and new ones provided, with new sliding weights.

"Peck and bushel measures discarded.

"Liter larger than a quart, new containers required.

"Hectoliter, equal to 2.8 bushels, not a practical unit.

"Prices on all commodities to be readjusted to new units.

"In culinary matters: All recipes to be readjusted to kiligrams and liters; cook books to be rewritten; general confusion in kitchen operations.

"New milk bottles.

"In other household affairs: Gas meters to be replaced by new system of units of volume, or readings of meters taken in one system and converted into the other, to avoid scrapping meters in use.

"Water meters in same category as gas meters.

"Tape measures and yard sticks to be discarded.

"In shopping: Counter measuring machines to be reconstructed, yards to meters.

"Dry goods to be folded at cotton and woolen mills in meter folds instead of yard folds, requiring change of machinery.

"Quires and reams to be replaced by decimal multiples, requiring changes at manufacturing plants.

"All containers and cartons to be modified in sizes and shapes to be adapted to new unit sizes.

406-Millimeter Collar

"Shirts, collars and cuffs to be known by strange names of sizes. A 16-inch becomes a 406-millimeter collar. A 187-millimeter hat is worn instead of 7⅜ inch.

"In building materials and construction: Abandon board measure and substitute square decimeters, centares or ares.

"Doors familiar to all builders as 2 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft. 8 in. become 762 by 2032 millimeters.

"An ordinary brick is 51 by 101 by 203 millimeters.

"Sizes of sash also are converted into strange units. Weights of tin, copper, zinc, lead sheets and plates placed before builders in unknown units, in awkward combinations.

"Molds and pallets in brickyards to be changed to new units or inconvenient numbers used to represent sizes.

"Earth excavation on basis of cubic meters, representing about 1.3 cubic yard. Designation of shovels and dippers in excavating machinery to be in fractions of cubic meters instead of definite yards.

Changes for Railroads

"In railroad affairs: Change in position and renumbering of, say, 100,000 mileposts, an incidental and minor affair relative to other changes.

"Standard gage of track becomes known as 1435 millimeters.

"Change in timetable mileages.

"Employees instructed in new method of estimating speeds.

"Railroad track and warehouse scales to be reconstructed into metric units. Capacity of cars to be in new units.

"In public land surveys: Lands in many states surveyed and staked out in townships, sections, quarter sections and eighth sections, in none of which divisions is there an easy conversion into metric units.

"In reconveyance of lands, present deeds giving meters and bounds in English units would require expensive and elaborate efforts to put dimensions and areas in metric units, which, if correctly made, would still be unintelligible to most people.

Excessive Cost

"The cost of the war is but a fraction of that which would confront the general industries of the country. Virtual scrapping of all small tools and fixtures would be faced by manufacturers, were such an act of Congress passed.

"A colossal fortune in changes of lead screws and screw cutting gears in lathes alone is involved.

"In all machines the changes become of such a staggering nature their mere contemplation is most depressing. Days would be required simply to state the number of changes involved in the industries.

"A dual system is confusing beyond description. Two systems do not admit of being in common use. A gradual change, piecemeal, is impracticable. A sudden sweeping change would throw the entire country into disorder."

Wonder if He is Aware that Fat Burns?

Struck by the notice, "Iron Sinks," in a shop window, a wag went inside and said that he was perfectly aware of the fact that "iron sank."

Alive to the occasion, the smart shopkeeper retaliated:

"Yes, and time flies, but wine vaults, sulphur springs, jam rolls, grass slopes, music stands, Niagara Falls, moonlight walks, sheep run, Kent hops, and holiday trips, scandal spreads, standard weights, India rubber tires, the organ stops, the world goes round, trade returns, and—"

But the visitor had bolted. After collecting his thoughts he returned and, showing his head at the doorway, shouted:

"Yes, I agree with all of that perfectly—and marble busts."—Irish World.

ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING is found to be, in the last analysis, merely commercial propaganda. The use of this propaganda, then, must be of the highest possible type, or otherwise it will defeat the very purpose for which it exists.

The written word, the most common form of advertising, very often does not produce beneficial results and advertisers wonder why. There are many reasons for this lack of success, but the most common is that faulty construction of "copy," involving much ambiguity of speech, has tired the prospective purchaser, rather than interested him.

The secret of advertising success, as in all other lines of commercial endeavor, depends, primarily, upon the "salesmanship" of the "copy." Individual taste, evidencing itself in this more than in any other phase of business, dictates the general "set-up" of your advertisement. Brevity and strength are to be desired whenever possible; not brevity of space, but of words, for space properly arranged assures one that the most casual observer will not pass it by. Make your "ad" brief and to the point.

The BREEZE is an admirable medium for advertising, reaching the eyes of a most discriminating class, and having a wide circulation. Let the North Shore know what you have to sell. People will buy, if the article for sale is attractively called to their attention.

MANCHESTER

Little Ethel Dennis, of Charlestown, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Harrison, Putnam ct.

William Cool and family, of Boston, visited at the home of Mr. Cool's parents on Allen ct., over Sunday and the holiday.

Mrs. Paul Webber and children, of Bedford, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Webber's sister, Mrs. Frank P. Bullock.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Floyd had as guests over the week-end Mr. and Mrs. James Cox and two children, of Norwood.

A whist party and dance will be held in the Town hall this evening in aid of the Sacred Heart church lawn party, which will take place Wednesday, July 28. The whist party is under the direction of Rev. Fr. Kiley.

Miss Nellie Leonard is spending a few weeks in Salem, at the home of her uncle, Charles Bennett.

Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., is now on its summer schedule. The next meeting will be held on Thursday evening, July 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Johnson spent the holiday at their camp at Brier Neck, where they are moving today for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mead, of Wellesley Farms, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Cheever for the holiday.

Miss Bernice Lee, of Rosedale ave., was given a surprise party Tuesday evening by several of her friends in celebration of her birthday anniversary. The evening was very pleasantly passed with games and consulting the ouija board.

Among the graduates at Phillips Exeter academy this year was Leroy C. Linnekin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Linnekin, Bennett st. Mr. Linnekin was one of the three honor men of his class for the 3-year course, and he held highest honors in French, German and chemistry. He was also awarded the 4-year scholarship to Harvard, but as he had previously made all arrangements to enter Dartmouth in the fall he had to let this Harvard scholarship pass. He was one of the prize speakers at the exercises last Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Linnekin attended the commencement exercises at Exeter for four days last week. Their son resumed his former position as baggage-master at the Magnolia station for the summer. His father is assistant agent at Magnolia.

MAGNOLIA

Our local farmers have begun haying and the crop promises to be an unusually large one this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lucas entertained their son, Russell, and his family, of Beverly, over the Fourth.

Gertrude West, who went to New York city last fall, recently returned here to spend the summer with her parents.

The Misses Azuba and Bertha Mullen, of New York city, will spend the summer with their mother, on Western ave.

Services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 8.15 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach at both services.

William J. Malanson, one of our popular firemen, is now enjoying a well-earned vacation of two weeks in and about Boston.

Ernest Howe, who holds an executive and important position with the Stone & Webster Corporation, Boston, spent the holiday with his family, off Magnolia ave.

There was little, save the ringing of the church bells, to remind us of the Fourth. Firecrackers were not much in evidence here this time.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Boyd and daughter, Mary, spent the Fourth at Falmouth, Me., with relatives, going and returning by automobile.

Arthur Lycett, who has a clerical position with the government at Washington, D. C., and Susan Lycett, a teacher in the public schools of Westfield, are spending their vacations with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lycett.

Elizabeth Abbott, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Abbott, made a flying visit home for the holiday. Miss Abbott has a responsible position with a well-known Boston firm and she is making good, as we might expect.

Egnar Swanson, a first-class wireless operator in the service of the U. S. navy, spent the week-end visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Swanson. Young Swanson recently returned from Mexico and at present he is located at Newport, R. I.

An extension is soon to be made to the massive stone wall that now partly surrounds the J. D. Cox estate on Hesperus ave. The work will be done by contractor D. C. Ballou, who built the original part of the wall. Mr. Ballou, by the way, is rushed with business these days. Already a tremendously large hole has been made in his sand and gravel pit in Gloucester and his three auto trucks are going most of the time drawing sand and gravel to his customers, who are increasing each day. We are proud of his success, for if any man deserves to succeed it is our generous-hearted and popular citizen—D. C. Ballou.

The Women's Club

The club membership is now 166 and is still growing.

The Fourth of July dance was a crowded, but jolly affair. The hall was decorated with red, white and blue streamers, red Japanese lanterns and flags, which gave a touch of patriotic color. The music was furnished by Miss Sadie Hawkes and Leo Chane, of Gloucester, and was strictly up to date. At intermission ice cream was served.

Miss Abbott's dancing class on Tuesday evenings is growing. Excellent music is furnished for her assembly by Anderson, of Gloucester. This party should be popular. Miss Abbott charges an admission of 25 cents for ladies and 50 cents for gentlemen. Many who are learning to dance are availing themselves of an opportunity to practice with good music and a not too crowded floor.

On Thursday evening a whist tournament will start. A club prize will be given to the member who has the highest score in July and another in August.

At the Friday evening dance the music will be furnished by Alan MacDuff.

Next Tuesday afternoon tea will be served on the porch and a fortune party will be given.

Men's Club Notes

The club plans to have a singles and doubles tennis tournament the last of July. A number of college players are entering, which will add new zest to the play. A bowling tournament will start simultaneously, for the followers of that sport.

A Red Cross life saving corps is being organized on Monday evening. The class will take up the theory at the clubhouse and "work it out" on the beach.

The annual costume party is set for the 20th of July. It is one of the most interesting and pleasant occasions of the year.

On the 23d a marionette show, which is unique to the club, will be presented. This is especially designed to please the lady friends and children of the club members.

Young Husband—You are developing into an excellent housekeeper. We have not had half the usual expense for the last three weeks. How in the world did you manage it?

Young Wife—I had a lot of things put down on an account.

BEVERLY FARMS

Mrs. McDonnell, of Clinton, is visiting her son, James E. McDonnell, West, st.

Frank L. Woodberry of the Beverly Farms fire department, is enjoying his annual two weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Mason, of Brattleboro, Vt., have been among this week's visitors at Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Millett, of Waterville, Me., have spent the past week at Beverly Farms, guests of friends.

Misses Mabel and Dorothy McIntosh, of Medford, are spending their vacations at Beverly Farms with their grandmother, Mrs. Mary A. Larcom.

Michael McDonnell, and two sons, of Clinton, have spent a portion of this week at Beverly Farms, as guests of Mr. Donnell's brother, James E. McDonnell, West st.

James Connolly, a "jackie" on the U. S. S. South Dakota, has had a few days' liberty this week and has spent it at Beverly Farms, visiting his brother, Michael Connolly, High st.

S. John Connolly is on a ten-days' trip to Chicago, one of a party of delegates from this vicinity attending the Elks' convention in that city. He is a past Exalted Ruler of the Beverly lodge.

Beverly Farms was a busy place on the Fourth. The Naval Festival at Haven's field, the July 4th celebration provided by the committee, and the attraction of a pleasant day spent at West Beach, drew large crowds to Beverly Farms. The streets were especially crowded with automobiles and the police department had an extra number of officers on duty for the day, stationed at the busy points.

The Maddalena Catering Co., of Cambridge, which has been conducting a branch place of business at Beverly Farms, have closed their establishment in Cambridge until September, during which time they are to make extensive repairs and improvements. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Maddalena (Barbara Daniels, formerly of Beverly Farms) are soon to take a 3-week motor trip through New Hampshire and Vermont.

The Fourth of July celebration committee desires to express its sincere thanks to all who contributed or aided towards making the holiday celebration at Beverly Farms a success. The committee worked hard and its labors gave to the people a good time, much pleasure and a day of enjoyment. The large number who were present to witness the various events on the program was indeed evidence that the day's celebration was enjoyed and appreciated.

Brewer's Market Sold to Boston Company

Walter P. Brewer, who has been in business for years as proprietor of Brewer's market, Central sq., has sold his interests to W. L. Morrill & Co., of Boston, the change taking place on July 1st. The new owners have placed John Daniels in charge of the local market. Mr. Daniels is well known to Beverly Farms people and has had considerable experience in conducting a provision business. Brewer's market has enjoyed a reputation for first-class service for many years and it will be the endeavor of the W. L. Morrill Co. to maintain the standard.

Centerville Loses to Beverly Farms Legion

Beverly Farms Legion defeated the Centerville A. C. at the Farms playground, Monday morning, by a score of 7 to 6. The Centerville boys led up to the eighth, when the Farms team, by a combination of hits and errors sent four men over the pan. Both Parkinson and Toomey twirled good ball. The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Farms Legion	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	4	2—7	10 2
Centerville	1	0	1	0	3	0	0	0	1—6	3 3

Miss Althea Anderson, of Hartford, Conn., is spending her vacation visiting friends at Beverly Farms.

Mrs. Laura Jackson and children, of Cohasset, are visiting Mrs. Jackson's mother, Mrs. Adelaide Bennett, Greenwood ave.

The Beverly Farms playground opened for the season yesterday afternoon with Marshall Campbell, instructor, in charge.

The local American Legion ball team will have a game at the playgrounds on Saturday afternoon with the Italian A. C., of Beverly.

Miss Mary H. Murray has been assigned as instructor at the Ward 3 playground in Beverly, and Miss Helen D. Hodgkins will be in charge of the Pickman playground in Ward 4.

Frank L. Woodbury and family and E. Fred Day and family are leaving today for the Hodgkins cottage on the shore of Squam river, Gloucester, where they will enjoy a ten-days' outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Braden (Bessie Williams) of Phillips, Me., arrived at Beverly Farms Wednesday. They plan to spend the summer here and may decide to locate in town permanently.

Mrs. Arthur L. Standley and daughters, the Misses Louise, Carolyn and Barbara Standley, are opening their summer cottage today on the shores of Chebacco lake, where they will enjoy camp life for the next two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Belfrey, of Haskell st., left last Saturday for a vacation trip to Montreal and other places of interest in Canada. Mr. Belfrey is a telephone inspector at the local exchange and is enjoying his annual vacation.

Mrs. Wm. Winchester and her sister are now located at their camp cottage in Topsfield, on the shores of Hood's pond, where they are conducting a most attractive and successful place for the sale and serving of homemade refreshments.

Peter McLaughlin arrived home from Warrenton, Va., last Saturday. He is spending a week at Beverly Farms and then will return to resume his work as superintendent for Connolly Bros., who are performing an extensive contract at that place on the Weld estate.

Eugene McCarthy, of Connolly pl., who has been at the Beverly hospital receiving treatment for blood poisoning, has recovered sufficiently to be able to return home. However, he is not yet able to resume his work. This is considerable of a hardship, as he has a family to support.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on nand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

HOLIDAY CELEBRATED

Parade, Sports and Ball Game at Beverly Farms

The citizens of Beverly Farms celebrated the Fourth of July and the only thing missing from the usual card was the display of fireworks in the evening at West Beach. The program was under the auspices of the natives and summer people of Beverly Farms, the program opening at 6.30 in the morning with an antique horrible parade which furnished considerable fun and brought out a large crowd. From that time on there was something doing every minute for the remainder of the day. At West Beach there was a fine list of sports for the young people, the pie eating contest furnishing the most fun. During the afternoon and evening there was a band concert.

The winners of prizes in the horribles were Helen Stanwood, Dorothy Nugent, Mary Connolly, Caroline Stanley and James Nugent, Jr., representing, with a float, the Beverly Farms fire department house. The second prize was awarded to Robert Hodgkins, Benjamin Hawkins, Howard Williams and Fred Day, representing the street department. The Beverly Farms social club won the third prize, and the fourth went to Thomas McKenzie, representing the police department.

The various sporting events on West Beach were won as follows:

50-yard dash for girls—Won by Edwina Connolly; Esther Gill, second.

100-yard dash for boys—Won by Martin Lawlor; John McLaughlin, second.

Obstacle race for boys—Won by Leo Cronin; Robert Nichols, second.

Obstacle race for girls—Won by Margaret Norton; Helen Crowley, second.

Potato race for girls—Won by Anna Smith; Dorothy Harrigan, second.

Three legged race for boys—Won by Leo Davey, John Norton; James and John Fanning, second.

Wheelbarrow race—Won by Marjorie Mahon; Anna Smith, second.

Hop, step and jump—Won by Martin Lawlor; James Fanning, second.

High jump—Won by Raymond Cole; James McLaughlin, second.

Pie eating contest—Won by Wm. Gill; John Smith, second.

The whippet race was won by whippets owned by Bayard Tuckerman.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Augustus Callahan, chairman; E. V. Publicover, Daniel Neville, James McDonald, John Daniels, Homer Callahan, Geo. Chipchase, James Gilmartin, Robert Connell, Francis Lawler, William Nichol, Howard E. Morgan, Jr., Wm. Nolan, John McTiernan, Stephen J. Connolly, Jr., N. E. Just as we almost get rid of that familiar line in the news which reads, "The car sped on from the scene of the accident without stopping," we find another which we might find means to get rid of. Theatres

STRAND THEATRE, LYNN

Charlie Chaplin is still the king of comedy in the motion picture world and one of the several big productions that did more than anything else to elevate him to that position, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," will be the principal attraction at the Strand theatre, Lynn, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The picture is generally regarded as the greatest comedy Mack Sennet ever made. It is given additional prestige by the appearance of two other famous stars, Mabel Normand and Marie Dressler. This trio keep things happening in lively fashion and have the support of a large company of comedians and screen beauties.

Goldwyn's production of Leroy Scott's widely read novel, "Partners of the Night," will be the accompanying early week attraction, together with a new issue of the Strand Topical Review and special musical features. A new issue of Burton Holmes' travels will also be featured.

Politics as they are and as they might be are dramatically set forth in Eugene O'Brien's latest picture, "The Figurehead," in which O'Brien rises from golf champion to the mayoralty and wages a successful fight against corrupt influences wielded by certain political powers. This picture will be shown Thursday, Friday and Saturday, accompanied by Billie Burke as a daring aviatrix in "Away Goes Prudence," Larry Semon in a new comedy, "Solid Concrete," Topical Review and other films.

On Sunday will appear Florence Billings in "Wit Wins," Alice Mann in "The Water Lily," Strand Topical Review and other attractions, including attractive music by soloists, organ and 12-piece orchestra.

Safe parking is provided for Strand patrons who come by auto, and modern ventilation keeps the theatre as cool as though swept by ocean breezes.

Still the passenger was oblivious.

"By the ejaculatory term 'Fare!'" said the conductor, "I imply no reference to the state of the weather, the complexion of the admirable blonde you observe in the contiguous seat, nor even to the quality of the service vouchsafed by this philanthropic corporation. I merely allude in a manner perhaps lacking in delicacy, but not in conciseness, to the monetary obligation set up by your presence in this car, and suggest that you liquidate!"

At this point the passenger emerged from his trance.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

SPARED WORSE FATE

Mr. Justwed—Yes, I'm terribly angry. I merely criticised the biscuits Ethel made and she hit me with one of them.

His Mother-in-Law—Foolish boy; you got off easy. Her father ate one of my first batch.—Detroit News.

"SALEM" —"DANIEL LOW'S"

The terms "Salem" and "Daniel Low's" are synonymous to thousands of our mail order customers and friends the world over, many of whom are yearly visitors at the North Shore. While there, one of their "little journeys" is to historic Salem including, of course, a visit to Daniel Low's.

Perhaps you, too, are acquainted with us thru our magazine ad-advertising and our catalogs. Before you leave the North Shore we urge you to permit us the pleasure of meeting you personally at our Store.

We feel sure that you will find the Store fully as interesting as the pages of our catalog; in fact, more so, for even the finest pictures and most comprehensive descriptions oftentimes do not measure up to the satisfaction of actual inspection.

Your visit will put you under no obligation whatever to purchase while, for our part, we shall feel repaid in knowing that you will return to your home with a "mind picture" of Daniel Low's that will, we hope, tend to create cordial business relations between us or further cement those relations already established.

SOCIETY NOTES

GARDEN DAY on the Shore tomorrow (Saturday) for the benefit of the National Civic Federation, will be at the gardens of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Summer st., and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Masconomo st., Manchester. Mrs. Lane's place is on Dana's Beach, while the gardens of Mrs. Fitz are on Smith's Point.

At Horticultural hall in Boston the annual exhibition of the American sweet pea society was held last Saturday and Sunday. While this popular flower was the principal feature of the show, it was not the only one. The finest individual collection in the hall was a display of 100 orchids by Albert C. Burrage. These were from Orchidvale, Beverly Farms. Mrs. Lester Leland, of West Manchester, showed sweet peas and a rare variety of yellow begonias.

Mrs. Henry Stephens, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., is settling in her cottage on the Paine estate, Pride's Crossing. Mrs. Stephens and her sisters, the Misses Mellen, of Detroit, have just returned from a trip to Java and Australia.

Miss Eleanor H. Jones, of "Highfields," Magnolia, is entertaining Miss Marian Riley, of Philadelphia. Miss Velma M. Morse, of Cambridge, aunt of Miss Jones, is with her, as usual.

The Costello C. Converse garden blooming so brilliantly on the sunny rocks on Shore rd., Magnolia, must have attracted the attention of the Garden club visitors when they motored down that way. Mrs. Converse's roses are among the finest on the Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods, of Ipswich, have their little granddaughter, Harriette, with them. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman R. Sturgis, of Londonville, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Farnum, of "Sun Dial," Magnolia, have their usual attractive garden around the dial. Roses and all the other flowers are blooming brightly. Mrs. Farnum entertained some of the Garden club visitors at their recent annual meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Overall and three children, of St. Louis, arrived this week to be with the latter's mother, Mrs. Wm. H. Scudder, Knowles cottage, Magnolia. Another daughter's family, Signor and Mrs. Gustavo di Rosa, of Boston, came with their baby last week for the season.

SOCIETY NOTES

MRS. NELSON MORRIS, wife of the United States ambassador to Sweden, who is living at "Eaglehead," Manchester, presented some interesting plates to the Congressional library in Washington recently. They were the outcome of her work for blinded soldiers. In Stockholm, she organized, with others, circles for making books for the blind in braille. The American women in Stockholm transposed into braille short stories written by Mark Twain. They then had them printed on zinc plates from which hundreds of copies were made to circulate among the English-reading blinded soldiers in Europe. It is these plates that Mrs. Morris has given to the Congressional library.

Mrs. Harriet C. Inches and Miss Gertrude White, of Boston, arrived Thursday at the Brownlands, in Manchester.

Mrs. Samuel Vaughan, Mrs. Bayard Warren and Mrs. Everett Dodge report that $1000 was cleared at their rummage sale in Beverly last Saturday.

◇ ⁘ ◇

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moore (Fanny Hanna) and children, of "Hollow Hill Farm," Convent, N. J., arrived Wednesday at "Rockmarge," Pride's Crossing, the home of Mr. Moore's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Moore.

About 350 people turned out last Saturday afternoon to enjoy the beautiful gardens at "Rockmarge," the Wm. H. Moore estate at Pride's Crossing, opened for the National Civic Federation. Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, of Pride's Crossing, is in charge of the opening of North Shore gardens.

Miss Vera Barstow, of New York, is coming July 29 to spend a week with the Misses Hunt at "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove. Miss Barstow is an accomplished musician and has been heard in North Shore concerts, including two of Mrs. Hall McAllister's.

Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt and the latter's sons, William and Thomas Laughlin, of Pride's Crossing, are attending the yacht races at New York this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Watkins, of "Hetmere," Beverly Cove, are in England this summer. Their son's family, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Watkins, of Brookline, are occupying the house. A new stucco garage trimmed in brick has been built, taking the place of the one destroyed by fire last season.

THE Wm. Baldwin Miller place at Beverly Cove has been sold to J. C. Ingram, of New York. This attractive place on Boyle st. contains about 45 acres. Miss Lysbeth Miller, a daughter, and her governess are now at the place. Miss Miller is always one of the enthusiastic young players at the Montserrat club.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryce J. Allen returned to "Allanbank," Beverly Cove, Sunday, from their trip abroad.

"Longacres," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Koshland, in Beverly Cove, has one of the most productive looking greenhouses in the Cove. Peaches and vegetables are growing mostly within, while a fine vegetable garden surrounds it.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley L. Pickman left their country place at Bedford last Saturday for the beautiful home at Beverly Cove. Willard S. Peele, who has long occupied a cottage on their estate, is on the Shore, as usual.

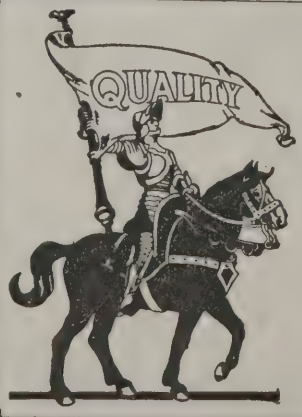

Mrs. Edgar R. Champlin, of Pride's Crossing, recently entertained the Garden club of Rye Beach, N. H., at her cottage on Mingo Beach. Mrs. Geo. M. Studebaker, of "Breaknolle," Little Boar's Head, is president of the club, which has nineteen members. Mrs. Champlin is an honorary member of the club, having formerly lived at Rye Beach.

"The Birches," at Beverly Cove, has the usual fine perennial garden in front of the house, a garden which makes Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ratchesky's place one of the noticeable ones at the Cove. An unusually large strawberry bed in their vegetable garden is a tempting sight just now.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN S. LAWRENCE and family have left their Gravelly Brook Farm in Topsfield and have come to the A. A. Lawrence cottage on Hospital Point, Beverly Cove, for the summer. They have formerly spent the midsummer at Nahant. The John Barry Ryans, who have occupied the house on the Point for several seasons, are not on the Shore this year.

Mrs. Charles D. Sias, formerly of Wenham, who is occupying the attractive Magee place at Beverly Cove, still keeps up her interest in the Wenham tea house and each Tuesday finds her acting as one of the hostesses at the little place.

Miss Helen Heron Taft, daughter of ex-Pres. Wm. Howard Taft and Mrs. Taft, was married Thursday to Frederick Johnson Manning, of Braintree, at the Taft summer home, Murray Bay, Canada. While Mr. Taft was President the summer "White House" was at Montserrat.

The Misses Hunt, of Beverly Cove, are opening their beautiful gardens to the public on Saturday afternoon, 2-6, July 24. In September the Misses Hunt are planning an extended trip through the White Mountains and Adirondacks.

Mrs. John Livingston Grandin, Sr., of "Elm Top," Beverly Cove, is visiting in Michigan. Mrs. A. E. Pingree and daughter, Miss Barbara, of Brookline, are spending the summer with her, as usual.

MRS. WILLIAM LOWELL PUTNAM, of Smith's Point, Manchester, who is an anti-suffragist, is quoted as saying recently: "I am as much opposed to woman suffrage as ever, but I consider it inevitable. When women are given suffrage it becomes their duty to vote, but I do not believe that women will vote more intelligently than the men. They have no monopoly of the civic virtues. Since suffrage appears to be inevitable, women must learn how to vote. Service on town and city committees undoubtedly will help along that line, but a woman does not need suffrage to assist in the public service. There are many women working for the State today to whom suffrage can mean nothing."

Miss Virginia Wainwright, of Boston, pianist, composer, concert manager, lecturer on musical subjects, poetess and authoress, will have her usual series of midsummer afternoon musicales on the North Shore during July and August. This season Miss Wainwright will give a set of musical discourses with musical illustrations on "Northern Music." Some of the illustrations for these talks have never been performed previously in this country. The first musicale, "Swedish Music," will be at Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart's, Manchester, July 20 (next Tuesday); the second, "Norwegian Music," at Hotel Tudor, Nahant, Aug. 3; the third, "Music of Denmark, Iceland and Faroë Islands," at Mrs. Bayard Warren's, Pride's Crossing, Aug. 17. Miss Mildred Keefe, pianist, will play the illustrations at the first two talks, and, at the third, Ruth Greenhalge, violinist, will play violin illustrations in addition to Miss Keefe's piano numbers. Many prominent North Shore residents are patronesses for these musicales.

MARY RUTHERFORD JAY, noted garden architect, of New York, who speaks at the J. Henry Lancashire home in Manchester, Friday, July 23, and shows slides of rare gardens in this country, England, India, China and Japan, was a war worker of much renown.

Besides taking over a unit of farmerettes in 1918, and accomplishing wonders in the way of raising vegetables during the summer she immediately took up Red Cross work after the farm work was finished. She was sent in the canteen service to various places and finally she was stationed where she helped to run the casual officers' rest. The Red Cross was asked in January, 1919, to loan three workers to act as hostesses at the officers' clubs. Miss Jay was chosen to equip and organize the junior officers' club in the embarkation center of Le Mans. Owing to the great congestion of troops in that area, upward of two hundred thousand at one time, the officers stationed there with the charge of moving the troops to the ports of Brest and St. Nazaire, were overwhelmed with work day and night. The regular mess, baths and pleasant lounging rooms for their few off hours were a boon for them. It was more like a fraternity house than any other in France. After it was started Miss Jay was merely hostess with general supervision.

Among those who have been asked to be patronesses at the lecture are Mrs. George E. Barnard, River Bend Farm, Ipswich; Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Manchester; Mrs. Francis Meredith Whitehouse, Manchester; Mrs. Costello C. Converse, Magnolia; Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, Pride's Crossing; Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr., Ipswich; Mrs. R. H. Fitz, Manchester; Mrs. E. Laurence White, Beverly Farms; Mrs. Henry Russell, Manchester; Mrs. Wm. Roscoe Thayer, Manchester; Mrs. Robert deW. Sampson, Manchester, and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell, Manchester.

WHAT could be more delightful than to take luncheon, tea or dinner at the Edna Ferguson T House in Magnolia What more attractive than to sit at one of the little green tables, on the cool piazza, over which giant trees spread a leafy shade, and which is fanned by refreshing breezes from the ocean? The Misses Ferguson are charming hostesses, and the food is delicious and daintily served. The tea house is well-known on the North Shore and old friends as well as many new ones are taking advantage of its hospitality.

Guests at the Edna Ferguson T House include Mrs. L. J. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. George Callister, Miss Coakley and Miss Katherine Fisher, New York; Mrs. W. J. Ferguson and Miss Meharry, Toronto, Ont.

Among those who took luncheon at the Edna Ferguson T House last week were Mrs. George Upton and little daughter and Mrs. Chester Dane and little son, who motored over from their summer homes in Marblehead on a trip to the Magnolia shops. Mrs. Emma L. Thayer, Mrs. Emily W. Haskell and Miss Lydia L. C. Wright, Wakefield; Mrs. W. D. Chapple, Allison Chapple and Mrs. Lloyd J. Thayer, Oakland, Ca., have also been guests at the tea house.

Guests for tea at the Edna Ferguson T House during the past week included Mrs. J. P. Ashley, Mrs. P. H. Duprey and R. Y. W. Ashley, Worcester; Mrs. H. L. Barton, Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, Montreal, and Mr. and Mrs. Welch, Chicago, who are spending a part of the summer at the New Ocean House, Swampscott; Miss Caroline Hunt, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Heard, of Boston, are with Mrs. J. Theodore Heard, Norman's Woe rd., Magnolia, as usual. Mrs. Henry Heard, who is always active in whatever pertains to the village and hotel summer colonies, this year was in charge of the Wm. G. Ward current events lectures, given every Tuesday morning at the Oceanside Annex.

MEMBERS OF CAPT LESTER S. WASS POST, No. 3, A. L., of Gloucester, one of the first Legion posts to be organized in the state, will endeavor to raise $25,000 by subscription next week, July 18 to 25, for the purpose of fitting up a building as explained in the following article from the committee:

To the Citizens and Summer Residents of Magnolia and Cape Ann:

The city government of Gloucester has generously offered to turn over to the Capt. Lester S. Wass post, No. 3, A. L., for the lifetime of its members, the historic old town hall, which has been used for so many years as a schoolhouse. We want this building to serve not only as a meeting place for the boys of Gloucester who took part in the World war, but as a center in which can be gathered the memorials and records of all that the men, women and children of Gloucester did in the war. We also want this historic structure to remain for the future as a distinguished feature of Gloucester's public architecture.

During the week of July 18 to 25, we are going to try to raise the $25,000 necessary to accomplish this purpose and if everyone helps to the best of his or her ability, we shall not fail.

Throughout the war Gloucester gave generously and repeatedly to every effort. This is the first time, and it is probably the last, that the people will be asked to do something for the World war veterans themselves. If the present effort succeeds we believe that it will never again be necessary to appeal to the city, to her citizens, or to her summer residents in behalf of the World war veterans.

More than 1,500 sons of Gloucester served in the war. They were ready, if need be, to give their all for you. Will you now give something for them?

We are making this preliminary appeal in the BREEZE, through the kindness of its publisher, J. Alex. Lodge, in order to acquaint you with our aims and purposes in this campaign. Also to aid our collectors who may call on you for contributions. This is a new experience for them and not in their everyday routine of life.

Now! All together! Let's go! All contributions will be acknowledged through the Gloucester Times, and the names of all contributors will be permanently recorded in the "Book of the Friends of the Legion," which will be kept in the Legion's archives. Contributions may be sent to Gilbert N. O'Neil, treasurer, Box 185, Gloucester, Mass., or may be given to any authorized collector.

Yours for the Legion and the city,

The ex-Service Men of Gloucester, by

FRANCIS A. MCDONALD,

Chairman of the Legion Memorial Campaign committee. Magnolia.

P. S. On July 18, only two years ago, began the great offensive which ended the war, and in which several boys of Gloucester gave their lives.

For the benefit of the new Marblehead hospital two readings by Mrs. Waldo Richards were arranged for by Mrs. C. L. Dane and others of the Marblehead colony. One reading was given last week and the other will be given today. Subject: "Abraham Lincoln." A few tickets are obtainable by telephoning Mrs. C. L. Dane, No. 2, Marblehead. Some of the subscribers are: Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Wm. T. Aldrich, Mrs. F. G. Macomber, Mrs. Austin T. White, Mrs. Byron Hurlbert.

MLLE. GERMAINE COSSINI'S four French readings, with music, to be given on Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock at the residences of Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, Pride's Crossing, July 22 and 29, and at Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Beverly Cove, Aug. 5 and 19, will be of interest to many North Shore people who know this brilliant young woman. The patronesses include: Miss Olivia Ames, Mrs. Eliot Bacon, Mrs. Thomas Blumer, Mrs. George E. Cabot, Mrs. Fulton Cutting, Jr., Miss Elaine Denègre, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Miss Hammond, Mrs. Herbert Hughes, Miss Sarah Guild, Mrs. J. H. Lancashire, Mrs. George Lee, Miss Louisa P. Loring, Mrs. George H. Lyman, Mrs. Robert S. Potter, Mrs. R. deW. Sampson, Mrs. Russell Sard, Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Mrs. Francis P. Sears, Mrs. R. P. Snelling, Mrs. Bayard Warren, Mrs. George E. Warren and Mrs. Samuel Welldon.

The subscription for the season is $10. Single tickets may be purchased by subscribers for their guests at $3 each. Checks may be made payable to Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Pride's Crossing, or Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Beverly Cove.

Says an admirer of Mlle. Cossini: "The title given, 'French Readings by Mlle. Cossini,' is misleading. She will recite the modern French poems with music, and also tell of the art, music, literature and politics of France at the present time."

PLAYHOUSE-ON-THE-MOORS, East Gloucester. — Although the little theatre idea is no longer new, diminutive theatres individually are striving to bring to their patrons the best modern one-act plays, the successful production of which has so far been a distinctive feature of the tiny playhouse. A unique theatre of this type is the Playhouse-on-the-Moors at East Gloucester. This little theatre had its origin in the ambition to develop democratic community spirit, and to bring within the reach of all the best in modern drama. During the coming week the Playhouse enters upon its third season as a popular and successful community dramatic center.

The first group of one-act plays will be presented on Tuesday evening, July 20, at 8.15 o'clock, continuing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the same hour. Plays of the first group are: "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," by Anatole France; "Overtones," by Alice Gerstenberg, and "The Marriage—Will Not Take Place," by Alfred Sutro. The second group of plays will be given in August, beginning on Tuesday evening, the 24th.

This year the Community Dramatic school and Boston School of Public Speaking, which are conducting summer courses in connection with the Playhouse-on-the-Moors, have done much to centralize and strengthen the permanent theatre organization. Splendid talent from the community and from the schools has been secured for the various casts. With Mrs. Bernstein, of the Neighborhood Playhouse, and Miss Gladys Young in charge of scenery, and Miss Florence Cunningham again directing, the performances will, without doubt, be most successful and of unusual interest to playgoers along the North Shore.

THAT beautiful simplicity, so hard to acquire, seemed to be the keynote of the gowns worn by the ladies at Del Monte's last Saturday evening, when a merry crowd of prettily dressed women and well groomed men from various sections of the North Shore gathered to entertain their friends for dinner and to enjoy the very fine music and the dancing. Later in the evening others arrived for late supper and the dancing went gaily on until midnight.

Among those entertaining at Del Monte's last week were Rev. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, who entertained the bridal party last Friday evening at dinner. The guests included William C. Zinsser, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Coolidge, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, 3d, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Converse, Mrs. Zinsser, Mrs. Louis Douglas, Miss Peggy Zinsser, Mrs. Wells, Miss Wadsworth, Rudolph Zinsser, Miss Ethel Zinsser and Dr. Wm. Breed.

The Shore was interested in the wedding last Saturday in Jaffrey, N. H., of Miss Emily Wesselhoeft and William Andros Barron, Jr. Mrs. F. W. Busk (Harriet Fessenden), a recent bride, was one of the bridesmaids. T. Jefferson Coolidge, 3d, and Charles R. Codman were among the ushers.

The marriage of Miss Amy Owen Bradley, daughter of Richards M. Bradley, and Philip Hales Suter, son of the Rev. John W. Suter and Mrs. Suter, of Chestnut st., Boston, will take place Saturday afternoon, August 28, in St. Michael's Episcopal church, Brattleboro, Vt. The attendants will be Miss Bradley's four sisters, the Misses Helen, Sarah, Mary and Edith Bradley; also Mrs. James J. Cabot (Catherine R. Rush) and Mrs. John W. Suter, Jr. (Margaret Sturgis). The Rev. J. W. Suter, Jr., will be his brother's best man and the ushers are Graham Aldis, cousin of Miss Bradley; Allan Kingsley, Charles Moorfield Storey, Frederick Goding, Norman R. Sturgis, Harris Gilman and Robert Bolling. After the ceremony a reception will follow at Mr. Bradley's summer residence, Bradley Home Place, Brattleboro, Vt. The Bradleys formerly lived on Smith's Point, Manchester.

MAGNOLIA had a beautiful wedding last Saturday afternoon. If the bride is happy that the sun shines on, then Miss Isabella Wadsworth, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, Jr., who became the bride of John Sharman Zinsser, ought to be a happy person all her life. It was one of the Shore's rarest days and Magnolia's natural charms made a delightful setting for the event. Mr. Zinsser is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Zinsser, of "Locust Wood," Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y.

The bride is a Vassar graduate, class of 1916, and the bridegroom is a Harvard man, class of '15. Dr. Wadsworth, father of the bride, performed the ceremony at five o'clock in the Union chapel, assisted by Dr. Walter S. Eaton, pastor of the Village church, Magnolia. Miss Wadsworth was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Charles Wadsworth, 3d, of Hastings-on-Hudson. Mrs. Wadsworth, 3d, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Ellen Zinsser, Peggy Zinsser, Dorothy Grammar and Ailsa MacColl, all of Philadelphia. Mr. Zinsser's father was the best man and the ushers included Wm. Zinsser and Rudolph Zinsser, of New York, cousins of the bridegroom; Dr. Wm. B. Breed, of Boston; Lewis Douglas, of Arizona, and Chauncey C. Loomis, of Texas.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress of ivory silk trimmed with point lace and having white ostrich ruching at the neck and sleeves. The long court train, and tulle veil arranged and fastened with the same orange flowers as the mother had worn, gave the bride a quaint, old-time charm. She carried a large bouquet of swansonia.

The bridesmaids wore shell pink organdie with hydrangea blue satin sashes and pink organdie hats trimmed with blue flowers. The matron of honor's hat was an all-blue organdie. They carried pink roses and larkspur made into old-fashioned round bouquets.

The bride's mother was a dainty picture in a gown of ashes of roses, one worn by her mother at Mrs. Wadsworth's own wedding. With it she wore an old-fashioned bonnet with pink flowers and pink chiffon streamers and carried a bunch of sweet-heart roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore champagne-colored georgette with bands of real lace and a brown hat trimmed with feathers.

Malcolm Lang, of Boston, played the following selections: Chopin's Prelude, No. 22; Chant d'amour, by d'Evry; Wild Rose and Reverie, from MacDowell; selections from Die Meistersinger, by Wagner, and the usual Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches.

The church altar was arranged in cedars with a vase of Easter lilies in the centre and on either side a vase of lilium mirriphilium and the new Farquhar lily. At the North Shore Swimming Pool where a reception was held following the wedding the fireplace was banked with ferns, while vases of gladioli and larkspur carried out the color scheme of pink and blue. Carboni, of Boston, was the decorator.

Besides relatives and guests from Philadelphia, New York and Boston, the summer colony of the Manchester-Magnolia section was well represented. The Wadsworths are Philadelphians who have long made their home in Magnolia and their daughter has always been a popular member of the young set.

At the reception a bride's cake was cut which added zest to the merry event. After a month's motor trip the young people will return to Hastings, N. Y., where they will reside.

THE WEDDING of Mrs. Grace McMillan Gibson and Maj. Morris Ernest Locke, U. S. A., took place Monday at the Ritz Carlton hotel, New York. Rev. Charles Wood, of Washington, officiated. Mrs. Gibson was attended by her ten-year-old son, James McMillan Gibson, and her seven-year-old daughter, Mary Preston Gibson. Maj.-Gen. Wm. M. Wright, of the office of chief of staff, U. S. A., was the best man. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Francis Wetmore McMillan, of New York. After the ceremony Maj. Locke and his bride motored to Boston to be the guests for a short time of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson at "Weld." Washington will be their future home. Mrs. Locke is well-remembered upon the North Shore, where she spent much of the time with her grandmother, the late Mrs. James McMillan, at "Eaglehead," Manchester.

MISS HELEN C. BURNHAM, "Overlook," Lord's Hill, Wenham, entertained the executive committee of the Village Improvement society at her home last Friday. Miss Burnham is president of the society. All of Wenham's summer colony and townspeople are interested in the fine work of the organization, now numbering over 90 members.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hughes, of Wenham, have been entertaining a house party composed of William Meyer, Miss Harriet Meyer and Stuart Pratt, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bonbright and Miss Isabel Dodge, of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph B. Dodge, of Wenham, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Nancy Dodge, born June 26. This is their second child.

Mrs. B. W. Currier, of Wenham, is remaining in her Lynn Shore drive home this season. The Wenham place, "Oberlynn Lodge," is not occupied.

Mrs. Edward B. Cole is not running the cannery at "Brookby Farm," in Wenham, this season. All through the war her garage was converted into a cannery, which turned out an enormous amount of canned goods. Last season it took care of supplies for hospitals. Part of the outfit has been retained for emergency use. When the "flu" raged a year ago the cannery was put to use as a soup supply kitchen. The Hamilton class of girls, formerly taught to can and dry in the cannery are now receiving instruction from Mrs. Frank P. Trussell in the schoolhouse domestic science room. If supplies are sent in the class will put them up for hospitals.

The "Folk Handicrafts Shop" has opened again near the tea house.

◇ ❖ ◇

The Henry C. Perkins family, of Washington, have been at "Green Court" for some time. Their daughter, Mrs. Albert H. Carroll, and son, Hamilton, are with them, as usual.

Miss Sara C. Walker, of "Ashleigh," will spend the mid-summer with the camping colony at Wilton, N. H.

The tea house, run by the Village Improvement society, did a much larger business this June than last year. All of the old friends of the Oceanside colony at Magnolia have been over to the little house, among them Mrs. E. M. Binney, Mrs. C. F. Berwind, Miss Cramp and Mrs. F. R. Culbert.

Mrs. Wolcott Howe Johnson and her young folk, Miss Rosamond, Samuel and George, recently had Miss Clarissa Curtis for tea. Other Shore people seen at the tea house have been Mrs. Francis Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Hoyt, Mrs. Charles Inches and Mrs. Gerald Bramwell.

Some member of the summer colony and of the Improvement society will be at the tea house each day, as usual, to act as hostess. Among these will be the Misses Burnham, Mrs. Francis P. Sears, Mrs. Frank A. McGee, Mrs. H. P. McKean, Jr., Mrs. N. W. Rice and Mrs. Frederick Ayer. Mrs. E. B. Cole is present nearly every day, looking after the exchange, a special feature of the place. This season antiques are sold in an old house across the road from the tea house.

HAMILTON'S American Legion is planning a lawn party on the school grounds, Friday evening, Aug. 6. The Hamilton post is named for the late Augustus Peabody Gardner, of Hamilton. A post at Middleton and one in Washington, D. C., are named in his honor.

Mr. and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr. (Frances Saltonstall), of "Longmeadow," Hamilton, are receiving congratulations on the birth of their third child, June 27, a daughter, named Frances Meyer.

The Albert R. Merrill family, of Hamilton, are at their new home, a camp on Bear island in Lake Winnipesaugee, N. H. Mr. Merrill recently purchased the island.

Mrs. John Appleton Tuckerman (Katherine Atterbury) and little daughter, Anne, have been recent visitors upon the Shore while en route to Dark Harbor, Me., from their new home at Hoffman, N. C. Mr. Tuckerman is interested in a peach orchard in the south. They have long been members of the Hamilton colony. This season the Francis P. Sears family are in the Tuckerman home in Hamilton. Mrs. Tuckerman has always spent much of the summer season at Islesboro with her relatives from Boston (the Dudley Howes) and from New York. While here Mrs. Tuckerman spent some time at the Hendricks H. Whitman's in North Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Bement, of Hamilton, are having a nice showing of iris along the little brook that runs through their garden at the old Patch house, one of Hamilton's attractive places.

Signora Brambilla (Julia Meyer), wife of the counsellor of the Italian embassy, is on from Washington to be with her mother, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, at "Rock Maple Farm," Hamilton, until September.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER TUFTS, JR. (Faith Simpkins), and two children, of Boston, are in "Birdwood," the attractive remodelled house on Main st., Hamilton, formerly occupied by the parents of Mrs. Tufts, the late Nathaniel S. Simpkins, and Mrs. Simpkins. Mr. and Mrs. Tufts, Sr., are with them for the season, having rented their house on the South Shore.

Miss Anna Agassiz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Agassiz, of "Homewood," Hamilton, is abroad this season.

Mrs. G. E. Niles is visiting her daughter, Mrs. John B. Moulton, in Hamilton, before going on to the Oceanside at Magnolia, as usual.

Miss Georgiana Wells, of New York, has been a house-guest of Mrs. W. H. Johnson, of Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard D. Ahl, of "Meadowside," Hamilton, are returning this week from salmon fishing in Canada. Friends of the Ahls have been receiving some specimens of their luck while away.

The Houston A. Thomas family, of "The Locusts," Hamilton, spent six months in Switzerland before coming to their place this season. While away extensive alterations and a large addition have been made, the work being done by F. P. Trussell, of Hamilton.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL
MAGNOLIA

THE warm days of the past week have added a zest to the out-of-door life at Magnolia, and the guests at the Oceanside have enjoyed the swimming, tennis, riding, golfing, boating and motoring to the full. While it has been warm during the day, the evenings have been so delightfully cool that one could equally enjoy the dancing. The Oceanside is gay with beautifully dressed women on dance nights, and many visitors from different sections of the Shore motor to the hotel for dinner and remain to enjoy the dancing.

Norton Lee and Ray Foote, of Detroit, Mich., are among the visitors to the Oceanside hotel. They are the guests of Wendell Anderson, also of Detroit, one of the season guests at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Lockwood, of New York, who were for years among the Oceanside patrons, were in Magnolia for a brief visit last Saturday for the Zinsser-Wadsworth wedding. They are at Old Fort Inn, Kennebunk Beach, Me., for the early summer, and will later go to the mountains. The Lockwoods were at Bass Rocks last season.

Mrs. W. L. Strong and her son, Putnam Bradlee Strong, of New York city, are at the Oceanside for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Gorman, of Dayton, Ohio, have arrived at the Oceanside, where they will spend the remainder of the season. They are very well-known at Magnolia, and their many friends are glad to welcome them back.

Registered at the Oceanside for a short stay are Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beers and their daughter, Miss Alice Beers, of New York city, who have been guests in years past at the Brownland cottages, Manchester.

Guests at the Oceanside for dinner during the past week included Chas. W. Fitz and Mrs. S. P. Bailey, of Woburn; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen and Mr. and Mrs. John Colgan, Boston; George G. Buck, Baltimore, who entertained a party of six.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Muller arrived in Magnolia from their home in Baltimore, Md., during the past week, and will spend the season at the Oceanside, as usual.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Kenney are entertaining Dr. E. J. Cronin, of New York, at the Oceanside.

Coming from their home in Savannah, Ga., Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Bell, Chas. Bell, Jr., Geo. P. Bell, Miss Suzanne Bell, arrived at the Oceanside last week, and are occupying apartments in the East cottage.

Rev. Abbott Peterson, of Brookline, who conducted the services at the Union chapel, Magnolia, last Sunday, spent the week-end at the Oceanside.

Registered for a short stay at the Oceanside are: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Terry, maid and baby, Fairfield, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. C. McMann, Toronto, Ont.; Misses Alma and Louise Davison, Toronto.

Old-time guests at the Oceanside include Mrs. Chas. E. Bond and Mrs. Thomas W. Sykes, of Hartford, Conn., who arrived this week.

Miss Helen Ranney, an old-time guest at the Oceanside, who came from her home in Boston to attend the wedding of Miss Isabella Wadsworth and John Sharman Zinsser last week, spent a few days at the hotel. During her stay she entertained Malcomb Lang, organist, of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Ranney, Wellesley Farms.

MRS. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, of New York city, who occupied the Sea Vista cottage, one of the Oceanside group, three years ago, has returned to the hotel for a short stay. At the termination of her visit to Magnolia, Mrs. Morgan will return to Cragston," her summer home in Highland Falls, N. Y.

Mrs. Eugene A. Perry (Lois Kilpatrick) joined her mother, Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick, at the Oceanside hotel last week. Mrs. Perry's home is in New York city.

Mrs. Otis Kimball, Beacon st., Boston, is spending the summer at the Oceanside hotel, as usual.

Among the most popular young ladies at the Oceanside dance on Saturday was Miss Suzanne Anderson, who is a very graceful dancer. Miss Anderson wore a charmingly pretty gown of nile green, with a wide silver lace insertion in the skirt and a silver bodice. Miss Anderson has as her guest, for a short stay, Miss Suzanne McFeeley, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

MRS. E. H. BRAINARD and her two daughters, the charming Misses Adelaide and Frances Brainard, of Pittsburgh, were welcome visitors to the Oceanside last Saturday night. They motored over from Bass Rocks, where they are stopping at present, in time for dinner and to enjoy the dancing. Both Mrs. Brainard and her two daughters, as well as the other members of the family, have been popular members of the Oceanside clientele for a number of seasons.

Registered at the Oceanside for the season are Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Williamson, of Quincy, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are old-time guests at the hotel, and have many friends here.

MUCH interest has centered around the alluringly pretty display of stencilled and tie-dyed apparel which was on display at the Oceanside, Magnolia, for several days this week. The work was done at the studios of Mrs. E. Bonnar Atwood, 137 Harvard st., Newton, and was exhibited by Mrs. Miriam G. Cole. Dainty negligees, gowns and sports apparel, with beautiful but simple designs, and in pastel shades, could not fail to please even the most conservative. There are also separate blouses, in beautifully blended and soft shades, as well as the smart little gowns for informal wear.

Among the negligees one of nile green attracted much favorable comment. It adhered to the Grecian model, with a pretty white square design, girlishly simple and attractive.

Mrs. Cole will remain on the North Shore for some time and will exhibit this lovely apparel in several places during her stay. On July 16 and 17 (today and tomorrow) she will be at the Moorland, Bass Rocks, and from there she will go to the Hawthorne Inn, on July 19 and 20 (next Monday and Tuesday).

A great deal of interest is manifest by the ladies of the North Shore colony in this new work; at the Atwood studios they seem to have struck a distinctly new and delightfully pleasing note in style, design and the blending of all the most beautiful and modish shades.

Arriving from their home in Cincinnati, Ohio, this week, Col. and Mrs. Samuel W. Trost are being welcomed back to the Oceanside, where they have spent a number of seasons.

Christian Laden, of New York, the well-known Arctic explorer, spent a few days at the Oceanside hotel, last week.

Mrs. Walter S. Wyatt will again spend the summer at the Oceanside, as usual. Mrs. Wyatt arrived this week from her home in Chestnut Hill, Pa.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

By Alex. G. Tupper

CAPE ANN.—There has been a large influx of people to Cape Ann during the past week. There are few cottages now remaining closed and the hotels are fast filling with season guests. While the trolley service is much missed, the auto bus service is becoming improved, with the arrival of new cars. Trips are being made between Rocky Neck, East Gloucester and Lanesville, between Center st. and West Gloucester and between the depot and Long Beach. The Rockport line started on Tuesday of this week and trips will be made hereafter on the half hour, leaving Center st. The buses will run in connection with the Gloucester line.

It is interesting to learn that the movement underway for the memorial park for the city of Gloucester, to be laid as a memorial to the Gloucester soldiers and sailors who served in the World war, is progressing rather satisfactorily. Already a number of houses bordering the land desired have been purchased. A number of summer people have been interested in the new park and contributions have been made to this cause.

The Judith Sargent Tea Rooms in the quaint Sargent-Murray-Gilman House, Middle st., Gloucester, have opened this week for the season. The hours are from ten a. m. till six p. m. The rooms have been very attractively arranged after the work completed by the interior decorators. The old house is one of the points of interest in the town and an hour spent here over the tea cups can be keenly enjoyed. Mrs. Addison P. Burnham is again in charge.

Mrs. Crocker, of Brookline, an annual guest at the Hawthorne Inn, entertained a party of eight at afternoon tea, at the Eastern Point Golf club last Saturday afternoon.

EASTERN POINT.—There is much interest in the first group of one-act plays to be presented on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, July 20, 21, 22 and 23, at 8.15 o'clock, at the Playhouse-on-the-Moors. This little theatre, which had its origin in an ambition to develop democratic community spirit and to bring within the reach of all the best in modern drama, enters upon its third season the coming week, as a popular and successful community dramatic centre. The titles of the plays of the first group are as follows: "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," by Anatole France; "Overtones," by Alice Gerstenberg, and "The Marriage—Will Not Take Place," by Alfred Sutro.

The second group of plays will be given in August, beginning on Tuesday evening, the 24th. Those persons interested in acting may communicate with Miss Florence Cunningham, of the Community Dramatic school and Boston School of Public Speaking, who is directing these community plays. This year, the dramatic school at Rocky Neck, which is conducting summer courses in connection with the Playhouse-on-the-Moors, is doing much to strengthen the permanent theatre organization. Splendid talent has been secured for the various casts and with Mrs. Bernstein, of the Neighborhood Playhouse, Miss Gladys Young in charge of scenery, and Miss Cunningham directing, the performances will, without doubt, be of special interest to playgoers along the North Shore.

The casts for the group of plays next week are as follows:

"The Marriage—Will Not Take Place"

Sir Henry Parker ..... Addison G. Brooks
Mr. Simon Free ..... Thomas C. Crosby, Jr.
Charlie ..... Mrs. John Scott

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

BASS ROCKS.—The Bass Rocks colony is now a lively little township, with its large number of summer houses, many of them of a pretentious character, and the hundreds of people now stirring upon the Shore boulevard and roads. At night the colony is aglow with lights from the houses and hotels. To appreciate the extent of the colony, one must get away at a distance, across the bathing beach to Brier Neck, then the size and beauty of the landscape can be realized. Now that the Bass Rocks colony is so largely populated for the season work on the ocean boulevard has been suspended till autumn. A splendid new stretch of road now connects Bass Rocks with Grape Vine Cove, with a surface almost as smooth as a floor. In few places in New England can the shore drive be more lovely with its natural scenery and continual view of the ocean.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. King, of Detroit, Mich., are located in the Terry cottage on Beach rd., Bass Rocks. Their son, Philip King, is attending a naval academy, and he is much interested in wireless telegraphy. He has erected a wireless apparatus above the house, on a twelve-foot pole.

Mrs. A. L. Merriam entertained a party of eight, at afternoon tea, at the Eastern Point golf clubhouse, last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Merriam is a guest at the Hawthorne Inn. She entertained much at the clubhouse last summer.

„Commodore Harry H. Wiggin, of the Annisquam Yacht club, is with his family, from Brookline, spending the summer at the Wiggin cottage on Norwood Heights, Annisquam.

Mrs. A. S. Hyatt and daughters, Miss Anna Vaughn Hyatt, the sculptor, and Mrs. Harriet Hyatt Mayor, of New York and Princeton, N. J., are located at "Seven Acres," the Hyatt estate at Annisquam. Mrs. Mayor's family is with them, as usual. Dr. Alfred G. Mayor, prominent in marine research, is now in the island of Pango Pango in the South seas. He will attend the convention of scientists from all over the world, at Honolulu, in August.

S. Henry Hooper and family, of Boston, are spending the season at their cottage on the shore of Annisquam, facing Ipswich Bay.

Prof. Charles L. Norton and family, of Boston, are spending the summer at their Annisquam cottage, overlooking Ipswich Bay.

Arthur A. Kidder and family, of Winchester, are located at the Adams homestead, Annisquam, for the summer.

Daniel H. Woodbury and family, of Littleton, have arrived at their cottage on Diamond Cove, Annisquam, for the season.

SWEET BRIER COTTAGE—have you been there? This charming little place is on Revere Beach boulevard. It is the cottage that formerly stood on Boston Common during war days and that has now been moved by its patrons, the Women's Municipal league, of Boston, to its new home at Revere. The membership committee of the league, of which Mrs. Parker H. Kemble, of Marblehead Neck, is chairman, is specially in charge of the new venture. Mrs. Everett Morss, Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, are among the enthusiastic workers for the welfare of the little house. All league members cordially invite every one on the North Shore to motor over to Revere and have a cup of tea, ices, candy or whatever else you can think of that a tea house always has. A pleasant drink served to many a motor party is ginger ale with whipped cream—truly delicious. A gift shop is also run in connection with the tea room.

The cottage is noticeable for its bright yellow and green paint, flower boxes and attractive windows. Inside green and cream paint, green and white checked draperies, and green and white oilcloth on tables and counters carry out a cool, simple, beach-like atmosphere. Seats are also outside. The sea-view is Revere's best.

Every Monday some member of the league will act as hostess in the afternoon. This Monday Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, of Coolidge Point, Manchester, was hostess. Mrs. Paine gave a special tea for a few friends including Mrs. James A. Lowell, Mrs. Bernard C. Weld, Miss Evelyn Sturgis, Mrs. Parker H. Kemble and some of the league's teachers of English to non-English-speaking men and women, among whom were Miss Emma T. Knight, supervisor of classes in this department, and Mrs. Needham, teacher of the demonstration classes in English with non-speakers of the language, that are being carried on for the Harvard summer school.

Pamphlets telling of the league's work are at the tea house. Look them over while supping your tea next time.

Samuel Geisinger, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Geisinger, of St. Louis, will entertain the house guests of the New Ocean House, Sunday, with a series of cornet solos.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE at Swampscott is one of the cool spots on the North Shore, and this week, the large number of house guests have thoroughly enjoyed the cool sea breezes and the comfortable salt water, during a period of extreme heat in other localities.

The formal ball tomorrow evening will bring out a large number of society folk from along the Shore, for snappy music, a splendid floor in a most attractive and cool ballroom, together with a brilliant company, makes this place, one most enjoyable, for the evening.

The black and white ball which was scheduled for July 24 will be held July 31. Plans of a most elaborate nature are being made.

Saturday an informal clock golf tournament will be held between the teams from the Cliff House, and the New Ocean House teams. This out-of-door sport is interesting; quite a number of hotel guests are fast becoming experts.

James D. Henderson, a summer guest at the New Ocean House, entertained the members of the Japanese and Portuguese warships at dinner last Saturday evening.

Zenas Sears, of Boston, who is summering at the New Ocean House, entertained a party of 16 friends at dinner last Saturday evening.

F. J. Fahey, vice-president of the Gillette Razor Co., sailed last week for Europe, leaving his family comfortably located at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan A. Donahue, of Methuen, are at the New Ocean House for the summer months. Mr. Donahue is the well-known clothier of Essex County.

Misses Barbara and Charlotte Bullard and Master Teddy Bullard, the young children of W. Irving Bullard, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, always form a lively group at the hotel and on the beach, where they delight in the ocean sports.

Among those registered at the New Ocean House for the season are Mrs. A. K. Sheldon and son, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Elder and Miss Janet Elder, Glen Ridge, N. Y.; Mrs. H. H. Block and children, Peoria, Ill.; Mrs. E. W. Meddough, Detroit; Miss Helen Morton, St. Louis; Henry W. Kalt and Mrs. Kalt, N. Y.; Miss Elsie E. Robbins, Lowell; Harry Blake Tyler, Miss Louise and Sydney Blake Tyler, Milton; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Penfield and Miss Virginia Penfield, Washington, D. C.; W. B. Devereux and family, Boston; Mrs. V. D. Burke and Miss Marion Burke, Boston; Miss Elizabeth Wallace, Fitchburg; Mrs. J. L. Wolcott and Miss F. F. Fifer, Toledo; Frank A. K. Boland, N. Y.; Frank I. Boulton, N. Y.; Rev. J. H. Morran, Peoria, Ill.

MISS KATHERINE AND MISS MARY CHADWICK, of the Hotel Somerset, Boston, are among the most attractive of the season's guests at the New Ocean House, and they are much in demand for various social events.

David E. Dow, manager of the Tremont theatre, Boston, is established at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

John Lodge, of Boston, spends the week-ends at the New Ocean House with his wife, who is established there for the season.

Mrs. Walter Raymond and children, Misses Dorothy and Mildred Raymond, and Arthur E. Raymond, of Pasadena, Cal., are at the New Ocean House for the summer. Mr. Raymond is head of the Hotel Raymond, one of the splendid hostelries of the Pacific coast.

SWAMPSCOTT.—Gov. and Mrs. Calvin R. Coolidge are expected at the Swampscott shore during the month of August and already plans are under way in North Shore society for their entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Beebe, of Puritan rd., Swampscott, are among those who spend a very long season at the Shore, and this year will be no exception. Their handsome white house is just at the curve of Phillips Beach and adjoining the Little estate. Red and pink ramblers in full flower flame against the house and the trellises, while old-fashioned flowers, including hollyhocks and canterbury bells top the fences which surround the estate.

The Simon Vorenberg home on Puritan lane, Swampscott, is one of the prettiest in that locality and every year the house and grounds blossom out more attractively. This season the gardens are in wonderful condition and the seawall is covered with green vines and bright flowers, set into urns. The verandas which look out over King's Beach are hung with swinging flower baskets.

Jacob R. Morse, Boston, who is established with his family at "Rock Lodge," Swampscott, is very proud of this house perched on the top of a ledge and near the sea. Each year the gardeners are busily at work setting out vines and plants to further beautify the grounds, and the informal arrangement of flowers along the walls and the ledges is most attractive.

The Dr. Samuel J. Mixter estate is now occupied by the family. This year, owing to the fact that many people cross this private estate on their way to fish on the rocks, a new sign has been erected, warning them off the private land of Galloupe's Point, Swampscott.

The former Oakland house property at Swampscott remains closed this year, as J. E. Allen, the present owner, has not yet decided just what the next move is to be.

SWAMPSCOTT.—Mr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Curran, of Andover are at their handsome residence on Atlantic ave., Swampscott, for the summer. This is one of the show places of the section and the formal garden which faces the sea is a most interesting sight at this season of the year. Ideally located, the verandas of the house give one a broad sweep of the ocean from Boston Light to Marblehead Neck.

George F. Schrafft and family, of Newtonville, are occupying the Bond estate on Puritan lane, Swampscott, this summer, and the youngsters of the family thoroughly enjoy the beach, which is directly in front of the house. The family have the use, as well, of the handsome flower garden and the vegetable garden which are pleasant adjuncts to the house. Mr. Grady, who was formerly at the Hunnewell estate in Wellesley, is in charge of the gardens this summer, and his hard work is very apparent, and the flowers, which are in formal beds, are blooming beautifully. A trumpet vine of great size covers the stucco pergola and a bird bath is set up in the center of the garden near the sun dial. The roses are now in full flower, forming a brilliant patch in the rear of the garden.

Mrs. Charles A. Bond, is not at the Swampscott shore this season, being installed comfortably at Billerica.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew C. Hill, of Commonwealth ave., Boston, are at "The Anchorage," Puritan rd., Swampscott, this season, in a handsome home which overlooks the beach where there is splendid bathing. The house, as usual, is set off by the brilliant display of red geraniums in the piazza boxes and along the borders of the paths.

PHILLIPS BEACH.—Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Carpenter, of Ocean ave., Phillips Beach, have opened their summer camp at Norway, Me., which is in one of the most beautiful sections of the lake country.

Everit B. Terhune, of Phillips Beach, has gone to Chicago, Ill., on an extended business trip. Mrs. Terhune is visiting relatives in Norway, Me., for the month.

The BREEZE $2.00 a year, $1.00 for six months.

TEDESCO COUNTRY CLUB was the scene of a brilliant dance and band concert at the clubhouse, Swampscott, Wednesday evening, there being the largest crowd of the season present. Among those who entertained at dinner previous to the dance were: C. H. Conway, D. H. Smith, H. W. Forbes, E. W. Ong, T. W. Chick, F. D. Beard, F. L. Goodwin, Dr. Farquhar, E. M. Fielding, W. G. Felt, R. H. Kimball, C. L. Baird, C. W. Pope, Dr. P. S. Smyth, T. H. Logan, W. H. Goddard, G. C. Walworth, Jonathan Brown, Jr., A. S. Robinson, H. W. Hill, R. W. Ward, J. J. Phelan, E. R. Fallon, F. P. Cox, F. T. Richardson, W. W. Scribner, G. C. Dutton, R. F. Daley and D. T. Thomson.

The board of governors of the Tedesco Country club held their monthly dinner at the clubhouse Tuesday evening.

The Tedesco Country club tennis committee, which consists of Henry W. Forbes, John Craig, Jr., George A. Dill and F. Ward Paine, are arranging for some most interesting tennis matches at the club this summer, and these interclub affairs will bring out some of the finest tennis players in this section. Although for several years tennis has not formed an important part of the club sports, this year it is coming back strong and every effort is being made to provide matches which will enthuse the club members and their guests.

Trap shooting has commenced at the Tedesco Country club and every Saturday a large group of men and women take part in this novel sport.

CLIFTON Improvement society, of which William L. Terhune is president, held a meeting at the Tedesco Country club, Swampscott, Tuesday evening, the Marblehead town fathers being the guests of honor. A royal good time was enjoyed, an excellent dinner served, and the affairs of the town discussed.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Reisor, of Cincinnati, have arrived at Rockaway ave., Clifton, for the first season at this shore.

Mrs. B. C. Anderson, of Cincinnati, has opened her home on Orchard Circle, Clifton, for the season.

Joseph Bakeman and family, of Rockaway ave., Clifton, were the hosts for friends over the week-end, and golf was enjoyed at the Kernwood Country club, Salem.

HOTEL PRESTON, BEACH BLUFF

REGISTERED at the Hotel Preston for the season are Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Hamilton, New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Henley, Brookline; J. J. Magill, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Haswell and Miss Katherine Haswell, Wakefield; Miss Lydia C. Wright, Wakefield; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bringhurst, Philadelphia; Mrs. A. H. Bowman, Hartford; E. B. Hale and family, Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Octon and family, Montreal; Mrs. James J. Barry, Mrs. E. V. Van Brunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Collins, Miss Marjorie Collins, New York; Miss M. E. Gray, Mrs. D. F. Hale, Cambridge.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB, Marblehead Neck.—The Ariadne was among the boats to go on the Eastern Yacht club cruise the past week, and on board were Captain and Mrs. Frederick C. Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Dyer, Miss Dyer, Miss Fletcher and Mr. Hartley. They are attending the international races this week.

Capt. Edwin Farnham Greene, on the schooner Windward, has as his guests Rear Commodore John S. Lawrence and James Lawrence, on the Eastern Yacht club cruise.

Capt. and Mrs. Elmer J. Bliss, E. J. Bliss, Jr., Miss Bliss and Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Chichester, of Marblehead Neck, aboard the schooner Shawna, are down at Long Island Sound for the races.

Capt. George E. McQuesten has as his guests, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gring, aboard the Mindoro, on the annual Eastern Yacht club cruise.

The schooner Waterwitch took Capt. Arthur Winslow, Miss Sarah H. Winslow, J. Lewis Stackpole and Henry Taggard, Jr., on the Eastern Yacht club cruise to Mattapoisett.

On the flagship Constellation, of the Eastern Yacht club, which is down on the Sound for the international races, are Commodore Herbert M. Sears; Fleet Captain Oliver Ames; Major P. S. Sears, C. Stewart Forbes, Chas. E. Hodges, Wm. B. Stearns.

CORINTHIAN YACHT CLUB, Marblehead Neck, is a busy place this year and all day and in the evening both the men's dining room and piazza and the new ladies' section are well filled with members and their friends who take delight in the view from this location. With the increasing interest in the club it was necessary to remodel the piazzas to allow more room for the ladies, and now, in addition to the indoor sitting room, the ladies have a dining room on the porch which is prettily decorated with flowers, an enclosed porch which is furnished with handsomely cretonned furniture, an open porch for those who desire and a space which is devoted to the tea dances.

The dinner dances are increasingly popular and every week finds the clubhouse crowded to the doors with summer folk from all over the North Shore.

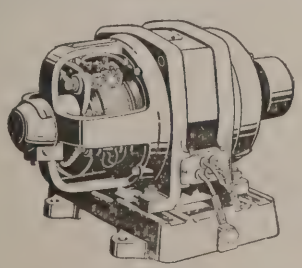

Starting this week, the club is holding a special series of mid-week races for smaller boats. Wednesdays, July 21 and 28, August 4 and 25, September 1, 8 and 15 are open to the Bay Bird class, the 12-foot catboats, and the Pleon Yacht club boats.

Commodore Lawrence F. Percival, of the Corinthian Yacht club, has offered a trophy for the boat in Class R having the best percentage in the season's races of the club. Vice-Commodore Frank C. Paine has offered a trophy for the boat in Class S under the same conditions, and Capt. Henry A. Morss, a trophy for the boat in Class S winning the most first prizes in the season's races of the Eastern and Corinthian Yacht clubs.

Vice-Commodore Frank C. Paine, of the Corinthian Yacht club, has a new boat this year, the "Alastor," built by John Alden with the Marconi rig.

Rear Commodore Sidney A. Beggs, of the Corinthian Yacht club, has a new boat, the Ruweida II, which is the largest craft of the "R" type in Marblehead harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tredennick, of Roslindale, have arrived at Clifton, where they will make their permanent home.

MARBLEHEAD.—Miss Elsas Sherwood, the well-known Boston pianist, is spending her fourth season at Marblehead, where she is resting in anticipation of a busy season next winter. Herself a distinguished pianist, she is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Sherwood, both of whom, in their day, were well-known in musical circles. Born in auspicious circumstances, Miss Elsas had for godfather Franz Liszt. Through the generosity of Mrs. Wm. G. Webb, of Salem, she was enabled to study under the masters of Europe. Upon her return to this country she studied composition with the late Fred F. Bullard and again took up piano study with Paderewski. She is a composer of ability and a member of the Chromatic club, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Pierce, of Lee st., Marblehead, are entertaining Mrs. Nap Poulin and daughters, of San Francisco.

Mrs. Ella S. Phillips, of Marblehead, has as her guests her grandchildren, Miss Myrtle Phillips Mower and Master Wm. A. Mower.

Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Noyes, who have been at Marblehead for several seasons, have gone to Canada. They will come to the North Shore in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Ballard, of Marblehead, who purchased the Lookout Court section of Marblehead a few years ago, have wonderfully improved this locality and there is a great demand for the studio apartments on the hill. Many are the summer visitors who come to this Marblehead shore, and, falling in love with its quaint charm, linger on through the winter, and this year is no exception and there is quite a demand for apartments which may be retained during the coming winter.

One of the prettiest of new little tea rooms in Marblehead is that which has been remodelled and made attractive by Mrs. Gertrude deM. Dupre, of Brockton. It is located on the waterfront opposite the Boston Yacht club, and the fine old building has been remodelled, fireplaces uncovered, rafters exposed to the light of day, the walls and furniture painted a cheery yellow, and altogether—with the arts and crafts and embroideries—provides a charming place to while away a quiet hour, with the splendid view of the harbor just outside.

BUNNY WOODS is meeting his classes as usual. Newcomers to the Shore may want to know what kind of classes. As we said long ago on this page "Bunny" is an institution from Boston that moves out upon the Shore when the season starts. Bunny is the friend of all boys and girls. With him they learn to play the fair game and are initiated into all the mysteries of baseball. Bunny has been having outing classes along the Shore for years. The fathers and mothers of many of his present pupils were in these classes.

The class schedule is as follows: Monday afternoons, children 8-10, at Mrs. Henry F. Sears', Beverly Cove; Tuesdays, ages 10-13, Mrs. John Caswell's, Beverly Farms; Thursdays, ages 3½-6, Mrs. Sears' place again; Friday, older group, at the Caswell place. Saturdays are kept open for entertainments.

MOSQUITOES

Writhing up the windows,
Dozing on the doors,
Strutting down the staircase,
Flitting o'er the floors,
Biting in the night,
Biting is the nght,
Over legs and arms and faces,
Bite! Bite! Bite!

Oh you bold mosquitoes
If you love your life.
Let alone the House of Ladd
Or there will be strife.

Mashing the mosquitoes
With blood-thirsty boot;
Grinding with an iron fist,
Stamping underfoot—
Too late the mosquitoes
Squashed now and sad,
Wished that they had left alone,
The vengeful House of Ladd.

—Gabriella May Ladd, aged 14.

GREAT interest is being taken in a dance to be given at the Montserrat club on Friday, July 23, by some of the younger set of the summer colony. It is hoped by means of this dance to receive a goodly sum for the Children's hospital, of Boston. A movement has been set on foot by which the younger people in and around Boston are associating themselves in groups with the object of helping the hospital.

This dance is the first of several entertainments to be given. Tickets are selling at $2 and may be obtained from Miss Helen Rhodes, Harbor st., West Manchester. The dance is limited to those between the ages of fourteen and eighteen.

WEST BEACH, Beverly Farms, boys and girls have Joseph Fineran, Y. M. C. A. swimming teacher from Boston. He has taught at several resorts previously. Mr. Fineran regrets that the boys and girls have not been able to go in much on account of the cold water. Some one has suggested that a pool, similar to the one at Magnolia, would be a fine thing for West Beach. Then the temperature of the water would not hinder quite so much in bathing and having water sports. Nevertheless we'll soon be hearing about the swims going on here.

THE Misses Helen and Priscilla Rhodes, and Hélène Ellsworth are among the girls who will take the women's test of the American Red Cross Life Saving corps at the N. S. swimming pool.

Jack Wallace, swimming teacher, is getting everyone lined up for the big event tomorrow afternoon at the Pool, when the American Red Cross Life Saving corps will give an exhibition at 3.30. Don't miss it. The Ellsworths, Johnny Wheeler, Elizabeth Scudder, Fred Schlafly and others are getting ready for the races. The last Saturday in August races for cups will be on. Every two weeks there are races and the one scoring the highest during the season will have his name placed upon a shield to be hung in the clubroom.

ROB'T ROSENTHAL, of Beverly Farms, recently celebrated his 7th birthday. Robert is fond of rabbits and received a fine pair for a gift. Previous to that day, however, he had made a rabbit house all by himself, wishing with all his might that he might have a pet for it.

As luck had it the night the house was finished a big black rabbit was found in the gardener's yard. He at once took the bunny and put it in the new house where it greatly surprised Robert the next morning.

JUNIOR BREEZES are you going to see Tony Sarg's marionettes in Horticultural hall, Manchester, Friday and Saturday, July 30 and 31, at 2.15 and 8.15? A children's performance is given Saturday morning at 10.30. Tickets are $2, $1.50, $1 and 75c. See 'The Rose and the Ring.' The Bookshop for Boys and Girls, of Boston, is presenting this entertainment.

Also, be sure to motor into Boston some time this summer and visit their unique place at 264 Boylston st., opposite the Public Garden. You will find the dearest bookshop imaginable fitted up like a homeplace for you folk to examine the books to your heart's content. Mother, daddy, and everybody no matter how old or young will find just what they want here.

When the Book Caravan from the shop went over the Shore last week, a little boy at Beverly Farms went early to the beach and selected his book from the Caravan. But somehow he had no money that day. Mother was in town and not coming back until six. Frequent trips he made with his friends during the day to the van, and patiently he watched for the evening train. Here's hoping that mother supplied the cash for the cherished volume.

"Play Days," a book of stories for children, by Sarah O. Jewett, is a delightful little volume of old-time, homey stories that little girls like. It is in the Manchester library.

CHARMS OF THE FACE

By Dr. Bertha Scher
of 665 Fifth ave., New York City

YOUR face is your mirror! It reflects what you are. You cannot reflect beauty in your face, until beauty reposes in your soul. Let your face be willingly bright, happily brave, trustingly faithful, warmly sympathetic—though external treatments are essential. Let your smile be a symphony of harmony.

Beautiful eyes! Your eyes are the windows of the temple of your soul. How many minutes a day do you give to their care and cultivation? You can have eyes that gleam; eyes that command, control, inspire; eyes that mirror stars in the soul.

Beautiful mouth! Your mouth is the glory line of smiles. The index of character. The seal of divinity. The flower of the heart. Do not allow yourself to have a droopy mouth. If your thoughts are suspicious, hateful, selfish, your mouth will grow thin. Keep the scorn shadow out of its curves; do not allow hate to trace eagle talons at the corners of your mouth. Let every line that comes into your face be a path where smiles come and go.

Beauty of form.—An ungainly form is mostly awkwardness. Beauty of form is artfulness. Train your body into beauty of expression. By deep breathing develop your chest. By treatments fill out your neck. By diet reduce your fat. By exercise keep your body supple.

Mental charms.—If you wish to have mental charms that will fascinate, awaken your mind to the thrilling beauty of ordinary things—the sky, the sea, the glory of the woods, the mountains, the fields, the flowers, the superb loveliness of the stars and the sunsets, the moonlight, the silver rivers; the splendid heroism of the common people, who hopefully and cheerfully toil in the fields of life, the crystalizing, moulding influence of common tasks, the heroic nobleness in the work of those who teach and serve. Awaken your mind to the charming tenderness in music and song, and the matchless symphonies that never cease to echo in your memories. Awaken your mind to the beautiful around you, and in this manner acquire the personal charm so desired by us all.

—Dr. Bertha Scher,

Magnolia, Mass.

MAGNOLIA recent rentals through Jonathan May include the following: McMillan place, Dennis Upsons, who had the Shaw house last season; Wilkins cottage, Geo. D. Wick, of Youngstown, Ohio.; Joslyn cottage, J. A. Schlafly, of St. Louis; Covel cottage, D. B. Hussey, of St. Louis; Bull cottage, G. H. Gorman, Dayton, Ohio; and Miss Elizabeth G. Houghton's cottage to Mrs. Wm. Flinn, mother of A. Rex Flinn, of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Wm. R. Nelson, of Magnolia, is entertaining Mrs. Walton H. Holmes, of Kansas City. Mrs. Nelson's daughter, Mrs. Irvin Russell Kirkwood, has made a short visit with her and has gone on to her summer home in the Adirondacks. Mrs. Nelson is planning to stay late in the season this year at her beautiful home, one of the most attractive in Magnolia.

NORTH SHORE GARDENS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Series of Garden Days Conducted This Season "The Chimneys" and "The Narrows" Open Tomorrow

GARDEN DAY will be observed again tomorrow (Saturday) for the benefit of the National Civic Federation—this time at "The Chimneys," the estate of Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, at Dana's Beach, Manchester, and at "The Narrows," Mrs. W. Scott Fitz's place near Singing Beach, Smith's Point, Manchester. Last Saturday the gardens at "Rockmarge," the W. H Moore estate, Pride's Crossing, were open for this purpose.

This will be a most delightful opportunity to see two of the show gardens of the Shore and at the same time help the Federation. Only a 50-cent fee is asked. Hours are from two to six p. m.

Mrs. Lane's garden lies at one side of the large white house with its green blinds, big piazzas and many big white chimneys. An approach to the gardens can be made from the woods off Summer st. or up the rocky cliffs at Dana's Beach.

Once upon the terrace extending along the house on the water side the visitors will find shrubbery and flowers leading out and thus marking a natural approach to the gardens. Upon emerging from this terrace walk the beautiful water garden in its pink, blue, white and yellow setting of perennials bursts upon the view. The great iris bed is a most unusual and striking feature. It is safe to say that no such mass of iris is to be seen hereabouts, while the water gardens are the largest on the Shore. These splendidly planned water beds with their fountain centre and grass walks and charming geometrical patterns are the part de luxe to see. However, the later additions to the garden compose a group of terraced wall gardens that are individual gems of beauty. Made within the last eight years these terrace and walls are beginning to show a ripeness of age and luxuriant growth of plants peculiar to wall gardens.

Three terraces have ben outlined with walls, while the fourth is separated from the above terrace with a hedge.

Garden Scene at "The Chimneys," Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane's estate, Manchester

Artistic Garden Scene at "The Narrows," Mrs. W. Scott Fitz's Estate, Smith's Point, Manchester

The terraces are planned so that the upper one next the water garden is small; the second, wider, and contains rose borders along each side; the third is longer and wider than the others and is a garden spot in itself of roses and other flowers. It is here that a tea house is built at one side of the fine stretch of lawn centering the terrace. The lower or fourth garden contains lilies, phlox, peonies and other flowers. besides the vegetable gardens and greenhouse. From this plot the woods are entered. Many interesting wild plants grow among the trees.

After viewing the terraces and wall gardens we hope the visitors will not forget to linger at the little white gate by the bed of irises and look across the lily pools through the arch in the pine trees. Here a charming vista of the sea has been let in. A cozy summer-house is built into the archway of greenery from which the sea as well as the gardens can be thoroughly enjoyed.

Upon leaving the main garden near the house perhaps the visitors will note the high, white picket fence between the garden and house—a pretty background for the blues, pinks, yellows and greens that prevail here.

From walls of richness and iris of rare and wonderful size the visitors will find another charm in the garden of Mrs. W. Scott Fitz at "The Narrows." Her beautiful garden spot lies next the Episcopal church on Masconomo st. Mrs. Fitz's summer home is on the opposite side of the street quite close to Singing Beach. The garden is suggestive of quietness, a haven of rest from the much frequented road running past it.

The visitors will, no doubt, enter at the little gate next the church and pass down the park-like slope that makes a most fitting entrance to the garden below. Some unusually fine old trees are seen before the garden is reached.

The plan of the garden includes a great green space in oblong shape, surrounded with perennials, gravel walks and shrubbery. A pergola covered with vines and having a little stucco tea house in the center is at the back of the garden. Lying directly in front of the tea house is the lily pool. The garden boundaries are in themselves of much interest—pergola, shrubbery on the sides and the open, hillslope on the front. Pink, white, yellow and blue seem to predominate among the flowers now.

Statues representing St. Francis and Birds, a sundial showing Youth, Middle Age and Old Age, and a fountain piece of the sun god shooting a serpent, all the work of Mrs. Maynard Ladd, are charming additions to this garden.

Leaving the garden and crossing over a little bridge brings the rose garden to view. A fine hedge is a noticeable feature here. Vegetables are also growing, neatly enclosed with a hedge. The gardener's cottage and greenhouse are in this section.

Every Shore garden is different. In this respect the garden lovers who come tomorrow will have a different experience at each place. We wonder if Mrs. Fitz's delightful garden, with its great carpet of greensward in the center and its home-like tea house, will not be suggestive of an ideal place for garden gatherings and parties.

IN MY GARDEN

By Alex. G. Tupper

I TREASURE the odor of roses
That stand so graceful and tall,
Where the mignonette lies at their feet
At the side of the garden wall.
The hollyhocks sway, pink and golden,
With the rambler's deep blush close by;
And the larkspur peeps over the hedge
With its smile, as blue as the sky.

And these are all in my garden
Above the stretch of the sea,
Where mingles the free ocean air,
With the perfume that comes to me;
And the summer winds are happy
With the bluebird on the wing;
And the bees and the gay butterflies
Are welcomed in trespassing.

There is more in my garden than flowers
And the blossom-scented air,
For a face is seen in the glory
And a form is in fancy there.
There is much in the odor of roses
And a joy in this something unseen,
So, I cherish as sweetly this fancy
'Mid the flowers and hedges so green.

Ah, there are spirits at work in my garden
'Neath the glow of the bright summer sun,
Tinting garments of pink, blue or yellow,
At the birth of each fair little one!
There are others to bear out the dying
To a land and a garden more fair;
But there are those who remain to give comfort
And I find sweet Remembrances there!

A VISIT TO THE GRACE HORNE GALLERY, AT LIBRARY HALL, MAGNOLIA

A Very interesting and attractive art exhibition is being held at the Grace Horne Gallery, Library hall, Magnolia, a large number of prominent painters, etchers and sculptors being represented. Miss Horne had a gallery last winter in Trinity ct., Boston, and last summer she conducted the Sargent-Murray-Gilman Gallery, on Middle st., Gloucester.

The present exhibition of paintings is one of the finest groupings of representative work seen hereabouts for some time. The spacious wall room is covered with subjects of a varying nature, landscapes, marines, figures and decorative motiffs. The artists represented include Charles Hopkinson, Childe Hassam, Wm. M. Paxton, H. Dudley Murphy, Hayley Lever, Wm. Winter, Alice Beach Winter, Henry B. Snell, Marion Boyd Allen, H. A. Vincent, Fern Coppedge, Winthrop Turney, Eben F. Comins, Walter L. Palmer, Louise Upton Brumback, Wm. Baxter Closson, Hobart Nichols, Carl Nordell Dodge MacKnight, E. Parker Nordell, Bertha M. Peyton, Parker S. Perkins, Stuart Davis, Jane Peterson, Felecie Waldo Howell, Jean N. Oliver, Mary Nicholena MacCord, Harriet Blackstone, E. Caser, Harold Dunbar, W. Lester Stevens, A. C. Goodwin, Ruth Anderson, Martha Walter, George L. Noyes, J. Eliot Enneking, Alexander Tupper, A. Shelden Pennoyer, Irma Kohn, Albert Felix Schmitt, Gertrude Fiske, John F. Folinsbee, Henry R. Kenyon, M. Bradish Titcomb, Mary Littlehale Murphy, Charles Hovey Pepper, Susan Bradley, Gertrude Bourne, Morris H. Pancoast, Agnes Richmond, Varnum Poor, F. H. Kidder, Arthur Spear, Francois Verheyden.

A most interesting collection of etchings and drawings include the work of Childe Hassam, John Sloan, Frederick G. Hall, Charles Woodbury, Lester G. Hornsby, Arthur W. Heintzelman and Armond K. Coomaraswamy.

The sculptors represented are Albert H. Atkins, Bryant Baker, Robert Baker, Louise Allen and John Mowlry Clarke.

Charles Hopkinson shows some spendid figures with landscape and Wm. M. Paxton's figure and interior has lovely, warm color. Hayley Lever's "Fishing Boats, St. Ives, Cornwall," is characteristic of his fine light in sky and on water. H. Dudley Murphy's snow scene is a delightful one and two snow scenes by Walter L. Palmer, of New York, are fine specimens of his clever work. Alice Beach Winter's "The Peacock Chair," with its fine color sense, and Marion Boyd Allen's "Shipbuilder" has virility. J. Eliot Enneking has poetry in his charming portrayal of "The Brook in the Woods." John F. Folinsbee gives a wintry feeling and good tone to his "Harbor" scene. Chas. Woodbury has painted a stretch of sea with a warm summer sky and floating clouds. Harry A. Vincent, of New York, paints in unusual tone and very interestingly the wharf scenes and the coast of Rockport, where he is spending the summer. Louise Upton Brumback shows children in wading at the beach at Bass Rocks, an altogether delightful composition. The figure of Lieut. Homer J. Cote, of the French Aviation corps, is well painted by Eben F. Comins—a nice bit of color and well-made khaki. There is strength of character. Wm. B. Closson has painted a hollow between the waves, giving some fine palistic color and motion. Jean N. Oliver has tender sympathy in her "Summer" subject. E. Caser is a young Italian painter, who shows a well-painted "Market Place in Porto Rico." Jane Peterson, of New York, has a splendid decorative bit in her still life subject, an orange tree with harmonious background, and her "Summer Afternoon" has notably good color and clever drawing. George L. Noyes, a Boston, painter shows "The Covered Bridge" and "Flowers." Etchings by John Sloan and Charles Hassam are particularly interesting. Visitors from all along the North Shore attend the exhibition daily. The hours are from ten a. m. till six p. m., daily, excepting Sunday, and the public is invited. The gallery will continue all summer.

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE OF NORTH SHORE ESTATES

MR. AND MRS. HERBERT HUGHES, of Grosse Point, Mich., and Wenham, have well established themselves in their new home by this time. The old house has not been altered in the least, only painted and furnished by an artist, but changes have been made upon the grounds and outbuildings to some extent.

Built about 155 years ago this house must have seen many phases of life. The first owner was one Abraham Dodge, one of the numerous Dodges of that vicinity. Simeon Dodge owned it next, after which it passed into the hands of a summer resident, the late Charles Tuckerman; Harry Holmes, George Lee Peabody and Mrs. Douglas Munroe Robinson (Dorothy Jordan) were the succeeding owners. It was known as Dorothy Jordan's farm for several years. After she ceased to use it for a country home it was made into a vacation house for girls from the Jordan Marsh store in Boston. It then passed to its present owners. Hand-hewn timbers are seen in the ceiling beams and wooden nails in some parts.

When the Hughes' purchased the place a year ago they practically turned it over to Mrs. John Osgood Blanchard, interior decorator, of New York. Mrs. Blanchard chose the furniture, the wall and floor furnishings and every feature about the house. She even attended to the plumbing and painting, making it ready for the family to enter without a care.

And beautifully did she do it! Charming and rich simplicity might express the first impression made upon entering the cool and summery looking house. Each room is distinct, yet a most harmonious part of the whole.

The floors, being made of wide boards, were not polished, but covered throughout the house with a soft-toned tan carpet without any figure in it.

Furniture, representing old English and French periods, has been done by Damersk, of New York. The English linens used for window and bed draperies and chairs are a striking and pleasing feature throughout.

The woodwork is all in white except in the living-room. In the latter green is the keynote, even the piano being stained to correspond. The dining-room, a delightful room facing the front terrace just across the small hall from the living-room, is done in cream-colored, stippled and waxed woodwork.

Back of the living-room and dining-room is a small den and a bedroom and bath. This bedroom is done in the Jacobean period. Four bedrooms, each with a bath, are upstairs.

The upper hall has interesting cream hangings made by the mountain women of Kentucky. Their knotted work is exquisitely done on heavy muslin, this being used for the window draperies and cushions in the long window seat.

French doors open on the terrace from both the dining-room and living-room. These doors and plenty of windows effectively draped with the English embroidered linen cannot help but be a pleasing feature as previously stated.

The flower garden formerly at one side of the house has been removed. Vegetable gardens bordered with flowers and three greenhouses for fruits, vegetables and flowers are all that the place has retained in the horticultural line.

Other interests, such as dogs and horses, take up the attention at this home—a typical interest generally found in the Hamilton-Wenham section.

At the kennels, the largest private kennels on the Shore, Charles Button is in charge of the 40-odd wire-haired fox terriers. The dogs remained here all winter and some 15 or 20 little puppies are now roaming around the grassy hillside on which their home is standing. In the office of the kennels may be seen 30 silver cups, large and small, and a case of hundreds of ribbons. Anyone who reads this is welcome to visit these noted little dogs, the keeper says.

These "Gailaich Kennels," as they are called, have won championships at many shows. Recently Cedarhurst, Mineola, Manhattan Beach, Morristown, and Altondale shows have given championships. At the latter place the best dog in the show came from these kennels. In variety classes they have also shared honors. Gailaich Jip and Gailaich Nettle, wonderfully interesting champions, are the recent winners of some of these honors.

In the modern, steam-heated stable were kept the hunters during the past winter. Mrs. Hughes' horses are looking fine and must be anticipating many a merry hunt this fall. The six or more hunters, Pete, the donkey, and the pony, Billy Sunday, make up the stable family. Dr. Martin, a thoroughbred from Virginia, made a good race for the Myopia cup last fall.

THE Larcom cottage at Beverly Farms has been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. L. Rosenthal, of Boston, for a few seasons. Last fall it was newly painted and looks very attractive now in its fresh gray coat, green blinds and well-kept lawns.

The thickly wooded hill, West Beach hill, on which Mrs. Charles H. Dalton's home is standing, makes an attractive background for this cottage, the Bernard C. Weld place and the George Lee villa.

Nicely kept lawns, flowers here and there and a vegetable garden, with plenty of space reserved for the Rosenthal children for their play, are noted about the cottage. Boxes of pink petunias around the piazzas go well with the gray paint.

The hedges fronting these places are interesting. A tall, thick cedar hedge fronts the Larcom cottage, while the Lee and Weld places are attractively screened with vine-covered walls surmounted by hedges.

THE MAGNOLIA SHOPS

NOTES OF INTEREST

THE smiles of King Sol have turned Lexington ave., Magnolia, into a gay and busy place, for all day long cars are lined up on either side of the street, and prettily dressed women stroll up and down the avenue, visiting the shops in search of dainty and smart apparel to add to an already well-chosen summer wardrobe, or to select things for early autumn wear. Nor must clothes only occupy the thoughts, for there is always new things to be bought in order to keep the summer home bright and attractive.

The exquisitely dainty luncheon sets on display at the Grande Maison de Blanc are attracting the delighted admiration of the visitors to the Magnolia shops. They are of that rich creamy shade so much sought after, and are trimmed with very wide Pointe de Paris lace, in alluringly pretty designs. So beautiful are they, that they seem veritably to have been whisked right out of Fairyland.

Some day very soon we shall pay a visit to the Grande Maison de Blanc's children's department, which has won the friendship of the mothers in the North Shore colony.

In the window at Lamson & Hubbard's is a very unusual little sports hat of white breast feathers.

For the lover of pearls, a rope at Dreicer & Co.'s holds a delightful fascination. Th epearls are of uniform size, having on either side three rare jade rings, looped. Little pearl tassels on either end of this ornament are connected to the jade by tiny platinum diamond loops. The tout ensemble is superbly lovely.

To look fresh and cool and ready for the morning's sports, it is very essential that we be attractively attired, and, of course, sweaters play a very large part in our morning wardrobe, so, because we found so many beautiful and distinctly "different" sweaters in all the prettiest colors, on previous visits, we again call at Farr Co.'s. In trying to select the very smartest, we succumb to the lure of a pretty little white sweater of the slip-on model. It has a very low neck, a wide girdle with a small tassel on either end, and is made of zephyr wool. It is really the unique little pockets of this dainty sweater that entirely win our hearts, for they are made similar to a watch pocket, having a slit outlined with chain stitching, about a half-inch from the top.

Another very new and very smart sweater is the high-neck sport sweater, which is a very pretty shade of brown, and can be worn without a blouse. A sweater that is being received à bras ouverts, and which fits beautifully, is of alpaca, with a brush wool trimming around collar, cuffs and pockets. It comes in juniper green, French blue, French grey, nut brown, white, black and navy.

We find Harry Collins' store invitingly attractive, with its pretty display of tastefully arranged hats and gowns. One sport costume that is being favorably received this season is the "Khaki Kool," for morning wear. It has the straight-line effect, with plaited side from the waist line, and looks modishly narrow when on. One of these dresses is white with just a touch of red as edging and a very narrow red leather belt. The red is scarcely more than a suggestion, and the tout ensemble is unusually smart.

A very dainty gown for afternoon wear, and one that is very distinctive, is made of white batiste, hand-embroidered with green dots, with a wide green girdle and white hand-embroidered collar.

Gowns for dinner and evening wear, beautiful combinations of lace and chiffon and all lace, are next brought to our admiring attention, as well as exquisitely simple little chiffon dance frocks.

The hats at this charming little shop next beckoned, and we soon lose all track of time in our delight over their attractive display. A very beautiful hat is one of white organdie, its only trimming being hand-embroidered flowers in white on either side of the rather large brim.

Shoes play a large part in setting off a pretty gown or sports costume, and, of course, we must give them as much attention as we give our hats. In looking for something distinctive let us pay a visit to John Lauther's. Here we find our troubles at an end, for we find shoes of the very latest model that fit perfectly and give the foot that well-groomed appearance so hard to attain. Patrons are very much admiring their little evening slippers of brocaded gold and silver, with the new side fastening so much worn this season. A pretty little slipper for evening wear is of black satin, and is something after the sandal model, also with the side fastening. A very attractive pair of white satin slippers next attract our admiration. The satin is turned in such a way as to give the appearance of two distinct materials. We are pleased to learn that we can be fitted right in the store, as they carry all the different sizes, and that there is to be no delay whatsoever in the delivery of our purchases.

Something very new in hats is the "string bean hat" at Ferlé Heller's. It is made of blue taffeta, with string beans of the same material across the front. It is truly quite novel and looks well on. There is also an unusually dainty little hat of orchid organdie with orchid lilies across the front; a touch of yellow makes this an altogether smart and becoming hat. Delightfully pretty "dressy" hats are finding favor with their North Shore patrons, as well as the pretty hand-embroidered silk sports hats.

As though stolen right out of Fairyland by some mischievous fairy, and deposited in Magnolia for the convenience of her many visitors, the Yellow Butterfly has alighted directly opposite the Oceanside hotel annex. With its color scheme of yellow and black, in which wild flowers play a goodly part, there is an alluring and simple daintiness about this little tea house that is irresistible. Even the china is exquisitely designed in yellow and black. The porch is broad and inviting, with pretty flowers peeping from between the yellow curtains at the window, and nodding a graceful welcome from the tables.

Delicious sandwiches and many other delicacies to tempt the appetite are served. Nuts can also be procured here and delicious home-made candies. Truly an attractive little place to visit for refreshments.

I have lived to know that the secret of happiness is never to allow your energies to stagnate.—ADAM CLARKE.

THEIR VARIED INTERESTS AND ACTIVITIES

II

THE TIDE-OVER LEAGUE, incorporated in 1919 as a charitable corporation, is of much interest to Shore people. Its workshop and salesroom is at 296 Boylston st., Boston. The purpose of the league is thus stated: "An institution organized for the purpose of giving employment to men and women during a period of convalescence from illness or while temporarily handicapped by some physical infirmity."

Weaving, normal courses in occupational therapy, design, rug-making, basketry, bead-work and leather-work are taught to the temporary or permanent invalids, thereby aiding in bringing them back to health and self-supporting occupations.

Mrs. Freeman Allen, of Nahant, is president; Joseph W. Lund, treasurer, with Mrs. George E. Warren, of Manchester, as assistant; Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., secretary and clerk.

The directors, many of whom are Shore people, include Mrs. Freeman Allen, Miss Mary C. Burnham, Miss Minnie M. Brackett, Miss Anna H. Chase, Mrs. Wm. R. Fay, Mrs. A. Lawrence Hopkins, Miss Mary Irving Husted, Mrs. Lester Leland, Dr. and Mrs. Harry C. Low, Joseph W. Lund, Miss Katherine P. Motley, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., Mrs. Wm. S. Spaulding and Mrs. George E. Warren.

A bas relief by Anna Coleman Ladd in memory of Dr. James Marsh Jackson, of Beverly Farms, has been presented to the league by a patient of Dr. Jackson. The James Marsh Jackson Memorial fund has been started by some of Dr. Jackson's friends and patients, who felt that they would like "to do something to more solidly establish the work he founded and to which he gave so generously of himself." This fund has grown by quiet work, but only the income is used for league work. Gordon Abbott, Thos. Motley and Joseph W. Lund are trustees of the fund.

Show your appreciation of this good work by attending the sale on Tuesday, Aug. 3, 10 to 6 p. m., at Mrs. Edward S. Grew's beautiful home, "All Oaks," West Manchester. A bridge tournament will also be on at 3 p. m. Mrs. George E. Warren and Mrs. Lester Leland, of Manchester; Mrs. Freeman Allen, Nahant; Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Marblehead; and the Wenham tea house are people and places selling bridge tables.

MARY RUTHERFORD JAY, who gives an illustrated lecture at the J. Henry Lancashire home in Manchester on Friday, July 23, shows many interesting lantern slides. Some show the conversion of ugly, useless ponds into places of beauty by building islands, and planting the shores in Japanese styles. Slides of gardens in India, China, Japan and California are shown for comparison.

In the utilization of waste land she shows slides of gardens in India, China, Japan and California are shown for comparison.

In the utilization of waste land she shows slides of three acres of harbor mud on an estate which was converted into flower gardens and tennis court.

Slides of English gardens are shown to give the spirit of unity which exists in England between house and garden.

The following excerpts from her lectures may be of interest:

"In planting a flower garden for an all season bloom, I think that a much better effect is obtained by selecting very few varieties for each period and if the garden is a formal one, planting these in profusion in all of the beds, rather than by having a plant museum."

"Distinctive gardens worked out in a definite color scheme can thus be had if the garden builder can resist the temptation to use a little of everything he has seen or heard of in the way of plant life."

"Successful gardening is a knowledge of the discard, knowing what to eliminate."

"A great deal of charm could be given to gardens by planning for lighting them and using them at night. Stone lanterns placed at important posts and especially in water gardens add a great deal of beauty and mystery."

"So many gardens seem to be planned merely to walk through that I want to make a strong plea for greater harmony between home and garden. They should be considered as one. The garden should be the continuation of the home outdoors, and should be studied to provide a pleasant place to sit, and in which to have privacy and shade, so that the family life may go on out there during the warm months."

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD Y. FITZGERALD, of Boston, formerly occupied the Gail Hamilton cottage, Main st., Hamilton. They are now on a farm at Bolton.

Mrs. Fitzgerald, who was an alternate to the San Francisco Democratic convention, is the first and only woman to address a national political convention. She is the daughter of the late Admiral John G. Walker. Her mother, formerly Rebecca W. Pickering, granddaughter of Col. Pickering, of Salem, occupies "Ashleigh," one of the most attractive places on Main st., Hamilton. In "Ashleigh cottage," close by, is where Mrs. Walker's son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. John J. Thomas, spend the summers.

Mrs. Fitzgerald has long been interested in suffrage, while her mother and sisters are not so inclined. While in college she took up settlement work in New York and in Boston became identified with the social work carried on by the late Mrs. Pauline Agassiz Shaw. Gradually the suffrage movement enlisted her attention and she was a frequent visitor at suffrage meetings throughout the country. During the past two years she has been working with those who are trying to build up the public school system in Boston. At the recent convention Sen. Walsh wished her to second the nomination of Sen. Owen; in order to have this done he remained out of the room until after Mrs. Fitzgerald had made her second.

Mrs. Walker, the mother of Mrs. Fitzgerald, worked with Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, mother of Randolph Hearst, when they were living in Washington. These two ladies, so long ago, were instrumental in getting the free kindergartens established in the public schools of Washington. Mrs. Hearst practically carried the kindergartens of Washington and also of San Francisco until the public responded and took them over for the schools.

ANNA COLEMAN LADD, sculptor, her new home and recent works have been the subject of many an article in current magazines.

Mrs. Ladd lives on the North Shore. She is the wife of Dr. Maynard Ladd, of Boston, and has long been identified with the Manchester colony.

Dr. Ladd has now purchased a place at Beverly Farms and the family is living in the remodelled house in Preston pl. Three or more acres of fine wooded grounds, covered mostly with oaks comprise their "Forest of Arden."

The farm house has been changed in many ways, three rooms and a hall being the greatest additions. A house of casement windows has been made, practically every wall being mostly turned into windows. The architect was C. Kerens, of Danvers. But Mrs. Ladd's clever, artistic touches are everywhere.

The den is an attractive room done in Chinese red and black. Over the mantel are the panels of Russian dancers, made in Mrs. Ladd's New York studio before she went to Paris.

The dining-room has a peacock blue ceiling and silver walls. A refectory table is used. Gray is the tone used in the rest of the house.

The new studio is a barn built over in the simplest and most convenient manner possible. Underneath the studio proper several cars can be amply housed.

Coming upon the building with its striking architectural features and statuary set so charmingly around it under the big oak trees is a novel experience. The place is open for visitors every Thursday afternoon. A treat is in store for anyone who finds this spot and meets Mrs. Ladd personally. The workshop is close by, but this is not open to the public. In it Mrs. Ladd works daily, all through the mornings and often till near the dinner hour. We were permitted to see the figure of a young aviator the other day —a clay model which she had spent a half-day upon. It looked perfect in its fresh and daring youth, just wet from her hands. But, as we said, her workshop is not for visitors.

The large and well-stored studio is showing fountain figures and other work exhibited in Paris, New York, Philadelphia and Boston. A gallery extended around the upper part of the place as originally planned. Right here Mrs. Ladd had a clever thought. She left the gallery on the ends and lowered it at the back of the room. The low platform, therefore, has a stage-like appearance and will make an excellent place for little plays. Back of the stage is the great arched window—a striking feature, especially when viewed from the outside. Its long casement windows open out like huge wings, lighting the whole place as well as giving a good view of the upper gallery from the outside. Beneath the galleries may be seen much work. The delightful corner arranged as a tea room has a very Bohemian air.

Displayed in various places are French and Polish posters, also German trophies of armor and mitrailleuses belts brought back by Dr. Ladd from the war zone around Nancy, where he was taking care of 20,000 French children during the war.

A bronze memorial relief of symbolical figures made for the Tide-Over League in honor of the late Dr. James Marsh Jackson, of Beverly Farms and Boston, is hanging in the studio. One gallery contains the Mother and Child group; also many small heads done by Mrs. Ladd while in Paris when she was free to work for herself.

Mrs. Ladd's year's work has been the Fountain of Youth pieces, having done these marvelous three young athletic figures since her return from France. These represent what this North Shore woman can dream of and then execute in the able manner for which she is noted.

The architect arranged a door at the front entrance to the studio to carry out the temple effect of the building.

Will Mrs. Ladd's work in Paris ever be forgotten? Never, while one mutilated soldier whom she helped lives to call her blessed. Perhaps the following letter written during war times and previously published will help to recall in a nutshell Mrs. Ladd's Red Cross work:

"I wish you could see the preparation, big and little, or what we have to meet—the Red Cross, I mean. I don't know about other things. One of the most interesting details I have chanced on is the work that Mrs. Maynard Ladd is doing. She is the Boston sculptor I used to know there. She has a studio over in the Latin quarter, high up in a quaint, crazy building, where she is making faces for French soldiers who no longer have any faces. I took pictures of two of them the other day. I would not want to describe, it if I could. Mrs. Ladd is making them new faces from photographs of what they once were, modeling, painting and finishing the whole thing herself. They are almost miraculous.

"The expression does not change, of course, but they are so human and full of life, that one seems to feel no lack. She has even arranged so that they can smoke. Here is a godsend to wretched unfortunates that only a sculptor of real ability can give and no one knows how long it will be until she must begin on new faces for American boys whose own are shot away."

"Edith Stotesbury Hutchinson," on a bright little red book, caught our attention this week. That is, Mrs. Sydney Emlen Hutchinson, of "Sydith Terrace," Beverly Farms. The title of the book is "A Pair of Little Patent Leather Boots."

We had heard in a casual way of the book, which someone had supposed was written for children and we had also heard that it was sold by its writer for a charity benefit. The publisher's annotation, as soon as read, dispelled all idea of its being a children's book, evidently guessed at by the someone from the title.

How the charm of a pair of little patent leather boots enticed a man half way across the continent of Europe is the theme of the fascinating little story. Mrs. Hutchinson makes a travel book a most unique affair. Her hero is a young man traveling abroad. He writes letters to his chum at home. The letters are full of life, wit and charm. The country, his novel situations, exciting experiences and perplexities as he dashes from one place to another in order to see and know something of the owner of the patent leather boots, the "other man" who appears, and the happy ending, all make up a book that holds one's attention from beginning to end.

If someone asked us Mrs. Hutchinson's interests we might say, after reading the book, home, children, people in general and all that makes life worth while.

Among the clever and interesting thoughts the hero writes back home are a few that seem specially typical of his makeup. For instance:

"Why is it that men never seem to marry the type of woman who amuses or fascinates them? We certainly are queer creatures! Every man wants for his wife, 'the girl who has never been kissed,' yet after winning her, his feelings are secretly hurt if he thinks that no one has ever tried to kiss her."

"There is something so appealing in the confidence and friendship of children."

"There is something almost pathetic about the way an old maid clings to a few shreds of romance. I suppose it is because her cherished illusions have never been ruthlessly shattered by the many unexpected pitfalls that seem unavoidable in the path of marriage."

In regard to a mother he met: "She seemed so thoroughly unconscious of all other surroundings—her whole world lay within the radius of her strong, white arms and her deep blue eyes seemed only to see as far as the children's little feet could go. Jack, why arn't there more women like this! If other women only knew what joy and what a haven of rest lies within the touch of the chubby, soft little arms, they would not carelessly thrust them aside for so many silly pastimes that are so little worth while and which bring in such a small harvest of happiness. I tell you what, Jack, this has made me think a lot! The word home has all its true meaning where there is a woman like this."

"It does seem a pity, sometimes, that men who are going to progress in the world can't see far enough ahead when they pick out a wife, to choose someone who is capable of growing up with them."

DR. SAMUEL A. ELIOT PREACHES AT MANCHESTER

DR. SAMUEL A. ELIOT, president of the American Unitarian association, preached on Sunday last at the Unitarian church at Manchester. He began his sermon by reference to a conversation he had had with Phillips Brooks, not many years before his death. The talk fell on the observance of Saints' Days in the Episcopal church. "What, for instance," Dr. Eliot asked, "do you make of St. Bartholomew's Day? St. Bartholomew is merely a name and we know nothing whatever about his character or career. What do you find to say about him?" "Oh," it was answered, "I take that occasion to preach on the value of insignificance."

Dr. Eliot went on to show the value and function of ordinary people. "The ordinary man is the most numerous man," he said. "Most people are neither over-wise nor over-foolish. They have a fair share of common sense. Few men are either scholars or dunces. The majority of Americans have a decent common school education. So in money matters. The agitators delight to describe the luxuries of the inordinately rich, and great fortunes do fill a considerable place in men's eyes, but after all they are quite exceptional things, and excessive poverty, in spite of the cries of excited reformers, is, in America, comparatively rare. The great multitude have neither more money than they know what to do with nor are they seriously pressed for the necessities of life. The same is true about happiness. People are not all the time in rapture nor all the time depressed. Most people do their duty pretty well and walk the common road without making too much disturbance about it.

"The average person has about the best chance in the world. Men find real inspiration in commonplace things. A lasting power abides in the influence of a man who with all the common passions and infirmities is still faithful, pure, just and loving, a man with no exceptional talent, doing the regular work of the world cheerfully and well, doing ever better work, but always with ordinary tools. The real life of a planet is not in any extreme, Arctic frost or torrid heat. It is in the temperate lands that the grain ripens that feeds the world. I do not wish to underestimate the forces of the great souls or the power that lies in conspicuous examples, but I maintain that our best success is due not so much to our admiration of the great as to our own obscure fidelity to duty and the devotion that passes without any public celebration. The earth is indeed illuminated by the bright and lonely fires that flame from time to time on the conspicuous hilltops, but more inspiring and enduring are the quiet lamps of patience and courtesy and hospitality that burn in thousands of households and give light and cheer to all the neighborhood."

THE TWO PARTIES which but a few years ago shied at the suffrage question, now seek to out-flank the other in their efforts to win the favor of the women. The women are discerning and will not be mislead by the manipulations of skillful politicians.

EDITORIAL

THE BEACHES OF THE North Shore are attractive these warm days of summer. From the numerous bathing beaches along the Cape Ann shore to the long stretch of sand at Revere Beach, bathers have been enjoying the unexcelled opportunities for bathing and boating. In every village and city of the North Shore there are good bathing places and the residents have availed themselves of the opportunities afforded. The town of Manchester has Singing Beach, which is famous the world over because of the peculiar musical sound made as one walks on the dry sand. Hugh Miller, so writes Lamson, "describes a phenomenon similar to the musical sands of Manchester, in the loose Oolitic sand of the Bay of Laig on the island of Eigg, Scotland." The beach is owned by the people of Manchester and is maintained and policed by the town. The bathing facilities afforded are unexcelled and attract people from all over the country. Swampscott also has attractive shore advantages for boating, bathing and other forms of recreation which the sea affords.

At Beverly Farms there is private grant of land given by the heirs of John West to the inhabitants living within the district bounded by the Pride's Crossing, Wenham and Manchester lines, for boating, bathing and recreation. This grant, on the petition of the heirs of John West, was incorporated by the Massachusetts General court under the name of the West Beach Corporation. There were no funds provided for the care and maintenance of the property. In order to meet the taxes paid to the city of Beverly and to keep the property in repair, the corporation makes charges for the use of the pier, the beach and the bathhouse and the water privileges. The need of coöperation is recognized and many summer residents, realizing that the beach adds materially to the land values of all the estates, purpose to maintain the high standards which the West Beach Corporation has maintained by making annual gifts to its treasury. The income received by the corporation can only be used to improve the property, and so every cent contributed to its treasury is used directly to maintain the property. The corporation is handicapped by the large expense involved in its care and because it pays for taxes instead of drawing upon the community for maintenance from the common taxes.

At Tuck's Point the town of Manchester has an attractive and popular breathing place where picnics are enjoyed by the various organizations of Manchester. The forward-looking and generous spirit of a Manchester friend made this recreation spot possible.

So all over the North Shore there are recreation spots from the attractive municipal park at Gloucester to the southern edge of the district at Revere. There is no wonder that the Shore has been such an attraction to summer residents for generations. It combines the beauty of the country and grandeur of the shore. "It sounds like a paradox to state that you may look out from rugged cliffs over a summer sea and inhale its salt fragrance and yet by a turn of your heel find yourself face to face with a landscape of rustic meadows and stately woods." The North Shore has been making a reputation since these words were written in the Scribner's Magazine in July, 1894, that has gone around the world and attracted people from many states and many lands. Fortunate is he who may live in such a land.

THERE WILL BE a united Republican party this year. The Progressive defection of other years hampered the organization and lead directly to the success which attended the Democratic party at the polls. The progressive element in the party showed its strength in the support which Major-Gen. Leonard Wood received at the convention and showed its good judgment in rallying to the support of the candidate who was acceptable to a majority of the convention. General Leonard Wood has issued a statement in which he heartily supports the nominees of the party. The good sense and manly conduct of General Leonard Wood was not unexpected by those who have known what his ideals of conduct have always been. He is clearly right in his opinions that no one will challenge them when he writes: "The party can win through united effort and such clear and explicit declaration of program as will bring the large independent vote to its active support; the party's policy must be clean-cut, forward-looking and constructive; one which will guarantee her freedom from foreign control and class domination; one which will safeguard our traditional policies at home and abroad; one which will stand against the forces and influences tending to break down morality, or threaten the physical well-being or the solidarity of our people. It must be a policy which will strive for a speedy return to a peace basis and to a government under the constitution." The earnest support of the progressive elements of the Republican party and the independent voters of all the parties will not fail to have a great influence in the coming election. The Republican party has a republican opportunity. It must not fail in the year of advantage.

THERE ARE MANY SHORES and many climes, but no shore and no land like our own North Shore.

THE PRESENCE OF THE Cruiser Kasuga of the Japanese navy off the coast of New England and its anchorage at Boston after the trip along the coast from Portland to Boston, was a unique event. It was significant. The battle cruiser went to Portland upon the invitation of the state of Maine. While in the New England waters a call at the port of Boston was diplomatic. The carefully written statement of the commander of the cruiser was received by the people of our state with favor. There has been so much anti-Japanese propaganda, a little wholesome propaganda in aid of the plucky little nation can do no harm. Despite all the conflicting reports and rumors it will be difficult for artful propagandists to make the people believe that there is any lurking danger of facing the enmity of these people of the East. The new era of peaceful relations among the nations has come. America must have an open hand and a generous will toward all nations to aid in ushering in the new times. The American people appreciate the courtesy of the Japanese government in sending over the warship. It also reciprocates the kindly feeling which the tactful commander of the Kasuga expressed in his statement to the people of the state of Massachusetts: "This is a purely peaceful duty, so that this opportunity would cement the friendship between your country and our country which is happily existing. We are earnestly endeavoring to show our good will toward America, the greatest nation of the world." It will be indeed a blessing to the East if the United States, Great Britain, China and Japan understand each other and unite to assure progress and peace.

The North Shore is served by efficient departments of public service,—the Essex County Registry of Deeds and the Essex County Probate Court and Registry of Probate. The organizations are housed in a beautiful building skillfully planned and admirably maintained in the city of Salem, the county seat. Here all the deeds and wills of the county are filed. There are capable men serving the county in the important positions of judges of the Probate Court. The traditions of Essex County are being maintained by the high-grade attorneys who serve the district. The Registrar of Probate issued a manly "creed" for lawyers. It is a section from an opinion of C. J. Rugg, S. J. C., on March 15, 1915, and has a worthy place in the office of any lawyer. The layman may find profit in reading the opinion and in considering what competent lawyers think of their calling and the ideals of their workmanship: "It becomes necessary to consider somewhat closely the duties of an attorney-at-law. He is in a sense an officer of the state. From early days he has been required to take and subscribe an 'oath of office' which forbids him from promoting and even from wittingly consenting to any false, groundless or unlawful suit, from doing or permitting to be done any falsehood in court, and which binds him to the highest fidelity to the courts as well as to his clients. The courts being a department of government, this is but another way of saying that his obligation to the public is no less significant than that to the client.

"He is held out by the commonwealth as one worthy of trust and confidence in matters pertaining to the law. Of course no one can know all law; but every attorney ought to possess learning sufficient to enable him either to ascertain the law or to determine his limitations in that regard for the purpose of giving safe advice.

"It is impracticable to attempt to name the matters about which he may be asked to act. Stated comprehensively they include the liberty, the property, the happiness, the character and the life of any citizen or alien. They touch the deepest and most precious concerns of men and women and children. The occasions which lead one to seek the assistance of a lawyer are often emergencies in that person's experience which prevent the exercise of critical discernment in selecting a counsellor. They involve the utmost trust and confidence. In proportion as the client is poor, ignorant or helpless, and hence less likely to be able to exercise judgment in making a choice, the necessity of adequate learning and purity of character on the part of every lawyer increases in importance. Thus the interest of the public in the intelligence and learning of the bar is most vital. Manifestly the practice of the law is not a craft, nor a trade nor commerce. It is a profession the main purpose of which is to aid in the doing of justice according to law between the state and the individual and between man and man. Its members are not and ought not to be hired servants of the clients. They are independent officers of the court, owing a duty as well to the public as to private interests."

Such an opinion is straight in ethics, keen in its vision, sound in its principles and worthy of the high ideals of the American courts. Horace H. Atherton, Jr., Register of Probate for Essex County, does well in calling the attention of the profession to the opinion.

The Tryouts in Cambridge for the great Olympic contests and the great yachting races mean that the recreations and pleasures of peace times have actually come.

If Harding's Front Porch policy involves a plan to drive the committees of every community to make a vigorous campaign, the policy is a good one. It is not likely that Harding will confine himself to a hard and fast rule. It does appear wiser, however, for the party to make the fight as an organization, rather than to lay back and to permit the selected leader to waste his time in an unsupported personal campaign. The present campaign will demand more work than the two candidates of the Republican party can do. Every Republican voter must rally to the aid of the candidates.

The Demand of the Hour is not for more politics, but more statesmanship. The trouble at Washington has been the failure of men to rise to the opportunities of the hour. The people are weary of backing and filling, manoeuvering and compromising. The hour has struck for poise, power and punch in the policies of the nation. Politics and petty intrigues have failed. Statesmanship alone can eudure the demands of a reconstruction era.

The Coal Situation is a serious one. The question demands the attention of the keenest minds and the most energetic spirits of our nation. Already the governor of Massachusetts has called attention to the seriousness of the situation by the appointment of a fuel commissioner. Now the mayors of Lynn and Boston have made vigorous protests to the President of the United States, demanding attention to an important New England industrial problem. The mayor of Lynn calls attention to a peculiar situation. He has been able to purchase coal at a low rate, but unable to obtain transportation facilities. Later he finds he could purchase coal and have transportation facilities through other operators. The injustice of the situation struck home and he wired a vigorous protest to the President. The mayor of Boston has asked the attention of the President to the situation which exists in that city. Manufacturing enterprises are living from hand to mouth and the normal accumulations of coal for the winter are not being made. The exportation of coal is a serious question. No one wishes to hamper the industries of the old world by cutting off entirely the American coal. After America has fought in a world war to aid Europe in the period of reconstruction it is unlikely that the nation will be so petty as to cut off the nations from America's aid in this way. It is a serious and compelling situation. America must have coal to care for its normal manufacturing needs and yet care for the suffering industries of the old world. The unfortunate condition is that the profiteers are taking advantage of a situation for their own greedy interests. The nation has a knotty problem to solve,—that of restricting profiteering and yet maintaining the transportation of coal in normal quantities to American centres. The protest of the North Shore mayor was well made and ably sustained by the support which Mayor Peter's protest gave.

The Democrats have made a futile effort to make the League of Nations the outstanding conflict at the polls. Republican voters who are strong proponents of a League of Nations are not going to be influenced by such artful tactics. The average Republican knows that he can trust a Republican government to meet the situation honorably and justly.

MARRIED HAPPINESS

Some Rules Written in 1300 are Pertinent In These Days

It may interest modern readers to know how the Middle Ages solved the ever-green problem of "How to be happy though married." A little Italian treatise, written about 1300, purports to contain the 11 pieces of advice given by a mother to her daughter on the eve of the latter's marriage. They are as follows:

1. Avoid everything likely to annoy your husband. Don't appear gay if he is sad, or sad if he is gay.

2. Try to find out what dishes he likes, and if your taste does not accord with his, don't let him see it.

3. If your husband has dropped off to sleep through illness or weariness, take care not to wake him, and if you absolutely must, do it gently and do not make him start.

4. Be faithful in love and do not rob your husband; don't give away or lend his possessions without his permission.

5. Don't appear too anxious to know your husband's affairs, but if he does tell you about them keep his secrets and never repeat in public things told you in private, however trivial they may appear.

6. Love your family, especially those whom your husband loves, and don't find fault with them for little things.

7. Don't do anything of any importance without askking your husband's advice, and always consider what he says to be best.

8. Don't make impossible or wrong demands upon him which displease him and are contrary to his honor, so that no evil may come upon him through you.

9. Be careful always to look pretty and neat. Be suitably dressed without ostentation or exaggeration.

10. Don't be too familiar with your servants. It makes them scornful and disrespectful.

11. Finally, and most important of all, do nothing which could possibly make your husband jealous, for thus you will lose his love. When he comes home receive him with pleasure. Make much of him, and pay more attention to his relatives than to your own, and then he will act in the same way toward you. See that everything in your house runs smoothly. And always make yourself attractive.—The Literary Digest.

1301 Nickels In Half-Gallon Prove It Yourself

"How many nickels will a gallon jug hold?" queries the St. Joseph Observer unfairly, and then proceeds to show it didn't mean "that" at all by adding:

"Possibly nobody in St. Joseph knows except Gus Prinz, and he only knows how many in a half gallon. Some months ago he decided to save all the buffalo nickels that came to him in trade and drop them into a gallon jug. The jug got too heavy to lift, so he poured out and counted the half gallon it contained. There were 1301, or $65.05."—Kansas City Times.

ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING is found to be, in the last analysis, merely commercial propaganda. The use of this propaganda, then, must be of the highest possible type, or otherwise it will defeat the very purpose for which it exists.

The written word, the most common form of advertising, very often does not produce beneficial results and advertisers wonder why. There are many reasons for this lack of success, but the most common is that faulty construction of "copy," involving much ambiguity of speech, has tired the prospective purchaser, rather than interested him.

The secret of advertising success, as in all other lines of commercial endeavor, depends, primarily, upon the "salesmanship" of the "copy." Individual taste, evidencing itself in this more than in any other phase of business, dictates the general "set-up" of your advertisement. Brevity and strength are to be desired whenever possible; not brevity of space, but of words, for space properly arranged assures one that the most casual observer will not pass it by. Make your "ad" brief and to the point.

The BREEZE is an admirable medium for advertising, reaching the eyes of a most discriminating class, and having a wide circulation. Let the North Shore know what you have to sell. People will buy, if the article for sale is attractively called to their attention.

ADVERTISE IN THE BREEZE

STRAND THEATRE, LYNN

Will Rogers, droll comedian and star of the "Follies," in his latest cinema production, "Jess' Call Me Jim;" Douglas MacLean and Doris May in "Let's be Fashionable," from the Artcraft - Paramount studios; Louise Fazenda, Billy Armstrong and Billy Bevan in Mack Sennett's latest comedy, "The Gingham Girl," and the current release of the Strand Topical Review will be among the screen attractions at the Strand theatre, Lynn, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. New York critics, who have previewed Will Rogers' picture, declare it to be his best effort, giving him, as it does, exceptional opportunity to bring out those characteristic ways that have made him such a popular favorite on the musical comedy stage.

The MacLean-May production is declared to be even more delightfully entertaining than their "23½ Hours' Leave" and "Mary's Ankle." It has to do with the experiences of newlyweds who join a fashionable country club and become involved in some of the laughable "complications" that one frequently observes at ultra-fashionable clubs of that character. Their experiences with kindred souls" and "affinity" parties create joyous entertainment.

Jack Pickford in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," Ethel Clayton in "The Ladder of Lies" and other pictures will be featured Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

On Sunday Frank Keenan will be shown in "Brothers Divided" and Charles Ray in "The Hick."

The North Shore:

IT sounds like a paradox to state that you may look out from rugged cliffs over a summer sea and inhale its salt fragrance, and yet by a turn of your heel find yourself face to face with a landscape of rustic meadows and stately woods.

—Scribner's.

MANCHESTER

Mrs. O. H. Sawyer, of Boston, is visiting with relatives on Forest st.

The Clifford Goodwins, of Springfield, are visiting with Mrs. Goodwin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Haskell, Vine st.

Mr. and Mrs. George Horsford, of Merrimac, are spending the week visiting with Mrs. Horsford's parents, the Charles R. Pearts, on Bennett st.

Mrs. Ruth McKenzie and Mrs. Edward Gasbee, of East Dedham, with Miss Maud McLain, of Cambridge, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hodgdon over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Knight, who have been visiting at the home of Mr. Knight's father, Edward S. Knight, left for Boston the first of the week. They will later return to their home in St. Louis.

Frank Cheever is taking a two-week vacation from his duties in Boston, during which time he is busily engaged as one of the town assessors. The assessors commenced their annual compilation the first of the week, preparatory to the annual tax assessment.

Baseball tag day tomorrow! The tag day planned for earlier in the season, but postponed because of a driving all-day rain-storm, will be held Saturday. The association is in need of all the financial support it can command, and the tag day ought to receive the generous support of everybody. What would Manchester be without its baseball games on Saturday afternoons?

Yesterday was the birthday of little Augusta Gardner Cook, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester D. Cook, of Pleasant st. Augusta is the "company baby" of the Manchester State Guard company of war day renown. When the company was in camp at Framingham two years ago this week, Musician Cook received the happy news over the phone one night that the stork had left a little baby girl at his home back in Manchester. The boys all "chipped in," from Captain Robertson down the line, and made up a purse for the little miss and the fund is on interest at the Manchester Trust Co. today. The name Augusta Gardner comes from the name of the camp —Camp Augustus Peabody Gardner, called after our own late Captain A. P. Gardner, of Hamilton. Yesterday many of the old company "chipped in" again to buy a present for the little girl as her second birthday present.

Miss Alice Haraden is taking her vacation this week and is acting as chaperone to the Normal school party camping at Falmouth.

Miss Gladys E. Locke, formerly a teacher in Milford (N.H.) High school, was the guest of Mrs. Ernest G. Webb (Princie Dodge) over the week-end.

Miss Alice Gleason was greeted by many of her friends and former acquaintances on the occasion of a short visit to town this week. Miss Gleason formerly lived here, her father being the pastor of the Congl. church at one time. She also taught at the Story High school, and now she teaches Spanish at the Haverhill High. Miss Gleason is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Beaton, Bridge st.

A hearing was given last Friday afternoon at the State House, before the Harbor and Land Commissioners, on petition of John F. Connors, of the Manchester Laundry, to "improve their property, off Central st., by the construction of a wharf. Objection to the improvement of this property was registered by chairman of the board of selectmen, on the ground that a wharf at this point would interfere with coal being landed at the Knight coal wharf adjoining. Roland H. Knight also appeared against the petition on the same ground. The commissioners said they were created as a state commission for the purpose of meting out justice to all citizens alike, and they did not recognize the right of one individual to have a wharf and to keep another individual at adjoining property from having a wharf. The objection seemed to be unjust and was a matter purely of a private nature. Mr. Connors was granted the right to improve his water front property. It is understood the Gloucester Coal Co. is interested in the property in question, though we cannot state this as a fact.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

Do you enjoy a good mystery story? If you do be sure and read "The Paradise Mystery," by J. S. Fletcher. The scene is laid in a cathedral town in England. There is love as well as mystery. The reader is kept in suspense till the close of the book.

"The Worst Boys in Town and Other Addresses," by the Rev. James L. Hill, D. D., is a thought-provoking book. The book was given to the library by the author.

In "Time Telling Through the Ages" you have a history of the recording of time from the cave-man to the present. It is a very fascinating story. At the end of the book is an encyclopedic dictionary of terms used in describing the many and varied means of keeping time.

The war is over and most of us want to forget it and its heritage of sadness; but there are some things we should know to prevent the same mistakes being made in the future. This knowledge may be obtained by reading "Now It Can be Told," by Philip Gibbs, the great English war correspondent. The author, in his preface, says, "The purpose of this book is to get deeper into the truth of this war and all war." The book does not make pleasant reading, but it will give you a fuller idea of the great sacrifices made to save the world from ruin.

An unusually good view of China and Japan through western eyes may be had by reading "Letters from China and Japan," by John Dewey, Ph. D., L. L. D., and Alice Chipman Dewey, his wife. The letters are very entertaining. Dr. Dewey is professor of philosophy at Columbia university.

to Plymouth" is much more than a guide book. It gives much of the early history of the places along this old-time highway.

Most anything from Kipling is worth while, we have just received at the library two volumes of his works. One, "The Years Between" is a volume of poetry. Do not fail to read "France," "The Dead King" and "Gethsemane.". The other volume is "Letters of Travel." The wonderful descriptive power of Kipling makes this book very attractive reading.

"The Prime Minister," by Harold Spencer, is a strikingly vivid portrait of David Lloyd George, prime minister of England. The story of his life is a very captivating one. The book is not only the story of a great man's life, but is also a political history of England for the last thirty years.

A very pleasant way to increase your knowledge of South America is to read "Men, Manners and Morals of South America," by J. O. Bland. The author traveled through this country in 1915, 1916 and 1919, and judging from the contents of this book, he kept his eyes open. There are a number of works on the southern continent in the library, but this is different:— "The book is copiously illustrated from photographs taken by the author."

"The River Prophet," by Raymond Spears, is one of the new novels. The river prophet was a much-loved character, one worth knowing. Incidentally you will learn much about the "Father of Waters."

Another new novel is "Wine O' the Winds," by Keene Abbott. It is a story of the west, when Indian raids were common. It is a strong, realistic story, well-told. Next week we hope to have some more new books.

Why This Man was a Failure in the Business World

He never learned that it is the liberal policy that wins in business building.

He thought he could save the money which his competitors spent for advertising.

"Tricks of trade" sapped his credit and ruined his reputation for square dealing.

He put men in responsible positions who lacked executive ability and leadership.

He did not appreciate the value of good taste in a buyer, but thought what he saved on his salary was clear gain.

He did not buy with his customers' needs in view, but bought the things which he liked best himself, or which he thought would bring the largest profits.

He was always talking his business down. With him, times were always "hard," money "tight," business "rotten," or only "so-so."

Reflection on Her Neatness

"I grovel here before you in the dust!" wailed the lovesick youth, as he sank to the drawing room floor.

"I don't know what you mean by dust," replied the young lady coldly. "I clean this room most carefully myself every morning."—Stray Stories.

A woman always tells you it is foolish to work—but she worries just the same.

MANCHESTER

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Floyd and daughter, Dorothy, returned home Wednesday after a several days' visit with friends at Norwood.

Axel Magnuson and two sons sailed yesterday from New York for Sweden, where they will visit at Mr. Magnuson's former home.

Miss Helen Cheever and Miss Ruth Herrick are members of the Salem Normal school graduating class who are camping at Falmouth this week.

The United States Civil Service commission will hold a competitive examination at Manchester, on July 24, 1920, for the positions of clerk and carrier in the postoffice at Manchester.

Candidate for Register of Deeds

Charles Cabot Johnson, of Lynn, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Register of Deeds of the southern district of Essex County. Says Mr. Johnson: "In seeking the Republican nomination for the office of Register of Deeds I do so because I believe that I possess the requisite qualifications to administer satisfactorily the business of the office. My experience in the Massachusetts Senate and House of Representatives, my knowledge of the methods of conveyancing gained from experience as the town collector of Nahant, and from my connection with the real estate business, qualify me to appeal to the voters for support as a candidate who has an understanding of the requirements of this important office."

Why This Man was a Success in the Business World

First successes did not make him over-confident.

He did not do everything himself.

He knew how to advertise, and realized that he could not sell goods without that expense.

He kept up with the times.

His word could be depended upon at all times.

He paid his bills promptly, met his notes on time, and kept his credit in first-class condition.

He had the ability to multiply himself in others.

He realized the importance of looking after the little things.

His styles were up-to-date and his goods always a little better than the ordinary.

He did not ruin his capacity for larger things by burying himself in detail.

Putting One Over on Us with Their Scotch

The American tourist had hustled through England, Wales and a part of Scotland in a few days. Now he was visiting Loch Lomond with its "bonny, bonny banks," a guidebook in one hand and a timetable in the other. In these days of cinema wonders it's strange that Americans ever bother to go abroad. They could see it in the pictures."

A local worthy was acting as guide, and his face fell when the visitor remarked candidly that they possessed many much finer "beauty spots" in the States.

"Ha'e ye?" remarked the son of Scotia, coldly. "Ah, weel, just ye come away, tae the tap o' this hill, an' Ah'll show ye something ye havenna' got in Ameriky."

After a laborious climb, the pair reached the summit. Then the guide recommended the American just to turn round slowly and view the landscape o'er. During the process he called the tourist's attention to a number of large buildings in different directions.

"Waal, what are they?" asked the bored visitor.

"Disteeleries!" replied the Scot in savage triumph, "An all wurrkin!"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Much Alike

"Poetry doesn't pay nowadays," remarked the long-haired lodger.

"Neither do poets," replied the landlady, coldly.—Stray Stories.

It is surprising how a widow can make love to a man in a way that makes him think he is the first man she ever really loved.

ODD FELLOWS WIN

DEFEAT K. OF C. IN INTERESTING GAME—SCORE 4-3

The Odd Fellows and the K. of C. ball teams, both of Manchester, crossed bats at the Brook st. playground, Manchester, Wednesday evening and the Odd Fellows were victorious, 4 to 3, in a seven-inning game.

With the exception of one run put across by the "three-linkers" in the first, there was no scoring for four innings. In the 5th, the K. of C. gained two, and one in the 6th. In the Odd Fellows half of the 5th, Cook slammed out a pretty three-bagger, bringing in two runs and later crossing the plate himself.

These two teams are well matched, each having won one game. The Wednesday evening contest was anybody's game, with the winner in doubt until the finish. A large crowd attended, the popularity of these "Sunset league" games having been demonstrated several times.

LYNN OLYMPIA THEATRE

Pastoral simplicity of the kind that approaches grandeur is the inspiring theme in the picturization of "The "Shepherd of the Hills," the photoplay which will be seen at the Lynn Olympia theatre, July 19, 20 and 21. The rugged honesty and worth of the men that lead simple lives in the sequested Ozarks are graphically depicted. These men, tall and upstanding, are the same type as the sturdy, fine trees that reach up towards the stars from the eternal hills. The same type of men who landed upon Plymouth Rock and laid the foundation for this land of ours. In this great photo-play are shown these truly American people, living today as their forefathers did. Men of giant strength and the kindliness of children.

There will also be a complete change in vaudeville.

MANCHESTER

Miss Miriam Manning has been spending the week in Swampscott, the guest of Mrs. C. P. Jeffries and Mrs. Mary E. Redfern.

At its regular meeting on Tuesday evening of this week the Board of Selectmen appointed Wm. Craig special police officer on private property. Wm. H. Allen was appointed special police officer to assist in regulating automobile traffic.

The annual picnic and outing of Conomo tribe of Red Men is scheduled to take place at Tuck's Point next Saturday, July 24. The committees in charge are arranging a program which will include sports, dancing, etc. Features of the menu will be fish chowder, clam chowder and ice cream.

The dance held at the Town hall, on Monday evening of this week under the auspices of Frank B. Amaral post, A. L., and for the benefit of Wm. McMurray, was attended by a large crowd. The sum of about $75 was realized as proceeds. Mr. McMurray, who was unfortunate in falling from his bicycle a couple of weeks ago, is at the Beverly hospital, where he is convalescing as rapidly as could be expected.

WE ARE ON TOP IN THE PAINT BUSINESS

What About that Poll Tax — Have You Paid It?

In accordance with warnings issued some time ago, Edwin P. Stanley, tax collector for the town of Manchester, has had summonses sent out to all delinquent poll tax payers. While a large percentage of the tax payers were prompt in paying their bills, nevertheless there were many who did not and it is the business of the tax collector to see that they settle at once.

It is understood that if any person persists in neglecting or refusing to pay his poll tax he may find himself behind the bars.

SUNDAY SPORTS AGAIN

Correspondent Takes Exceptions to Views Expressed in Last Issue

Editor North Shore Breeze,
Dear Sir:

The letter written in answer to mine reminds me somewhat of a prohibitionist whom I once told that beer plus ginger ale was a good drink; he immediately delivered a long and uncalled for sermon to me on the evils of whiskey—which I do not drink. In short, this gentleman was a bit extreme; he jumped at conclusions, he had his ideas too deeply jammed in his head to see more than one thing at a time.

Let me say to the clergyman who objected to my letter in support of Sunday games that I do not suggest them to public consideration as an alternative to church attendance. I only suggest that one should support the other and exist in amity, like good Christians! For both are Christian pursuits, we know that, and are essential.

May I ask the Reverend Gentleman who so quickly seized the idea that I was an opponent of piety because I advocate the advantages of healthy recreation for every day in the week, if he knows any excellent members of his cloth—whose views are of value—and are the exact opposite of his own? I know a bishop of my church whose views are mine, also a clergyman of this community whose views are mine.

Has the gentleman who takes exception to my fancied impiety sounded the views of other communities — the west, the south—in short, any community save the one in which he resides? I have done so. I voiced the opinion of the majority in my last letter to your paper — there was no attempt at Original Sin!

But, I do notice that my reverend opponent does not take up the point I offered him or anyone else, namely: What is the distinction between Sunday baseball and golf versus Sunday bathing and automobiling?

I have respect for the church and for its ministers. I think more people should go to church, and most of all, I think the churches should encourage decent outdoor sports for any day in the week and recognize the broad Christian principle that harmless amusements are as much a safeguard of public morals as are the open doors of any church in these United States. As for the "people who are not playing," they are no more sinful than if they were watching the automobiles from the windows of the corner drug-store—and they are in more healthful surroundings.

The day is coming when religion will mean general good, and will draw no more hard and fast lines between imaginary sin and the indulgence of harmless energies. The day has arrived in most parts of the country save our immediate vicinity. It will soon be unprofitable to quote "what shall it profit a man" etc.—which is entirely beside the point.

I, too, "would rather be right than popular"—and many sensible men of all our many churches agree with what I have said for Sunday games.

Sincerely,
A. G. Bartlett.

The Friendship circle of the Baptist church held its annual picnic yesterday at Tuck's Point. The event, which is always a popular one with the ladies, was largely attended and most successful. A "covered dish" dinner was served at noon. Transportation to and from the Point was furnished by auto.

A class of about thirty boys and girls are enjoying sports and races at Singing Beach every Tuesday and Friday afternoon under the direction of E. C. Coffin, instructor. Last Friday, Mr. Coffin gave the class a "land drill" swimming lesson on the beach. The children are greatly enjoying these outings, which are very beneficial for them.

The baseball game scheduled for tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon between Manchester and Hawley-Folsom, of Boston, has been postponed. Word was received Tuesday that the visitors are unable to play the return game this week, but a later date will be arranged. There will not be any game tomorrow afternoon in Manchester.

Danvers Wins Decisive Victory in Saturday's Game

Manchester baseball team met defeat at Danvers last Saturday afternoon, being defeated by the Wilos of Danvers by the decisive score of 10 to 0. Hart, of Danvers, pitched a steady game, was given gilt-edged support, while Lothrop was hit rather freely.

For Manchester, Long played a good game at first base, Sanford made a couple of pretty stops at third, and Dee caught in fine shape. In the third inning Lothrop was hit in the knee by a line drive which caused him considerable pain. In spite of the discomfort, and although the knee was swollen to twice its natural size, Lothrop pluckily continued to pitch all the way along the uphill fight.

Important that Every Boy Should Learn a Trade

Any boy who learns a trade starts life better equipped by far for whatever may come than is the boy who, with prospects of a "white-collar" life ahead of him, prepares himself for nothing else.

Rich or poor, it makes no difference, mastery of a trade can do no man possible harm, and there is no way of foreseeing at what moment it may come in mighty handy. The sands of life are strewn with shipwrecks of fortunes; and many a "broken" once-rich young man has been turned out into the chill of society, to be buffeted about from pillar to post as a has-been and a derelict simply because at the moment of the crash he knew of no manner of honorable work he might do with his hands.

The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch notes that—

"Most of the want ads in any newspaper are for men with trades. There is some demand, in some sections, for common labor, and it is commanding high wages, but call for skilled artisans and mechanics far exceeds that for common labor. It always has and it always will."

That is true, so far as present powers of human prophecy go; but the point is that any man who has mastered a trade—who has learned how to do some one thing well—and who knows how to work with his hands and with his brain, is the better man for it.

And learning a trade in youth is like learning to swim. No man can know when his accomplishment may be brought into play at a critical moment in his life; and, once learned and mastered, it can never be forgotten.

So every boy, no matter how rich he is or how bright his outlook for the future, ought to learn a trade.—Atlanta Constitution.

A baseball writer in lining up the members of the opposition team says the playing of the first base was very base, the pitcher would look great hung in a well, the short stop was a flaw in the diamond, the left field played ba(w)ll in the cradle, but not since, the second base is a better tenor, while the catcher, who weighed nearly 200 pounds, covered more of the diamond than any other player because there was more of him.

Not a Bit of Risk

"Where are you going, daughter?"

"Out."

"You know I shall worry if you are going with any young man in a canoe."

"Don't worry, ma. I am merely going up in an airplane."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BEVERLY FARMS

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradford are spending two weeks' vacation at Alton Bay, N. H.

Miss Mary Hammer, of Gloucester, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. John M. Publicover, High st.

A card party for the benefit of St. Margaret's church was held Tuesday evening at the Linehan garage.

The Beverly Farms Legion ball team will play an out-of-town team at the playgrounds Saturday afternoon.

Little Marjorie Hatch, of West st., had an operation performed for the removal of her adenoids and tonsils on Tuesday. She is recovering nicely.

Howard E. Morgan and Howard E. Morgan, Jr., have been spending their evenings and leisure hours since Wednesday at the Peabody cottage, Chebacco lake.

A son was born the latter part of the week to Police Officer and Mrs. Timothy Hayes. The mother was formerly Miss Mary Fullerton, of Beverly Farms.

Miss Annie Hickey left this week with the Samuel Vaughan family for Mr. Vaughan's estate on Bartlett's Island, Me., where they will spend the next two months.

S. John Connolly arrived home Monday from a ten-day trip to Chicago, where he attended the Grand Lodge convention of the Elks as a delegate of the Beverly Elks.

There is a good attendance of children at the Ward 6 playground daily. They are in charge of Marshall Campbell, instructor. An interesting program of sports and games has been arranged.

Mrs. Lydia Younger, who has just sold her place at Beverly Farms, plans to move to Winthrop the first of September, where she will make her future home with her son, Russell Younger.

Papers were passed this week whereby Mrs. Lydia Younger sells to Peter McLaughlin her estate on Hale st., Beverly Farms. This is one of the most desirable and attractive homes located in the center of the all-year-round district, consisting of a pretty cottage and a large tract of land. Mr. McLaughlin buys for a home and will take possession on or about Sept. 1.

There has been a record breaking attendance at West Beach all the past week. The water was fine, registering around 68 and 70 degrees, and the bathers have certainly had a good time. The piazzas of the pavilion have been thronged with people all day and in the early evening. The parking space for automobiles on the eastern end of the beach has not been large enough to accommodate all the machines.

Patrick Cannon

Patrick Cannon, one of Beverly Farms' oldest and most respected citizens, died at his home on Haskell st., Sunday last. About a week ago he had a fall, which resulted in the breaking of his collar bone. Born in Ireland, he came to this country when a young man and for many years lived at Beverly Farms. He was employed mostly on estates of summer residents, but of late years had retired. A man of quiet and kindly disposition he was well liked and had many friends. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Miss Margaret Cannon; also a brother, John Cannon, of New York. Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning at St. Margaret's church. Burial at Holywood cemetery, Brookline.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Osgood, of Orange, N. J., have been among the visitors at Beverly Farms the past week.

Church Fair Held Yesterday Is Successful Event

The Ladies' Sewing circle held its annual fair yesterday at the chapel of the local Baptist church. The event was well attended and a financial success. The fair opened at 10 o'clock in the morning and continued through the afternoon and evening, when an entertainment was given. The tables were well filled with a large assortment of useful and fancy articles. The tables from which refreshments were sold were also popular. The proceeds from this affair is used to purchase fuel for the church.

A public dance will be held at Marshall's hall next Wednesday evening for the benefit of St. Margaret's church.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Thompson, of Southington, Conn., have spent the past week at Beverly Farms visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs Thomas Riordan are receiving congratulations on the arrival of their second child; a daughter, born last Saturday.

BEVERLY FARMS

Eugene Harrigan is enjoying his annual vacation. He is camping on the shores of Chebacco lake.

Miss Mary Connolly, Everett st., has been spending most of this week enjoying camp life at Chebacco lake, the guest of Mrs. Arthur L. Standley.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. McCarthy (Helen Callahan), of West st., have been on a vacation trip by automobile through the White Mountains the past week.

Herbert N. Cole has just purchased from Frank B. Dunning, of Beverly, land and dwelling house, Bertram st., Montserrat. Mr. Cole buys for a home.

Miss Louise Standley will not be bothered by her typewriter and the cares of work in a Boston office for two weeks: She is enjoying her annual vacation.

When school opens next September there will be 22 students who have completed their course at the Farms grammar school and will enter the Beverly High school.

Vibert Publicover, of the Shawmut National bank, Boston, and Myron Williams are enjoying a two weeks' vacation. They have been camping on the shores of Chebacco lake.

Thomas J. Fay, of Dorchester, is spending his vacation at Beverly Farms, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Morgan, West st. A part of his time will be spent at Camp Peabody, Lake Chebacco.

The members of the Judson st. Universalist church, of Beverly, held an all-day outing on Tuesday, at West Beach. It was a hot day, but the beach and pavilion afforded them a day's recration and comfort, which all seemed to enjoy.

At a recent meeting of the Beverly school committee Miss M. Maude Welch was elected a teacher in the eighth grade at the Beverly Farms school at a salary of $1300. Miss Welch is a resident of Salem, a graduate of the Salem Normal school.

There will be a tug of war and public dance in Neighbor's hall, next Thursday evening, July 22d. It is being held for the benefit of the Beverly Farms A. L. ball team. The funds will be used to help pay expenses of the ball team. The tug of war will be between a team from the Italian club, of Beverly, and the local Legion members.

Beverly Farms baseball fans enjoyed an interesting game last Saturday at the playground between the Italian A. C., of Beverly, and the Beverly Farms Legion team. It was a closely contested game all the way, but the visitors won by a score of 5-2.

Peter Gaudreau, the Central sq. barber, is passing out a card with the schedule of the bus line between Beverly and Manchester, thus living up to his reputation that if you want to keep up with the times you must patronize Peter. He always has the latest train schedules on hand in neat vest-pocket size, and now he has the bus timetables, also. adv.

New signs "No Parking Here" have just been placed on the south side of West st. from Central sq. to the crossing at the Beverly Farms depot.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Elmer Thomas (Margaret Lee) have returned from their wedding trip to Canada and are now housekeeping in the O'Hearn house, corner Greenwood ave. and Webster st.

The contracts for the repairs and improvements to the Ward 6 public building have been awarded by the committee of the Beverly city government. Howard A. Doane has the carpentry work on the fire station and G. A. R. hall, while the painting on the same buildings has been awarded to E. A. Barry, of Beverly. There were several bidders on both branches of the work.

Mrs. Nora C. Crowley has purchased the dwelling house and land on Hale st., owned by Walter S. Flint, of Beverly, and known as the James Bennett estate. The lot has a frontage on Hale st. of 55 feet and extends 80 feet to the rear. The house has been recently altered and improvements made and is now most modern and atractive, being suitable for two families. Mrs. Crowley buys the property for a home and will occupy at once.

CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF

To the Voters of Essex County:

There being a vacancy on account of the death of our lamented former sheriff, Col. Samuel A. Johnson, of Salem, and having served as deputy sheriff for twenty odd years, I trust with acceptance, I beg to announce to the voters of the county that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination to fill the vacant position.

I would respectfully urge that my home city of Haverhill, with its 53,000 population, might fairly ask for recognition, as it is well-known that Haverhill for a long time has not had one of its citizens serving in a county office.

During my long experience as deputy sheriff I have performed my sometimes unpleasant duties with general acceptance, and I can assure all who may be interested that I have always done my best to fulfill the duties of my position faithfully and honorably.

surance of support from a large number of influential citizens and I feel justly confident of securing the nomination. If it is the will of the voters to place this important position in my keeping, all may be sure that the responsible duties of the high office will be performed with becoming dignity and a full realization of the great honor thus conferred.

If I am nominated and elected, the county will have an experienced man who is determined to do his full duty with credit to the county and justice to all.

Get Your Face Ready for Summer Tanning

A sun-browned face suits everybody. It makes the good-looking of either sex handsome and the plain good-looking. The tan on our faces is a real holiday asset. Yet the faces of some decline to tan, and the faces of others, instead of browning, redden. And their noses peel.

The cause of non-browning is an oily skin; and the way to get rid of the surplus of oil is to steam the face, massage it with the hands when moist, dry it, and steam again. Then do something like tennis, or digging, or a fast walk, to induce perspiration.

Wipe the face with a cambric handkerchief, and you will find that King Sol will quickly do his tanning work. It was the too oily skin that defeated his previous efforts. The steaming, etc., should be done daily until the tan is "set."

Those whose noses and cheeks peel can easily stop that by dabbing their faces with a little sour milk or cream. The latter is better. A good cold cream is quite good, too, but whatever is used should be applied—but a very small quantity is required—before peeling starts. Prevention is, as always, better than cure.

If you freckle badly you can prevent, and cure, this trouble by squeezing out one ounce of lemon juice and mixing it with a quarter of a drachm of powdered borax and half a drachm of sugar. This must stand in a bottle for three days, and then it will be ready to rub on the face.

It will remove the sun freckles you have and stop others from coming.

Good Plea His Undoing

After the trial and the prisoner's conviction of burglary a friend met his counsel outside and commiserated with him.

"I can't understand it," said the friend. "You made a wonderful speech for the defence, and yet the jury brought in guilty."

"I thought I'd done pretty well," confessed the lawyer, "but one of the jurymen explained it to me. While they were in the jury room they discussed that speech, and decided that my client must be guilty, or else he wouldn't have thought it necessary to employ so expensive a lawyer."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegram.

WAS SO IN COLONIAL DAYS

Labor and Wages Did Not Agree Three Hundred Years Ago

The scarcity of workmen had caused them to raise their wages to an excessive rate, so as a carpenter would have three shillings the day, a laborer two shillings and sixpence, etc., and accordingly those who had commodities to sell, advanced their prices sometimes double to what they cost in England, so as it grew to a general complaint, which the court taking knowledge of, as also of some further evils which were springing out of the excessive rate of wages, they made an order that carpenters, masters, etc., should take but two shillings the day and laborers but eighteen pence, and that no commodity should be sold at above fourpence in the shilling more than it cost for ready money in England. The evils which were springing were: 1. Many spent much time idly, because they could get as much in four days as would keep them a week. 2. They spent much in tobacco and strong waters, which was a great waste to the Commonwealth, which by reason of so many scarce commodities expended could not have subsisted to this time, but that it was supplied by the cattle and corn which were sold to newcomers at very dear rates.—Extract from Gov. Winthrop's Journal, November, 1633.

It Takes a Girl to Put One Over Like That

Arienne had nothing to do. The telephone bell rang. Jimmie was calling her. She felt that she could not possibly endure having him sit all evening in the same room with her. So she said, "Just wait a minute, please, I'll see if Adrienne is in." She walked along the hall calling her name and, returning, informed Jimmie that Adrienne was not in, but asked if there was any message.

He said that he had thought she might like to go with him in his car for a ride and stop at a garden out in Long Island which had become popular and where there was dancing.

They exchanged good-bys.

James' proposal was to Adrienne's liking. Ten minutes later she telephoned to him and said. "This is Adrienne. I just got home and—"

A voice that she knew well to belong to James cut her short:

"Just a moment, please."

She heard him walk along the hall calling, "Jimmie! O, Jim!"

But he didn't have the nerve, and they went to the garden where there was dancing, and she told him how sorry she was not to have been at home when he first called.—Rutherford Rennie in Judge.

DINNER DANCE.—The second dinner dance of the season will be held at the Essex County club, Manchester, on Friday evening of next week—the 30th. Dinner will be served at seven-thirty; tables may be reserved by applying at the office. Music for the dancing, which will commence at nine o'clock, will be furnished by Herbert Lowe's best orchestra.

Mrs. H. E. Boynton, of the Oceanside, Magnolia, is giving a luncheon for twelve today at Essex County club, Manchester. Mrs. E. B. Cowles, also of the Oceanside, had fifteen for luncheon this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Barbour, of New York, spent part of the week with his brother's family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barbour, of "Red House," Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Motley Pickman will come on from their Bedford home about August 1 to be with Mr. and Mrs. Dudley L. Pickman at the Beverly Cove home.

Maj. Morris E. Locke, U. S. A., and Mrs. Locke (Grace McMillan Gibson) are spending part of their honeymoon on a cruise aboard the boat of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, of Brookline.

Mrs. Roger W. Cutler will return to "Juniper Hill," Beverly Farms, on Sunday. from a trip to Canada, where she and Mr. Cutler, who came back a few days ago, were salmon fishing.

Mr. and Mrs. August Benedicts (Martha Bailey), of East st., Ipswich, are at home to their friends today and next Friday. Mrs. Benedicts is the daughter of Dr. Guile Bailey, of Ipswich, and her marriage is a recent event. A sister, Miss Anne Bailey, will assist at the "at homes."

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Livingston, of New York, are coming August 1 to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. E. Prescott Rowe, at Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hayes, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Smith in Magnolia for some time are returning to their home in East Orange, N. J., Aug. 1. They were dinner guests this week of the Frank S. Cleghorns, of Marblehead, at the Corinthian Yacht club.

SOCIETY NOTES

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the engagement of Miss Margaret W. Sargent, youngest daughter of Mrs. Francis W. Sargent, of Hereford st., Boston, and Wellesley, to Quincy A. Shaw McKean, son of Mrs. Malcolm G. Haughton, formerly Miss Marian Shaw before her first marriage to Henry Pratt McKean, of Philadelphia.

Miss Sargent, who is distinctly a handsome girl, highly accomplished, made her début at a large ball at the Hotel Somerset on Jan. 12, 1912. She was the president of the Sewing Circle of that year.

Mrs. David Cheever, of Boston, is Miss Sargent's sister, and her brothers are H. J. Sargent and Daniel Sargent. The late Francis W. Sargent, Jr., was also a brother. Other relatives are Henry S. and Walter Hunnewell, of Wellesley, who are uncles, and Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, who is an aunt.

Mr. McKean is a Harvard man, class of 1913, and is a member of the Somerset club and the Tennis and Racquet club. His brother is Henry Pratt McKean, Jr., of Beverly Farms.

From Duluth, Minn., comes the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Musgrave Merrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Merrill, to William Coit Hubbard, son of the late William H. Hubbard, and Mrs. Hubbard, of Chicago. Miss Merrill, who made her début in Boston in 1916, is well-known upon the Shore, where she has spent much time with her sister, Mrs. Francis P. Sears, now of Hamilton. Mr. Hubbard, Harvard '19, is a brother of Mrs. Robert W. Means, of Beverly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fowler and little son, Charles, Jr., of Washington, have a delightful new home at Beverly Farms. They purchased the Adamson place, called "Forty Steps," and have made extensive alterations on the house.

Mrs. Frank B. Bemis is spending the summer at York Harbor, Me. Mr. Bemis has returned to the Beverly Farms place from a month's salmon fishing in Canada. His brother, Harry Bemis, of Chestnut Hill, is now visiting Mr. Bemis at "Old Place," the attractive cottage on West Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Beers and young daughter, Miss Alice Macy Beers, of New York, who were at the Brownlands in Manchester last season, are now at the Chick cottage, Magnolia. Paul Allen, of New York, is coming to spend some time with them.

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL, in Boston, has workers every Tuesday morning, 10-12.30, in Horticultural hall, Manchester, to make surgical dressings. Plenty of gauze is on hand and much work is needed to help make up simple dressings for the hospital. A shortage of nurses has made this work a subject for the welfare committee to take up and North Shore women are kindly doing the work and trying to get as many as possible interested in the future of this wonderful hospital. Children and the younger set all along the Shore are planning entertainments to raise money for it. Miss Mabel and Miss Harriet Rantoul are among the younger set helping to make the dressings.

Mrs. George H. Lyman is chairman of the committee composed of Mrs. Timothée Adamowski, Mrs. Wm. W. Caswell, Miss Elaine Denègre, Mrs. Henry S. Grew, 2d, Mrs. M. G. Haughton, Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Harriet C. Rantoul, Mrs. R. Paul Snelling and Miss Alice Thorndike.

"PENHALLOW COTTAGE" is a secluded place in Magnolia where Mr. and Mrs. Chas. S. Penhallow quietly spend their summers. A little garden of flowers and vegetables among the rocky and shaded grounds is a pretty feature of the place.

Mr. and Mrs. John Allyn and daughter, Miss Dorothea, have been enjoying their home in Magnolia for some time. The granddaughter, Miss Phyllis Allyn, who usually is with them, is at Lake Tahoe, Calif., visiting a friend this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Henshaw, of Cambridge, are spending the summer with the latter's aunt, Miss Alice Allyn, in her cottage at Magnolia. The John Allyn cottage and that of his sister, Miss Alice Allyn, are located in a charming wooded section off Magnolia ave.

Col. O'Bannon, the champion at the recent Navy Festival horse show in Beverly Farms, is comfortably summering at Magnolia with Revello, Sir Braxton, Gen. Pershing and Speculation, noted horses belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Andrew Upson, of Washington and Magnolia. Col. O'Bannon will have to divide honors, however, with the handsome new car, a Rolls Royce, that just arrived for the Upsons. With its bright blue body and running gears, nickel plated hood and black fenders and wheels it makes a most striking appearance on the Shore roads.

"SALEM" —"DANIEL LOW'S"

The terms "Salem" and "Daniel Low's" are synonymous to thousands of our mail order customers and friends the world over, many of whom are yearly visitors at the North Shore. While there, one of their "little journeys" is to historic Salem including, of course, a visit to Daniel Low's.

Perhaps you, too, are acquainted with us thru our magazine advertising and our catalogs. Before you leave the North Shore we urge you to permit us the pleasure of meeting you personally at our Store.

We feel sure that you will find the Store fully as interesting as the pages of our catalog; in fact, more so, for even the finest pictures and most comprehensive descriptions oftentimes do not measure up to the satisfaction of actual inspection.

Your visit will put you under no obligation whatever to purchase while, for our part, we shall feel repaid in knowing that you will return to your home with a "mind picture" of Daniel Low's that will, we hope, tend to create cordial business relations between us or further cement those relations already established.

PAYING a brief visit to Magnolia, Mrs. Frank S. Chick was among the prettily gowned women in the hotel lobby Saturday evening. During her visit she was the guest of Mrs. C. F. MacMurray, of New York, at the Oceanside, and her host of friends were delighted to welcome her back. Mrs. Chick, with her late husband, spent many seasons at their cottage in Magnolia, where they were very active in the social doings. It is to the untiring efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Chick and the coöperation of their friends that the North Shore Swimming Pool, which has afforded North Shore folk so many pleasant hours, owes its existence. Mrs. Chick is now making her home in Salem, and her friends hope that she will pay many more visits to Magnolia during the summer.

NORTH SHORE SWIMMING POOL, Magnolia, had a gala day last Saturday. Nearly 200, including the many little tots, turned out to see the fine exhibition of the American Red Cross Life Saving corps, of the Boston Y. M. C. A., of which Jack Wallace, swimming instructor at the Pool, is the organizer and captain. Work was also shown by Mr. Wallace's pupils. Frederick F. Rhodes, of West Manchester, chairman of the swimming committee, announced the stunts performed by the corps. Many thrilling and wonderful feats were shown, including chain dive, relay race, demonstration of strokes, fancy swimming, sculling, underwater features, life-saving, land and water drills, and the use of the pulmotor and methods of resuscitation. Mr. Wallace's pupils put on a 25-yard swim and side stroke and a 25-yard breast stroke.

The boys who came out from Boston included Ben Levias, Vernon Hartford, Edward Adonis, Edgar Woodruff, Earl Palmer, Charles Tischoff, Jack McKeon, Starling Waters, Jack Kelley and Charles Hoefer. The president is H. B. Fenno, and Eddie Muir, a noted swimmer, is also a member of the crew.

Mr. Wallace, during the war, worked under the government in teaching navy boys to swim and how to save life. This Red Cross work began in 1914 and has reduced the loss of life by drowning in a most miraculous way. In the fall Mr. Wallace will take his crew to give demonstrations at various colleges, Wellesley being the first on the program. He says that girls are becoming as interested in the work as boys and men. The North Shore is not behind in this work and three of the girls who frequent the Pool are going to begin the women's test, including Miss Hèléne Ellsworth, and the Misses Helen and Priscilla Rhodes, daughters of F. F. Rhodes.

Mr. Rhodes is a most enthusiastic believer in swimming sports and is endeavoring to have our "Junior Breezes," become experts at it. See Junior Breezes department for their part in the day.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD D. SEARS (Eleanor Cochrane), who purchased the Alexander Cochrane place at Pride's Crossing, are now at Dark Harbor, Me. An addition has been made to the rose garden at their beautiful place in Pride's Crossing. Mr. and Mrs. Sears spent only a few weeks here in the spring and the Payne Whitneys, of New York, are now occupying it. The Whitneys were at this place six years ago.

The Harold J. Coolidge family, of Pride's Crossing, will go to their place at Squam lake, N. H., about August 1, as usual.

The Chinese screen of eight panels and seven feet high, is always a most interesting object for the visitors at Mrs. Bill's shop on the beach at Magnolia. The screen is similar to the two at the Metropolitan Museum in New York. Have you seen it? adv.

MRS. THOMAS H. HOWARD, of Boston and Hyde Park, N. Y., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth S. Howard, and Robert Winthrop Kean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Kean, of New York. Mrs. Howard and her son, Thomas H., and daughter are living in the Col. Peirson place at Pride's Crossing. Last season they had the Brinly place in Magnolia. Miss Howard is a granddaughter of Mrs. Ezra Howard, of Newport, and of Mrs. Wm. Post, of New York, and a grandniece of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt. Mr. Kean is a Harvard man, '15, and belongs to prominent New York clubs. No date is set for the wedding.

Miss Violet Clendinen, of Baltimore, and the Misses Elizabeth and Hope Patterson, of Providence, R. I., are spending the summer with Mrs. J. Theodore Heard at "Briersea," Norman's Woe rd., Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine have left Waltham for a summer abroad. R. T. Paine, Jr., Harvard '22, is with them. He expects to spend two years at Oxford. Mrs. Paine was formerly Mrs. Forbes Conant, of Nahant. Their marriage took place in January. The Paine family have long been of the Pride's Crossing colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt Amory, of Pride's Crossing, have their sons, Harcourt Amory, Jr., and J. S. Amory, with them this summer; also their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. Hutchins (Gertrude Amory), and two children, of Chestnut Hill.

Miss Elizabeth DeBlois, the charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. DeBlois, of Boston and Ipswich, will make her début this year. A garden party will be given for her on Friday, Aug. 13, at "Brookfield," the Ipswich home.

LUNCHEONETTE

The Amory Eliot cottage, "Wildwood," in Manchester, was where Mrs. Hall McAllister's first musicale was held last Friday afternoon. The beautiful red and white music room with its attractive and rich ornamentation was filled to overflowing with the enthusiastic audience that greeted the artists put on by Mrs. McAllister. Her charming and gifted daughter, Louise Ford, and Rafaelo Diaz, accompanied by Mrs. Herbert W. Smith gave a program that pleased all tastes. Mrs. Ford's group included "Little Star," "Dutch Serenade," "Capri" and "A Feast of Lanterns" was especially enjoyed, while those of Mr. Diaz, "Marie," "The Way of the World," "What is Life?" and "At the Well" called for two encores. The duets were roundly applauded.

Rafaelo Diaz is of the Metropolitan Opera Company. His high tenor voice is exceptionally good and whether he sings Spanish, Italian, French or English his diction is clear and expressive.

Mrs. Ford wore écrue net with a jade green sash and carried a fan of green feathers. Mrs. Smith wore a cream lace dress trimmed in blue ribbon and a sash of blue.

The next concert put on by Mrs. McAllister will be at Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge's, in Manchester, Friday afternoon, July 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Henry Sinton, of Boston and Beverly Cove, are now settling in their new home, the former Wm. Endicott cottage. The latter's mother and brother, Mrs. Nathan Eiseman and Fred Eiseman, of New York, are on for a visit. The 12-year-old son, Stanley, Jr., is at camp in Maine. Robert and Henry are younger sons. Robert celebrated his fifth birthday this week with a party in his attractive new home in the beautiful Cove region. The Sintons formerly spent their summers in Clifton.

"The Pines" on Branch and Common lanes, Pride's Crossing, is the secluded home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Sears. An exceedingly tall bean-pole fence covered with masses of vines almost completely shuts from the passersby all signs of the well laid out garden within. Arbors of pink roses are now making a fine showing.

Mrs. Henry Clay Frick, of Pride's Crossing, has the two younger children of the Childs Fricks, of Roslyn, L. I., with her this summer. They are little Martha and the baby brother. Miss Helen Frick is not expected to return from abroad until the autumn. Her vacation house for girls is running, as usual, at Wenham Neck.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean, Jr., of "Willow Tree Poultry Farm," Beverly Farms, have added ducks and pigeons to their list of game birds. A pond near their avenue entrance is the home of the fine flock of Mallard ducks and ducklings getting ready for the hunting season. Carrier pigeons, many of which have previously flown 500 miles, will be taken to various points this year and tried out. Their 800 or more Leghorn chickens are making the usual snowy appearance on the place. Blue ribbons were taken by these fine chicks in both Boston and New York last winter, where they showed in the latter city for the first time in Madison Square Garden. About 75 rose-combed black Minorcas, bantams, are new at the farm. Their small black bodies make a striking contrast with the large white chickens so common on the place.

MISS NATALIE HAMMOND, young daughter of the John Hays Hammonds, of Gloucester, is a most studious person. While busily engaged in preparing for Bryn Mawr college she yet finds time for something she delights in doing. Writing of stories seems to be what Miss Natalie is specially gifted in doing and as she grows older she will, no doubt, add another name to the well-known galaxy of North Shore writers of the past and present.

Richard P. Hammond is spending the summer in New York with only week-end trips occasionally to see his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, at "Lookout Hill," Gloucester. Richard finished Yale this year and is making music his profession. He is composing and studying this summer with New York artists and is now the assistant manager of the Composers' Musical Corporation in that city. He is enjoying his chosen work exceedingly well.

Mr. and Mrs. Copeland Townsend, of Hotel Majestic, New York, will spend August in the Fresh Water Cove, Gloucester, cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin N. Lublin. Mr. Townsend is owner of the Majestic. Week-end guests have been Alfonso Alfau and Ernesto Van Der Dinda, sugar planters of Santo Domingo.

Brookbank Inn, at Fresh Water Cove, is having an entertainment this Friday night for Braewood hospital, West Gloucester. Miss Kitty Parsons, reader and writer, of Brookline, has charge of the affair in which other guests will also take part. Season guests include Mrs. Karl Hoffman, New York; Mrs. John Leidigh, Miss Leidigh and Miss Jane Truman, Kansas City; Mrs. L. D. Hammond, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Allan M. Mowry and son, New York, and Mrs. Eben Andrews, Glencoe, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Wise and their five daughters, of New York, are occupying the Williams cottage on one of the wooded hills in the center of Magnolia. The Wise family formerly spent their summers in the Adirondacks.

MRS. PAYNE WHITNEY, of Pride's Crossing, will have some of her horses in the races tomorrow at Rockdale park. Some of the noted horses now in the stables at Pride's are Cherry Malotte, Uncle Sam, Tango, Brookdale, Web Carter, Danvers and Peacock. Uncle Sam is Mrs. Whitney's favorite mount, while her daughter, Miss Joan, prefers the notable Cherry Malotte. Her horses will be shown in the Myopia Hunt club show in September. It has been said that Mrs. Whitney is the veteran among the sportswomen of the east. She is a devoted follower of racing and has been interested in it for eight or ten years, in which time she has developed some excellent horses, mostly steeplechasers. Mrs Whitney takes a personal interest in the schooling of her horses.

A new Rolls Royce car has just arrived from overseas for the Whitneys. This is of special interest because it is the first one to arrive in this country since war days.

"PRINCEMERE," the fine estate of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, will have polo games in August. The polo fields of "Princemere," located in that delightful section along Grape Vine road between Beverly Farms and Wenham Neck, are ever an attraction for Shore folk. The Long Island team, with which F. H. Prince, Jr., is now playing, in preparation for the international games later on, may come over again as last season for a game on the Prince field.

Last autumn Mr. and Mrs. Prince went to Pau, France, where they had not been since the war. All of their hounds and most of the horses were left at the estate in Pau. Mr. and Mrs. Prince are both lovers of the hunt and thoroughly enjoy their hounds and handsome hunters.

A training school for new horses Mr. Prince is acquiring is going on this summer at the "Princemere" stables. All of the horses seen at the place are interesting, including the colts and ponies, but there is a black one, a new one from Ohio, called "Hegoes," that would surely take the prize for beauty if that were the only requirement. A shining, pure black coat like satin makes this an unusually handsome mount.

Mrs. Prince, Jr., is on an extended mountain trip. She and Mr. Prince will, no doubt, come to "Princemere Lodge" later in the season. Mr. and Mrs. Prince will again spend the winter at their old home in France.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Cochrane and children have a charming summer home at "Spartivento," the artistically planned home of Arthur Little, Boston architect, on the Grape Vine rd., Beverly Farms. Mr. and Mrs. Little, supposed to be in England at present, will return to their home at the Farms for the autumn.

The wedding last Saturday in Groton of Miss Geraldine Lawrence and Dr. Edward Harding was of interest to Shore people. Little Hester and Eleanor Fay, of Nahant, were flower girls and Charles E. Cotting, W. D. Sohier, Jr., and Thomas Barbour were ushers.

MRS. WILLIAM H. DEWART, of Manchester Cove, opened her home Tuesday afternoon for Miss Virginia Wainwright's first musical discourse. "Swedish Music" was the subject of Miss Wainwright's talk and Miss Mildred J. Keefe played the musical illustrations on the piano. Miss Wainwright tells in a very comprehensive way the history of music in a country, its folk music and bits about its great musicians. She was becomingly dressed in rose-color with a hat to match. Miss Keefe wore white dotted with blue. Miss Charlotte Read, of Manchester, took up tickets. The next concert is a discourse on "Norwegian Music," at Hotel Tudor, Nahant, Tuesday, Aug. 3, at four p. m.

Patronesses include the following: Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. Wm. H. Dewart, Mrs. S. Parkman Blake, Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent, Mrs. William L. Putnam, Miss Sarah L. Mrs. Albert Ivins Croll, of Gales Point, Manchester, is opening "Sunny Bank," her attractive cottage, for an exhibition and sale next Thursday, July 29, from ten-thirty a. m. to six p. m. The articles are products of Llewsac lodge at Bedford and will include hand-woven rugs and linens, embroidered and knitted articles, aprons and lingerie, besides a generous supply of novelties.

Mrs. Croll is one of the directors of the Frances E. Willard settlement in Boston and takes much interest in the welfare of Llewsac lodge, a dependence of the settlement. During the summer forty or more women receive rest and strength at the lodge and it is their handwork that will be seen next Thursday. The women who go to the lodge are between forty and sixty years of age, women who have become incapacitated for heavy work and are given the privilege of boarding at the lodge for a nominal sum, in many instances working out their board. They stay there winter and summer, or until able to go back to regular work, the summer season usually having more recruits. In time it is hoped to establish a home for incurables at this lodge. The Frances E. Willard settlement is in touch with 23,000 people who live within a radius of two blocks back of the State House and 500 children have access to the settlement baths. This will be an excellent time to help the good work along by purchasing some of the useful articles that mean so much to the women who go to the lodge.

Mrs. Frank Warner, Mrs. Luther Smith, Mrs. W. R. P. Emerson, Mrs. O. W. Weld and Mrs. Harry Ayer have given recent bridge parties at the North Shore Swimming Pool club.

Joseph C. Grew, minister to Denmark, and Mrs. Grew and children are sailing Sept. 20 for a visit to America. They plan to reach here about October 1, and will come to the North Shore to be with Mr. Grew's mother, Mrs. Edward S. Grew, West Manchester.

The attractively located home of the late Mrs. Chas. H. Dalton, at Beverly Farms, is closed this summer. Mrs. Dalton was one of the Shore's oldest residents, having reached the age of eighty when she died in March and having made the place her summer home since the late Mr. Dalton built it nearly sixty years ago. Philip Dalton, of Nahant, is one of several nephews that survive her. Her sister, Mrs. Frank Morison, of Boston, is a frequent visitor upon the Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Swift, of "Rose Ledge," Beverly Farms, have the latter's father, Edwin Casey, of Chicago, with them.

Richard Harding Weld, cousin and associate in business with Bernard C. Weld, of Beverly Farms, died Monday night at his home in Harwichport, after a long illness.

The fifth annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, Ledge rd., East Gloucester, will open Wednesday, August 4, and continue to August 23. The exhibition will be open free to the public daily from ten to six o'clock and Sundays, two to six. All are cordially invited. The members of the jury chosen by ballot by the artists exhibiting at the Gallery during the past three years are as follows: Paul Cornoyer, Charles Hopkinson, Hobart Nichols, Jane Peterson, Henry B. Snell, Charles Grafley, Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL
MAGNOLIA

AS the summer advances the dances at the Oceanside on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings are ever growing more popular. Young people from all sections of the North Shore entertain their friends at dinner at the hotel, and remain to enjoy the dancing and the music. Nor do the young people have the monopoly of the good times, for crowds of older folk, beautifully gowned, sit and watch the dancers, or indulge in their favorite pastime—bridge. Many of the hotel clientele spend delightful evenings in the company of their friends in playing bridge in the lobby, or attending the little bridge parties of which there have been quite a number. But whether it be bridge and dancing in the evening, or shopping, riding, tennis, golfing, motoring or a trip to the swimming pool, the guests at the Oceanside are a merry, happy group, and there is always something to occupy the thoughts and to insure everybody's having a pleasant time.

Very beautiful was the gown of cream-colored lace over gold satin worn by Mrs. Walter E. Williamson last Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson are from Quincy, Ill., and are spending the summer at the Oceanside.

Among the most graceful dancers at the Oceanside dance Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Upson, of Washington, D. C., and Camden, S. C., who are occupying "Brier Rock" cottage at Magnolia for the season. Last summer the Upsons occupied the Shaw cottage, Magnolia.

Mrs. Edwin Johnson and family, and her mother, Mrs. Louis Gholstin, of Atlanta, Ga., arrived last week at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain well into the month of September.

AMONG the noted visitors to the Oceanside this week was Phya Prabha Karavongse, Siamese Minister, who with his daughter, Miss Schwee Karavongse, was paying a very brief visit to the North Shore. Mr. Karavongse has spent many seasons at East Gloucester, where the legation was located; but he has no definite plans for returning this summer. Another enthusiastic admirer was added to the North Shore's long list, with the advent of Miss Karavongse, for whom this was the first visit. She has been in America a very short time, and is delightfully interested in everything American. The North Shore, she declares, is wonderfully lovely, and she expressed herself as very anxious to return to it. They left Tuesday morning for Washington.

At the Saturday evening dance at the Oceanside, Mrs. John W. Thomas looked very charming in a beautiful gown of turquois blue chiffon with a beaded bodice, and blue satin slippers. Mrs. Thomas is a season guest at the Oceanside.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Barnard, of New York city, are visiting Mr. Barnard's mother, Mrs. Henry H. Barnard, who is spending the summer at the Oceanside.

Mrs. Neville Leary (Eleanor Dieter), of Baltimore, Md., is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. Frank Crouch, who is a season guest at the Oceanside. Mrs. Leary is well-remembered by former guests at the Oceanside as one of the most charming of the younger set of a few seasons back.

Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Bratle, Miss Rose Bratle and Miss M. Bratle, are spending several weeks at the Oceanside, where they arrived last week. The Bratles come from Philadelphia.

Among last week's arrivals at the Oceanside are Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bunker and their daughter, Miss Lysbeth Bunker, of Washington, D. C. Their guest for a short visit is Miss Dorothy Greene, of New Canaan, Conn.

RECENTLY arrived from Paris, France, where they have spent a number of years, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. McCarthy and family are being extended a warm "welcome back to America" by their many friends, who are delighted at their return. Mrs. McCarthy is a sister of Mrs. George H. Swift, of Boston and Beverly Farms, and the two have not seen each other for several years. The McCarthys are registered at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain for the balance of the season.

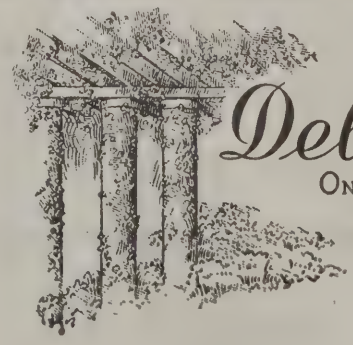

Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Merrick, of Pittsburgh, Pa., spent the week-end at the Oceanside, guests of Mrs. Edward D. Harlow, who is spending the summer at the hotel.

Week-end guests at the Oceanside included Chester Guild, of Newton, whose family is spending the season at the hotel; Ralph S. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Sweet and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fowler, Providence, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bauer, New York; Charles C. McCrea and son, Jas. A., Jr., Woodmere, N. Y.; Mrs. A. W. Simpson, Miss A. H. Simpson, N. Y. city.

Recent arrivals at the Oceanside, registered for the balance of the season, include: Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Phillips, Des Moines, Ia.; Mrs. R. T. McKeever and her mother, Mrs. W. F. Noe, Chicago, Ill.; Enrique de Paats and Madame de Paats, New York city; Miss Francis Dixon, New York city; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Smyth, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Wm. C. Stevenson, Shields, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McCauley, Savannah, Ga.; Mrs. E. L. Root, Grosse Point, Mich.; and Mrs. C. H. Wills, Detroit, Mich; Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Griffin, Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Fowler, of New York city, arrived at the Oceanside this week, where they plan to remain for a short visit.

THE marshmallow toasts, so popular along the Shore a few seasons ago, are again coming to the fore with renewed favor. The first of the season was that given by Miss Albina Fennely, of Haverhill, to a group of her friends, Tuesday evening on the beach. Miss Fennely is a season guest at the hotel, and is very popular among the younger set.

Mrs. Wm. Spessy, of New Haven, Conn., spent a few days at the Oceanside this week. During her visit Mrs. Spessy was the guest of E. B. Cowles, who is one of the season guests at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Warner entertained their son, Richard F. Warner, of Boston, over the week-end. The Warners are spending the summer at the Oceanside.

Col. E. W. Rich, of the U. S. army, and Mrs. Rich, have just arrived at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain for a few days' visit.

Mrs. C. C. Bliss and Miss B. Kinne, Washington, D. C., are spending a few weeks at the Oceanside.

Mrs. Herbert E. Boynton, a season guest at the Oceanside, looked very charming Saturday evening in a gown of cream-colored lace.

Mrs. Norman Cantrell and three children are again spending the season at the Oceanside. They arrived from their home in Philadelphia, Pa., the past week.

On their way to the White Mountains, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Thomas and family, of Charleston, Va., spent a few days at the Oceanside last week.

EVER a favorite among the children, Willis Boyd Allen is being sorely missed by his little admirers. No longer does "children's hour" gladden the hearts of the little tots, for Mr. Allen, following his long-established custom, has decamped for the mountains, where he will remain for two weeks. Mrs. Allen, his mother, is still at the hotel and spends many happy hours in the lobby, where almost every day she holds a sort of impromptu "reception" to her host of friends.

MRS. E. M. BINNEY, of Boston, ever a favorite at the bridge tables, and in the other social activities at the Oceanside, was among those noticed playing bridge in the lobby of the hotel Tuesday evening. Always exquisitely gowned, there was an air of simple elegance about the gown of all black lace which she wore, and in which she looked especially charming. Mrs. Binney has spent a number of seasons at the hotel—coming early and remaining until a late date—and she is very active in the social affairs all along the Shore. During the summer she pays many visits to her son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Binney, who with their six lovely little children, are spending the summer at Nahant, as usual.

Week-end guests at the Oceanside included Mr. and Mrs. C. Fibiger, C. C. Fibiger, and Miss Fibiger, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. W. R. Barnes, of New York, is spending a few weeks at the Oceanside, the guest of Mrs. Frank D. Hurtt.

Among the prettily gowned ladies at the Oceanside dance Saturday evening was Mrs. John W. Lawrence, who wore a gown of black net over black satin, with steel beaded trimmings. Mrs. Lawrence is one of the season guests at the hotel.

R. A. Harman, of Cleveland, joined his family at the Oceanside the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Harman are guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Livingston Mather for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Crosby Foster and Dr. and Mrs. R. F. Hegeman arrived on the North Shore last week from their home in Summit, N. J. They are registered at the Oceanside for the duration of their visit.

Mrs. Fred T. Moran, of Detroit, Mich., is spending a few weeks at the Oceanside, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Anderson.

Old-time guests who have returned to the Oceanside are Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Berguist, of New York city.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

By Alex. G. Tupper

CAPE ANN.—A drive has been going on for the past two weeks for a new maternity ward for the Addison Gilbert hospital, of Gloucester. $50,000 was the amount brought forward in appeal for the new wing to be added to the hospital. The citizens and summer residents responded rather liberally and over half the amount has been reached. It is expected that many summer residents will yet respond, as checks are being received gradually, now that the real drive came to a close on the 15th. It should be understood that any donations to this worthy cause for Gloucester will be received by Daniel T. Babson, of the Cape Ann Savings Bank, Main st., Gloucester.

As a prominent summer resident of many years' standing on the North Shore has said, "We must not forget the real community spirit, and as we receive, so must we give. When a city or town with its citizens is giving to us, to make our summer abiding place pleasant and beneficial it is our duty to meet them in some way with our good will and our contributions."

There are those people who do give and are very kindly-spirited. Their liberality is appreciated. There are others who "can" give that do not give these wise words of our quoted summer resident a thought. In this drive for the maternity ward, Mrs. John Hays Hammond has given a check for $1000, Col. John S. Prentiss sends $1000, Col. Edward H. Haskell, of Newton, $1000, Harry Bray, $1000, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Atwood, $500, and John Clay, $300.

The next move in order for the new maternity ward benefit is the big lawn bazaar, on the spacious grounds of the Addison Gilbert hospital, Wednesday afternoon and evening, August 4. A large number of North Shore summer residents are interested and the patronesses for this event will be Mrs. Wm. Hooper, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. John Clay, Mrs. John Raymond, Mrs. Stephen Sleeper, Mrs. T. H. Mills, Miss Georgiana Dodge, Mrs. Hollis French, Mrs. Chas. F. Bradley, Mrs. Wm. E. Atwood, Mrs. Chas. D. Brown, Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard and Mrs. Costello Converse. There will be a large number of attractions at this bazaar. There will be plenty of booths with articles for sale, plenty of amusements, a dancing pavilion and a big cafeteria, where food will be sold continually. Mrs. Jack Raymond will have charge of the hat shop; Mrs. Stephen Sleeper, the fancy table; Mrs. Wm. Sheafe, cake table; Mrs. Thomas H. Mills and Miss Georgiana Dodge, the miscellaneous table; Mrs. John Clay, the fruit and flower table. The nurses of the hospital will have a miscellaneous table.

EASTERN POINT.—The social activities of the Eastern Point colony started in this week, the first public affair of importance being the presentation of the first group of plans of the Community theatre, at the Playhouse-on-the-Moors. Four evenings this week, from Tuesday to Friday, inclusive, three one-act plays, "The Marriage — Will Not Take Place," by Alfred Sutro, "Overtones," by Alice Gerstenberg, and "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," were presented by clever casts, including artists, painters, sculptors and literary people, not only of the East Gloucester colony, but from other places along the North Shore. The dance at Hawthorne Inn casino last Saturday evening was largely attended by guests and friends.

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

Mrs. Dudley B. Fitts at the piano, was of special interest. Mrs. Swain who possesses a lovely soprano voice of rare quality gave a delightful program. There were many guests present from along the North Shore, among them being the Dr. Lowell Cabots, of Beverly Farms, Mrs. John Hays Hammond and Miss Elizabeth Hammond, of Fresh Water Cove, Mrs. J. Murray Kay, Col. A. Piatt Andrew, Miss Jean N. Oliver, the portrait painter, Mrs. A. W. Pollard and daughter, Mrs. Jack Raymond and Mrs. John Clay, of Eastern Point, and others.

Mrs. Joseph Barbour and Mrs. T. A. Slessinger, of New York, are spending the season at a cottage on Grape Vine rd., Eastern Point. On Thursday afternoon, they entertained a number of friends at tea, at the Eastern Point golf club.

Judge Charles Wheeler, of Buffalo, N. Y., is a guest at the Hawthorne Inn, Eastern Point.

An important guest at the Hawthorne Inn for an extended vacation, is Senator C. A. Pugsley, of New York.

Mrs. John M. Parker and Mrs. Wm. J. Montgomery came up from New Orleans, La., last week, and registered at the Hawthorne Inn, for the season.

Miss Cecilia Beaux, who has her studio and home at Eastern Point, has placed on exhibition at a Paris gallery, her portraits of ex-Premier Clemenceau, Cardinal Mercier and Admiral Beatty. As stated in the BREEZE last season, Miss Beaux was chosen by an American National committee, J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry Clay Frick, Mrs. E. H. Harriman and others, as one of our foremost artists, along with Douglas Volk, John C. Johansen, Edmund C. Tarbell and Charles Hopkinson, to paint allied war dignitaries. Miss Beaux has been abroad the past year. The paintings will be hung in the National Gallery in Washington, D. C.

Col. and Mrs. John W. Prentiss, of New York, are located in one of Dr. James H. Knowles' houses, on Niles Beach boulevard, Eastern Point, for the season. Col. Prentiss will erect a pretentious summer house at Brace's Cove, Eastern Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Dundas, of New York, are late arrivals at the Bass Rocks colony, occupying their beautiful estate, the most pretentious in that section.

E. W. Taylor, of New York, is the occupant of the Procter cottage at Grape Vine Cove, occupied last season by the Smuckers.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Hunt, of Brooklyn, N. Y., quietly observed their silver wedding anniversay at the pleasant summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Allen, in the Rocky Neck colony, East Gloucester, last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen, in Franklin, Pa., and it was indeed a pleasure to have them in Gloucester on this occasion of their 25th anniversary.

Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Drew, of Worcester, are spending a portion of the summer at Rockaway Inn, East Gloucester. Dr. Drew is superintendent of the Worcester City hospital and is an alienist of note.

Janet's Garden in Prospect st., Gloucester, is a popular meeting place — and a large number of small tea parties have been given there the past week, among them President McLea, of Sweet Briar college, Va., who entertained a company of southern dignitaries; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Garland, of Worcester; Mrs. C. T. Beek, of Milwaukee, and Mrs. Nathaniel Babson, who is entertaining her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Roger W. Babson, of Wellesley.

BASS ROCKS.—The Saturday night dances at the Bass Rocks Golf club are being continued this season. This Saturday night a large attendance is expected. One of the finest colored jazz orchestras—Jefferson and Williams'—has been secured to play regularly.

Great interest is centered in the Bass Rocks colony in the coming "Merry Whirl of 1920," which will take place on the evenings of August 11, 12 and 13 at the Moorland casino, mainly for two worthy objects of Gloucester, the new maternity ward of the Addison Gilbert hospital and Braewood Tuberculosis hospital. Lilla Agnew Stewart, who has managed and directed so wonderfully successfully the "Merry Whirls" of past seasons at Bass Rocks, has arrived at the Moorland and she is getting into form the various dances and characters for dialogues and sketches that will make the coming performance one of great interest and pleasure. Some of the most clever talent among the young men and women of the colony will be put into play for this event. Miss Stewart had wonderful success during the winter in Washington, Philadelphia and Dayton, Ohio, and she goes to Oakland, Cal., shortly after the "Merry Whirl" here on the North Shore. Her sister, Mrs. Leonard, is with her to give assistance here. The wedding of John Alden and Priscilla will be one of the many attractions in the coming show.

young son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Mitton, of Boston, who have a cottage at Bass Rocks, was swept away by the strong current in the creek, while bathing. The accident caused a great deal of excitement in the colony and the rescue was of a most unusual nature, for a little girl only nine years old, the sister of the little victim, was the means of saving the youngster's life. Edith Mitton, the sister, realized the dangerous predicament of her brother and determined to save him at all hazards, she bravely made a dive, bringing the boy to the surface and swimming and keeping afloat with her precious burden, at the same time screaming for the assistance of the life-patrol on the beach, the latter running to the rescue. All Bass Rocks is lauding the little girl for her pluck and bravery. Miss Edith can also manage a pony dexterously and almost daily she can be seen either in company with her nurse or with her brother and some of her young friends. They drive about the colony in an attractive pony cart, with a pretty, spirited pony attached, the envy of many a child.

An attractive new tea house and shop called "The Sign of the Apple Tree" is located at Bass Rocks, on Bass ave., near the beach. It is an ideal spot. The low, picturesque house, with its colonial front, nestles among the trees that shade the lovely lawn, and flowers give touches of color with the green. Tea is served on the screened-in veranda overlooking the beach and landscape. The studio adjoining the house, in the rear, is artistically arranged and filled with rare china, pottery, glass and imported articles for home ornamentation and gifts. Many society people of the East Gloucester colonies and from along the North Shore are visiting this exclusive place for afternoon tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Lewis, of Washington, D. C., the former a well-known attorney, are spending the season at the Moorland. Reeve Lewis, Jr., their nine-year-old son, is one of the most attractive boys in the hotel.

Janet's Garden, at 88 Prospect st., Gloucester, is having great success and it is drawing many society people to its attractive environment. Among recent visitors were: Mrs. Walter Camp, of New Haven; Mrs. Forbes, of Boston; Mrs. Alexander Buchanan, of Omaha, and Miss Edith Leffingwell, of New York.

THE ORCHARD GALLERY located on Ledge rd., near the Gallery-on-the-Moors, is attracting a great deal of attention. It is most charmingly situated in an open field near the orchard of apple trees and it is very accessible, by automobile or on foot, from two ways, Ledge rd., leading from the car line at the foot of Mt. Pleasant ave. and Grape Vine rd., leading from the Eastern Point colony. Two rooms are devoted to exhibitions, one solely for small paintings and another for choice and rare china, silver, prints, and other artistic things. The young ladies in charge of this venture are Miss Edith Atwater, Miss Edith Anderson and Miss Mariel Thresher, of Dayton, Ohio.

The paintings are attracting special attention. In the groups artists who exhibit professionally are represented. They include Paul Cornoyer, Hobart Nichols, H. Hammond Ahl, H. A. Vincent, Jean N. Oliver, Felecie Waldo Howell, Ruth Anderson, Irma Kohn, F. J. Mulhaulpt, Carl J. Nordell, E. Parker Nordell, Bertha Mentzler Peyton, A. Sheldon Pennoyer, W. Lester Stevens, Gertrude B. block prints are by Ethel Mars, of Provincetown, Margaret Patterson, of Boston, and Harry De Maine. A French ship model, Vogue La Galere, by Henry Brandagee Culver, the noted French miniature ship builder, whose models are purchased by many leading museums, is being shown at the Orchard Gallery. Miss Cecilia Beaux, of Eastern Point, owns one of Monsieur Culver's ships. Some rare pieces of ivory work have been loaned to the gallery. Italian china and the exquisite pieces of silver are all of interest. Among the latter are an English apostle spoon of the London 1622 period; tongs, 1800; candlesticks, 1780; gravy spoon, Victoria, 1871; Sheffield tea pot, 1800 attributed by the family of Paul Revere.

ROCKPORT.—The summer people of the Rockport and Pigeon Cove sections of Cape Ann appreciate the convenience of the motor bus service after a period of no means of conveyance to Gloucester, after the street car service was withdrawn. The bus makes its half-hourly trips to and from Centre st., Gloucester.

During the past week the number of cottages which had been closed were practically all opened for the season and once again the Rockport colony is filled with people.

The Francis E. Smiths, of Boston, have arrived at their pleasant summer home on Eden rd., Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

The Wm. Areys, of Salem, are at their cottage near Turk's Head Inn, Land's End, Rockport, for the season.

Benj. A. Worcester and family, of Waltham, are recent arrivals at Land's End, and they are located in their summer home.

Rev. Wm. S. Packer and family, of Winchester, have taken possession of their cottage at Land's End, Rockport, for the summer.

Rev. Alfred Skinner and family, of Boston, are at their summer home, Land's End, Rockport.

Chas. H. Cutting and family, of Newburyport, arrived on Thursday of last week at their summer home on Marmion Way, Rockport.

Among the number of guests last Sunday at Haskell's famous Loblolly camp, Land's End, where fish dinners are served to tourists, was Bud Fisher, the noted cartoonist and originator of the "Mutt" and "Jeff" pictures. Ex-President Taft and other notables have found pleasure in visiting the Haskell camp in seasons past.

Mrs. Adelaide Hovey, of Waltham, arrived this week, permanently, to occupy her Land's End cottage, Rockport, for the season.

At the Loblolly end of the Cove, Land's End, Rockport, are located the George Robinson's, of Boston, and the Dennis Reardons, of Boston.

Miss Sarah Comstock, the writer, is registered at the Clifford House, Pigeon Cove, for the summer.

ANNISQUAM.—A three-act comedy, "Bachelor Hall," was the social attraction in the Annisquam colony on Thursday and Friday evenings, in which clever local talent took part. The proceeds will be given to the Annisquam Universalist church and the Village Hall association.

Mrs. Josephine Gay, of Brookline, who arrived recently at her cottage on Cambridge ave., Annisquam, is entertaining Miss Marion Keyes, of Concord.

Mrs. Mary P. Craw, of the Annisquam cottage colony, has been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Wilkes and son, of Plainville, Mich.

Prof. Barry MacNutt, of Lehigh university, and family, of South Bethlehem, Pa., are occupying their cottage at Hermit Ledge, Annisquam, this season.

Among recent arrivals at Wonasquam Lodge are: Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Tolmi and family, Montreal; Mrs. R. McCall White, Miss Murial P. White, D'Orsay White, Indianapolis; Mrs. Wells Lathrop, Mrs. W. E. Holmes, Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Raymond, Miss J. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Adams, Boston; Dr. and Mrs. Claude W. Beebe and family, Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Kapplemann, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. David Thompson and family, St. Louis; Mrs. J. C. Smith, Detroit, Mich.

The Barnacle Tea House, long established in the Annisquam colony by Miss Nancy Flagg, is a much-appreciated spot for tea parties, where social intercourse is enjoyed over the tea cups. The verandas overlook a most attractive view of the river and landscape and the cool breezes from the salt water marshes and the bay are refreshing. Frank Bourne, the architect, of Boston, and his wife, Gertrude B. Bourne, an artist, from the Ipswich colony, entertained several people at tea at The Barnacle. Mrs. Harry Nesbit, of New York, Mrs. Stanley Eaton, of Philadelphia, Elizabeth Towne, of Holyoke, writer of "Your Character," and other books, and Elizabeth Chancey Daine, a well-known magazine writer, who is a guest at By-Water Inn, Annisquam, have been entertained at The Barnacle.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE desk and lobbies looked particularly lovely this week, for the decorations were pale pink carnations and Madonna lilies, in artistic urns. Beautiful ferns and other plants also decorated the main building, giving a cool aspect to the house, whch is well-filled with guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Grabow are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, in Boston. The Grabow family are installed in their attractive cottage adjoining the hotel.

Under the direction of Mrs. H. C. Jealous, who has been a summer resident of the New Ocean House for some years, a fund was raised amounting to $225 which was presented to former bellman, Benjamin E. Clark, who is convalescing after a protracted illness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Herndon Smith, of Montreal, who have arrived at the North Shore, will spend August at the New Ocean House.

The bellhops of the New Ocean House are looking forward to their annual ball, which is to be held in Red Men's hall, August 3. Allan T. Cochrane is chairman of the event.

Guests of the New Ocean House were much disappointed Wednesday in the non-arrival of Geraldine Farrar and her husband, Lou Tellegen, who have been on the North Shore filming pictures, and who were scheduled to dine at the Swampscott hotel.

Prof. Sheilds gave a billiard exhibition in the billiard room of the New Ocean House Friday evening, at which a large crowd of the guests were present, especially the many male enthusiasts.

The black and white ball scheduled for July 31 at the New Ocean House will be the most important event of the season, and already many acceptances are being received from the 500 invitations which have been sent out.

Plans are being made at the New Ocean House for a "Swampscott Ball," to be given to the residents of Swampscott, the second week in September. Over 1000 persons are expected and special music will be had for the dancing, and a buffet supper will be served.

The Misses Norton, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Norton, who are summering at the New Ocean House, entertained a party of twenty boys and girls Saturday evening at a dinner, followed by dancing.

Miss Mary Grabow, the younger daughter of the proprietor, is one of the attractive young girls at the hotel.

William Whiting, of Holyoke, a well-known paper man, is a season guest at the New Ocean House.

Walter Raymond, head of the Hotel Raymond, Pasadena, Cal., has joined his family at the New Ocean House.

Mrs. E. T. Burroughs, of the Burroughs Screen Co., Portland, Me., is at the New Ocean House for the remainder of the season.

G. E. Aldred, the New York banker, is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. P. Walworth, at the New Ocean House.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Massie, of Buffalo, N. Y., are at the New Ocean House for August.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Willis, of Brookline, are at the New Ocean House, having arrived this week for the season.

K. L. Barton, Jr., and Mrs. F. C. Wheeler, of Kansas City, are new arrivals at the New Ocean House.

Mrs. C. F. Kettering, of Dayton, Ohio, wife of the president of the Delco Co., is at the New Ocean House for the summer.

Gustave Pabst, Jr., of Milwaukee, is a newcomer at the New Ocean House.

Gen. E. P. Meeney, of Convent, N. J., will arrive Aug. 1 to spend the month at the New Ocean House.

J. N. Beckley, president of the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railroad, will be an August guest at the New Ocean House.

Master Samuel J. Geisinger made a great hit at the Sunday night concert at the New Ocean House when he played solos on his cornets.

TEDESCO COUNTRY CLUB was the scene of a dinner dance Wednesday evening and among those who entertained were B. N. Johnson, H. F. Thayer, W. J. Dawson, E. R. Fallon, A. G. Walton, S. H. Forbes, J. P. Parker, G. F. Schrafft and D. C. Percival.

The American Woolen Co. will hold an outing at the Tedesco Country club, September 17, at which it is expected fully 400 guests will be present.

The golf course and the tennis courts are filled every day with those who enjoy these sports. Both are in prime condition this year and are giving much pleasure to North Shore residents and their friends.

Eugene W. Ong, of Swampscott, is one of the enthusiastic trap shooters on the Shore and last Saturday he led the field. Other Tedesco Country club enthusiasts who appear on the club rangé are J. B. Gillespie, G. D. Pushee, H. L. Taylor, A. J. A. Hamilton and C. D. Johnstone.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Forbush have returned to Phillips Beach after honeymooning in the Mountains. Mrs. Forbush was formerly Mrs. Warren Phillips, and is one of the wealthiest of the Shore residents.

MARBLEHEAD NECK chapel was the scene of a pleasant dance, the first of the season, last Friday evening. The hall, which has been thoroughly renovated, looked quite attractive in red, white and blue decorations, and a good-sized crowd was present.

Miss Lucy Eveleth, of Marblehead, is enjoying a trip to the White Mountains for the remainder of the month.

Charles H. Taylor, Jr., entertained Boston friends at the Eastern Yacht club, last week.

Mrs. Waldo Richards, who has been in Marblehead the past week and who gave a most delightful reading of Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," at the Eastern Yacht club, Marblehead Neck, will soon go to Bar Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. T. Baldwin, of Newton, are spending the remainder of the summer at Marblehead Neck.

Mrs. Hugo Munsterberg and daughters, of Cambridge, are spending a few weeks at the Radcliffe College tea house on Beach st., Devereux. Mrs. Munsterberg is an accomplished artist and many of her paintings are to be seen at the clubhouse.

Miss Elizabeth Barker, of Salem, entertained a group of sewing circle friends at luncheon at her summer home, Marblehead Neck, last Thursday.

Lawrence Percival, of Marblehead Neck, aboard the 40-foot yacht, "Catherine," has gone to New York, where the boat will be one of the contestants in the Larchmont races. Edgar W. Murphy and Elmer Laskey, expert yachtsmen, and friends of the owner, are with the boat.

Miss Constance Percival, of Marblehead Neck, has for several years been interested in yachting and her catboat is well-known in Marblehead waters. She is usually to be seen with the "Jazz" every afternoon that sailing holds good, tacking back and forth between the yachts.

Owing to the fact that the fireworks at the Corinthian Yacht club, July 5, were a failure, the house committee has issued an invitation to another display, for Friday, August 13, at which time there will also be a dinner dance.

Miss Catherine Gray, of Marblehead Neck, is one of the enthusiastic skippers, and in her 12-foot catboat she is often seen in the races in Marblehead waters.

The Marblehead Neck chapel is open for the season and last Sunday Rev. George E. Martin, D. D., was the minister.

Mrs. J. H. Snow, of Boston, who is spending the summer at the Parson Barnard tea house, has as her guest, Mrs. H. J. Miller, of Boston.

TONY SARG'S Marionettes will be at Horticultural hall, Manchester, Friday afternoon and evening, Saturday morning and afternoon, of next week,—July 30 and 31.

The puppets will play Thackeray's "Fireside Pantomime for Great and Small Children;" "The Rose and the Ring," in three performances, and on Saturday morning a program of one-act playlets for small children.

The Bookshop for Boys and Girls of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, of Boston, is presenting Mr. Sarg. These puppets have been shown much in New York, but only occasionally in Boston.

MONDAY'S outing class taught by "Bunny" Woods at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Beverly Cove, is an interesting group beginning to play ball and learn all the rules of the game in dead earnest. Harry Sears belongs to this class, the ages ranging from 8 to 10. Others noticed in the class this Monday were May Welldon, Bayard Warren, Jr., Nathaniel Simpkins, Alice Means, Marshal Fabyan, Jr., Eleanor Fabyan, Alexander Cochrane, Leverett Shaw, Gerald Bramwell, Frankie Blake, Bob Cutler, Roger Cutler, Sally Carter, Donald Frost, Mary Frost, Tommy Gannett, John and Brinley Hall, Henry Sedgwick, Mary, Lydia and Richard Lovering, and others.

Miss Helen Hussey, of Magnolia, who has been absent from the Swimming Pool for two seasons, has returned to enjoy it this summer.

THE merry riders around Magnolia roads and lanes are ever a pleasing sight to the summer crowds. From far and near they come to Magnolia to get their lessons from J. Henry Coulter, riding-master for nineteen years at this popular resort. He is now assisted by Mrs. Coulter, an expert horsewoman.

Among their pupils is Peggy Mann, of Washington and Coolidge Pt., Manchester, a devotee of the side saddle. Miss Peggy wears an oxford habit and a red English tam.

Miss Hetty Shuman, of Beverly Cove, makes a stunning appearance in her tan habit, smart riding boots and slick tailored sailor. She is one of the most graceful riders on the road.

Miss Katharine and Miss Caroline Phelan, of Smith's Point, Manchester, are regular riders. These two young girls make excellent sportswomen and are becomingly dressed in linen habits, tan riding boots and tailored leghorn hats trimmed in brown bands.

Miss Helen Farnum is a young Magnolia miss who is frequently seen on her mount. This season she is wearing an army suit and an aviation cap.

Little Edith and Ruth Koshland, of Smith's Point, Manchester, are striking figures on their horses. In black and white checked habits, jockey caps and flying hair they are the admiration of all who pass. Mrs. Jesse Koshland, their mother, often rides with them.

Miss Julia Baer is another of the riders from Smith's Point, Manchester, who is fond of the sport.

From Swampscott come Miss Hetty and Vera Ratchesky, and from Marblehead, Miss Jessie Treadwell and Miss Portia Pratt, the latter two always riding together in linen habits and smart, three-cornered hats.

Bass Rocks sends a number of riders including Rosamond, Lois and Philip Tucker, of Brookline; Jimmy Remick, of Detroit; Mary Jane and Ted Doyle and their cousin, Miss Virginia Doyle. Little Mary Jane Doyle wears a black and white checked coat, white breeches and a black velvet cap and has her hair flying to the waist line.

The Misses Wise are new riders from New York, now of the Magnolia colony. Miss Suzanne Anderson, of Detroit, and Miss Wheeler are among the smart young riders from the Oceanside colony.

These are just a few of the many that may be noticed any morning around Magnolia.

JACK WALLACE has a crew of young swimmers that are doing themselves as much credit as the thrilling American Red Cross Life Saving corps which Mr. Wallace put on as a special feature last Saturday at the N. S. Swimming Pool.

A 25-yd. swim was won by Oren B. Taft, of Boston; Hélène Ellsworth, 2d; Fred Ellsworth, 3d; Johnny Wheeler, 4th; Fred Schlafly, 5th.

The 25-yd. side stroke race was won by Oren Taft, with Johnny Wheeler coming in for 2d; Hélène Ellsworth, 3d; Fred Ellsworth, 4th; Phyllis Ellsworth, 5th; Adeline Smith, 6th.

In the 25-yd. breast stroke Suzette Dewey, of Chicago, won. Oren Taft and Johnny Wheeler tied for second and the others came in with Fred Ellsworth, 4th; Phyllis Ellsworth, 5th; Adeline Smith, 6th; Hélène Ellsworth, 7th.

Races are planned for Saturday afternoon, July 31. The one scoring the highest during the season will have his name placed upon the new shield in the club room. All are out to win, but we wonder how Oren and Johnny will come out.

Rob't Angue Dobyne, the six-and-a-half-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne, of Beverly Farms, is the youngest boy at Camp Kineo, Me., — perhaps the youngest boy at any camp.

Miss Marcia Hoyle will return to her Magnolia home from camp this week.

NOTED ENGLISH SCULPTOR ON NORTH SHORE

P. Bryant Baker has Opened Summer Studio at Magnolia

"DO one thing better than any other man, and even though your abode be in the wilderness, the world will beat a pathway to your door." And the world has beaten a pathway to the door of P. Bryant Baker, noted English sculptor, now in Magnolia, where he has opened a summer studio off Fuller street.

Mr. Baker is unusually young to have achieved such a career as lies behind him. While a student in the Royal Academy of Arts in London he conceived the idea that he would make a bust of the King, but, of course, a king would not pose for a student. One lucky day came, however, when the art student was on a train which ran abreast of the King's train for a short time, and the King's apartment was opposite that of Mr. Baker. He viewed the royal features of the late King Edward VII to his heart's content and absorbed his extraordinary "sitting" so well that he executed a bust, along with help from pictures, which opened the portals of fame to him.

Queen Alexandria heard of this bust in the Hull municipal art gallery. She had it taken to Buckingham palace and sent for the student. Kindly she told him it was the most perfect portrait of the King that she had ever seen. A marble bust now stands in the drawing-room of Marlborough House, and replicas are in various public places in England. The Queen's interest grew and she finally commissioned the artist to do a marble bust of her then eight-year-old grandson, Prince Olav, of Norway.

Mr. Baker recalls his seven sittings with this lively young prince at Marlborough House as the seven headaches in his life. The youngster was forever tilting his chair as if he were on a rocking-horse, only being quiet when some of the family came in to watch the progress. Under these difficulties Mr. Baker yet succeeded so well that he received much praise from the royal family. The artist was always a member of the afternoon tea-gatherings in the royal household.

In larger things also did the Queen interest herself in Mr. Baker. He made an heroic statue of King Edward to be placed at Huddersfield for a memorial, King George, himself, unveiling it in 1912, the first and only occasion of his officiating at such a ceremony. A national memorial of his was approved by the Queen, but he was not allowed to execute it because academic authority considered him too young to undertake such an important commission.

Then, cutting into the midst of this royal patronage, came the war.

Mr. Baker's education is broad and sympathetic. He had spent two years aside from other training in the study of architecture. He tried to join the English colors, but was rejected, owing to a slight physical defect. He came to Boston, where he spent two years, finally enlisting as a first class sergeant in our army. He was detailed to Washington to make plaster casts of wounded soldiers. His models for false hands and casts of shell-torn faces were invaluabl to the reconstruction surgeons.

The American world has beaten a pathway to his door.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge sat for him in Washington last year. Hon. John Hays Hammond sat for him in "Ye Olde Forge" studio in East Gloucester last summer; also John Hays Hammond, Jr., the well-known inventor. These busts were finished in green bronze and shown at the Corcoran gallery of art in Washington in the special exhibition of Mr. Baker's works.

President Wilson's bust is favorably commented upon. Other work done since the signing of the armistice includes busts of Secretaries Baker and Daniels, Gen. March, Gen. Ireland, Gen. Gorgas, who recently died in London, and Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Baker, as a sculptor of purely idealistic creations, is another story, best appreciated, however, by visiting his Magnolia studio.

EVENING SOLITUDE

By ALEX. G. TUPPER

THE crescent moon in slender, glowing line
Is caught upon the veil of Venus fair—
A jewel pale beside her smiling face—
A rim of silver in its filmy place
All in the evening solitude.
The poplar looms up straight and tall—
A sentinel in solemn duty there,
So dark against the pale green sky!
And yet a passing wind—a favored friend
Stirs the head, to bend it nigh
To smiling Venus' face—a trembling bough
Is like a hand to touch her hair
And e'en to beckon her—earth's love to share—
All in the evening solitude.

The landscape veiled in lavender
Awaits—a bridesmaid yearns to be!
A nightingale flies past; its herald-song
Brings swift its message sweet to me!
And with the earth—oh, nothing can be wrong,
For Venus in the sky is willing to come forth
To cheer my heart and in my fancy long
Will she stay, until the call of dawn
Shall draw her spirit far in other clime—
Until another night my eyes are drawn
To hers and far beyond the space,
My soul will go with hers and thus intrude
In understanding peace—a peace sublime—
All in the evening solitude.

NORTH SHORE GARDENS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Series of Garden Days Conducted This Season "Dawson Hall," at Beverly Cove, will Open Tomorrow

Garden Scene at "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove, which will be open to public Saturday afternoon

"Whosoever enters here let him beware, for he shall nevermore escape nor be free of my spell."

SO runs the inscription on the gateway leading into the Italian garden open tomorrow (Saturday from two to tix p. m.) at "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove, the home of the Misses Hunt, and of the late Mrs. Robert D. Evans. The Misses Hunt have been summer residents at this fine old place for thirty-two years, but the garden is only in its ninth summer. Francis Allen was the architect, but the garden plans belonged to the late Mrs. Evans. The beautiful garden she created seems like a living monument to the memory of this highly esteemed woman.

The place is on Burgess Point, the Marblehead Burgesses being residents there long ago, after which there were various owners and modifications of the house before it went to its present owners.

A striking feature about the whole point consists in its handsome elms and velvety lawns. Great grass plots bounded by sea walls and trees, with trees interspersed and a wonderful garden as added features sum up the things to see at "Dawson Hall."

A brick wall ornamentally relieved with stone and marble fixtures encloses the garden spot. A gravel pathway leads off the lawn between rows of box and little white statues. Then the garden itself is entered. Brick walks are used throughout the enclosure. Upon entering, the walls lined with perennials and the attractive green garden sections on either side the walk are noticed. Passing along and descending a few steps brings one to the sunken gardens. Here are masses of bloom, and always the blues, pinks, soft yellows and white predominate as they do in all parts of the garden.

In the midst of the sunken garden is a fountain; a little farther, two lily beds; and then a wonderfully built lotus fountain and tea house, back of which is the end wall and a small fountain. Arbors on either side the tea house afford an enclosed walk across this end of the garden.

The rose garden is in itself an interesting feature of the place. This lies near the central wall on an elevation opposite the central fountain. On the corresponding side of the fountain next the sea stands a life-size figure of the "Falconer," by Simmons, a replica of the one in Central Park, N. Y.

Besides numerous statuettes, white marble seats here and there, a well-appointed tea house and a statue of Hebe in a niche near the tea house there are countless other features that attract about this charming place. Its architectural features make a study for experts. Its combination of marble and stone and flowers is a poem of beauty that must be seen to be appreciated.

Always at this place is the wide piazza running around three sides of the long house a veritable conservatory of bright blooming tubs of plants among which are some of rare natures. A laceandra bearing purple flowers is exceeding rare, and one with large yellow blossoms is another seldom seen. In the garden, tubs of bay trees, lemon trees and orange trees, the latter bearing fruit, are among other unusual growths.

As you leave this fair garden spot tomorrow, opened to you for the benefit of the National Civic Federation for the small fee of 50 cents, stop an instant and read again that inscription, chosen by the maker of the garden. No one knows who wrote it. "Whosoever enters here let him beware, for he shall never more escape nor be free of my spell."

Generally, downright fact may be told in a plain way; and we want downright facts at the present, more than anything else.—RUSKIN.

I do not know at first what it is that charms me. The men and things of today are wont to be fairer and truer in tomorrow's memory.—THOREAU.

THEIR VARIED INTERESTS AND ACTIVITIES

HAMILTON reminiscences were indulged in the other day. Some one told us that about 38 years ago the Myopia Hunt club came to Hamilton from Winchester and chose the Gibney farm for the club's home. Many farmers were then living in the vicinity, but now the club is surrounded by estates of summer residents.

Randolph M. Appleton said once, at the hundredth anniversary of the town, "We thought when we first made our runs with our red coats that the farmers would think there was another invasion of English and be after us with their guns. Such was not the case, however, and we are living, the best of friends."

It is said that the ministers of Ipswich, of which the hamlet (Hamilton) was a part, made the republic. Only eighteen years after the landing of the Pilgrims, a minister wrote the "Body of Liberties," which was denied publicity, but was circulated, however, in manuscript form. This prepared the way for the Revolution. Another minister, of Chebacco, organized the first open resistance to the attempt to take from the towns the right of representation in the levy of taxes. Rev. Temple Cutler, of Essex, once said that the people of Hamilton "were patriots to a man, not a tory among them. They inspired the Revolution and also fought its battles."

Then came the building up of the nation and the hard times with the thirteen independent states. The question of raising a revenue became uppermost. Plans were laid for the colonization and sale of lands northwest of the Ohio river in order to get revenue. A company was formed and plans set upon foot for the purchase of this land. Rev. Manasseh Cutler, pastor of the Hamilton church, was chosen to conduct negotiations with this company. He was interested in the new scheme of paying off the national debt by means of the sale of unoccupied lands. Senator Hoar has said of him: "He was probably the fittest man on the continent, except Franklin, for a mission of delicate diplomacy. Cutler was a man after Franklin's heart. It now fell to his lot to conduct a negotiation second only in importance, in the history of his country, to that which Franklin conducted with France in 1778. Never was an ambassador crowned with success more rapid and complete."

Mr. Cutler insisted that the new territory should have no slavery, have grants of land for churches, and provision for education. After much dissention in Congress his wishes were granted and he returned to Hamilton, where he soon raised a company of pioneers for the Ohio. He sent them westward at daybreak on Dec. 3, 1787, from the door of his home, the parsonage, and he, himself, went as far with them as Danvers. In time five great states were added to the Union from this territory. "The very cream of New England was taken to build up the west." Rev. Temple Cutler, who gave the address on this historical side of the town at its anniversary celebration long ago, said: "The hamlet parsonage was the rendezvous of all Ohio interests in eastern Massachusetts. Whole weeks of his diary are embraced in a single entry, 'The house full of Ohio people.'"

And this house is still standing. It is the truly handsome, pure colonial type of mansion of the kind seen in Salem and Newburyport. Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Merrill, of Boston, own "The Hamlet," as it is called. It is located close to the road next the village church in the center of the old town. The church at this Ipswich hamlet was organized in 1714.

Dr. Cutler preached in this church 52 years, 1771-1823. He died in its pastorate and is buried in the village cemetery opposite the church.

All this rambling bit of history has been written because some one said to us that it was in front of the Merrill home that Dr. Cutler's wagon (canvas-covered) and drawn by oxen started for the Ohio 133 years ago. Mr. Merrill is interested in keeping the old house as it was. Only this year he had a fine sun-porch removed from one side that had been added some time ago, but which destroyed the colonial lines of the house.

THE TIDE OVER LEAGUE, organized by the late Dr. James Marsh Jackson, of Beverly Farms and Boston, is of interest to all of us on the North Shore. Most of its officers and directors are Shore folk, who are actively engaged just now in putting on a sale of articles made by patients of the league in Boston. This sale will take place on Tuesday, Aug. 3, ten to six p. m., with a bridge tournament at three p. m. at "All Oaks," the West Manchester home of Mrs. Edward S. Grew. Tables are being sold by Mrs. George E. Warren and Mrs. Lester Leland, in Manchester; Mrs. Freeman Allen, Nahant; Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Marblehead, and at the Wenham tea house.

What is the Tide Over League? Ask any of the enthusiastic workers and they will quickly tell you.

Let us glance briefly over the history of this institution which has Mrs. Freeman Allen for president, J. W. Lund, treasurer, with Mrs. George E. Warren as assistant, and Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., for secretary and clerk. Among its directors are Miss Mary C. Burnham, Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Katherine P. Motley and Mrs. William S. Spaulding.

It was due to the enthusiasm and perseverance of Dr. Jackson that a few Boston people became interested in the idea of occupational employment for the sick, and gave him the backing that made the league possible. Dr. Jackson had for some years seen the great help to convalescent patients that some form of occupation and hanicraft gives. He had been closely in touch with what Dr. J. G. Mumford was doing along this line at Clifton Springs Sanitarium.

In the meantime the Tide Over League had made a beginning in the wards of Dr. E. G. Brackett, at the Massachusetts General hospital, and were carrying out Dr. Mumford's ideas. Dr. Jackson became deeply interested. He realized that it was just the kind of occupational therapy that he had been wanting for his patients both in and out of the hospital. In spite of many obstacles and lack of cooperation from those who could not see the great need of this work, he persuaded a few friends to help him in organizing the league on a firm basis.

His interest in the league never flagged; all it accomplished, all it planned to do, and the least detail of its work were important to him, and his advice was every ready. He knew from his varied practice the needs of both the poor and the rich in sickness. He knew the poor needed occupation "to give relief from worry; the other occupation to give relief from self." He knew how great a calamity sickness is to the "in-between-people"—people of refinement who are not willing to accept charity, but fully appreciate the privilege of joining a league, where they are paid only what a well person would receive for the same amount of work. It is also an opportunity for them to work as little or as much as health permits in the sunny rooms of the league, with kind guidance. Dr. Jackson realized that this work either at the bedside or in the league rooms would bring back strength to the body, lighten the long, idle hours of convalescene and by being able to make articles that would sell he saw that the patient could be tided over this period in a happier state of mind—the mind that would sooner bring him health.

Dr. Jackson lived to see the work carried on for several years; to see the work of the handicraft teachers and occupational aides for the reconstruction work in the army that is still being carried on in many places; and at the last he was much interested in the special development of this work for men, and the establishment of a separate department for their needs.

Dr. Jackson was "the physician who understood" and the league honors him as its true friend and organizer.

The object, as stated briefly last week, is this: By furnishing remunerative work suitable to the capacity of temporary or permanent invalids, the object is to aid in bringing such invalids back to health and self-supporting occupation.

Purpose: An institution organized for the purpose of giving employment to men and women during a period of convalescene from illness or while temporarily handicapped by some physical infirmity.

Workshop and salesroom: 296 Boylston st., Boston.

At Mrs. Grew's you will see on sale such articles as woven rugs, crocheted rugs, basketry, leather-work, embroidery, children's clothing, and the like, all made by convalescents whom the league is endeavoring to help back to health.

Help the Tide Over League by purchasing at its sale on Aug. 3!

SOMETIMES "Bunny" Woods grows reminiscent. "Bunny" he has been for years to North Shore youngsters. Someone has said that he might be classified in the directory as "manufacturer of manhood." Mr. Woods is a pioneer in the outing class movement. From bean bags with the little tots to baseball and more strenuous sports with the older ones Bunny, physical and moral hygienist, is the one for whom many children will be thankful all their lives that they happened to come under his influence. If playgrounds win battles finally, then Bunny's boys who were "over there" lived up to his teachings in the best manner possible.

Mr. Woods has long believed in what is now so commonly believed, that children's play must be organized, that they must be trained in conducting their out-of-doors sports in order to get the greatest amount of good out of them. Long ago he found out that children not old enough to take up the regular sports of men, yet too old for childish things all day, were eager to be trained in manly games and were quick to respond to his instructions. He has followed out this idea in both his winter classes of physical work and in those of the summer time.

Mr. Woods first conducted his outing classes at a resort near New York. Parents, upon hearing of the benefits derived by the children, offered inducements to him to come to Boston. Then Mr. Woods entered upon a busy career. His classes grew rapidly. Parents were continually asking that their children might join the classes. The winter's work was naturally followed by the summer outing classes. His pupils moved to the North Shore, so Bunny was asked to continue his work out here. Estates in various sections of the Shore were opened for the classes. West Beach, Beverly Farms, was used for his swimming classes. And so the good work has gone on year after year. Many a young matron whose children are now perhaps in his classes was at one time one of Bunny's "kids."

And Bunny's lessons live with them. His interesting way of making physical and out-door athletic work combine in a way that gives the greatest pleasure and does the most good at the same time, is the keynote of his charm. The children get their fun and strength together, also learning perfect obedience, one of the cardinal virtues thoroughly believed in by Mr. Woods.

Mr. Woods is meeting his classes in games and tennis work this season, but is assisted at the beach in swimming by a Y. M. C. A. instructor from Boston.

We started out by saying that Bunny sometimes grows reminiscent. Turner Hill Farm in Ipswich was mentioned the other day and Bunny related a most entertaining story to some young pupils.

Once upon a time his class of 50 to 65 pupils met there. Many came from Nahant in those days as well as all along the line to Manchester. Nahant pupils and those coming from Manchester way met with Bunny at the Beverly station, each group getting there by train or bus. The flock nearly filled a car. The conductor and they were great chums and many a button did the young passengers enveigle from him while en route to Ipswich. Upon arriving they were met by carriages, wagons and all sorts of vehicles (no automobiles then) and carried out to the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rice, Turner Hill Farm.

The whole upper floor at the Rice's was fitted up as a gymnasium. The day was passed with games, canoeing, physical exercises and swimming. In the immense pool Bunny sometimes had 65 at a time. Perhaps the treat of the day was the luncheon served at one long table with Bunny at the head. Then order was kept only by means of the greatest diligence on the part of the head. One boy from Nahant named David, little of stature, but whose oratorical powers became great as he grew older, was the torment of the crowd with his manoeuvering under the table when he was supposed to be demurely eating. Bunny's charges often developed such enormous appetites for the ices that Bunny was often filled with horror and in one case warned a mother that her son, Bayard, might be sick that night. But it never phased him, Bunny was told.

WHAT shall we do about our housekeeping? Everywhere it is the same cry. A North Shore woman, who has been much in California, says that the Housewives' Cooperative societies have done much for the mutual benefit of all concerned in that state.

Matters along the lines of marketing, the question of servants, schools and recreation for children are taken up and studied. Any woman who keeps house may belong. In one city the wife of the mayor, of a chief justice, a laundress and a seamstress, all housewives, are examples of the cosmopolitan nature of the society. Much good is growing out of this union of heads of houses, not only for themselves, but for the problem of general living. This North Shore woman believes that if the living question was taken up here on a cooperative basis it would also result in as advantageous a manner as in the west.

"Crow Island" in Kettle Cove, Manchester, has welcomed home its mistresses, the Misses Amy and Clara Curtis, who spent much time in France doing hospital work during and after the war.

Miss Clara Curtis has received a "medal of French gratitude" for her services over there. She gave a building and provided all material for the Saint Jughes at Pau and managed it until it closed, afterward becoming a nurse at another hospital in Pau.

THE MAGNOLIA SHOPS

NOTES OF INTEREST

A Pretty young débutante was heard to exclaim not long ago: "Oh, I wouldn't miss the fun of shopping and buying loads of pretty things, for the world!" There is fun in shopping, especially when it is accompanied by the feeling that smart and becoming apparel has been procured, and that it expresses individuality. The ladies of the North Shore colony are finding real pleasure in shopping at the Magnolia shops, for here, indeed, is found everything needed for the ultra smart wardrobe, as well as new and beautiful accessories for the home.

The interest of the North Shore folk has centered this week around the "bride's window," at McCutcheon's, which is the delight of every bride-to-be—and, indeed, of every woman. Always the home of the rarest and most exquisite of linens, McCutcheon's have outdone themselves in the superbly beautiful monogrammed linens on display in this window. Our shopping trip this week would assuredly be incomplete without a peep at this window. The linens are displayed over lavender, and tied with bows of rich lavender ribbon, setting off the snowy white of the linens to very best advantage. In every set, be it for bed or table, or towels, the monogram has been designed to match the magnificent patterns of the linen to the smallest detail. This idea was originated by McCutcheon's, and the linens are monogrammed in their New York store. A distinctive note has been struck in the sets of pillow cases and sheets of Spanish linen, their monograms being carried out in pattern to harmonize with the beautifully worked borders. Rarely lovely Irish and French linens, striking a note of elegance in their monograms, in luncheon and dinner sets help to make the window superbly attractive. One would almost be tempted to "get engaged" just for the fun of getting together those adorable linens, and matrons young or old will find some legitimate excuse for changing the contents of their linen closets. Buying things for the bride will be a delightful treat, instead of a puzzling and "wonder what" necessity.

Mr. Tilly, the manager, tells us that the display will be there all next week, and we shall come again to feast our eyes on those deliciously lovely linens.

A visit to Bonwit Teller's attractive shop is ever a pleasure, and must be included in this week's shopping trip, for we simply must get one more glimpse of those adorable, semi-fall hats. There are loads of new ones in since our last visit, we find, as well as capes and wraps, negligees and lovely little caps—all new and dainty and smart,—making the shop alluringly inviting in their tasteful display of well-blended colors. The vagaries of fashion now dictate plaits in frocks and capes, and not to be out-done, the hats are proudly displaying fluted edges or brims, or perhaps a touch around the crown. A delightful little close-fitting hat is of white satin with a double brim of fluting, which is softly and girlishly becoming.

A pretty little jersey jacket in pastel shades that is attracting much favorable comment at Tyson's has the high neck and narrow belt, and can be worn with separate collar and cuffs. The effect is very smart when it is worn with a plaited skirt. A dainty little dress for morning wear is one of printed foulard, with a three-tiered skirt and broad ties.

From hats to something for the home again—and this time is it silver that we must needs have, and in order to be assured of finding both the oldest and the newest in silver, a visit to Schmidt & Son's comes next. We promptly succumb to the allure of the tastefully arranged display of turquoise blue English Stourbridge glass, which is a part of a large shipment they have just received, and all thought of silver flees—for the time being, though it is right there before our eyes. There is an air of elegance and distinction about the Minton table garniture set also on display. This set consists of four figured, covered compotiers with four candlesticks to match.

A jersey suit in the window at J. J. Jonas next attracts the eye, and we enter to investigate. Something really new and very becoming, with a tuxedo or slip-on jacket, tastefully embroidered in unique designs! These are being received with enthusiasm by the North Shore colony, and are for semi-sport wear. The hats here are smart and up-to-the-minute, also.

In the window at Ruby's an exquisitely pretty gown of Pompadour chiffon and lace is on display, which can be used either for afternoon or evening wear. An evening gown also on display is a unique model of turquoise blue taffeta for evening wear with flounces bristling with little frills. Delightful surprises are always in store for the Magnolia shopper at Ruby's. Their models are all French—in hats, gowns and blouses—and in the advanced styles, having the added advantage of being fashionable for autumn wear.

So many nice things have come to our attention on this trip! And now it is the new fall furs. Yes, actually! At L. P. Hollander's they are having their very first exhibition of furs for this season. The opening will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. All the very newest things for fall and winter wear will be here, but as they are not opened up yet, we are not allowed even the smallest "peek" at them, but promise ourselves another trip for this express purpose next week.

Just now we must be content with their wonderful display of hats. Their millinery opening was held yesterday and today (Thursday and Friday), in all the newest and very smartest models. All during the season the complete stock of hats are changed every two weeks, with the advent of the woman who has charge of the "openings," so that there is really a millinery opening there every two weeks.

En passant, there is a daintily pretty bathing suit in the window at Hollander's,—black embroidered in old blue with a lovely little old blue hat to match.

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE OF

NORTH SHORE ESTATES

Q. A. Shaw McKean, of Pride's Crossing, whose engagement has just been announced to Miss Margaret W. Sargent, of Wellesley, has had ideal bachelor quarters for the past winter in the old house he remodelled on Hull st., Beverly, about half a mile from the home of his brother, H. P. McKean, Jr.

The old house stands close to the road. Work on it began before Mr. McKean went to war and was finished only last autumn. It is supposed to be one of the oldest houses in Beverly. Marks of extreme old age were about it and these have all been restored in every respect. New floors were laid, made of wide boards and put down with wooden pegs as in olden times. Panelled walls and old furniture make a charming interior.

The furnishings have not been done by Mr. McKean, but by his sister-in-law, Mrs. H. P. McKean, Jr., who has done it as artistically as an artist's daughter naturally would. Mrs. McKean has made the yellow-painted living-room a model of old-time primness and neatness with its big plain floor and old chairs and cosy fireplace. The den has a few rugs and books and many interesting trophies of Mr. McKean's hunting days and cups won by his dogs from Pride's Hill Kennels. A dining-room and upper chamber all carry out the simple style of furnishings.

The many windows, with their small panes white curtains and flowered over-draperies, add much to the attractiveness of the rooms.

A polo field is in course of construction next the cottage. On this field is where the former kennels stood. They have been moved some distance to the rear and a new cottage built for the caretaker, Harry Hardcastle.

Mr. McKean has spent many week-ends this past winter and spring at his bachelor quarters, where one lone Jap reigns supreme.

"Crowhurst," the F. Meredyth Whitehouse estate, Summer st., Manchester, has a garden that was admired by many Garden club visitors this summer. Their route lay in its vicinity when walking along the rocks to the estate of Mrs. G. M. Lane. This rocky path branching off from the main road and running along the rocks to Dana's Beach is one of the charming walks of the Shore.

The Whitehouse garden is built on the terrace high above the path. Its vine-covered walls and part of the house, just back of the garden, make an attractive picture when viewed from below.

Ascending the path that runs up through the garden brings one to the lower terrace, with its rose border, and little tea house. The next terrace is the one even with the house and this contains the beautifully planned gardens. Blue, white, yellow and pink are the predominating colors.

The lily pool makes the placid center-piece in which gold fish are darting in and out among the lily pads. Bordering the terrace are the flowers and shrubbery, and ornamental stone balustrades. Arches of arbor-vitae and hibiscus are on opposite sides of the pool, the one leading to the outer grounds and the other to a smaller blue garden on one end of the terrace.

This small formal garden is made up of four square beds, box-bordered. Tall standard heliotropes, one in each corner, have been added to the beds this season. A pretty bird bath is a feature here while in the larger garden a sundial stands near the pool.

Boxes filled with white daisies are along the upper windows. Vines, ornamental trees, flowers and the charming stucco house complete an ideal summer picture. And the water view from the terrace is one of the Shore's finest.

"Crowhurst," besides its garden is made up of a small farm lying across the street from the house. It is here that a duck pond, farm buildings and a most attractive cottage and greenhouse combined are placed.

"Old Tree House," the West Manchester home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Leland, has a greenhouse that has come back to its pre-war beauty. In the palm section an immense allamanda towers in the central part, bearing aloft its fine funnel-shaped yellow blooms. Before the war a similar one grew and climbed around the place. This one is new and is fast gaining the size of the former one.

A beautiful showing of achimenes is in another section. A perfect mass of their delicate white and lavender and deep purple tones greets one upon entering here. The begonia section is now ablaze with its brilliant display of orange-colored and pink blossoms. Tall pink geraniums add to the attractiveness in this section, also.

Pots of gesnera are in full blossom in the section of achimenes. Only a few of these are found on the Shore. They have a pretty yellow flower.

"All Oaks," the West Manchester home of Mrs. Edward S. Grew, has some unusually charming features about it. The little rock garden made a few years ago has been enlarged and is running all over the section around the bungalow. Rock plants as well as old-fashioned flowers are blooming profusely in it.

A planting of calceolaria and lobelia along one side of the bungalow makes a fine contrast in yellow and blue. The fountain, with its surrounding flowers, is always a delightful place at Mrs. Grew's. The large bed of heliotropes at one side throw a sweet fragrance over the pools and terrace.

The greenhouse is showing a fine alamanda with big yellow trumpet-shaped flowers. The gloxinia are the principal flowers, however, and a fine mass of their brilliant blooms is seen in the greenhouse as well as pots and boxes of them on the veranda. These were exhibited at the recent show in Manchester.

"OBERLAND," the Pride's Crossing home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge and family, is of interest on account of its beautiful and natural layout. From the hill on which stands the low rambling stucco house with its dark green blinds and attractive dormer roof of slate, a fine view is obtained of the surroundings. On a wooded hill just opposite this one another excellent view is seen, showing the house and gardens from another angle. About 35 acres of woodland and gardens and fields comprise the place, now nearly fifteen years old.

Mrs. Coolidge has been in charge of the opening of Shore gardens for the National Civic Federation during July. This work has been so successful that people are begging to have other gardens opened in August.

Mrs. Coolidge, a member of the North Shore Garden club and an enthusiastic believer in all kinds of gardening and farming, has a charming little garden at the foot of the terrace around the house. It is hedged in rather formally and is now showing up in blues, pinks and white. A long arbor is at the back of the garden. Climbing white roses make an unusual showing over one end of it.

Steps made in the turf lead from the garden up to the house, a most interesting approach. Steps with stone treads are also at one end leading up to the terrace. Old-fashioned flowers including a group of purple and white petunias are seen growing around in the rocky terraces so naturally formed on the hillside below the house.

Down in the fields below the garden is seen the duck pond, and always the sheep—a part of the place.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM ENDICOTT, who purchased the Gordon Means place on Grape Vine rd., just out of the village of Beverly Farms, are having some improvements of interest made upon the place. The house is left as it was with the exception of a dining-room, kitchen and pantry that are now under construction.

Two old houses dating back 150 or more years are remodeled in a most delightful way in keeping with their times. One of these has been finished and is occupied by the chauffeur's family. Six rooms and a bath have been made without altering the lines of the old place. Ancient beams have been left in the dining-room. Mrs. Endicott is a strong believer in preserving the antique and would have had all of the old beams exposed had not the carpenters neatly covered them with casings before she knew it.

The old house on the opposite side of the road is now being made over for the farmer's use. Nothing of an old-time feature is to be altered. The fireplaces, with their ovens are to be renewed just as in former times. A pretty lattice-covered well is to be retained, also.

Electricians say that these hand-hewn timbers have been the hardest they have encountered in years to work with.

A small shop, formerly a shoemaker's, has been made into a chicken house for the white leghorns that are now a part of the place. Also an old barn was moved and remodeled into a most up-to-date place. The house and cottages and out-buildings are the typical white-painted ones of New England, with their green blinds. Roberts & Hoare, of Manchester, are doing the remodeling.

In the chauffeur's cottage (old Standley house) an interesting wooden cradle of the type that came over in the Mayflower was found; also a dasher-churn.

Mr. and Mrs. Endicott spent only a short time this season at their new place. They are returning from England in September and will occupy it during the autumn. Their winter home is at 270 Clarendon st., Boston.

AT the home of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Beverly Cove, is seen one of the most unique and striking terrace arrangements on the Shore. The fine grassy terrace, high and well walled up with rocks over which roses are blooming profusely, is on the water side of the house. Down below is the large level plain of lawn next the water. The unusual and striking thing about the terrace is the planting of variegated euonymus around the pillars of the piazza. This is of a fine thick growth and surrounds each post like a hedge of great size and thickness. By trimming it a few times each season the formal and architectural design it makes around the house and terrace is preserved. Urns of box and bay trees also adorn the wall of the terrace.

Looking from this terrace down to the grassy plain below is an exceptionally good place to view the children taking part in "Bunny" Woods outing classes which are held twice a week at this home. When the many little four and five-year-olds are in their class they look, from here, "like flowers of the grass," as some one said the other day.

The Sears' place is one of the interesting seashore homes. Large and roomy, with all the charm of a place lying directly on the water, it yet has ample room for flower gardens, much room for vegetables and a place devoted to farm-like products.

Perhaps little Harry Sears, the young son, is the only boy in the immediate Shore section who has turkeys, young and old, to play with. The gardener is raising a flock of them as well as ducks, geese, chickens and pigeons.

The fragrance of the flower is never borne against the breeze; but the fragrance of human virtues diffuses itself everywhere.—RAMAYANA.

EDITORIAL

One of the Great Advantages of the North Shore is the medical service which is available. There are able doctors and surgeons in all of the cities and towns. Many of these are the leaders in the profession in the city of Boston, which affords unusual facilities for the medical profession. On the Shore there are many high-grade hospitals which are serving the communities well,—it would be well if every community could be as well served. Dr. Edward Everett Hale was in Beverly when the excellent institution (the Beverly hospital) on the hill was dedicated, and he wrote of it, "In the new buildings men might have found there . . . . the last and best appliance known to the science of hospitals. There was a staff of nurses, there was every instrument which a staff of physicians and nurses of experience can command. There are three new buildings, of which no bacillus or bacterian has ever heard. There is a park of eighteen acres in which nurses and patients may breathe God's air and enjoy the beauty of His world. There are forty-one bedrooms, from each one of them the bed and the patient can be rolled out upon an open air gallery, where he can see the morning star at three o'clock in the morning or Cassiopedia at midnight, or anything that happens between sunrise and sunset. This alone means health and light and life and joy. What we need in the United States is the institution of a series of small hospitals ready to serve the neighborhood and to serve it for the best. The old prejudice against hospitals is dying out, just as the Sarah Gamps have died out. I am old enough to remember the hospital service of the Civil war, service which attracted to the work of the military hospitals hundreds of the noblest women of America. I had the good fortune to know personally several of these ladies. After their experience everyone was eager that in the case of her own illness she might be transferred to a hospital. For everyone knew that she could be better cared for there than she could be cared for even by the most tender efforts of an ordinary household. The public must soon address itself to the establishment of home hospitals in every community and the public has no better object lesson than the new hospital in Beverly."

These words are from Edward Everett Hale, who was minister, philanthropist and editor for so many years in the city of Boston, and who achieved in his lifetime by his sacrifice and industry a name that will endure. Since his warm-hearted endorsement of the Beverly hospital the institution has been continuing its work, serving a large part of the North Shore. The board of directors and the officers of the institution have been men of unusual ability and foresight and there has been developed in the institution a spirit that has spoken plainly of the good will of the management, the efficient coöperation of the physicians and nurses and the esteem of the community which it has served. Within those walls lives have been renewed, and those restored to health have gone to their homes with feelings of gratitude to the organization which conducts the hospital and to the physicians and nurses who have served there. Such institutions everywhere deserve to have all the funds which the efficient maintenance of their work demand. The funds are well cared for, economically expended and efficiently used. Where can one find a more appealing and more satisfactory way to invest one's funds for the good of humanity?

The Tercentenary of the settlement of Provincetown and Plymouth is bringing to Massachusetts, pilgrims to the historic shrines of the nation. The visits which are made to the South Shore naturally send the tourists north for a day's trip to Salem and the historic points of interest on the North Shore. There is, however, something more inspiring the people of the present generation than mere idle sightseeing and the passing of happy holidays. The war forced upon the minds of the most careless thinker that the perils and difficulties of old-world thinking were stern realities and that the salvation of the world has been due to the free-thinking and liberty-loving nation on this side of the Atlantic. The harsh and bitter experience of the war and the revolt of American opinion has made the present generation understand, as they never could have understood otherwise, the spirit and vision of the Puritans and Pilgrims in daring an untried sea and settling in an unexplored province, in order to escape the depressing influence of the old world and to establish a new order of religious and political freedom on the shores of a new continent. Plymouth is the shrine of American institutions. There came here a sturdy band of stalwart men, who began a colonial life with a liberty of spirit that has dominated the purpose of the American people. This spirit sent the men of the generation overseas to win the war. Thoughtfully and reverently sightseers, chastened by the experience of a great war, go to Plymouth and Salem with new devotion and admiration, realizing that it was the spirit of these determined men that assured every American his birthright of freedom and inspired the nation in the hours of the great war.

The International Yachting contest is interesting the amateur sportsmen of the Shore from Marblehead to Rockport and the skilled masters of vessels which seek the Massachusetts ports. Will the Resolute be able to win? The spirit of the contest appears above reproach. The friendliness of the two nations is apparent. As to the general sportsmanship of Sir Thomas Lipton, nothing is left to be said. He has built one craft and then another with a purpose strong and persistent to win the cup and carry it overseas. He has shown qualities which the American people frankly admire. Steady and sure has his ambition been. If America loses the cup this year, the American people could surrender it to Sir Thomas Lipton with a good grace, in recognition of the honorable and constant skill of the owner of the challenger. The international race has awakened new interest. It has been a tonic to the mind and spirit to feel the glow of feeling that arises in such a friendly international contest. After a long and bitter war the friendly rivalry of the old days appears to be a bit taken out of the peaceful life of the pre-war days. Sir Thomas Lipton deserves the praise which he is receiving everywhere in America. No one wishes to lose the cup, but if Sir Thomas Lipton carrys the cup overseas with him when he goes it will not be a misfortune to America yachting circles, for it will stimulate a renewed study of speed-yacht designs. This would not be undesirable. If American wins, it is hoped that Lipton will not lose heart, but try again. If America loses, it will be with a good grace to a good sportsman, but attention will be given to the building of a craft that will challenge the winner.

The American People are not going to be whipped into line in the coming election by a trumped up slogan relative to the League of Nations. In the years of the tariff contests the political campaigns were successful conducted along such lines and many remember the torch-light processions, the abundance of printed circulars and the slogans, "Tariff for Revenue Only" and "Protect the Home Labor." The slogans were effective and telling. There is an advantage in having a short, catchy slogan to aid in the publicity work of campaigns, but there are dangers involved that cannot be overlooked. The effort to make the League of Nations the issue in the present campaign is unfortunate for the Democrats and will not prove a harm to the Republicans. The truth of the matter is that the people wish a change in the administration, and despite the fact that many Republicans favor a League of Nations in some form, and the independent voters seek also some international arrangement for the adjustment of peaceful relations with the nations of the world, they are not going to be coralled by the "call" which any political party makes upon that issue. The Republican party accepts any issue the Democratic party may lay down upon the question of the League of Nations because it is not satisfied with the work of the opposition. Voters are alert in these days and are not going to be trapped by a catchy phrase that covers a multitude of political mistakes. The Democrats cannot ride to power on a wave of post-war enthusiasm to endorse "their" league of nations. The Republican party may be trusted to meet the situation promptly, honorably and justly. Peace must be made quickly. The Democratic leader had the power and failed. The American people are willing and anxious to entrust the situation to the Republican party.

The Newly Organized political party, supported by the committee of forty-eight, has failed in its plans. The policy of the new organization does not have the compelling power that is enjoyed by the two leading political parties. It will go the way of the numerous other political parties which have had their little day, only to be cast aside. There are many things in the older parties which are to be condemned, but political reform and political success are to be attained by working out those reforms within the organizations. This was the error of the progressive organizations of both parties. The Prohibition party failed because there were many large issues to be considered and not because the American people were blind to the reform which they urged. There are reforms in society which need support; many evils will be corrected. The small parties may have their influence, largely indirect, in shaping public opinion, but as organzatons they are destined to fail and they ought to fail. The great issues which the people demand the parties to attend to will be met honorably. Public opinion may be very slow in developing, but it is certain as well as slow. This can be seen in the review of the great movements of the nation.

The Constantly Recurring motor accidents have aroused the people to the seriousness of the situation. Every day and particularly on Sundays accidents are reported to the Highway Commission. The evil is a difficult one to handle. More stringent automobile laws will help, but not wholly meet the trouble in hand. An important meeting was held in a North Shore city to discuss the conditions, and the spirit of the speakers and the number of attendants indicated the interest of the public in the question. It was conceded by every speaker that there should be a more careful examination into the fitness of the applicants for motor licenses to operate a motor vehicle. The present methods admit of opportunity for fraud. One youth, several years younger than the law required received an application which was signed by two witnesses and sworn to before a justice-of-the-peace and a license was forwarded. It is proposed that every application be examined carefully by an agent or have the applicant meet the proper authorities. Some way should be devised to eliminate the possibilities of fraud in presenting applications. Despite the large number of accidents there is greater skill being shown in the manipulation of motor cars; operators are more experienced. The campaign of education which is being conducted will be as helpful as the making of complicated laws.

The Death of Robin Damon, the publisher of the Salem Evening News, is a serious loss to the North Shore. His career has been an interesting and successful one. It is another instance of the opportunities which are presented to youths to make their way successfully against great odds. As a lad he published a boys' paper and acquired a skill that inspired him to continue the amateur efforts as a life work. Removing to Salem in 1877 he established himself for a life of service that has been recognized throughout New England. With a few hundred dollars he began to publish the Salem Evening News on October 16, 1880. The small paper of four pages, four columns to the page and an issue of one thousand copies was the beginning of his successful career and of the Salem Evening News. The development of the paper was steady. The editor applied himself to his task with patience and intelligence. He lived to see and enjoy the rewards of his labor. The enterprise has grown. The paper which Robin Damon published has exerted a daily influence for good throughout the North Shore district. The high character of its editorial policy, the clean-cut and exacting standards for its news columns and its strict requirements concerning the character of the accepted advertisements have been evident. Robin Damon has ended his personal service, but his personal influence will be felt, through the paper which he established, for many years. The difficulties of the publishing houses have been severe and Robin Damon mastered his problem and won for himself a position of influence in Essex county that has been recognized.

The Political Campaign is on now. While the two parties are not fully organized for their intensive pre-election work, yet the contest has been fairly begun. The situation is interesting to the observer, for the election of the Republican candidate seems assured, and only a very remarkable change in public opinion can make any change in the results of the election. The revolt is not only anti-Wilson, the antagonism of the voters to Mr. Wilson and his policy, but a decided public opinion which demands also the retirement of the Democratic party from power. The spirit of the Democratic convention indicated the fact that the party was determined to cut free from the control of the President as far as the candidate was concerned. Cox was nominated by the party in a vain effort to save the organization's control of affairs by breaking effectively with Mr. Wilson. The results have been unsatisfactory to the progressive elements within the party. The failure of the new party also is a contributing factor in the situation. The contest will be an out and out vote for the Democratic or the Republican nominee. The usual petty methods of appealing to prejudices are evident. No one will desire to whitewash the personal record of any of the candidates, but the leaders of the opposition must be careful in their "muck-raking" policy. Such methods are unbecoming and unworthy. There is no dispute concerning the right of the public to know the truth and the whole truth concerning the personal life of the candidates, but the investigations and the published facts must have in them frankness and due regard to the proprieties of the situation. American public opinion is sensitive to unworthy influence and it will quickly resent the maintenance of a political campaign which is not conducted upon high grounds. The campaign has begun and it should not be imperiled by indiscretions.

Breezy Briefs

Following a conference between Pres. Wilson and Gov. Cox, it was announced that the two "were absolutely at one" with regard to certain campaign issues. That means tain campaign issues. That means, we presume, that Wilson will be the actual head of the Democratic ticket, for he always does the dictating and no one can be "at one" with him under any other circumstances.

THE RIGHT WAY

Sweep your sidewalk well,
Throw nothing in the street,
Pick up papers in the alley,
And keep your back yard neat.

Do not your swill with ashes mix,
Or your barrels pile too high,
The stuff will surely get spilled out,
And the wind makes papers fly.

When to market you do go,
Find the cleanest shop you can,
Buy the food which none can handle
Save a cleanly grocer man.

Seek the shop where vegetables
Stand too high for dogs or cats,
Where the other things are covered
Safe from dust and flies and rats!

No one is too small to help,
Every one must lend a hand,
If our Boston is to be
The cleanest city in the land.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

Of course we know that spiritualism as a cult had many enthusiastic followers before 1914. However, there is no doubt that the war was the direct cause of a vastly increased interest in the question of communication with the dead, and hundreds of volumes have been written on the subject. The concensus of opinion is that spiritualism is losing some of its attraction with the general public. Whether this is so or not, the novelists are still trying to make attractive—mediums, automatic writing, table moving and ouija boards.

Such well-known writers of fiction as E. F. Benson, Robert Hichens, Basil King, Lucas Malet, Anne Douglas Sedgwick and Alice Brown have written novels in which spiritualism was the theme. "Across the Stream," by E. F. Benson, "The Tall Villa," by Lucas Malet, and "Mrs. Marden," by Robert Hichens, came out some time ago. Two more recent ones are "The Third Window," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, and "The Wind Between the Worlds," by Alice Brown.

Miss Sedgwick ranks high as a novelist and "The Third Window" is her first novel since "Tante," which was published in 1913. The story is short and it is needless to say that it is well written. Only four characters appear in the book and one of these is the dead husband of one of the other characters. When you have finished the book you will have no doubt what the author believes about our ability to communicate with those who have crossed the "Great Divide."

Readers of "The Prisoner," "Bromley Neighborhood," "The Flying Tueton" and "The Black Drop" do not have to be told that a new novel by Alice Brown is worth while. Her latest, "The Wind Between the Worlds," is a real good story, notwithstanding that it deals with the occult. Miss Brown has the happy faculty of portraying old age real well. "Madam Brooke," an old lady over eighty, is the real heroine of the book—a woman you will want to know. Your agreeing or not with the author will depend on whether you are a skeptic or a believer regarding spiritualism.

A new travelogue by Harry A. Franck is always a welcome event in the literary world. His most recent is "Vagabonding Through Changing Germany." An experienced traveler and observer describes his adventures in Germany since the armistice.

"The Light Out of the East" is the posthumous work of S. R. Crockett, author of "The Sticket Minister," and other well-known novels.

Next week there will be a note on some books that were put into the library between 1910 and 1915 and were much read at that time.

Miss Marion Spinney is recovering from an operation performed at the Salem hospital last Saturday for a throat trouble.

Sudden Death of Michael J. Callahan, of Manchester

Michael J. Callahan, of Central st., Manchester, passed away very suddenly at the Manchester House last Saturday. Mr. Callahan, although not feeling ill, was not in his usual good health, and the cause of death is said to be heart failure, as he was afflicted somewhat with heart trouble.

The deceased was one of Manchester's prominent citizens and well-known in this section. He had been proprietor of the Manchester House for about 40 years, owned the post-office block and was a director of the Manchester Trust Co. Since the death of his wife, to whom he was always most devoted, Mr. Callahan had led a retired life.

Born in Glencove, Long Island, N. Y., 68 years ago the 17th of August next, Mr. Callahan spent his early years there, later engaging in the plumbing business. As has previously been said, the deceased was proprietor of the Manchester House for nearly a half century, during which time he formed many friendships and acquaintances with people from all over the country.

The funeral service was held at the Sacred Heart church, Manchester, on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. Mass was said by Fr. Kiley. Fr. Deagon, of Beverly, was master of ceremonies, assisted by Fr. Powers, of Chelsea, as deacon, Fr. Barrett, of Albany, N. Y., sub-deacon, Fr. McCann, of Troy, N. Y., and Fr. Mullin, of the Sacred Heart church. Burial in the family lot at St. Mary's, Montserrat.

Mr. Callahan was a life member of the Lynn lodge of Elks, also a member of the Holy Name society of Manchester. These two orders held their special funeral services at the house on Monday evening.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Mary E. Murphy, of Brooklyn, N. Y., three nieces and five nephews.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pearson and two children, of Lynn, are making a several weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Morgan, parents of Mrs. Pearson.

The Manchester Boy Scouts played two games of baseball the past week with local teams and split even, winning and losing. The rubber game will be played Saturday evening of this week at 6 o'clock. A candy sale was held Thursday evening at the band concert. The boys are looking forward to going into camp the last week in August. They hope to go to New Hampshire for this outing.

An alarm from Box 52 called the fire truck to a slight blaze on the roof of the O'Neil house on Union st., early Tuesday afternoon. The fire was evidently set by a spark from the chimney. The damage was slight, however, only a few shingles being ripped off the roof.

Masconomo council, D. of P., of Manchester, has received an invitation from Ucita council, No. 46, of Gloucester, to attend its 27th anniversary, which will be held in Gloucester on Aug. 3.

There will be a special meeting of Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., at the Odd Fellows hall next Thursday evening, July 29, for the purpose of taking action on the matter of the Bingham legacy. As this is an important meeting it is desired that a large attendance of members be present.

Miss Cherstine Peterson, who is so well-known here through her masseuse work during the summer season, as she makes her home for several months with Mrs. M. C. Dodge and family, School st., is sailing on the 5th of August, on the Mauretania, for a visit to her native home in Sweden. She hopes to return to Boston by October 1, and that she will bring her younger sister back with her.

A postal from Sidney Peters, mailed at Honolulu, Hawaiian islands, June 30th, says he is having a fine time and that he expected to go to the volcano (Kilauea) pictured in vivid colors on the reverse side of the card, on the following day. "Some place," he writes. "The scenery is fine. Remember me to all." Sidney is still in the country's service, and he is evidently seeing some of the world via Uncle Sam's warships.

SALEM AND MANCHESTER ODD FELLOWS ENJOY PICNIC

Members of Magnolia lodge, I. O. O. F., of Manchester, and Fraternity lodge, I. O. O. F., of Salem, together with friends, enjoyed a picnic at Tuck's Point, Manchester, Wednesday of this week. Some over 200 people attended the affair, which was voted a success.

During the day there was the usual program of races and other sporting events. The picnic dinner at noon was a most enjoyable feature of the day.

In the evening the two lodges crossed bats at the Brook st. playground, Manchester, for a game of baseball. The Manchester "three-linkers" were easily the victors, walking away with the game, 15 to 6.

Wm. Hammond, of Salem, was chairman of the committee from Fraternity lodge. The committee from Magnolia lodge consisted of William Craig, chairman, George R. Beaton and C. Elmer Smith.

The HOSPITAL at BEVERLY is our COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Manchester, Beverly Farms, Pride's Crossing, Wenham and Hamilton

You are interested in this hospital Because———

1 The community hospital is an unchallenged ideal. It is the highest type of democracy and humanitarianism, its aim being to provide service to sufferers. Although you may never have been in the hospital and may not even know its location, yet an accident or sudden illness may make it imperative this very night for you or those near and dear to you to call for its service.

2 The hospital saves life. Its accident room is ready for any emergency. It is the only institution of the kind in the community and provides for the urgent needs of 35,000 people.

3 The hospital alleviates suffering. An appeal to aid the sufferer is an appeal to the deepest-rooted instincts of the human heart, for each and every one of us knows by dread experience, what pain and torture are. You help a sufferer when you help the hospital, and you can do this without discomfort, hardship or deprivation to yourself.

4 The hospital takes away the doctor's handicap. Any Beverly physician may call at any time upon the services of the resident pathologist. The time saved in sending analyses out of town may mean the life of the patient.

ANDREWS—BAKER

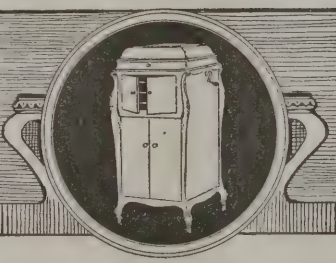

An interesting wedding occurred July 14, at high noon, in Greely, Colorado, when Miss Caroline Ruth Baker, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Baker, of Greely, and Francis Marshall Andrews, Jr., of Manchester, were married at the home of the parents of the bride.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. T. Scott, of the Methodist Episcopal church, the Episcopal service being used. Just before the ceremony Mrs. C. B. Shaver, of Denver, sang "Oh, Promise Me."

The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the ceremony taking place under a bower of pink and white sweet peas.

A buffet luncheon was served to the wedding guests, after which the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip to Estes Park, and Colorado Springs. They will come east and will be the guests, during August, of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Andrews, parents of the groom. They will then go to their home in Bridgewater.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wolff and daughter, Barbara, of Provincetown, were in Manchester last Friday and Saturday, for a visit with Mrs. Wolff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Northrup.

A Tourist social will be held at the Baptist vestry, Monday, July 26th, at 8 o'clock. Descriptive trips, humorous and otherwise, will be given, and there will be music by a young people's orchestra.

Baptist church, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor. Sunday morning at 10.30 the pastor will preach the fifth sermon in the series on the Lord's Prayer, the subject being "Our Daily Bread." Sunday evening service at 8 o'clock. Song service and short address by the pastor.

The regular monthly meeting of Salem Christian Union will be held next Monday evening at the Beverly Farms Baptist church. The State Supt. of the Loyalty Campaign, Miss Bessie McLean, will speak on the Campaign. The newly elected president, Harry S. Rice, of Salem, will preside, while Ralph L. Leonard will conduct the song service.

The Baptist Sunday school will hold a picnic at Tuck's Point, Thursday, July 29, with the Sunday school of the First Baptist church, Gloucester, as its guests. If the day should prove stormy the ringing of the church bell at 8.30 a. m. will announce that the picnic will be held on Friday, the 30th. Games, races and boat rides will be enjoyed. Members of the Sunday school and their friends are invited. Silva's bus will leave the church between the hours of 9.30 and 12.15.

DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL WINDOW AT SACRED HEART CHURCH

Sunday morning at Sacred Heart church, Manchester, at 10.30 o'clock. the new memorial window erected in honor of those from the Sacred Heart parish who answered the call of our country in the late war. will be blessed and dedicated. The blessing will be by Rev. George Mullin; solemn high mass will be celebrated by Rev. Francis J. Kiley. The sermon will be by Rev. John T. O'Brien, of Sharon. There will be a number of priests present on this occasion.

This window is a gift from the people of the Sacred Heart parish and is most beautiful. The total cost for this memorial window is about $3000.

The public is invited to visit the church at any tme for the purpose of seeing the new window.

The members of the Sunday school of the Sacred Heart church, Manchester, held their annual picnic Tuesday at Tuck's Point, Manchester. A fine time was enjoyed. The sports were particularly interesting, cash prizes and articles of merchandise being awarded the winners in these events.

The attendance was good and the affair was a pronounced success. The event, which is always popular, especially among the younger people, was attended by many of the older folk, as well.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

The Manchester post of the American Legion wishes to publicly thank every one who so kindly purchased tickets for the dance held July 12, the proceeds of which were given to the family of Wm. McMurray. Mr. McMurray recently met with a painful accident and is now in the hospital.

Those who did not buy tickets, but generously contributed to the cause, are also thanked.

The next meeting of the local post will be held August 4, in the G. A. R. hall. Several matters of importance will be taken up and a large attendance is desired.

One of the matters to be acted on is the proposed by-laws. This is of importance to every member and every one should attend.

Dues for this year are $2 and those who have not paid up by July 26, 1920, may find that an initiation fee has been imposed. It is advisable to join immediately.

SUNDAY SPORTS QUESTION

AGAIN SUBJECT OF CORRESPONDENCE —"SPIRIT OF THE LORD'S DAY"

Editor North Shore Breeze,
Manchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:

As so often occurs in written discussions, the point of the good-natured argument to which you have so kindly opened your columns is on the verge of being lost, if it is not lost already. The question that really is being discussed is whether there shall be legalized in Manchester the playing of games on Sunday. This question does not call into account the personal piety or morality of the writers; but it does demand some sound thinking as to the purpose of Sunday, the work of the church and the meaning of religion.

The question of Sunday baseball is the question of whether its adoption would aid in keeping the spirit of Sunday for the quiet—mental, physical, and spiritual—which makes it a day of re-creation; for the worship and Christian service which help to keep us in touch with the vast spiritual domain of life, and which we are so foolish sometimes as to say does not exist because it is not apparent to our physical senses. If Sunday baseball aids the cultivation of the spiritual side of man's nature—it should by all means be admitted to the Lord's Day. But most, if they were honest with themselves, would agree that the advantages of Sunday baseball are confined to the physical. And for the cultivation of the physical phase of our life we have daylight saving, Saturday half holidays, and summer vacations with six-sevenths of the week alloted for play in God's out-of-doors.

When these two needs of man's nature are confused and when proper provision is not made for both, experience shows that morals and civilization suffer. Blackstone, the English authority on law, observed: "A corruption of morals generally follows the profanation of the Sabbath." And Lord Beaconsfield concluded that Sunday observance was "the cornerstone of civilization." These are not personal opinions, but mature observations from history.

Phillips Brooks was one of the founders of the Lord's Day League of New England, which has opposed Sunday sports for years. Ex-Governors Long and Bates have been enthusiastic supporters of the Lord's Day League in the past. Lincoln said, "As we keep or break the Sabbath day we nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope by which man rises." President Faunce, of Brown university, has strong statements as to the keeping of the Sabbath day. Sir Walter Scott said, "Give the world one-half of Sunday and you will soon find that religion has no stronghold on the other half."

The Scriptures are the final authority on things religious and I fail to find any suggestion that sports are permissible on the Lord's Day. In Christ's life we find no suggestion of anything except service, meditation and worship on the Sabbath.

Again we should note that churchgong is the smallest part of Christianity. Not merely to attend service, but to do service, was the Master's injunction. And in these busy lives of ours the old-fashioned opportunity of Sunday for deeds of mercy, for service, for reading and thinking, we do not get a chance to do other days, is often lost. If Sunday baseball would help in the exercise of these faculties, by all means let us have it.

Though the day may be "coming when religion will mean general good," Christianity has meant for nearly two thousand years a concern for, care of, and service to others on the Jericho road of life. The commandments are: First, "Love the Lord thy God with all thy might," second, "Thy neighbor as thyself."

So I would make it plain that there is a purpose for the observance of Sunday in the cultivation of the spiritual side of life which has been justified by experiences, that our concern is to make conditions in Manchester which will best help us to remember we are not merely physical organisms, but spiritual beings. The danger is not lack of good physical exercise and sport, but the devotion to such exercise and to business, to the exclusion of the finer things of life. We must not let the good things of life rob us of the best. The question is not for one person to decide for a community, "the moral distinction between Sunday baseball and golf versus automobiling and bathing," although I believe there is an important distinction. Automobiling and bathing to be carried on in a spirit of competition and rivalry (without which baseball has no value) means automobile races and aquatic meets. To sit in family groups on the beach or go in bathing, or take a ride through New England's scenic wonderland, will produce worship and thanksgiving on the part of those susceptible to God's goodness as shown all about us. I have heard exclamations of reverence inspired by the contemplation of the sublime both on the beach and among the hills, but I am sure I never heard anything approaching reverence at a ball game. The player's errors and umpire's decisions cause disgust and much uncomplimentary talk, and stirs up ill-feeling many times.

Our real concern is each to ask himself what form of community observance of Sunday will best keep the spirit of the Lord's day, and contribute to our largest individual well being—and be honest with himself as he answers.

Very sincerely yours,
H. E. LEVOY.

Friends of Warren Haskell, second class machinist on the U. S. S. Hovey, have recently received cards from him from Austria, where the Hovey has stopped for several weeks on her cruise around the world. She was soon to sail for Turkey, where an indefinite stay would be made.

Rev. A. G. Warner, of Lowell, was in town the latter part of last week renewing acquaintances among his many friends. Mr. Warner gave up his pastorate in Lowell last winter to take up work with the Inter-Church World movement, which work he continued until recently. He has decided to return to a pastorage, however, and he has accepted a call to the Highland Baptist church, Fitchburg. He will take up his new work on the first of August.

Thomas Arbuckle is entertaining his sister and niece, who are on for a visit from California.

Mrs. F. W. Manning was taken to the old family homestead at Duxbury, Cape Cod, Monday, in the town ambulance, and we are pleased to report she stood the long trip exceptionally well. Mrs. Manning is slowly recovering from the very serious illness of last winter, though she is not yet able to walk. Rev. Mr. Manning will join her at Duxbury later.

Mrs. Thomas Smith, of 26 Tappan st., is leaving Manchester within a few days, for her former home in Poland. She will be accompanied by her three children. Mrs. Smith has asked the Breeze to say "good-bye" to her friends and acquaintances in Manchester, and to the many Polish families in the town. She hopes to return to Manchester again after her visit home.

At a meeting of the executive board of the Manchester Baseball association, held Tuesday evening, it was voted to accept the resignation of F. R. MacCullum, as manager of the team, and Gordon Slade was appointed to the position to finish out the rest of the season. Manager Slade announced it as his intention to put on a Town team of all local players, and promises some good attractions for the coming games.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Bohaker, and a party of friends from Newburyport, visited in town Wednesday.

Edward Northrup and his bride, of Wakefield, visited with Mr. Northrup's parents over Sunday.

Miss Pauline Gay, of Bedford, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Preston, School st.

Walter Skeen and family have moved this week, from 9 Sea st., to the tenement formerly occupied by Otis Bohaker on the Cabot estate, where Mr. Skeen is gardener.

Mrs. Herbert Sawyer was up from West Gloucester, Monday, where Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer are camping, for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Morgan, parents of Mrs. Sawyer.

Manchester will cross bats with the Russia Cement Co. team at the local grounds Saturday afternoon. This is the leading team in the Industrial league, in Gloucester, and a snappy game is to be expected. The Manchester nine will show many new faces Saturday. Manager MacCullum has resigned as manager after two seasons, and Gordon Slade will succeed him. Many local players will be seen on the diamond tomorrow.

The Baseball Tag Day last Saturday, in charge of Archie Cool, netted some $38.

Wars produce many stories of fiction, some of which the oftener they are told the more they are believed to be true. The War of the Rebellion was no exception to this rue, and the story of the apple tree is one of these fictions based on a slight foundation of fact. There was, indeed, an apple orchard on one side of the hill occupied by the Confederate forces. Running diagonally up the hill was a wagon road, which, at one point, ran very near one of the trees, so that the wheels of the vehicles had on that side cut off the roots of the tree, leaving a little embankment. General Babcock, of my staff, reported to me that when he first met General Lee he was sitting on this embankment, with his feet in the road below, and his back resting against the tree. The story had no other foundation than that. Like many other good stories, it would be very good if it was only true.—Memoirs of Ulysses S. Grant.

Manchester School Notes

Stewart Patterson will enter Beverly High school in the fall. The young man has ambitions to become a lawyer, and he hopes to go to Harvard. He is popular among the boys of the town, and last year he was captain of the baseball and football teams, president of the Boys' class, manager of the school ball team—a leader in sports and studies.

Lockhart Allen has successfully passed his test at Andover, and will enter Sept. 14. He hopes to go to Harvard.

Edwin Andrews will enter Beverly High school next fall.

Women of Essex County Senatorial Districts will Meet

The regional conference of the women of the 1st, 2d and 3d senatorial districts of Essex county, of the Republican party, will meet in the Unitarian parish house, Federal st., Beverly, Wednesday, August 4. Mrs. Charles S. Bird is chairman of the women's division. The morning's program is for officers only and will consist of reports and general business besides an address by Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley, chairman, American Citizenship, on "The Citizenship of Married Women; the New Plank in the Republican Platform."

The public is cordially invited to be present in the afternoon. Addresses will be given by Mrs. Bird, Hon. John M. Gibbs and Mrs. Jas. D. Tillinghast. Wm. S. Felton, chairman, executive committee of the Republican party of Massachusetts, will welcome women into the Republican party, his short address coming at 2.15. Afternoon session begins at 2 o'clock.

Miss Grace Story, of Brookline, is visiting her mother, Mrs. F. F. Story, on Western ave.

Marion Barter, of Kennebunk, Me., is spending a two weeks' vacation with her friend, Jennie McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. Axel Nelson, of Boston, are guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. Hannah Brown, Norman ave.

Plans are being made for a lawn party in aid of St. Joseph's chapel. Any gifts of money or articles can be left at the home of Mrs. D. C. Ballou.

Rev. Clarence Strong Pond, pastor of the Baptist church at Beverly Farms, preached in the Village church last Sunday morning in exchange with the local pastor.

Services will be held in the Village church Sunday at 10.45 a. m. and at 8.15 p. m. Dr. Eaton will preach. Morning subject: "The Spirit's Manifestations." Evening subject: "Burdens and Burden-Bearers."

The rainbow party given Tuesday night at the Men's club in aid of St. Joseph's chapel, was a social and financial success. The costumes were unique and of great variety. Among the "celebrities" represented were Charlie Chaplin and Sis Hopkins.

Miss Dorothea McGaughey left Tuesday for New York city, where she will assist her father in business. Miss McGaughey will be missed not only by the village folk, but also by many of the summer guests who have known her as the agreeable and capable secretary and bookkeeper at the North Shore Swimming Pool.

A "Black and White Party" will be given next Monday night, July 26, at the Men's club for the benefit of the Addison Gilbert hospital maternity ward. The affair will be in charge of Mrs. Charles Hoysradt, Mrs. Fred Dunbar and Mrs. D. C. Ballou, who, during the last few weeks, have been working here for this most worthy object. Bus will leave for Manchester at 11.40 p. m., and for Gloucester at 12.

Annual Church Fair will be Held Next Wednesday

The members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Village church will hold their annual sale at the church, Wednesday, July 28. They wish to appeal to the many friends, who in other years have helped so generously, to again aid them in making this sale a financial success. This year, more than usual, the success of the sale will depend greatly upon the aid thus given. Although many things were prepared during the past winter the work was greatly handicapped by the severe winter making it impossible for the ladies to meet for sewing. Therefore, gifts of money, flowers, cake, candy and useful articles will be thankfully received and may be sent to Mrs. Fred S. Lycett or to Mrs. W. R. Boyd.

The following committees have been appointed: Domestic table, Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Mrs. E. L. Story, Mrs. Jessie Dunbar; candy, Mrs. Thomas Harvey, Mrs. Oscar Story; flowers, Mrs. W. R. Boyd and Mrs. Carrie Brown; aprons, Mrs. Fred Dunbar, Mary Boyd and Mrs. Amy Lycett McLean; cake, Mrs. Ernest Howe, Mrs. John May, Mrs. Ernest C. Lucas; ice cream, Mrs. Frank Abbott, Mrs. Ethel Story; grabs, Mrs. L. Hunt, Abbie May; gifts, Mrs. Chas. Hoysradt, Sussie Symonds, Mrs. Henry Butler.

Notes from the Magnolia Women's Club

Our membership is now 209. It is nearing the 250th mark which we hope to reach this year.

Our Monday and Friday dances are popular and happy, though crowded affairs.

Tuesday afternoon the shorthand class started. The girls voted to meet again on Thursday at 3.30.

Wednesday evening is going to be "game" night. As many members do not dance, we have decided to make Wednesday evening an evening when different games and stunts may be played.

Thursday is whist night.

Last Thursday afternoon was one of the pleasantest ever experienced at the club house, when Miss Millicent Chapman, L. R. A. M. and A. R. C. M., of London, England, played for a few friends. Her selections were well chosen and were appreciated by those invited to meet her. They were:

1. Concert Etude in F sharp minor MacDowell
2. Melodie in E Radmaninoff
3. En Antonne Moshowski

Miss Chapman is Licentrate of the Royal Academy of Music and Associate of the Royal College of Music, London, England. Besides her wonderful musical ability, Miss Chapman's charming personality won the hearts of her audience, when later at tea they were privileged to meet her.

Miss Chapman's home at present is at Winter Island, Salem, and she has a studio at 6 Newbury st. It is hoped that later she may again be heard in Magnolia and that many more may enjoy her wonderful music.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Durkee are spending two weeks at Alton Bay, N. H.

Miss Edith Marshall has gone to Bemis, Me., where she will remain until fall.

Miss Gladys Cummings, of Brattleboro, Vt., is spending her vacation at Beverly Farms, the guest of friends here.

Peter McLaughlin, who has been home the past two weeks or more, returned to his work at Warrenton, Va., this week.

Merton Braden, who recently moved here from Phillips, Me., has secured a good position at the U. S. Machinery plant in Beverly.

Miss Helen Publicover, who is employed in a Boston office, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation, a part of which she is spending at Chebacco lake.

Granite curbstones are being installed on Common lane, commencing at Hale st. to the railroad tracks. The stones are being set on the west side of the street.

John W. Morgan, driver of the local fire department, starts on his annual two weeks' vacation tomorrow—Saturday. He has several interesting trips planned for the two weeks, a portion of which time he will visit relatives at Templeton.

Last Monday evening, previous to the regular meeting of the aldermen, there was a hearing on the proposed widening of Webster st. at Greenwood ave. No one appeared and nothing was said in favor of or against the proposition.

At the last regular meeting of the board of aldermen an order was passed carrying an appropriation for the completion of the proposed new entrance from Hale st. to the playgrounds. This matter has been under consideration for the past four years.

Mrs. Wm. Jordan, mother of John M. and Willard B. Publicover, of Beverly Farms, passed away at her home in Somerville last Saturday. She had been in ill health for some time. The deceased was well-known here and had made many friends among Beverly Farms people. Funeral services were conducted at the St. John's Episcopal church, Beverly Farms, on Tuesday afternoon.

There was a large attendance at the public dance given in Neighbor's hall last (Thursday) evening under the management and for the benefit of the local American Legion ball team. An interesting feature and one that created considerable excitement was a closely contested tug of war between the team representing the Italian A. C., of Beverly, and a Beverly Farms team. The local team won.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Standley will take a vacation trip to Bath, Me., next week. They are to go by automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Shepard, of Dalton, have been spending the past week at Beverly Farms visiting friends.

Miss Dolly I'Anson, of Haskell st., has been enjoying a two weeks' vacation. The past week she has been entertaining her friend, Miss Mazie McDonald, of Lynn.

The building formerly on Hale st. known as the Dwyer blacksmith shop is no more. It has been torn down by the new owners of the property, the Page & Shaw Co.

The Beverly Farms Legion baseball team is making arrangements for a game tomorrow afternoon at the local playgrounds and it is expected that a good contest will be staged.

Mrs. Arthur L. Standley and daughters, Carolyn and Barbara, have spent a portion of this week as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Woodberry and Mr. and Mrs. E. Fred Day at their cottage on the Squam river, Gloucester.

The first week of the Ward 6 playgrounds activities has brought there an attendance larger than in any previous year and Marshall Campbell, instructor, is kept busy from the start of the day to the finish. A program of various kinds of sports and games is being conducted daily and the youngsters are taking a keen interest in the events.

Last Saturday C. Elmer Thomas was hurt in attempting to board the 6.30 a. m. train at the Beverly Farms station after the train had started. He was thrown to the ground, receiving a severe cut, some bruises and a shaking up. He had medical attendance, and is now reported to be nearly recovered.

Invitations are out for the wedding reception which is following the ceremony of the marriage of Miss Muriel Gertrude, daughter of Willard B. Publicover, to Dr. Frederick James Desmond, of Beverly. The reception will take place on Aug. 3, at 7.30 p. m., at the home of Mr. Publicover, 103 Hart st., Beverly Farms.

T. Jefferson Newbold has donated some handsome trophies and pennants for the victors in the various athletic events which are scheduled to be played by teams representing the various playgrounds in Beverly. Mr. Newbold gave the prizes for the playground events last year and was the means of creating considerable interest among the youngsters.

West Beach has certainly been a favored place the warm days of the past week. The place has been thronged daily with people, who have taken advantage of the rest, comfort and recreation which the place offers. The temperature of the water has been around 68 and 70 degrees and this has had the effect of making the past week a record breaker for the number of bathers.

"Bessie," said her mother, "why is it that you and your small brother are always quarreling?"

"I don't know," returned the child, "unless I take after you and he takes after papa." Boston Transcript.

Life may not always seem to be worth living, but how do you know that death is worth dying?

SOME NEW PHRASES

Contributed to English Vocabulary by Aviation

"I decided to take a solo flip," said one expert aviator to another. "So I gave her the gun and zoomed up 1000 a minute, did an Immelman and then set her down with a dead stick."

To seasoned fliers this lingo is as plain and simple as A B C.

"I decided to take a short flight alone," said the one birdman to the other. "So I speeded up my motor as much as possible and ascended at the rate of 1000 feet a minute. Then I performed an evolution by which my airplane soared further, turned over on her wing and immediately traveled back on the course over which she had come. Then I made a landing without the aid of my motor."

When a man who has kept his feet on the ground first associates with aviators he needs an interpreter. A good one would be C. J. Zimmermann, chief test pilot for a concern of Keyport, N. J. Mr. Zimmermann was an Army Air Service instructor during the war. Since then he has come in contact daily with both navy and civilian fliers. So he understands the professional dialect that has developed in the flying game in its three great divisions.

"Aviation has added much to the languages of the world," said Zimmermann. "While I would not try to estimate the number of new words and phrases, and new meanings for old words, which have sprung up and will soon make their way into the dictionary, there is no doubt that it is considerable. Engineers are responsible for one kind of expressions which I might call air language, and pilots for another, which can be described only as air 'Slanguage.' Both classes of men use both lingoes, however, and when a group gets talking seriously of the flying game their conversation is as intelligible to an outsider as are the proceedings at an American convention to a Hottentot.

Engineers and Pilots Add to Terms

"The engineer's contribution to the dictionary consists chiefly of technical terms, such as aerafoil, camber, decalage, cabre, strut, longerun, fuselage, helicopter, northopter, dihedral, sweepback and many others. The pilit's lingo is one more of actions, than of things. They will talk of bumpy air, three-pointing, flips, zooms, jobs and ceilings until the listener is convinced that either he does not understand English or the pilot isn't talking that tongue. But it's quite easy after one has been around flying fields or airplane harbors a bit."

Any one who has soaring ambitions should promptly master these few definitions:

Hitting nicely — Motor running smoothly.

Upstairs—In the air.

Prop, club or stick—Propeller.

Stick—Control column.

Flipper—Elevator.

Bus, ship, trick, job, sky buggy—Airplane.

Ceiling—Highest altitude to which a given airplane can rise.

Three Pointing—Landing correctly, with tail skid and landing wheels touching the ground at the same moment.

Cloud Punching — Flying through the clouds.

Landing Roughly—Permitting the plane to drop several feet to the ground.

Flattening Out—Getting the plane level in the air preparatory to landing.

Freeze to the Controls—To grip the controls tightly.

Come Out of Spice—To resume normal position in the air after doing tail spin.

One foot on the ground—Taking no chances.

Washout, Crack-up—Damage to machine.

Rolling Her Over—Looping.

The Works—All possible stunts.

Calls Answered Anywhere Day or Night

Not Solid, Evidently

The witness for the defense was being cross-examined. In answer to a question put by counsel, instead of speaking, he nodded his head.

Whereupon the court stenographer, who was not looking at the witness, demanded: "Answer that question."

The witness replied: "I did answer it; I nodded my head."

"Yes," was the retort. "I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up and down or from side to side."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

The Earning Power of a Dollar Illustrated Here

Another story which shows the earning power of even a very small amount of money when put at interest and left to accumulate for years, comes this week from Dedham, where on July 31, 1833, Horace Smith deposited $5 in the Dedham Institution for Savings. For many years this $5 went on accumulating interest. On Nov. 15, 1912, the holder of the bank book represented by the original deposit, withdrew $112.47, and a few days ago closed his account with the bank by taking out the balance, $134.46.

The only money deposited on this account during all these years was the original $5; all of the rest grew from the interest which accumulated as the years passed, until the total in the bank on this account amounted to more than 56 times the original deposit. The total drawn, $246.93, would have amounted to $281.93 had none been taken out until the account was closed. The savings division of the First Federal Reserve District cites this illustration of the value of having money earning interest for one. The $5 deposit in this instance just equals the amount that the United States Treasury will pay on each War Savings Stamp when it matures, and the interest which these stamps earn up to the time of maturity amounts to about the same as the average paid upon the deposit mentioned in the Dedham Institution for Savings.

The body of an average man, weighing 154 pounds, contains forty-six quarts of water. The bones are nearly one-fourth water, the fat a little less, the nerves more than one-half, and the skin nearly three-quarters water. The brain, muscles, lungs and heart are three-fourths water, while the blood is more than four-fifths water.

Theatres

STRAND THEATRE, LYNN

Ideal summertime entertainment is promised by bookings at the Strand theatre, Lynn, for the week of July 25. Charles Ray, "chuck full of hifalutin' plans," although the neighbors all 'lowed he'd "never amount to a hill of beans," will be back from new experiences in Wall st. in his latest Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Homer Comes Home." When he arrives he's as stylish as all git-out, and money—gosh! It's a romance, fine and human clean through. Also on the early half program will be Wm. Faversham in "The Man Who Lost Himself," showing how an American can really change his identity by stepping into an English Earl's shoes; Burton Holmes' latest travel pictures and the Strand Topical Review up to date.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday will bring Wm. Farnum in "The Joyous Troublemakers," which has been widely praised in New York and elsewhere, and Olive Tell in a brilliant new romance, "Love Without Question."

Billie Rhodes will hold the topline position Sunday evening in "Hoopla!" and Hazel Dauly will be featured in "The Little Rowdy." Other films will include a new issue of the Strand Topical Review.

Modern ventilation keeps the Strand as cool as though swept by ocean breezes and safe parking for patrons' autos is also provided on one way street adjacent to the theatre.

OLYMPIC THEATRE, LYNN

May Allison, the captivating Metro star in "The Cheater," is announced as the feature attraction at the Lynn Olympia theatre for a run of three days, beginning next Monday. This is described as one of the photoplay sensations of the year, presenting this fascinating actress in an intensely dramatic role.

"The Cheater" is a screen version of "Judah," the notable stage play by Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. Jones, with whose work American theatregoers have long been familiar, is the author of "The Silver King," "The Liars," "Mrs. Dane's Defense," and more than a score of other distinguished dramatic compositions. "Judah" was presented on the stage at the Shaftesbury theatre in London.

The theme of "The Cheater" is one that is uppermost in the minds of thinking people throughout the entire civilized world at the present time. The play deals with the healing by faith.

"SALEM" —"DANIEL LOW'S"

The terms "Salem" and "Daniel Low's" are synonymous to thousands of our mail order customers and friends the world over, many of whom are yearly visitors at the North Shore. While there, one of their "little journeys" is to historic Salem including, of course, a visit to Daniel Low's.

Perhaps you, too, are acquainted with us thru our magazine advertising and our catalogs. Before you leave the North Shore we urge you to permit us the pleasure of meeting you personally at our Store.

We feel sure that you will find the Store fully as interesting as the pages of our catalog; in fact, more so, for even the finest pictures and most comprehensive descriptions oftentimes do not measure up to the satisfaction of actual inspection.

Your visit will put you under no obligation whatever to purchase while, for our part, we shall feel repaid in knowing that you will return to your home with a "mind picture" of Daniel Low's that will, we hope, tend to create cordial business relations between us or further cement those relations already established.

SOCIETY NOTES

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE LEWIS DEBLOIS, of "Brookfield," Ipswich, are presenting their daughter, Miss Elizabeth DeBlois, at a garden party Friday afternoon, August 13th. Miss DeBlois is a granddaughter of the late John F. Brooks, of Salem, Boston and Ipswich. She is the only child in the family and has been a pupil at Miss May's school in Boston. Her mother was Miss Mary B. Brooks. Classmates and other friends of Miss DeBlois will pour at the party. These will include Miss Lois Arnold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund K. Arnold, Manchester; Miss Mary Cram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Adams Cram, Boston; Miss Eleanor Dodge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Dodge, Ipswich; Miss Jane Grew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Grew, Boston and Dover; Miss Katherine Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hector Hughes, Cambridge; Miss Eleanor Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Parker, Brookline; Miss Rose Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Parker, Southville; Miss Eleanor Seavey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, Hamilton.

They will be assisted by three of last year's débutantes, a group composed of Miss Isabel Boardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Boardman, Beverly Farms; Miss Katherine Dodge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Dodge, Ipswich; and Miss Rosamond Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Wolcott H. Johnson, Hamilton.

The affair is planned to be given on the lawn and in the garden close by the house. A charming old-fashioned garden of pink, blue and white flowers with grass walks and hedge enclosures and a long, shady arbor running the length of the garden plot will be utilized as a setting. This will be the formal début of Miss DeBlois.

As a member of the advisory board of the South End Music school, of Boston, Miss Margaret L. Corlies, of Magnolia, will open her house on Wednesday afternoon, August 18, for a song recital given by Mrs. Franklin Townsend, of Washington, in benefit of the school.

MRS. EDWARD S. GREW, of West Manchester, is opening her home next Tuesday, August 3, for a sale and bridge by the Tide Over League. Among those taking bridge tables are Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. W. B. Thomas, Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. R. Paul Snelling, Mrs. G. M. Lane, Mrs. Henry P. King, Mrs. Henry E. Russell, Mrs. W. D. Denègre, Mrs. C. C. Converse, Miss Hunt, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Sydney E. Hutchinson, Mrs. M. G. Haughton and Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge.

SOCIETY NOTES

MANCHESTER YACHT CLUB will hold its regatta day Saturday afternoon, August 7, at four o'clock. Water sports and yacht races are scheduled. The committee on arrangements consists of Commodore Charles K. Cummings, Norton Wigglesworth, E. Sohier Welch, Samuel Eliot, Charles E. Hodges, Jr., and Gordon Abbott, Jr. The following ladies will act as patronesses: Mrs. Henry L. Higginson, Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Mrs. Henry S. Grew, Mrs. Charles Hodges, Miss Margaret Curtis, Mrs. Norton Wigglesworth, Mrs. Thomas B. Gannett, Mrs. George Putnam, Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, Mrs. Samuel Eliot and Mrs. Frank Wigglesworth.

By special arrangement with the Corinthian Yacht club there will be a boat race for Manchester 17's and E. Y. C. 17's at 2 o'clock. The finish will be off the clubhouse about four o'clock. The sports will include walking the pole, tub race, senior and junior swimming races, diving contest, tender race, one-end canoe race and canoe tilting. Yacht owners have been requested to dress ship and anchor their yachts just west of the clubhouse landing. Prizes will be distributed and tea will be served after the sports.

Wednesday, August 4th, there will be a sale at the Oceanside, Magnolia, of a very interesting and unusual collection of Italian embroidered linens and lace just brought over from Italy by Miss Risser, of Rome.

◇ ⁂ ◇

The John Hays Hammond family, of Gloucester, were luncheon guests Tuesday of Admiral and Mrs. Edward Eberle, on the Utah, Charlestown navy yard.

George Denègre, of New Orleans, is visiting at the home of his brother, Walter D. Denègre, of West Manchester.

A RECEPTION for three brides will take place at "The Oaks," the Beverly Farms home of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Lowell Cabot, Saturday, August 21. The brides are the wives of their two sons, and the Cabot daughter, Mrs. James Jackson Cabot, was Miss Catharine Rush, daughter of Com. Rush, of the Charlestown navy yard. Mr. and Mrs. Cabot, who live in Charleston, W. Va., are now traveling in California. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dudley Cabot are still on their honeymoon trip to the Canadian Rockies. Their wedding took place in May. Mrs. Cabot was Miss Virginia Wellington, of Chestnut st., Boston, and Weston. The Cabot daughter, Mrs. Ralph Bradley, was a bride of last season.

FRIDAY, JULY 30th

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Amory (Gladys Munn) returned Thursday from a two months' trip to Europe. Their two children have been staying with Mrs. C. A. Munn in Manchester, where Mr. and Mrs. Amory will spend the balance of the season. Mrs. Munn is also having four more grandchildren with her this season. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Munn (Mary Astor Paul), of Radnor, Pa., now abroad, having sailed on July 8 to be gone until November.

The "Rockmarge" horse show, always such an important mid-summer event, given by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moore, at Pride's Crossing, in pre-war days, will not be held again this season.

"Lodgehurst," the J. Warren Merrill cottage, Smith's Point, Manchester, will be occupied Sunday by a Washington family. It was rented through the office of T. Dennie Boardman, Reginald and R. deB. Boardman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius J. Knowles, Miss Sally Knowles and L. J., Jr., of Worcester, will spend August on their house boat. During their many sails they will anchor off Smith's Point, Manchester, for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. John R. McGinley, parents of Mrs. Knowles.

The Charles A. Painter, Jr., family, of Pittsburgh, are now visiting Mrs. Painter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Harry Brown, Beverly Cove. Mr. Brown and the son, W. Harry Jr., are returning Aug 1, from a western trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Merriam of West Manchester, are at East Blue Hill, Me., for a visit.

Mrs. Albert Ivins Croll, of Gales Point, Manchester, welcomed the summer colony on Thursday to a sale of articles made at Llewsac lodge, Bedford, a dependence of the Frances E. Willard settlement, Boston, of which Mrs. Croll is one of the directors. The articles, all exquisitely made, were displayed in the sun parlor of her cottage.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN'S palatial yacht, the "Corsair," carrying the Morgan party anchored off Smith's Point, Manchester, Thursday morning and was seen departing again about five o'clock in the evening with members of the Boylston A. Beal and S. V. R. Crosby families joining the Morgans for a cruise to Bar Harbor over the week-end. Mrs. Beal and Mrs. Crosby are sisters of Mrs. Morgan. The "Corsair" always makes a pretty sight when moored off the Point near the Beal home.

Mrs. Henry Clay Frick, of Pride's Crossing, did not go to France to join her daughter, Miss Helen Frick, as stated in some papers. Mrs. Frick had arranged to go, but changed her plans and is now at her beautiful home where she will be joined in the autumn by her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Culbertson and son, of Louisville, Ky., are at Manchester Cove for a visit with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Culbertson.

F. M. Boynton and family are at South Harpswell, Me., for a visit. Mr. Boynton returned from a business trip to Europe several weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitehouse, of "Crowhurst," Manchester, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. W. Fitz-Hugh Whitehouse, of Newport, the former a nephew to Mr. Whitehouse, and another relative, Miss Helene Whitehouse, of Mt. Kisco, N. Y. Allison Vincent Armour is also on overseeing the building of his house boat in Manchester.

Mrs. Gerald A. Bramwell's piazza made a delightful place for shopping Thursday when many of the summer colony visited her home in Beverly Farms to purchase Italian laces brought over by Miss Elizabeth Risser, of Rome, a war worker interested in the tubercular children of Italian soldiers. A similar sale will be held at the Oceanside, Magnolia, next Wednesday.

BEAUTIFUL "Dawson Hall" gardens in Beverly Cove were enjoyed last Saturday afternoon by 250 people. This wonderful Italian garden was planned by the late Mrs. R. D. Evans and was opened for the benefit of the National Civic Federation, of which Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge is the North Shore chairman, through the courtesy of the Misses Hunt. Mrs. Coolidge has had many requests to continue the "garden days" in August, so pleasant and profitable have folks found it to be to make a study of our wonderful Shore gardens. Only one date has been arranged so far, and that is Saturday afternoon, Aug. 14, when "River Bend Farm," the George E. Barnard estate, with its rare garden, on Ipswich river, will be opened at fifty cents a person, a benefit for the Federation.

The Barnard estate is on County rd., close to the Ipswich hospital.

The untiring efforts of the late Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, of Pride's Crossing, in regard to the work of the Women's Municipal league, of Boston, is well-known upon the Shore. Mrs. Bradley's special work was with the plans and means used to get rid of rats, mice and flies. This line of work has now gone into the hands of Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot, of Beverly Farms. The league will have campaigns against other vermin as well as rats and flies. If the bubonic plague should come to Boston Mrs. Cabot's committee would be up and doing with plenty of grit to fight it. Rat campaigns, both inland as well as on the coast, are now being recommended along the coast of Maine.

Ambassador and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris gave an informal dinner party last night at their beautiful home, "Eaglehead," Manchester. Their daughter, Miss Constance Irene Morris, is leaving Aug. 1 for Aloha camp at Fairlee, Vt. The Morris family were at New York for the races and Mr. Morris has since been on a Washington trip.

MR. AND MRS. GODFREY L. CABOT, of Beverly Farms, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bradley (Eleanor Cabot) were luncheon guests Tuesday of Admiral and Mrs. Edward Eberle on board the Utah, now anchored in Charlestown navy yard. Admiral Eberle, in command of the Charlestown fleet, and Mrs. Eberle spent last week at the Cabot cottage.

Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton's house on Pride's Hill, Pride's Crossing, has been the place of meeting for the first two French readings, with music, by the talented Mlle. Germaine Cossini. Fifty were present at Thursday's meeting. On Aug. 5 and 19 Mlle. Cossini will give readings at four o'clock at the home of Mrs. Henry F. Sears, Beverly Cove. A Washington summer resident and one of the many subscribers to the readings told the BREEZE that she always looked forward to these readings as an important part of a North Shore season.

MRS. GODFREY LOWELL CABOT, of Beverly Farms, chairman of the Cambridge Women's Republican committee, says: "I was neither a suffragist nor an anti. But now as woman suffrage may be considered inevitable, I believe that all women who care for their country should come forward and be registered. They should find out the time for doing so in their respective communities. All women should be registered on the school committee. If they are so registered their names will be removed from the school committee list to the regular voting list. Now is the time for antis and suffragists to come together and work for their country."

All books and magazines of a non-sectarian character will be gratefully received in the basement of the Unitarian church, Masconomo st., Manchester, on Thursday mornings from 9 to 10. These are sent to the Sailors' Haven in Charlestown, for distribution among the lighthouse keepers in lonely posts, and the pleasure they give can only be measured by the demand, which is endless.—MRS. THOMAS B. GANNETT, chairman of the Book Mission of the Manchester Unitarian church.

Mrs. Sydney E. Hutchinson, of Beverly Farms, will have charge of the children who conduct the table at the coming church fair at the Farms.

Miss Katherine Coolidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Coolidge, of Manchester, is spending a week at a house party on the South Shore.

Lynn has an exhibition of American paintings in the Woman's clubhouse, corner of Broad and Nahant streets. These are selected from studios in New York and Boston. Hours 11 a. m. to 1 and 1.30 to 4.30, during July and August.

◇ ⁘ ◇

Many charitable events and pleasure features are a part of the Shore life these days. Look over the social calendar and see which ones you want to patronize. It will be hard to eliminate any of them, you will find.

LAWN FETE

Benefit of the New Maternity Ward of the ADDISON GILBERT Hospital

Addison Gilbert Hospital Grounds :: Washington St., Gloucester

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1920

Afternoon and Evening---Opening at 2 o'clock

Under the auspices of the Ways and Means Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Addison Gilbert Hospital

An orchestra of 10 pieces will render music during the fete. Many amusement attractions—dancing pavilion, Lilian Owen's Marionettes, booths of varied description, hat shop, fancy work, fruit and flowers, cake, candy, ice cream, grabs, etc. A great many summer residents will preside over booths.

Cafeteria—a special feature—food served at all hours.

Come and help a worthy cause!

Patronesses: Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Wm. Hooper, Mrs. Costello Converse, Mrs. Stephen Sleeper, Mrs. Charles F. Bradley, Mrs. Hollis French, Mrs. John Clay, Mrs. Wm. E. Atwood, Mrs. Jonathan Raymond, Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard, Mrs. Chas. D. Brown, Mrs. T. H. Mills, Miss Georgiana Dodge.

We never seem to hear any applause from the men whose wives make so much noise about "women's rights."—Columbia Record.

If Gov. Clement of Vermont is obdurate, there is little use for the women to attempt to dissolve the stubbornness of Gov. Holcomb of Connecticut. They will have to look for the thirty-sixth State elsewhere. Four Republican States of New England have ratified. In fact about all the Republican States in the country, with those two exceptions, have ratified, and the women ought to make the Democrats do their share or know the reason why.—Springfield Union.

The HOSPITAL at BEVERLY is our COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Manchester, Beverly Farms, Pride's Crossing, Wenham and Hamilton

You are interested in this hospital Because———

5 The hospital provides help for all. Poor patients receive full benefits of the hospital facilities as well as the rich. Last year it treated 1432 cases, of which 409 were free patients and 111 paid only partial fees. You would be unwilling to see these people suffer from lack of care.

6 The hospital provides expert care not possible in the homes. The home cannot provide the facilities for treating surgical cases or serious cases of illness. The expense and lack of accommodations frequently prohibits the employment of nurses in the homes.

7 The hospital places the doctor in a strategic position. It may be that the X-ray machine will instantly tell the doctor the source of your trouble, when without its aid, diagnosis would be uncertain. This is only one of many instances where the resources of the hospital help the doctor to save the patient.

8 The hospital trains nurses. During the influenza epidemic and since, there has been an appalling scarcity of professional nurses. The hospital is trying to overcome this shortage by conducting a training school for nurses.

TAX RATE OF $10

Manchester has One of Lowest Assessments in State

Manchester residents are particularly fortunate this year in the matter of taxes. While other towns and cities of the state are forced by the existing conditions to levy high taxes, the town of Manchester—thanks to the good work of its assessors, Edward S. Knight, chairman, Frank G. Cheever and L. W. Carter—is able to continue doing business another year at the old rate—$10 on each $1000 of valuation.

The rate is based on a valuation of $11,572,103 — an increase of only $284,409 over last year. The figures prepared by the assessors are as follows:

Valuation
Resident Personal	$1,207,323
Non-Resident Personal	373,105
Total Personal		$1,580,428
Resident Real	$4,566,970
Non-Resident Real	5,424,705
Total Real		$9,991,675
Total Valuation		$11,572,103
Less Exemptions		32,175
Tot. assessed val. Apr. 1, 1920		$11,539,928
Assessed val. Apr. 1, 1919		11,255,519
Increase in val. 1920		$284,409

Tax rate $10 per $1000.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR TROUBLES? HERE IS A PLAN

Build for yourself a strong box,
Fashion each part with care;
Fit it with hasp and padlock,
Put all your troubles there.
Hide therein all your failures,
And each bitter cup of quaff;
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.
Tell no one of its contents,
Never its secrets share;
Drop in your cares and your worries,
Keep them forever there.
Hide them from sight so completely
The world will never dream half;
Fasten the top down securely
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

MRS. SEWELL H. FESSENDEN is leaving Coolidge Point, Manchester, within a few days for New York city, whither she goes to wish her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk (Harriet Fessenden), off on a trip around the world. Mr. and Mrs. Busk were wed on the 19th of last month, at Chestnut Hill, before the Fessendens removed to the seashore. Mr. Busk's father is in the export business, and the trip which the young people will make is in a measure a honeymoon combined with business. They will make the first lap of their world-circuit by crossng the continent to 'Frisco, leaving New York on the 7th of August. They will go to Manila and then Japan. France and England will come in for a share of their journey before undertaking the final lap of the trip across the Atlantic 14 months hence.

Mrs. Fessenden will motor to New York accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Chas. M. Hammond, of Chestnut Hill. They will make a brief visit with Captain Busk's family, the Frederick T. Busks, at their country home, "Spruce Brook Farm," Litchfield, Conn. They will then continue on to Rye, N. Y., to wish Capt. and Mrs. Busk bon voyage.

A committee at the town meeting, Aug. 11, in Hamilton, will recommend that the town erect a memorial building with a room for the G. A. R., the A. L. (A. P. Gardner post) and a hall seating 600 to be used for pictures or as a gymnasium.

ONE member of Lilian Owen's Marionette company claims that he comes rightfully by his interest in puppets through a parentage of evenly balanced literary and mechanical interests. Forest Chapman Haring, besides being the youngest owner and manager of a puppet show in this country, has the added distinction of being the son of Ethel Chapman Haring, the short story writer, and Alexander Haring, head of the engineering department of New York university. A year ago, inspired by the more pretentious miniature shows on view, he concocted an even more microscopic one, and gave numbers of performances in and about New York. His most conspicuous effort was a dramatization of Andrew Lang's "Prince Prigio." Mr. Haring made the dramatization, built production and actors, painted the scenery, and acted in the play. After his graduation from Evander Childs High school this spring he joined Miss Owen's company to study the routine of this established organization. Next autumn he enters Haverford. Questioned, he refuses to commit himself as to his intentions in the matter of a future, but owns frankly that he should like to be able to write as good a story as his mother's "Ten Dollars a Week," in the June Delineator.

ONE of the most attractive tea rooms on the North Shore is without doubt the Sunbeam Farm, a bright bit of color on the Salem-Swampscott state highway. Exquisitely dainty both inside and out, this lovely little tea room is making new friends day by day, for a decidedly new note seems to have been struck in its artistic French appearance, and the desire to drop in and taste the delicious "good things" is irresistible. Even the chef is French; he was formerly at the Plaza in New York. His wife, Madame Clarissi, is hostess and manager.

This season the tea room has been substantially enlarged, allowing the added attraction of dancing. Quaint little awnings help to give it a distinctive appearance, as do the pansies bordering the walks. The farm stretching out in the rear is what originated the name, and there is also a unique little "store," where vegetables are sold.

The proprietor, Mr. Gerould, has just returned from France, where he spent the winter, and has added many clever novelties to this charming little place.

"Garden day" on the Shore tomorrow is at "Graftonwood," the estate of Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, off Summer st., Manchester.

DEL MONTE'S, at Magnolia, which has found favor for so many seasons as a rendezvous of the ultra smart, continues to make more and more friends. The cool, inviting interior, the delicious food and well-known orchestra draw merry crowds of pleasure-seekers from the North Shore colony. During the day snowy tables are set out on the delightfully attractive portico, and shoppers find the music and good service wonderfully refreshing.

The beautiful play, "Chansons de France," of last season, is well-remembered by Shore folk. A 14th century French play, the old love story of "Aucassin and Nicolete," acted by children trained by Miss Edith King and Miss Dorothy Coit, of New York, the instructors of the North Shore children in "Chansons de France," will be put on at some central Shore point, not quite determined yet, sometime, probably, in September. It will be a benefit for the American academy at Rome and will be presented at Harvard college as well as on the Shore.

Rev. Frederick R. Griffin, of First Unitarian church, Philadelphia, will be the preacher Sunday at First Unitarian church, Masconomo st., Manchester. Service at 10.30; all seats free. Communion after the service.

Rev. William L. Clark, of St. Paul's church (Episcopal), Brookline, will take the service at Union chapel, Magnolia, Sunday. Service at 10.45; all seats free. Following the service the Holy Communion will be celebrated.

BEVERLY HOSPITAL, the community hospital of the Beverly, Manchester, Wenham-Hamilton section, is to receive donations of vegetables, fruits and flowers from any one who will be interested in sending them to Horticultural hall, Manchester, on Tuesday mornings when the basement is open for the workers making surgical dressings for the Children's hospital in Boston. Mrs. M. G. Haughton, a member of the committee interested in the dressings, will take all donations to the Beverly hospital.

Many workers were out this Tuesday in the hall. Mrs. George H. Lyman, of Beverly Farms, is chairman and welcomes cordially all who may wish to help. The summer colony began this work early in the season.

Miss Mary Jewett, sister of Sarah Orne Jewett, is coming next week for her annual visit with Mrs. George Dudley Howe, Smith's Point, Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, of Beverly Farms, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of their fourth child, a daughter, July 23. The other three are also daughters.

Mrs. Arthur Little and her daughter, Miss Jessie K. Means, of the Beverly Farms colony, sailed for New York on July 21. Mr. Little returned from abroad in the spring. They will occupy their home on the Shore in the autumn.

Miss Elizabeth Howard, daughter of Mrs. Thomas H. Howard, of Pride's Crossing, has been visiting in Lenox at the home of Mrs. Robert Winthrop, grandmother of her fiancé, Robert Winthrop Kean, of New York.

A special thermopak container for ice-cream at Page & Shaw's Tea Room, Pride's Crossing, will keep contents hot or cold. Good for auto parties and will last for years. adv.

MANY of our Shore women will be interested in the political meeting next week in Beverly. Miss Katharine P. Loring, of Pride's Crossing, is chairman of the Beverly committee. Mrs. Wm. L. Putnam is chairman of the Suffolk committee, while Mrs. Godfrey L. Cabot is chairman of the Cambridge committee. The meeting is the regional conference of women of the first, second and third senatorial districts of Essex county, of the Republican party. They will meet in the Unitarian parish house, Federal st., Beverly, Wednesday, Aug. 4. Mrs. Chas. S. Bird is chairman of the women's division. The morning's program is for officers only and will consist of reports and general business besides an address by Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley, chairman, American Citizenship, on "The Citizenship of Married Women; the New Plank in the Republican Platform."

The public is cordially invited to be present in the afternoon. Addresses will be given by Mrs. Bird, Hon. John M. Gibbs and Mrs. James D. Tillinghast. William S. Felton, chairman, executive committee of the Republican party of Massachusetts, will welcome women into the Republican party, his short address coming at 2.15. Afternoon session begins at 2 o'clock.

LUNCHEONETTE

GLOUCESTER MOORS

By BEATRICE W. PALMER

ON the moorlands of Gloucester
Huckleberry bushes grow;
A thousand stars of Bethlehem
And sweet wild roses blow.

On the moorlands of Gloucester
Many birds are singing sweet;
Bronz-green seaweeds bask in sunlight;
Purple vetch is at my feet.

Lacy waves from azure waters
Break against the ruddy rocks,
Tumbled granite decked with seaweeds,
Where the gray gulls rest in flocks.

Oh, my heart is out at Gloucester
Though my body is in town.
Would that I were on the moorlands
There to wander up and down!

YE OLDE BURNHAM HOUSE, in Ipswich, built in 1640 and kept by Martha Lucy Murray, has long been known as the "quaintest place in all New England." An habitué of the old house knows that here may be had delightful tea parties and delicious dinners, besides a great collection of novel gifts and toys and antique furniture to select from.

Mrs. Murray was so successful with the gift department last season that she increased it considerably more and now a large and pretty assortment of toys and novelties of a most unique and useful nature are on display in three rooms. Monks cloth and homespun material, difficult to find now, are for sale, also ready-made runners of this material. Orders are taken for runners. Italian luncheon sets are pretty creations in the chintz and linen goods. The lingerie is one of the new features in the gift shop. Such a lovely dream of dainty pinks and other exquisite coloring is sure to delight all who are hunting for accessories to a trousseau. California flower baskets of various sizes are for sale as well as being put to practical use in the tea house. The quaint old furniture, the dishes and other antiques displayed everywhere make this one of the points to visit on the Shore. If you go on Thursdays you may get waffles. Many over-night guests are being entertained this season.

The tea room, with its old-time lanterns hanging from the beams, the prettily draped windows, the attractive walls and tables, all show that this section of the old house has been much improved this season. The grill room, with its wonderful old fireplace, is much used for luncheons and dinner parties.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Mitchell, of Smith's Point, Manchester, and a party of friends from Buffalo, including Dr. E. R. McGuire, Mrs. Alfred Clark, W. Joyce, C. M. Ransom, and others, and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne and Miss Dorothy Kaehler, of Beverly Farms, had dinner last week. Mrs. Chas. J. Christie, of East Gloucester, gave a dinner recently for her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Holters. Mrs. Charles Fleishman, of the Oceanside, Magnolia, entertained in the grill room. Mr. and Mrs. Augustus N. Rantoul have entertained also this season.

TO the North Shore folk the Edna Ferguson T House means appointments that are restfully simple, as well as food that is deliciously palatable. Every day brings new friendships and renewals of old ones to this charming little place, located half way up the hill at Magnolia village.

Among the guests to tea at the Edna Ferguson T House during the past week were Miss Grace Goodnow and Mrs. Frank Goodnow, Fort Smith, Arkansas; Mrs. Gardner Hall, Manchester, who had as her guest, Mrs. Arthur Brooks, of London, England; Hobart Nicols, New York; Mrs. L. A. Hobbs, H. A. Atkins and Mrs. A. H. Heintzelman, Boston.

Luncheon guests included Miss Adeline D. Piper and Miss Eveline Reiman Early, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. A. E. Dillingham and Mrs. Stanley A. Sabel, New York; Charles G. Bell, Miss Suzanne Bell and Charles G. Bell, Jr., Savannah, Ga.; Miss Helen MacKellar and Miss Jane Monston, N. Y.; Mrs. A. D. Bosson, Boston, and Mrs. Robert Seamans, Salem; Miss C. A. Clarke, N. Y., and Miss Edith Williams, Philadelphia.

THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL benefit dance last Friday night at the Montserrat club was a great success and, being the initial entertainment of a series planned by the younger set on the Shore for this Boston hospital, shows what enthusiastic workers can do when they go at anything with a vim. The hospital club putting on the dance was composed of Miss Helen Rhodes, Miss Priscilla Rhodes, Gordon Abbott, Jr., Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., Wharton Lowell, Miss Lucy C. Carnegie, Miss Mary Post, George Higginson and Lawrence Coolidge.

The idea of a dance was original with the club. They made their own plans, made most of the refreshments (punch, sherbet and cakes) and did the serving. Creed, the caterer, kindly furnished glasses for the punch and sherbet. Invitations were written and all details planned by these young folk, the oldest of whom is only sixteen. The club grounds were gayly decorated with Japanese lanterns and Jefferson-Johnson's orchestra, of Boston, played for the dancing, which was held in the club and on the porches. Young folk and older ones came from all along the Shore, 125 being present, and $250 was cleared. A bed for one year requires $100. It is the ambition of this club to raise $300—the support of three beds.

The dance was chaperoned by Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge and Mrs. Frederick F. Rhodes. Dinner parties were given by mothers and some of the older young folk along the Shore, the guests coming on to the dance later. Miss Rosamond Johnson, of Hamilton, brought her dinner guests from that section. Miss Katherine Coolidge, of Manchester, came with a party of fourteen. Mrs. Harold Coolidge had a dinner for fourteen, also. A Nahant contingent included Miss Margaret Curtis, James Bangs, Samuel Hammond, Miss Harriet Boyden, John Davis Lodge and others. From Marblehead Neck came Chester Dane, Jr., whose mother is interested in helping the young folk over there in forming hospital clubs, and among others, Miss Helen Stone, Miss Elizabeth Percival, Miss Ruth and John Yerxa.

Miss Elizabeth Thorndike, of Boston and Lenox, the house-guest of Miss Helen Rhodes, the club chairman, was among those present.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac T. Mann, Coolidge Point, Manchester, include Mr. Conti, of Washington; Miss Anne Warren, of Watch Hill, R. I., and New York, and John Frank Low, of Portsmouth. Miss Eleanor Williams, of Baltimore, is an expected guest a little later.

Mrs. Harris P. Mosher, of "The Moorings," 127 Front st., Marblehead, will open her house and garden, Saturday, August 28, for an "antique exhibition" to help Marblehead's share of the American Library association's "Books for Everybody Fund."

Mrs. Harry L. Ayer, of Magnolia, gave a luncheon for fourteen at Essex County club, Manchester, on Tuesday.

Miss Katherine Coolidge, of Manchester, gave a dinner party for young folk going on to the dance at Montserrat club last Friday night. Among the guests were Miss Rose Fessenden, Miss Betty Forrest, Miss Joan Whitney, Miss Mary Hall, a house-guest from Boston, John Whitney, Robert Thayer and Joseph Woods.

The Misses Loring, of Pride's Crossing, are among the Shore women interested in the conference of women of the Republican party, held in Beverly, Wednesday, Aug. 4.

Gen. and Mrs. Edgar R. Champlin entertained with a dinner Wednesday of last week at their home on Mingo Beach hill, Pride's Crossing.

MYOPIA HUNT CLUB in Hamilton is giving its third dinner dance tomorrow (Saturday) night. Lowe's orchestra will play. Plans are already underway for Saturday night, Sept. 4, the dance before Labor Day. Tables are now being engaged for this gala occasion. The club was never more active in its polo, tennis and golf activities than this year. Interested galleries of onlookers are at every polo game whether practice or special occasions.

The Myopia Hunt club will be represented at the Point Judith polo tournament, on Aug. 2, at Narragansett Pier, by N. W. Rice, A. C. Burrage, Jr., Frederick Ayer and Herbert Hostetter. They will enter the nine-goal event. Capt. H. P. McKean, Jr., will also go down to Narragansett Pier for the tournament.

◇ ❖ ◇

Mrs. Frederic Winthrop has returned to "Groton House," Hamilton, from a visit with her mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, at Newport.

Maxwell Norman, of Hamilton and Newport, has a field of five or more acres of corn that resembles a western cornfield in its thrifty growth and unusual size for this community.

Signora Brambilla (Julia Meyer) is now at Newport, remaining until about Aug. 15 before returning to the Hamilton home of her mother, Mrs. George von L. Meyer. Miss Camilla Lippincott, of Washington, has been at the Meyer home since June. She is a frequent visitor in Hamilton each season, since her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Mitchell reside at "Hillcroft," Wenham.

Rev. Lyman Rollins, of Marblehead, who went over with the 26th Division, is scheduled to speak the night of Aug. 6 at the A. L. lawn party, school grounds, Hamilton.

IPSWICH.—Mrs. C. S. Tuckerman, of "Applefield," Ipswich, has her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leverett S. Tuckerman (Linda Scarritt), with her this season. A daughter, Mrs. LeB. Chapin, and children, of New York, who usually spend some time with Mrs. Tuckerman, are now living in London, England, where they went early this summer with Mr. Chapin. Mr. Chapin is connected with banking interests in London. Mrs. Chas. Galt Fitzgerald, of Baltimore, is coming on later in the season to visit her mother, Mrs. Tuckerman.

Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Warner (Lorraine Roosevelt) are now in their new home on Essex rd., half-way between Essex and Ipswich. The Tipton house, an aged one from Newburyport, was removed from there and placed upon the Warner property, taking about three years to remodel and get in order for the use of the family. The Warners are just getting settled in it.

Mrs. Warner is teaching the children of the summer colony vocal music on Tuesday and Friday mornings. She has them grouped according to age, making groups 4-6 years, 6-9, and 9-12 years. The proceeds will be given to the Ipswich hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thomas and little daughter, Elise, of St. Louis, are coming on about the middle of August for a visit with the parents of Mr. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Thomas, of Ipswich.

Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Baylor are occupying "Red Ledge," the charming cottage on Labor-in-Vain rd., Ipswich, overlooking Ipswich river. This was long the home of Miss Caroline T. Bates, who is now remaining in Boston. Mrs. Baylor formerly spent much time in Ipswich. Her young débutante daughter, Miss Consuelo Bates, daughter of the late Edward Carrington Bates, is with her this summer. Mr. and Mrs. Baylor are giving a dinner for Miss Bates tomorrow night at the dinner dance of the Myopia Hunt club, in Hamilton. Miss Bates spent the week-end visiting Mrs. Cyrus Sargent at Jaffery, N. H., returning in time for her Wednesday afternoon dancing class at "Castle Hill," the Ipswich home of the R. T. Crane, Jr.s. Miss Bates is an accomplished dancer and is doing a bit of charitable work this summer for the Ipswich hospital. All the proceeds of the classes, composed of children of the summer colony, will be given to the hospital. The classes are held in the Crane casino.

Mrs. G. F. Flichtner and Miss Anna Flichtner, of So. Orange, N. J., are on for the summer, as usual, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard N. Doughty, Ipswich.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. G. Wendell (Ruth Appleton) are with the latter's parents, the Francis R. Appletons, at "Appleton Farms," Ipswich. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Hay (Alice Appleton) are at their place in Newbury, N. H., where they have been going for a few seasons.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Bourne and son, Philip, of Boston, have not long been settled in the old Emerson house, Turkey Shore rd., Ipswich. Mrs. Bourne is an interested worker in the arts and has a studio on the upper floor of this quaint old house. She has just returned from exhibits, principally the one at Newport. Old-time furniture, old rugs, old lanterns and everything else in keeping with such a place are seen in the Bourne home.

Ascension Memorial church, Ipswich, has a new rector. Rev. Carroll Perry has taken the place of Rev. Robert P. Parker, so long the Episcopal clergyman in Ipswich. Rev. Mr. Parker resigned and is now on his farm in New Hampshire. The Rev. Mr. Carroll Perry is a brother of Prof. Bliss Perry at Harvard, and of Louis Perry, head master of Philips Exeter academy. Five years ago he was rector of St. Paul's church, Brookline. and since then has been in Santa Barbara, Calif. A reception was recently given for Mr. Perry and his family in the parish house of the church, Mrs. Francis R. Appleton and Mrs. Herbert W. Mason acting as hostesses.

For the benefit of the welfare work of Ipswich hospital Mr. Perry is giving six informal readings in English literature of the 18th and 19th century poets and contemporaries. They have taken place at the homes of Miss Alice Heard, Mrs. Herbert W. Mason and Mrs. Henry L. Dawes and will follow on Tuesday mornings at eleven at Mrs. Francis R. Appleton's, Mrs. A. N. Rantoul's and Mrs. Roger S. Warner's, Aug. 3, 10, 17, respectively.

OCEANSIDE HOTEL
MAGNOLIA

THOUGH July was a rather quiet month socially, August promises to be gay and active. Many social activities are being planned for the coming month and there are many new arrivals booked at the hotel. Some of the guests who have spent July here are already taking leave of their friends, others succumbing to the lure of mid-summer and early fall on the North Shore, have changed their plans and will remain until later. There will be a great influx of new guests at the hotel with the arrival of August.

Mme. A. de Embil and her daughter, Miss Nina Cowley, of New York city, are among the recent arrivals at the hotel, registered for the balance of the season. Miss Cowley, who is a charming addition to the coterie of young people at the Oceanside, was among the dancers Saturday evening. She wore a prettily becoming gown of silver lace over deep rose satin.

Among those registered at the Oceanside for the balance of the season are: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Moorman, Louisville, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. James S. Ford, Jr., Miss Jean Ford, Miss Elsie Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Capen and Misses Laura and Marjorie Capen, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. W. D. Hurlbutt and her nephew, R. C. Flack, Troy, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Adams, of Haverhill, spent the week-end at the Oceanside, the guests of Mrs. Adams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ruddock.

Mrs. F. A. Abercrombie-Miller and her son, C. T. Abercrombie-Miller, of New York, arrived at the Oceanside last week from their home in New York. They are registered for an indefinite stay.

TUESDAY evening's dance at the Oceanside, Magnolia, rivalled that of Saturday for attendance and fun. The orchestra played unusually well, and there were very few of the guests who did not dance. A gale of laughter swept over the ball room, when, immediately after a favorite selection, the encores were so insistent that the leader, with a roguish smile, kept the music going until the dancers were well nigh exhausted—urging his players to faster music until all but a few of the dancers had dropped out. Those who remained encored again, however, and the leader was obliged to acknowledge himself beaten.

One of the most beautiful gowns was that worn by Mrs. Gertrude V. Clarke, of New Orleans, who is spending her first season at the hotel. Mrs. Clarke's gown was of orange chiffon, trimmed with a beautiful design of iridescent beads. On either side frills of net in the same shade formed a smart finish. Mrs. Clarke is an enthusiastic horseback rider, and every morning, dressed in her trim blue riding habit, she goes for her after-breakfast canter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Johnson were also noted among the dancers. Mrs. Johnson wore a charmingly becoming gown of white lace with frilled flounces.

Another very beautiful gown was that worn by Mrs. Harry L. Ayer, which was of sectioned lavender chiffon embroidered in silver, over purple satin. Mr. and Mrs. Ayer are also season guests at the hotel.

Very attractive was the gown worn by Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, which was of cream colored lace with flounced skirt. The two-toned ribbon caught up with French flowers added a touch of color.

Madame A. A. Bruneau, of Toronto, looked charming in a gown of cerise net over gold lace, with which she wore a richly beautiful ermine wrap.

Mrs. K. W. Jewett was among the dancers. She wore a pretty, becoming gown of two-toned silk.

Mrs. C. V. Wheeler wore jade green georgette with a wide rose girdle. Touches of fur at neck and sleeves added a smart finish to this dainty gown.

HAPPY are the little folk at the Oceanside, for Willis Boyd Allen has returned from a two weeks' stay at Crawford Notch, and once again the little tots crowd around him at every possible opportunity begging for stories. Up in the mountains, where he always plans to spend two weeks of the month he takes for rest and quiet, Mr. Allen has many little friends who eagerly watch for his advent each year, for who can take his place in their hearts, and who else can supply their demand for new and interesting stories? Earnestly they begged him to stay just a little longer, but Mr. Allen reminded them that he had his little "salt water" children to see as well, and he was reluctantly allowed to depart with many admonitions not to forget to come again next season.

Seated in the lobby of the hotel, his kind eyes lighted with enthusiasm almost equal to that of the children, and surrounded by the eager, happy faces of his delighted listeners, Mr. Allen spends many happy hours.

In Boston, Mr. Allen's home, still another group of his little admirers are impatiently counting the days until his return, for here again in his work room on the top floor, he is the center of a happy group of neighboring children seated around the large old fireplace, telling them the stories that hold their interest as only he knows how.

Mr. Allen is the well known author of a number of children's books, dear to the hearts of the young folk. His first book was published some thirty-five years ago, and since that time he has written 30 books. He has also written a number of short stories for grown-ups, and lately he has been devoting most of his time to poetry.

This is his twenty-third season at the Oceanside, where he spends the month of July each year, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Stillman B. Allen. Mrs. Allen's interest in the children rivals that of her son. She is a lovable old lady of 83, gently interested in her friends and their doings. Every morning she comes down to the dining room for breakfast, the only meal she takes down stairs, so that she may see and chat with her numerous friends, who look forward to the hour spent in her society.

Marion Boyd Allen, her daughter, a noted portrait painter, is also with them at the hotel. Just now she is painting a portrait of Mrs. Albert Bunker, of Yonkers, N. Y., who is a guest at the Oceanside for the season. Two portraits painted by her are hung in the Grace Horne gallery at Magnolia, and are attracting the admiration of the visitors.

The Allens are leaving Magnolia shortly to return to their home at 477 Commonwealth ave., Boston.

Among those playing bridge in the lobby Tuesday evening were Mrs. W. S. Wyatt, attractively gowned in black satin with jade trimmings; Mrs. E. B. Cowles, who wore a beautiful gown of grey satin and lace; Mrs. Lee McMillan in a strikingly lovely gown of yellow chiffon, and Mrs. David Loring in a distinctively simple gown of smoke blue chiffon. These four ladies were seated at the same table.

FRIENDS of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Kenny were sorry to note their departure from Magnolia on Wednesday, when they returned to their home in Worcester. Later in the season, however, they plan to return to the Oceanside for another visit. The four lovely little Kenney children were among Willis Boyd Allen's admirers, and were always eager for the time for children's hour.

His work has called Dr. Kenny back to Worcester, where he is the medical director of public and private schools, a special school children's health department working in coöperation with the Board of Health department of that city. In the schools, under Dr. Kenny's supervision, are installed teaching nurses, who look after the health of the children. If a child has been ill there is a sort of temporary grade in which that child is put until he has fully recovered, giving the double advantage of helping him "catch up" in his studies, and the added care of the nurses, thus preventing the spreading of disease. The teachers also are given a special course of lectures by Dr. Kenny, instructing them how to detect disease and how to prevent its spreading.

If, because of ill health, a child is "kept back" at the end of the school year, the nurses and doctors immediately get in touch with the parents, and all during the summer months the child's health is carefully looked after so that at the beginning of the next term he may be in a physical condition not only to continue his studies, but to master them. This department with its corps of nurses installed in the schools is very new, and already great progress has been made in caring for the health, and preventing the spreading of disease among the school children.

Wm. Peyton May, of Norfolk, Va., was among the arrivals at the Oceanside the past week. Mr. May is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Anderson.

Efficiency is commonsense sensibly applied.

SATURDAY EVENING'S DANCE at the Oceanside was without doubt the gayest and most largely attended of the season. Very little bridge was played, the guests preferring either to dance, to watch the dancers, or to welcome their newly arrived friends.

The Elias Mattison Johnsons, of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., who were rather late in arriving this season, were quickly surrounded by their numerous friends when they appeared in the lobby. Their daughter, Hope, has again assumed her position of former seasons in the centre of the social activities of the younger set. She was among the dancers Saturday evening, and wore a girlishly becoming gown of rose silk.

Mrs. Scott Thropp, of Detroit, was also among the dancers. She looked very charming in a gown of pale pink satin, panelled with lace daintily embroidered in silver.

Week-end guests at the hotel included: Mr. and Mrs. George C. Heck, of New York; Mrs. William Bovey, Minneapolis, Minn.; J. H. Preble and L. Taylor, Strafford, N. H.; J. E. Van de Linde, Chevalier Alfan, Miss Jesusa Alfan and Miss Monsita Alfan, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Rollins have recently arrived from their home in Des Moines, Ia. They are registered at the Oceanside, where they plan to remain for the balance of the summer.

Mrs. G. Loring Briggs, of Brookline, paid a brief visit to Magnolia last week. During her stay she was the guest of Miss Caroline W. Fuller, who is a season guest at the Oceanside.

Recent additions to the Oceanside clientele are Mrs. William E. Waring, Mrs. J. Wm. Stoddard, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Rouse, of Baltimore, who will spend the balance of the season here.

ALONG THE CAPE ANN AND GLOUCESTER SHORE

By Alex. G. Tupper

CAPE ANN.—A big social event for the coming week, in which the summer residents of the North Shore and especially Cape Ann are interested, is the lawn fete to be held on Wednesday afternoon and evening on the Addison Gilbert hospital grounds, Gloucester. There will be numerous attractions for pleasure for young and old. Lilian Owen's Marionettes will perform. There will be a big dancing pavilion with orchestral music. Novelties for grabs, and other things on sale will attract. A cafeteria will be a special feature when food will be served at all hours.

Mrs. John Clay, of Eastern Point, will have charge of a fruit and flower booth, which promises to be unusually attractive. A "hat shop," under the direction of Mrs. Jonathan Raymond, will be a distinct novelty. There will be an ice cream booth, besides a great many booths containing fancy articles, bags of every description, aprons, cake, etc. Tea will be served to parties. Hot waffles and coffee can be secured at any time at one of the booths. An orchestra of 10 pieces will render music during the fete. Every effort is being made to have this fete in aid of the new maternity ward of the hospital a success and the returns for the worthy cause worth while. Mrs. Richard C. Steele, of Gloucester, is chairman of the committee in charge, the ways and means committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to the hospital conducting this fete. A list of patronesses includes well-known summer residents of the Shore: Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. William Hooper, Mrs. Costello P. Converse, Mrs. Charles F. Bradley, Mrs. John Clay, Mrs. Jack Raymond, Mrs. Alonzo W. Pollard, Mrs. William Edwin Atwood, Mrs. Stephen W. Sleeper, Mrs. T. H. Mills, Miss Georgiana Dodge, Mrs. Hollis French and Mrs. Chas. D. Brown, wife of the mayor of the city.

Capt. Lester S. Wass post, American Legion, has been conducting its drive in Gloucester during the past week and people have responded splendidly to the cause of establishing a Legion house and headquarters on Old Town Hall sq., Washington st. Early this week $22,000 of the $25,000 called for to remodel the old town hall into commodious and attractive headquarters had been subscribed and without any doubt the remainder of the amount will be received during the next few days or week, when the drive will have been continued.

As soon as the $25,000 is realized work will be started at once on the building. It is interesting to learn that Col. A. Piatt Andrew, commander of the Legion post, sponsored an idea some weeks ago of placing a replica of the equestrian statue of "Joan of Arc," by Anna Vaughn Hyatt, the sculptor, of Annisquam, Gloucester, in the square in front of the new Legion quarters. It seems very probable that this will come about, as the idea has met an enthusiastic response. At the recent supper of the Legion drive workers, a stirring address in favor of the statue was made by Frank Purdy, of New York, president of the Art Alliance of America and the National Sculptors' society, editor of the department of industrial arts of "Arts and Decoration," the well-known art magazine, and manager of the Gorham Galleries of New York. Miss Hyatt modeled her "Joan D'Arc" in Gloucester and the splendid big horse was one of the horses of the Gloucester fire department.

As soon as the American Legion drive is over the drive of the new maternity ward committee for the Addison Gilbert hospital will be resumed. The committee gave way for the Legion drive and while there will be no tent headquarters in Postoffice sq., sections will be covered by work-

Selling Happiness Instead of Furniture

"Happiness" is really what we have to sell to owners of summer homes on the North Shore. It is more than porch and interior decorations. It is the happiness that only a background of artistic and comfortable furnishings can give to summertime. No home is too large —none too small—for our kind of happiness.

"The Wonder Hat," a delightful farce, will be given at the July meeting of the Gloucester College Women's club, on the grounds of the home of Mrs. George W. Woodbury, Eastern Point road, East Gloucester, Friday, July 30th, at five o'clock. Every college man and woman is cordially invited to come and bring or contribute towards a picnic supper served at six o'clock, followed by the presentation of the play under the direction of the well known coach, Miss Sally Shute. The usual large attendance is assured of a thoroughly enjoyable occasion.

Janet's Garden, 88 Prospect st., Gloucester, is gladdening the hearts of its many patrons by the old furniture which has been in the Lee family for two, and some for three generations. Much of this furniture is for sale.

Mrs. E. R. Mosely, of Westfield, is at her place "The Lantern Shop," Pigeon Cove, for the season, and she is getting ready for her annual mid-summer sale. Mrs. Mosely has been entertaining a number of Boston University students, her son, James Mather Mosely, Rupert Taylor, and Henry Minott, of Gardner. Miss E. H. Hooker, Miss Grace Hall and Mrs. M. B. Whitney, of Westfield, who are located at the Mailman House, East Gloucester, were the recent guests of Mrs. Mosely; also Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Salmond of Westfield, the former who is head chemist of the Springfield water supply. Mr. and Mrs. Salmond have been enjoying their honeymoon at Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Davis, of Boston, who last season had the Terry cottage on Beach rd., are occupying the Newell cottage on Nautilus rd., Bass Rocks.

BASS ROCKS.—The veranda of the Bass Rocks Golf club is a popular meeting place for social tea parties these days. The handsome rambler roses, pink and crimson, hang brilliant and graceful over the roof and posts and the long pergola is arched with the blooms—a rare sight. Mrs. G. Hyde Smith of the Grape Vine Cove cottage colony gave a tea party to six last week. Others entertaining were Mrs. Walter S. Roberts of the Bass Rocks cottage colony, who had two tables at bridge and tea, on Thursday; Miss Neff had three tables at bridge on Friday, and Mrs. Harding, of Fort Worth, Texas, entertained eight at bridge and tea. The dance on Saturday night at the club was a particularly enjoyable affair, largely attended. The Jefferson-Johnson Jazz orchestra of Superior colored players is furnishing some especially fine dance music. Ralph W. Pope of the cottage colony is one of the spirited promoters of things going on socially.

Officers for the Bass Rocks Improvement Society have been elected for the year as follows: President, Walter F. Roberts; secretary, Lawrence A. Brown; treasurer, Miss Emily McGuckin; executive committee, Ralph W. Pope, Joseph O. Procter, Jr., E. B. Chandler and Dr. A. M. Broughton.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Brewer and family, of Brookline, are occupying their attractive summer home, erected two years ago, on Brier road, near Souther road, Bass Rocks.

Miss Isabel C. Dodge, of Detroit, is one of the attractive young women of the social set at Bass Rocks this season. She is the daughter of the prominent automobile manufacturers. Miss Dodge entertains considerably. She has the Southgate cottage this season.

Mrs. M. P. Hutton and family and L. L. Hutton and wife, of Darby, Pa., arrived this week at Hotel Moorland, Bass Rocks. They occupy one of the cottages.

Among late arrivals at the Moorland are Mrs. F. W. Rising, Mrs. M. D. Borgmeyer, Mrs. H. B. Welsh, Mrs. H. E. Worcester, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Barrett, New York; Mr. and Mrs. R. Goodlatte, Passiac, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bates, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Grubb, Philadelphia; Mrs. Frank Rogers, Mrs. Belvidere Brooks, Montreal.

The Percy Owens, of Detroit, are occupying the Spring cottage on Brier rd., Bass Rocks.

EASTERN POINT. — The Playhouse-on-the-Moors scored a great success in the presentation of the three plays of the first group to be presented this season, "The Marriage—Will Not Take Place," "Overtones" and "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." There were large audiences throughout the week and on last Saturday evening a special performance was largely patronized, the receipts of which were donated to the American Legion fund.

The first play was given under the direction of Thos. J. Crosby, Jr., of the Providence Players, who also took part in the "The Marriage—Will Not Take Place." Leslie Buswell, as "the man who married a dumb wife," was splendid in his part and warm words of praise are spoken for Miss Esther V. Shultz, who took the part of the dumb wife so cleverly. Mrs. Edward D. Parsons, of Bass Rocks, was clever and winsome as "Harriet," in "Overtones." The drinking song scene in which all the picturesque and quaint characters in the play of "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," trouped out through the aisle past the audience and onto the stage, made a lasting impression. Miss Florence Cunningham, the director of the Playhouse-on-the-Moors, is highly credited with the efforts she put forth in making the group plays such a success. Miss Gladys Young had charge of the scenery, Mrs. William Byrd of costumes, Mary P. Cunningham of properties, William N. Goodridge of lighting and Leon J. Sturtevant of publicity. Now that these plays were so successful, attention is being turned to the next group to be presented August 24, 25 and 26.

The opening of the fifth annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture at the Gallery-on-the-Moors, Ledge rd., East Gloucester, will be on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 4. The exhibition continues daily and Sunday till the evening of Aug. 23.

Mrs. Alonzo W. Pollard entertained seven tables at bridge at her pleasant summer home at Eastern Point on Thursday afternoon of last week for the benefit of the new maternity ward drive.

Mrs. S. A. Raymond, of "The Ramparts," Eastern Point, has as her house guests, Dr. A. D. Meldium and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Williams, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. James F. Griffen and family, of Baltimore, Md., are again occupying one of the Wonson field cottages, Eastern Point, as has been their annual custom for years.

A great interest is being taken in "The Merry Whirl of 1920," which is to be held at the Moorland casino on the evenings of August 11, 12, 13 and 14, in aid of the new maternity ward of the Addison Gilbert hospital and Braewood Tuberculosis hospital, of Gloucester. The features in this show are many and Lilla Agnew Stewart is directing rehearsals daily. Clever talent from Bass Rocks, Eastern Point and from along the North Shore will have a part in the Merry Whirl. The Oriental group in the dramatic harem scene will include actors from Hawthorne Inn. The Sultan, the prince and the slave girl, besides other characters in gorgeous costumes will make up a scene of unusual attractiveness.

The BREEZE $2.00 a year, $1.00 for six months.

ROCKPORT.—This Friday evening a dramatic recital for the benefit of the Children's hospital, Boston, will be given at Straitsmouth Inn, Land's End, Rockport, under the auspices of the Rockport Woman's club. William F. Wentworth and Miss Emelia Topp, of Boston, will entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Davis, of Amesbury, are occupying the Poole bungalow on Atlantic ave., Rockport, this season.

Mrs. Alice M. C. Antin and daughter, of Oberlin, O., are occupying the G. T. Margeson cottage on Atlantic ave., Rockport.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ruston, of Medford Hillside, and their two sons, J. Fred and Dr. Warren D. Ruston, of Somerville, are occupying their summer home on Marmion Way. Rockport.

A. J. Moore and family, of Chase City, Va., are spending the summer in Rockport. They are located near the sea, at "Edgemere" cottage on the Headlands.

Harry A. Vincent, an artist, of New York, and Mrs. Vincent, have returned to the "Crow's Nest," Bearskin Neck, Rockport, for the season.

M. J. Shallow and family, of Roslindale, are occupying the York cottage, Marmion Way, Rockport.

The Rockport Country club held a brilliant "pop concert" at the clubhouse on Wednesday evening of last week. A great many people of the summer colony and from Gloucester turned out for the first "pop" of the season. Over 100 members and guests were present. A fine entertainment was givn by Miss Marion Harper, soloist, late of the Boston English Opera Company, accompanied by Mrs. Arthur B. Sewall, of Gloucester. Miss Hazel Sprague Dowes, of the community dramatic school, East Gloucester, and Scott and Baird, the minstrel boys from the Keith Circuit, with Miss Shevlin as accompanst, also gave special pleasure to the audience. Dancing was enjoyed between the numbers. The committee in charge of the affair comprised George H. Cutting, chairman; Charles C. Tresnon, Frederick H. Tarr, Charles Evans, E. A. Burnett and Harry J. West, the latter being master of ceremonies. Mrs. H. J. West assisted the committee.

BAY VIEW.—Gen. and Mrs. Adelbert Ames, of Tewksbury, who have been coming to their attractive summer home at Bay View for a great many years, quietly observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their estate on Wednesday evening of last week. The affair was confined to the immediate family, the members of which gathered for dinner. Gen. Ames is one of the most important residents along the Shore. He was former United States Senator and ex-governor of the state of Mississippi. At present he is president of the Wamesit Power Co., of Lowell. Mrs. Ames comes of an important family. She was Miss Blanche Butler, daughter of the noted Gen. Benj. F. Butler, the latter who built an estate in Bay View, Gloucester, and who loved the place and came here for the summer season for a great many years. At the present time, as the international yacht races are going on, the name of Gen. Butler will be remembered, for he had the famous yacht "America" built, that defended the America cup. Gen. and Mrs. Ames have been receiving the hearty congratulations of their hosts of friends upon this important event in their lives. It was a delight to have their children and grandchildren about them at this time. They have four daughters, Mrs. Blanche, wife of Oakes Ames, the scientist, botanist and author; Mrs. Sarah H., wife of Spencer Border, Jr.; Mrs. Jessie, wife of Andrew Marshall, assistant attorney-general at the State House, Boston, and Mrs. Edith, wife of C. Brooks Stevens, of Lowell. There are two sons, Col. Ames and Adelbert Ames, Jr.

Charles Grafly, the noted sculptor, of Philadelphia, is spending the summer with his wife and daughter, Miss Dorothy Grafly, at his summer home, Folly Cove.

NEW OCEAN HOUSE AND ANNEX, AT SWAMPSCOTT

NEW OCEAN HOUSE at Swampscott will be the scene of a gay dance tomorrow night when the Black and White ball will be given. The house is full in anticipation of the event. North Shore residents always have an interest in the social activities of this, one of the biggest summer hotels on the Shore.

Thursday evening, E. R. Grabow, of the New Ocean House, and James D. Henderson, of the firm of Henderson & Ross of Boston, tendered a complimentary dinner to Lieut-Gov. Channing H. Cox of Boston at the New Ocean House. About 30 business men of prominence of Massachusetts were present and informal speeches followed the excellent dinner.

Mrs. E. R. Grabow will be the hostess and entertainer at the Children's costume ball to be held at the New Ocean House, August 18, for which invitations are now being sent out.

Mrs. Charles H. Carter, of Boston, entertained a party of 16 friends on Tuesday at luncheon and tea. Bridge was enjoyed during the afternoon in the hotel annex .

Mrs. C. F. Kettering, wife of the president of the Delco System, Dayton, Ohio, who is stopping at the New Ocean House, is being extensively entertained along the North Shore.

The Sunday evening concerts at the New Ocean House always attract a good number of shore people who gather in the ball room with the guests for an evening of music.

The John Hancock district leaders will hold an outing at the New Ocean House, Sept. 19, 21 and 22, which will be one of the first conventions for the fall months.

The New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Boston, will hold a meeting at the New Ocean House, September 23, and over 1200 persons are expected to be in attendance.

The Lynn Rotary club will entertain the National organization at the New Ocean House, early in September.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mitchell, of Newton, spent the week-end at the Tedesco Country club.

Miss Jean Grabow of the New Ocean House is one of the young enthusiasts at tennis and is receiving instruction each day at the Tedesco Country club.

SWAMPSCOTT.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Covell and the Misses Elizabeth and Marie Covell and Miss Rebecca Carey, of Boston, are spending the summer on Cedar Hill terrace, Swampscott.

NORTH SHORE GARDENS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Series of Garden Days for Civic Federation Benefit —"Graftonwood," at Manchester, Open Tomorrow

"GARDEN DAY" on the Shore tomorrow (Saturday afternoon) will be at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, "Graftonwood," off Summer st., Manchester. It lies in the beautiful region of Dana's beach and is really one of the most charming and artistically built gardens on the Shore.

Planned by Mary Rutherford Jay, the garden architect of New York, who talked on "Garden Development" last Friday at the Lancashire home, this will be unusually interesting for visitors to see. It is one of Miss Jay's "newborn" gardens in which she takes special delight. Her ideas of a garden being a part of the house are well illustrated in the Lancashire garden.

She has said: "So many gardens seem to be planned merely to walk through that I want to make a strong plea for greater harmony between home and garden. They should be considered as one. The garden should be the continuation of the home outdoors, and should be studied to provide a pleasant place to sit, and in which to have privacy and shade, so that the family life may go on out there during the warm months."

And this is exactly what can be done on the terraces and in the blue, white and pink garden at "Graftonwood." The garden is entered from one side of the house, a short terrace separating the house from the garden. Steps, flower beds, pools, bird baths, pergola, hedges and ornamental fixtures and terrace balustrades all are one in harmony. The pergola under which are seats and a walk of square tiles carries out the question of unity in a charming way. The Lancashire house is of stucco, so the back pillars of the pergola are stone and the front row are of wood painted brown, in that way it seems like a part of the house. It is large and massive and curves around the end of the garden opposite the house, the two seeming to shelter the dainty garden room between.

The natural setting of this garden is good. The wooded hill with its towering trees above the garden space at one side and the sea below on the other lend much to its natural charm.

This is the last of the series of gardens opened to the public for July, but it is hoped others will be arranged for August. The "garden days" were for the benefit of the National Civic Federation.

Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, of Pride's Crossing, is always present on these occasions. Much credit is due Mrs. Coolidge for her active part in arranging Shore gardens to be opened in July.

GAVE TALK ON GARDENS

Noted Garden Architect Entertained North Shore Audience at "Graftonwood," Last Friday

MARY RUTHERFORD JAY, the noted garden architect, gave a delightfully entertaining talk on gardens, last Friday afternoon, July 23, at "Graftonwood," the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire, Manchester. The occasion came as a fitting culmination to the series of "Garden days" upon the Shore, which Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge has been so successfully conducting for the National Civic Federation.

Miss Jay gave her illustrated talk to a large and enthusiastic audience that came from far and near along the Shore. After the talk the beautiful garden was enjoyed. This garden was planned by Miss Jay and one or two of her slides showed the pergola arrangements. Nothing could have been more impressive than to pass from the house, where views of wonderful gardens had been shown and with the spell of Miss Jay's words hanging over one, out into a real garden as charming as any of the picture gardens and one that exactly carries out her ideas of a garden.

Miss Jay divided her talk into three parts: The beautifying of idle water; the utilization of waste land; and harmony between home and garden. The pictures shown were the results of her own experience in gardening. She has traveled much in foreign lands studying gardens and has a strong leaning to the beauties of Japan and England. From the Japanese we can learn much, she thinks, and she is a firm believer in using the English idea of house and garden combined—"the garden merely the continuation of the home outdoors." To gain this latter point gardens should be studied so that pleasant, shady, private places in which to sit and read and work can be arranged. She believes that the family life should go on in the garden, and to make it so houses and gardens must come closer together and be one, as it were.

Miss Jay grew up in a garden home, but her childhood days are not tinged with the garden ideals she is advocating. Her garden (so typical of many old-time ones) was some distance from the house, was a great square enclosed with box hedges, but had no shade, no fountains, no shady seat, nothing practically to break it into variety. It had quantities of flowers which she remembers picking quickly and putting in her basket in order to get back to the house out of the hot, sunny place. How different are the gardens she lays out now!

In beautifying idle water Miss Jay takes much from the Japanese. It is her idea to pull the gardens of the west and east together and in so doing she is educating us not to be afraid of the gardens of the orient. Views were shown of Connecticut and Long Island, places where ugly, useless ponds on estates were converted into fairyland scenes by planting the shores in Japanese style and building islands and bridges and tea houses. Some ponds may be simply improved by making a path around them and planting their shores tastefully. She said the Japanese never plant in rows, one thing we can learn from them. A grass bridge is a charming feature of their water gardens. Even this Miss Jay has accomplished in one of her Connecticut water gardens, the arched grass-covered affair passing from one island to another. She always makes four islands in a pond when carrying out the true Japanese idea. Of course, old lanterns play a striking feature in these gardens.

Much applause greeted Miss Jay when she showed the "before" and "after" views of three acres of harbor mud on the John D. Chapman estate, Greenwich, Conn. This was a sad problem to take up, but one, it seems, that Miss Jay put all her thoughts upon and now it lies a fair picture of flower gardens, tennis court, pergola and tea house. Touches of the Japanese were seen in the pictures of this work. She uses ground glass instead of rice paper for windows in the Japanese summer houses.

The spirit of unity between English gardens and houses was a most delightful feature of the talk. Many interesting points were made showing how we can adapt their ideas to our own gardens, the harmony between house and garden being felt more strongly, perhaps, by the English and Japanese than by other peoples. She told of her visit to and gave views of one noted garden in England in which the months of the year are represented in hedged-in sections by the flowers that bloom in that particular month. Of course, this is a most unusual arrangement.

Special garden features were mentioned:

"Steps require special treatment and often can be made of much advantage in changing the level of the garden, and when plantings are made along and through them they become things of beauty as well as useful adjuncts.

"Walls should be made more of in our gardens. They can be treated with charming effects with fruit trained to grow flat on them or by vines and flowers.

"Informal borders are pleasant features, also the curved path, an English idea. A sense of mystery is given by the curves and one wishes to explore it.

"Pools are good to break garden surfaces. Painted dark blue, even a small pool has a deep and cool effect.

"Pergolas look 'leggy' unless well-treated with vines.

"Gardens should suit the type of house they belong to.

"Gardens must be so arranged that the family life can go on outdoors in summer time—they should be simply living-rooms next our house.

"In planting a garden for an all season bloom, select a few varieties for each period and plant these in profusion in all of the beds, then they are all in bloom at the same time, the effect being better than having a plant museum.

"Distinctive gardens worked out in a definite color scheme can thus be had if the garden builder can resist the temptation to use a little of everything he has seen or heard of in the way of plant life.

"Successful gardening is a knowledge of the discard, knowing what to eliminate.

"A great deal of charm could be given to gardens by planning for lighting them and using them at night. Stone lanterns placed at important posts, especially in water gardens add a great deal of beauty and mystery."

Miss Jay closed her talk by speaking of trees used as memorials. She told of the avenue of trees in Cleveland, Ohio, planted as memorials for soldiers in the World war. She also said our North Shore gardens were so superb that all must bow before them.

Mrs. Lancashire and her daughter, Mrs. E. Laurence White, were instrumental in bringing Miss Jay to the Shore. Among those present were Mrs. F. M. Whitehouse, Mrs. Wm. C. Loring, Miss Margaret L. Corlies, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Miss Elizabeth Hammond, Mrs. Edgar R. Champlin, Mrs. George M. Studebaker (Little Boar's Head, N. H.), Mrs. Robert deW. Sampson, Mrs. Costello C. Converse, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Thayer, Mrs. George E. Barnard, Miss Elsie Heard, Mrs. R. H. Fitz, Mrs. R. T. Crane, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Tucker, Mrs. Ezra C. Fitch, Miss Marion Tucker, Mrs. Julian P. Fairchild (Glen Cove, N. Y.), Mrs. Chas. E. Cotting, Mrs. Howard Heinz (Pittsburgh), Mrs. Edward A. Sumner, Mrs. Francis Palms (Detroit), Mrs. John Clay and Miss Eleanor Jones.

Among the patronesses of the lecture were Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. W. B. Thomas, Mrs. Henry Russell and Mrs. Walter J. Mitchell.

A VISIT TO ONE OF MAGNOLIA'S OLD HISTORIC HOUSES

And the Surprises That Visit Revealed

By Gladys H. Richards

WHILE rambling around in search of a glimpse of the historical places of Magnolia, I found that the old stage coach inn has been transformed into a veritable kingdom of color and beauty. This building, dear to the hearts of our ancestors before the day of automobiles—and aeroplanes—is at the corner of Western and Magnolia aves., on the main Cape Ann road, an attractive site better known to present-day folk as Stanley's corner. Wonderingly I looked at the wide piazza, which now surrounds the house in place of its former narrow porch, and the large white pillars, which add an almost southern aspect to the rambling old house.

Curiosity impelling, I walked up to the old-fashioned door, hoping to discover what good angel had transformed that old dilapidated building into a modern and attractive house. Mrs. Lillian S. MacLennan, interior decorator, who owns it, and who is responsible for its transformation, is living in the house at present, and very kindly explained her work to me. Mrs. MacLennan, by the way, is a daughter of Mrs. Waldo Smith, formerly of the Back Bay.

"Though I am an American," she said, "I have lived in Italy, France and Switzerland a great many years, and have returned to my native country in order that my son may finish his education here. The war and the needs of the people during the war awoke in me the realization that there was work to be done in the world."

Mrs. MacLennan dwelt lightly on her work in France during the war, four active, busy years for her and her friends. "After the signing of the armistice," she went on, "habit of work had taken hold of me, and I determined that during my five years' stay in America, where I returned, I should try to accomplish something really worth while. I determined to 'do' a house — hence my purchase of this one—and to go on decorating, creating, making, for the few years I plan to remain here. I mix all my own paints and I love the work. To see a house emerge from a sordid affair into something that others like and enjoy fills me with a deep satisfaction. To combine colors as I see them, to work on a broken down old house, and put new life into it through colors, is a real joy.

"You know," she interrupted herself, "I can undertake either inside or outside renovations and attend to the plumbing, electric lighting and heating, and I am willing to go anywhere to do it, for my work is a delightful pleasure to me.

"This house," she continued, "was among the first houses built in Magnolia—or Crony Cove, as it was then called—and was the old stage coach inn; you probably know that already. Lately it has been known as the Stanley cottage, and now I have made it into an automobile inn, so that through divers ways it has come into its modern own again, though it is not yet open to the public eye.

"You know," she said with her charming smile, "I don't consider myself merely an interior decorator. I am a doctor, prescribing for the ills of my patient first of all, and then I am the nurse who takes charge and works towards the building up of the health and beauty of the patient. Harmony of color and detail is what I aim to have, coupled with originality, and to this end I think the years I have lived abroad have helped me."

Tirelessly Mrs. MacLennan has worked, blending together colors and materials that make the tumbled down inn into an inviting and worthwhile house.

The drawing room is in jade green, with just a suggestion here and there of pale yellow, orange and mauve. The light fixtures—torches proudly raised above the delightful old fireplace, reveal the beauty of the room, should one chance to visit at night, and add to its attractiveness during the day. The dainty window draperies of green silk and lace are in themselves masterpieces of a creative mind. A happy thought has added a pretty little jade pull to the white shades. The quaint old stenciled furniture, which has been made especially for this house, lends a subtle charm, that is felt rather than seen. One feels the charm of the whole house. The rugs are of a soft tone of brown without a figure. The mirrors are in hand-carved frames, of unique designs.

The dining-room is done in black and white, with rich green and yellow forming a tasteful contrast. The quaint little chairs have very high backs, and the furniture of this room, like that of the other rooms, is also stenciled; and the Wedgewood china, designed in the Liverpool black bird pattern, adds a touch of quiet dignity. The window draperies are of soft silk, string dyed, in pale yellow, deepening into orange towards the bottom on either side. They are gracefully held in place with black wooden beads. A pretty stenciled mirror with a wooden basin filled with flowers attached to it finishes the altogether alluring room.

As soon as I entered the little tea room, which is across a narrow hall from the dining-room, I wanted to "get busy" making tea in the funny old teapot, just for the pleasure of using the pretty chateau designed Copeland china, and of sitting near that dear old fireplace to drink it, for surely it needs must taste very good because of the beauty of the surroundings. The fireplace though whipped into shape for practical use, has lost none of its rustic charm, and the soft grey of its bricks blends with the mulberry furniture and grey walls,—the color scheme of the room. Marie Antoinette baskets stenciled on the walls, add a bright bit of color, in keeping with the pretty round tables and dainty chairs. Mulberry edged with blue are the colors in the artistic window draperies .

Much too soon I was whisked away to another section of the house—upstairs—which I found equally delightful. After climbing the old-fashioned stairs, and walking down a short hall I found myself in a perfectly adorable little bedroom—but hold, there was a door beyond, and upon investigating I found that this was not one bedroom, but two —a suite, and just beyond this second room was the bathroom. The rooms are done in old ivory, with dainty little touches of pink in candle shades, window draperies and bed coverings that are decidedly French—a dash of blue that is merely a suggestion adds a piquant touch.

The candle shades are of pink silk, with pointed frills, carrying out the idea of the pink silk trimmings on the beautiful lace bed covering, and the window draperies. The candle shades, window draperies and bed covering are original, and were designed by Mrs. MacLennan. Indeed this is true of all throughout the house. Fireplaces add a delightfully cozy effect.

Directly across the hall is the "blue room," a bedroom of soft blue and grey. The window draperies are of filet net, as is the bed covering, adding their pretty blue to the color scheme of the room. The wall paper, also blue, has been cut in such a way that the stripes form narrow panels, giving the walls an original appearance. Cherry red is the note of color occurring in decorations.

The bedroom at the end of the hall opens onto a roomy porch. This room is in grey and rose—the rose being repeated in the window draperies, wall paper and the hand-braided rugs. Original notes have been struck in window draperies and light fixtures.

Though the several other bedrooms are not quite so large, yet they are as alluringly attractive and delightfully unique.

Throughout the house there are hand-hewn beams and hand-made nails, which attest its age, and the eight old fireplaces help to make it homey and desirable.

That color, artistically blended, can make a strikingly beautiful house out of a tumbled-down ruin, has been proven by Mrs. MacLennan, who seems to have struck an entirely new and very clever idea in house decoration.

Nor has her time been devoted only to the interior, for the exterior shows taste and good judgment to a marked degree. I have already said that the narrow porch, which perhaps some of my readers remember, has been deftly converted into a broad piazza which surrounds the house on two sides. Plans are underway for the building of an attractive stucco garage, and a rustic gate with arch leads to the back lawn, where, under the shade of the old apple tree, tables will be arranged for serving tea out-of-doors.

The house is superbly located for an automobile inn, and could be kept open all winter for automobile parties who delight to visit the North Shore when Jack Frost reigns supreme, and when Dame Nature has spread her white mantle, preparatory to refreshing her beauties for the coming season.

In going from room to room I was inclined to say, "Oh, I like this one best of all" of each in turn; as I had not yet decided at the end of my tour, I went over them all again and—but Mrs. MacLennan tells me that each person who goes there chooses a different room as their favorite.

APPRECIATION

By Alex. G. Tupper

LET me sit by the glow of the open flame
In the chimney's blazing cave,
Where the walls reflect the cheery light,
While the drafty east winds rave
And the sea without, in its might roar,
Like a beast, calls to enter within my door,
From the din of the stormy night!

Let me lose myself by the cheery flame
And my spirit outward soar
To the seaman who could lose his way
In the white drifts on the shore;
Could I penetrate the eastern gale
And rise and shout o'er its prowling wail—
Turn the darkness into day!

Let me hear myself by the cheery flame—
Does my voice ring clear and true?
Does it give to the world a message sweet—
Turn the clouds to a sky of blue?
Will the ears of the world list to my voice—
Can the poet's song make it rejoice?
Oh, how long, e're the hand will greet?

Let me see myself by the cheery flame
As the world would look at me;
For I smile back at the ruddy glow,
At the wond'rous things I see!
And I feel content with the happiness
Of putting to song the dreams that bless
My life to make it grow!

Let me find myself by the cheery flame
Where the lights are fancies gold;
And the world without bids enter in
From the drift and the biting cold;
Thus I come with spirit content to pour,
If the hungry world knocks at my door—
Oh, when will it begin?

GLIMPSES HERE AND THERE OF

NORTH SHORE ESTATES

"Monstone Farm," the beautiful place in Ipswich of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rand Thomas, of Boston, has a garden that ought to have been on the list of Shore gardens open to the public for the benefit of the National Civic Federation.

This charming garden spot lies below the terrace at one end of the house. A hedge separates the main front terrace from the garden below, reached by vine-covered steps in an opening in the hedge. The garden lies in a great oblong, a perfect pattern of harmonious beds of blue, white and pink flowers separated by gravel walks. Each bed is edged with blue and white flowers. A lily pool of deep pink lilies is in the center. A hedge and trees here and there surround the garden. An outside path bordered with peonies and other flowers makes an interesting approach to the garden from the large, park-like grounds that are a part of the farm.

Since hearing Mary Rutherford Jay, the garden architect, who spoke at the Lancashire home in Manchester, this seems to be a garden that she would endorse. It lies close to the house, only a few feet of terrace and shrubbery combining to make an entrance into it. Really it seems just as she said a garden ought to be: "A part of the house where family life could be carried on." This beautiful garden once belonged to Mrs. Charles P. Searle, now of Manchester Cove.

At the cottage on "Town Hill," a portion of the estate owned by Mr. and Mrs. Benj. P. P. Moseley, son-in-law and daughter of the Thomasses, a little garden is in process of growth by the house of these young people. It joins directly onto the house and is overlooked by a sun-parlor in the windows of which are many potted plants, seemingly making an inside garden overlooking the one adjoining. In this garden enclosure is a bird bath centre and a side fountain pool in which a few Florida alligators are lazily disporting themselves. These and the handsome cuckoo are chief garden ornaments.

This cottage is most attractively situated and has an excellent view of Ipswich bay and the sand dunes and islands of that delightful region.

The stables at the Thomas home should be visited for various reasons. This fine farm used to be called "Inglisby," but was changed to "Monstone" when Mr. Thomas purchased it, taking its new name from a favorite horse owned by Mr. Thomas. Seldom is an estate so named, or a horse so honored.

In the well-equipped and modern stable, Monstone, a racer of note as well as hunter, a winner at the Myopia Hunt club affairs, holds one's attention as he seemingly heads the row of stalls in which less favored horses are standing. Each stall has the name of its occupant painted above it and there one may see where Juverence, Billy Sunday (a horse of much action similar to his namesake), Golden Buck and Maratime, hunters and harness horses, have their quarters. Truma, a young horse, that is going to be another of the type of Monstone is now in training at Long Island.

Very attractively arranged are the stables with pictures of noted horses that were winners in English races and others of prominence overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Henry Sinton, of Boston and Beverly Cove, formerly of Clifton, have made some extensive improvements on their new home, the Endicott house, purchased last year.

It has been made modern in every respect, some rooms thrown into one, and the halls rough-plastered to give a Gothic effect. Harry Davidson, of Boston, has been the architect and Wm. Galloupe, of Beverly, did the carpenter work. Proctor, of New York, has been the interior decorator, the furnishings coming mostly from the Hampton shops.

The "baby room," a pretty feature for the two younger boys, is done in blue and white, a charming study in glazed chintz. The same plan is carried out in the older boy's room, with orange for the color scheme. A charming boudoir done in blue, rose and white extends out over the piazza on the water side of the house. A large living-room has been made by throwing two rooms into one below, and with the wide halls and dining-room artistically furnished with Hampton shop furniture the lower floor presents a most attractive appearance.

The place contains four and one-half acres with a fine curving water frontage and deep lawn running down to the water, the house standing about midway between the road and water.

Work is still in progress on the house and another year the grounds will be changed somewhat. Mrs. Sinton is a garden lover and is planning a garden for her wide lawn.

The house has been painted white with green blinds and the long piazzas facing the water are furnished in wicker with yellow and blue chintz cushions.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, of Beverly Farms, are living in their "House-on-the-Rocks" this season, while "Rose Ledge" is occupied by the George H. Swifts, of Boston.

This tall, dark-brown house perched high upon the rocks among the pines is a most interesting place. Reached by a long stairway that winds in and out over the rocks in rustic fashion or by the steep and winding driveway, it well repays the ascent by the view from its front piazza. Down below is seen the roof of West Beach pavilion; and Mystery island with the water beyond it makes a fair picture. Not many places show the island with the water on the outside, so this view is one of unusual interest.

The driveway is edged around with a guard of high, jagged stones. At the foot of this rocky hill lie the little gardens and big tennis court. Red roses are climbing gloriously over its wire enclosure.

The grounds around both houses show many attractive touches with flowers here and there, a little summer-house high on the rocks under the pines and other features.

THE MAGNOLIA SHOPS

NOTES OF INTEREST

By GLADYS H. RICHARDS

MAGNOLIA SHOPS, always a source of great interest to the ladies of the North Shore colony, will be doubly attractive to them from now on, for have not the fall styles begun to make their appearance? From season to season the fashion seems to take on an added charm, and the coming season is no exception. Alluringly lovely hats, gowns and wraps have put in an appearance at many of the shops.

What a pleasure to dip into McCutcheon's treasure-box and to bring forth the exquisitely beautiful linens! One knows full well that whatever the design, it will be carried out in the monogram to the smallest detail. Lovers of linens are finding a delightful fascination in the superbly lovely linens on display in the "bride's window," where there is everything to capture the fancy of the bride-to-be.

The babies' shop at the Grande Maison de Blanc is proving a real comfort to the mothers of the North Shore colony, for attractively displayed is everything that baby or the child of two or three could possibly need. There are the little bassinets with daintily embroidered accessories, all frilly and lacy and simply adorable, withal practical; little dresses that are altogether lovely, and hats and coats and bonnets that are delightfully pretty. The little scales, that baby's weight may be studiously watched, are also part of this charming display. There are all the accessories for baby's toilet, as well as little bootees and stockings. Truly there is everything here to supply the tiny new baby or small tot's needs.

A riding crop with a small horse outlined in platinum diamonds, at Hodgson Kennard's, would add an exquisite effect to a smart riding habit.

For dance frocks we turn our attention to E. T. Slattery's, for they have simply loads of them in since our last visit. A captivating little frock is of white voile richly embroidered and trimmed with filet lace and tucked net; little crochet buttons add a smart finish. For more formal wear there is one of toast-colored net, with bandings of filet lace and lovely little pointed ruffles. A two-toned girdle of ribbon adds a dash of contrasting color. The latter is on display in the prettily draped window, as well as one quite adorable little frock of rose chiffon and French lace, finished with a girdle of rose velvet ribbon, set off with French flowers.

In jade green, so very popular this season, there is a gown of taffeta, with a silver lace bodice and a front panel also of silver lace.

Uncurled feather fans in shades to match, or contrast prettily, with the frocks and gowns are also on display, as well as the exquisitely beautiful Spanish lace scarfs.

Distinctive and alluringly attractive are the gowns at Harry Collins'. What could be more desirable than the lovely gown of jade green chiffon over kitten's ear satin of the same shade! The bodice of the gown suggests Grecian lines, while the skirt is lightly draped. Jet bandings form a smart finish. Equally as attractive is the gown of grey satin with the long lines, always so becoming. The over drapery of grey chiffon heavily embroidered in silver, has the sectioned skirt, and the jade green girdle makes an effective and tasteful contrast. A gown of orange chiffon with skirt gracefully draped is meeting with the gratified approval of North Shore folk. The crystal trimmings on the bodice lend an air of smart distinctiveness.

At Cammeyer's a dainty little shoe buckle that is finding favor is of black velvet and steel, pansy shaped. The shoes at this attractive little shop have won the admiration of the visitors to the Magnolia shops, for here are found everything for sports, afternoon and evening wear. The children's shoes, too, are meeting with approval, as well as hosiery for all occasions. We are quite "taken" with a pair of lovely little black satin shoes, with a brocaded vamp, and plain quarter. One pair, equally as attractive, has a topaz buckle.

A purse that is attractive as well as practical, at Tyson's, is made of silk in various shades, and holds a mirror, coin purse, cigarettes and matches.

And now comes the handbraided bags! At Ferlé Heller's a unique idea in bags displayed in the window is very new. The bag is of silk and along the same idea as the hand-braided mats. At the top is green shell clasp. Upon entering to look more closely at this pretty little bag, we discover that the semi-fall and fall hats have arrived and are now on display. There are simply quantities of smart velour and satin hats, in all the up-to-the-minute styles.

And newest of new ideas is a cape, at Farr's! They come in various colors and are of brushed wool, with a long scarf finished with fringe forming the "comfy" collar. Light in weight, withal warm, they are not quite as long or all-enveloping as the ordinary cape, and are being received à bras ouverts by the smartly dressed.

We must include a visit to Hickson's select little shop this week, for we must see in reality, the lovely frock of the "BREEZE FASHION SUGGESTIONS" of last week, which is on display at their Magnolia shop. The frock is of peach-colored organdie, and the smart, flounced skirt is finished with a girdle of black to which a spray of French flowers adds a dash of color. Hickson's have on display the distinctive and very new hats, sweaters, motor wraps, frocks, gowns, sports skirts and suits, for mid-summer wear, as well as a well-chosen selection of the small accessories—bags, fans, perfumery, etc.

Richly beautiful is a dolman of Hudson seal at Lamson & Hubbard's, which is receiving the delighted admiration of their visitors. A very deep collar reaching to the waist-line adds an irresistible charm to this lovely piece, which can be used for day-time or evening wear. In squirrel, which Dame Fashion decrees is "the thing" just now, there is a dolman that is adorably becoming and smart.

Lamson & Hubbard's moved into their new Boston building, on the corner of Arlington and Boylston sts., only a short while ago, and in addition to their furs they are also carrying motor coats and wraps and millinery. The dresses which they carry in their Magnolia shop are from their New York store (Balch, Price & Co., Brooklyn).

Theodore Schneider, furrier, whose store was formerly located on Dartmouth st., Boston, and who is very well-known by Boston folk, is now associated with Lamson & Hubbard in their Boston store.

And still they come! Now it is the crochet hats for sports and automobile wear, at Lemaud's shop. The hats are hand-made with pretty crochet designs in various colors forming their only trimming, and have the tam crown. In some, the trimming is of chineal, and others have brims of wool or silk filet. These hats have just been "discovered," and a few weeks ago were exported from New York, the first export of millinery since the war. Extremely smart, and "comfy" for sports wear, these hats are winning the heart of the out-of-doors girl.

Another millinery display on the avenue is at J. J. Jonas'. Miss Jonas has just returned from abroad, bringing with her an entire new stock of hats in the new semi-fall and fall styles.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE

By Betty Beeman

OH! the waves make magic music
As they try to near the shore,
And the twilight slowly deepens,
Softens now the ocean's roar.

There's a splash of surf advancing,
There's a weird song as it flees:
"Hear my secret, rocks and pinelands,
Hear my song, thou gentle breeze.

"I am wearied, coming, going;
I would stay close by the shore
Where the sands are ever singing—
Singing of days gone before.

"There the storm-rent rocks are whispering
'Little waves, come, with us play,'
But a voice is calling, calling,
And that call I must obey."

HERE and THERE with NORTH SHORE FOLK

THEIR VARIED INTERESTS AND ACTIVITIES

GEN. AND MRS. EDGAR R. CHAMPLIN, of Boston, are spending the summer in beautiful "Thissellwood," Mingo Beach hill, Pride's Crossing, the home of Ellis L. Dresel and Miss Louisa L. Dresel. This place, with its charming old wing, the original house, and its very extensive addition, makes one of the most interesting Shore homes to be found. Much pleasant history of the social life in early days could be linked with "Thissellwood's" hospitable tenants of the past.

But the name of Gen. Champlin does not exactly suggest the past, only as it is connected with bridges. Some one spoke of a booklet that related facts about Mr. Champlin's achievements in the way of bridge making. So we looked it up and have made a little summary of the bridge story, the outcome of which is really a monument to Mr. Champlin's far-seeing thought and determination to carry through a point which he knew to be right.

About 1900 was when Mr. Champlin was mayor of Cambridge. The mayor of Boston, mayor of Cambridge and a bridge expert, E. D. Leavitt, composed the bridge committee planning a bridge between the two cities. While this commission existed Boston had two mayors, Josiah Quincy and Mayor Hart, each serving in turn on the commission. When the bridge was built it was considered the finest one of its size in America.

This bridge was the determining factor in making the Charles river the great ornamental playground—the largest in the world in such a thickly settled community. It was quickly followed by legislation authorizing the dam and converting muddy, salt water flats into a permanent salt water basin where the water is maintained at grade 8. It created a water parkway 18 miles long.

Mr. Champlin's untiring efforts secured the drawless part of the bridge. He saw the advantages of a drawless bridge that would make Charles river a basin instead of a tidal river overflowing flats. Various interests opposed this kind of a bridge. The mayor of Cambridge went to Washington and worked until he gained the point that has meant so much to the two cities. President McKinley signed the bill and presented Mr. Champlin with the pen as a memento in recognition of his efforts in securing the passage of the bill.

Mr. Champlin was then put on the Charles river dam commission of which Henry D. Yerxa, of Cambridge, was chairman. He was also asked to put through the drawless part of the Anderson bridge.

The Champlins now make their home on Commonwealth ave., Boston. They formerly owned one of the show places at Rye Beach, N. H., but sold it to be nearer Boston when Mr. Champlin's business interests made him one of the daily commuters of the Shore.

MRS. CHAS. F. AYER, of Hamilton, is president of the guild in the Episcopal church in that vicinity. Mrs. Ayer, aside from the home church interests, is also actively interested in the Episcopal home for orphans in Boston.

MISS MABEL WELCH, sister of Mrs. Alonzo Wilder Pollard, of Eastern Point, Gloucester, has set up housekeeping in a charming old-time house just across from the Wenham tea house. Miss Welch lives alone, dividing her time between the tea house Exchange and her own home. She has furnished it with antiques of her own, making an ideal place out of it. Also there are antiques for sale here and there throughout the six or more rooms.

Old clocks, chairs, dishes, southern bed spreads and the like are found here. It is a most unique place, decidedly a private house and yet with rare old things for sale. The rooms are papered with reproductions of old-time paper from Bixby's, in Salem.

Miss Welch loves antiques and now in her quiet old home she is surrounded with the atmosphere she revels in. She has plans for a garden another year.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE meetings, four in all, are planned for the Shore this season. These affairs will, as usual, be looked after by Miss Harriot Curtis, of Manchester. Some member of Mrs. Greely S. Curtis' family is always interested in these musical treats and talks from the southland.

Miss Isabella Curtis, a member of the advisory committee of the Boston Dispensary, is also interested in the Penn school on St. Helena's island, one of the sea cotton islands of North Carolina.

Speaking farther of people's interests, it is well-known that Miss Frances Curtis has been the only woman on the Boston school committee of five members for several years. In this important official position she comes in close, personal contact with teachers in the public schools. She thinks that teachers do not always realize that committees are their friends and do all they possibly can, in many instances, for the teachers' advancement.

Miss Margaret Curtis, so long in Red Cross work overseas, has taken up her former social work in East Boston, and is on the staff of the Boston school of social workers.

Notwithstanding all these serious and far-reaching interests the Misses Curtis are lovers of golf and other outdoor sports. Miss Harriot now holds the championship of Boston and Miss Margaret, it is well-known, has had the national championship three times.

GERTRUDE BOURNE, the artist, is at her home in Ipswich for the summer. She has just finished a large painting of the tower of the African church on Charles st., Boston. The view was taken from an attic window on Mt. Vernon st. hill, looking down over the roofs and chimney pots, which makes a very foreign and picturesque composition.

Owing to the widening of Charles st. this church has been in danger of being torn down, but the people on "the hill" are hoping to save it, as it is one of the finest and oldest landmarks in Boston.

Mrs. Bourne has also been painting a number of gardens. One, painted at Ipswich, is now on exhibition at Miss Horne's gallery, Magnolia.

George Stone and his sister, of New York, are at present visiting the Bournes. Mr. Stone has a fine collection of arms and armor, some of which may be seen at the Metropolitan museum, New York.

GARDEN DAYS on the North Shore the past few weeks—on Saturdays—have been festive occasions for the National Civic Federation. Over 500 called at Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane's and Mrs. W. Scott Fitz's gardens in Manchester two weeks ago, and big crowds were at "Dawson Hall," Beverly Cove, last Saturday. Among those noticed were the following:

Miss Hannah Edwards, Miss Faulkner, Mrs. A. Winsor Weld, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roscoe Thayer, Mrs. Reginald Gray, Mrs. Richard Fisher, Miss Helen Burnham, Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent, the Misses Hunt, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Dr. and Mrs. J. Collins Warren, Col. and Mrs. R. H. Stevenson, Mrs. I. T. Mann, Mrs. R. T. Paine, 2d, Mrs. F. M. Whitehouse, Mrs. Wm. H. Moore and Mrs. Paul Moore.

PRETTY IS THAT PRETTY SINGS

Most Pleasing Sound to Stroller is Orchestration of Flying Inhabitants

By Carol C. Crain, in The Dearborn (Mich.) Independent

"Back Home" is a woods which in spring and summer serves as a vast hotel for a thousand or more birds that apparently return to the same spot year after year as old chums are wont to do. They haunt the wild rose shrubbery, the blackberry tangles, the thorny haw trees, the ash, the beech and all the rest. Rabbits bound out of tufts of grass and squirrels bark from many branches, but the sound that most pleases the stroller in this happy grove is the orchestration of its flying inhabitants.

Dozens of brown thrashers reside in this special patch of favored woodland and dispense life-giving strains of supreme melody. Long, rusty fellows they are, almost twelve inches from the tip of the tail to the point of the bill. They hover close to the ground and rustle along beneath the bushes in an alarming manner. When disturbed, they scold rapidly with a sharp but monotonous "sit" and flirt the tail so vigorously that the action cannot be termed less than thrashing; this habit and the hue of his plumage have earned for him the somewhat plebeian name of brown thrasher.

However, this feathered fellow has two outstanding characteristics that endear him to bird lovers. He wears a sporty vest of creamy white, thickly strewn with arrowheads of brown. This part of his costume is striking; unfortunately his beauty ends there. The other characteristic, the dominant one, is his superb song which needs only to be heard to be appreciated. He arranges his notes in pairs, triplets, and fours and makes many charming repetitions.

"Lest you should think he never could recapture
The first fine careless rapture."

The most wonderful chorus that I ever heard was given one spring day by these dusky residents of the grove "back home." Between four and five o'clock of an afternoon the sun, which had remained hidden during the preceding hours, emerged in all its enthralling splendor like a rainbow long restrained, but at last released. From tree stubs, boughs and low bushes the brown thrashers joyfully greeted the luminary and made the air vibrant with their gladness. The whole woods was transformed, lifted up, and freshened by that flood of liquid notes and the exquisite melody of that grand chorus.

"The thrasher's song entrances every listener," says Neltje Blanchan, the naturalist. "He seems rather proud of it, for although at other times he may keep himself well concealed among the shrubbery, when about to sing he chooses a conspicuous perch as if to attract attention to his truly brilliant performance."

Every morning and evening the bird bursts forth with his marvelous melody, but I am inclined to disagree with Miss Blanchan on the score of his forwardness. My experience has taught me that the thrasher likes to get into some thick little tree or bit of shrubbery before beginning his repertory; thus he can see any intruder while he himself remains in the confusing mass of foliage. Sometimes I wonder if the bird knows that, aside from his streaked vest, he has few fine feathers and that his song is much more winning than his rusty raiment. However that may be, the person that has the good fortune to hear him in the evening or early morning can truthfully testify:

"'Twas a song that rippled
And revelled and ran
Ever back to the note
From whence it began;
Rising and falling
It never did stay,
Like a fountain that feeds
On itself all the day."

Not infrequently, indeed, the song of the thrasher is mistaken for that of its famous cousin, the mocking bird. Though more retiring than either the mocker or the catbird, the brown haunter of the underbrush seems to me superior in the richness of his notes. The mocker, as the name implies, is an imitator; the catbird, of the same pattern, makes a good start, but becomes disgusted with himself and fizzles; the thrasher starts well, continues ably, and ends well.

In this woods "back home" are new nests of the brown birds beside their old ones. They vary in distance from the ground, some reaching as high as a grown man and others no higher than a toddling baby. Where the wild roses flourish appears to be a favorite location for the crude conglomeration of twigs which upon examination discloses a lining of dried grass, feathers, or hair.

The female of this species is a brave little lady. As she will not readily leave her nest the stroller can approach within three or four feet of her, but the moment he attempts to pass a hand through the maze of thorny shrubbery she flutters aside with an attention-attracting show of helplessness. Until she is actually flushed she depends upon her brown dress and tawny nest for concealment. Man, however, is a sharp-eyed creature.

What does the thrasher eat? The farmers of bygone days dubbed him "the planting bird" because they believed the canny fellow hung around while they planted corn and made merry as he contemplated the coming feast. The tillers of the crops interpreted his song as follows:

"Hurry up, hurry up! Plough it, plough it! Harrow it, harrow it! Hoe it, hoe it! Scatter it, scatter it! Seed it, seed it! Cover it over! Rake it, rake it! Push it in, push it in! Weed it, weed it! Pull 'em up, pull 'em up! Oh, leave it alone!"

The thrasher was guilty, but not a criminal, for during the planting period only about three percent of his food consists of corn. Though occasionally indulging in fruit, he evinces a decided preference for animal food such as grasshoppers and caterpillars. From the United States government he has earned a citation that he "much more than compensates for that portion of his diet derived from the cultivated crops."

This homely fellow, Mr. Brown Thrasher, is like human beings that have not been blessed with beauty of face and figure; if they can't be beautiful, they must be charming somehow. When he sings, the beauty of his melody obliterates all else; gone are the gawkiness of his form and the rusty red of his shabby suit when he gives a concert—a concert that is as free as the air itself.

The regional conference of the women of the 1st, 2d, and 3d senatorial districts of Essex county, of the Republican party, will meet in the Unitarian parish house, Federal st., Beverly, Wednesday, Aug. 4. Mrs. Charles S. Bird is chairman of the women's division. The morning's program is for officers only and will consist of reports and general business besides an address by Mrs. Frederick P. Bagley, chairman, American Citizenship, on "The Citizenship of Married Women; the New Plank in the Republican Platform."

The public is cordially invited to be present in the afternoon. Addresses will be given by Mrs. Bird, Hon. John M. Gibbs and Mrs. James D. Tillinghast. Wm. S. Felton, chairman, executive committee of the Republican party of Massachusetts, will welcome women into the Republican party, his short address coming at 2.15. Afternoon session begins at 2 o'clock.

LITTLE BETTINA

By Rebecca T. Hodges

I

(Concluded next issue)

Pierre Ledoux settled back in his seat in the train and sighed rapturously. He took off his battered cap and ran his fingers through his waving black hair. It was such a luxurious feeling to be comfortable and warm and dry—just to have quiet and peace and rest.

Home! What visions it brought before him! The little village—the tiny farm—the neat and well-kept cottage—and most of all, Marie, his sparkling-eyed bride.

He remembered their marriage day — the kind old Father who had blessed them—the laughing villagers—the merrymakers—the dance—and above all, his Marie,—just his—the sweet sixteen-year-old bride.

He thought of their year together on their tiny little farm. Shoulder to shoulder they had worked to add to their savings—he on the outside with the tilling and sowing and reaping, and clever, industrious Marie with her fine cooking and lace-making for the ladies at the chateau. Little by little the hoarded pile had grown.

"The dot for the little daughter the good God will send us some day," Marie had told him piously.

And then the war — the great and terrible cataclysm that threatened to tear the world asunder. France had called. There was nothing else to do — he had gone like all good patriots. With tears and sobs, but with invincible spirit his Marie, like the thousands of other French women, had sent him off to the front, urging him onward.

The quick tears sprang to his eyes. He saw it all again —the clamor in the village, the excited groups, the marching away of the men. He had looked back, he remembered, for one quick, last glimpse. She had stood there in the dusty roadway, both hands clenched tight against her bosom. Just the women and a handful of old, old men—and the children—he saw them all.

Two years. And now he was back—a permissionaire for ten days—back from the cold and wet—the rats and mud—the groans and shells—the Hell of the trenches.

He watched the farms and villages fly by. Blackened stretches and leveled towns were the Huns' souvenir. Then for some unknown reason a fertile strip reclaimed perhaps by some returned industrious plodder.

In the distance a woman was ploughing, a child trudging along behind her.

"Poor things," he thought, pityingly, "Perhaps their man is heaped up with a dozen others for a defense line—or hanging on a barbed wire entanglement—or in a German prison."

He shivered.

The train hurried on. At intervals it left part of its burden of permissionaires to be swallowed up in the cheering crowds that swarmed forward to meet them.

"Dry beds! Red wine! Pretty girls! What more can heaven hold!" Pierre asked himself.

He turned to the only remaining occupant of the carriage—a silent, sober comrade with a tired, worn look in his thin face. One arm was still in a sling.

"On leave?" Pierre inquired.

"No, monsieur," he answered, "I am done for. Only half an arm and a bad wound in the abdomen make me no good for the fight any more."

He shrugged his shoulders. "I am sorry—this is no time to get out. And I hate to go back. It won't be what it used to be. My wife died over a year ago. I saw her on my last leave. She was in one of the villages taken by the Germans—but she shot herself. There's just my old, old mother left—so, you see," he continued, after a pause, "it won't be just the same."

"No," Pierre agreed. It was all he could think of to say.

Both men watched the fleeting landscape.

"I haven't been home for a long, long time, myself," he added, as an afterthought.

Monsieur Hinton gazed out into space. Then he said, abruptly, "It happened in the town of C—! My mother and my wife were together. The Huns tore into the room, but they didn't get my little Lizette! The brave little thing sent a bullet into her breast. She died instantly. My mother was too old, so they cursed and kicked her—but later she escaped. And so I go back to her—to my mother."

His forehead was covered with beads of perspiration and his hand shook as he wiped them away.

Pierre, fascinated, listened with horror.

"C—! Why, that is near my own little village. Only a few miles from it, Monsieur. That is where I live—I and my Marie. We have a cottage with a garden all around it — such a pretty garden — full of roses and lettuce and beets, Monsieur! But I'm sure my Marie is safe, for I've had letters, ah, so many letters from her full of all that she is doing every day. She has always been so cheerful and so gay."

"Yes," assented Monsieur Hinton, "that is the way of our women—so brave and courageous. My mother wrote me that even during the invasion many of them joked and laughed with the Germans and then carried secret information back to our own lines."

"Ah, yes, Monsieur, they are brave and true, our women of France—may God ever bless them," Pierre declared, devoutly.

"But there was one girl there," continued Hinton, "a pretty, dark-eyed child, my mother said. The German officer was stationed at her home. The beast boasted that the girl was his. My mother said she was only a mere child and she hadn't the courage to do as Lizette did. She wept all the time. She said she wanted to live because some day her husband would return to her and she talked of him all day long and what he would say and do when he came home and they were happy once more.

"I have often wondered," he went on after a moment's pause, "what I would have done—if that had happened to me—if that girl had been my wife. I think Lizette did the better thing. She was so young and beautiful and had so much to live for! But as much as I loved her and long for her, I would rather a thousand times that she died than to have her alive to meet me after those damn Germans had been in my home."

He brought his clenched fist down with a crash on the sill and his face darkened somberly.

"O, but Monsieur, I know how you feel—but think of the poor girl—almost a child—alone and unprotected—helpless. Like my little Marie, perhaps—always dancing and singing, her greatest problem the set of a gown or the color of the flower in her bonnet. No, O, no, Monsieur, I do not agree with you. I would hold her tight in my arms and tell her never to fear or weep again, that I, her husband, had returned."

Pierre's dark eyes flashed.

"It may be so, my friend, perhaps you might. But the case of another is a different matter from your own tragedy. It it always thus. When it happens to your own wife or to your own daughter you have a different point of view."

Pierre shook his head emphatically. "No, no," he assured him.

"Very well, my Pierre, let us hope you may never have the opportunity of being tried. I could wish no such evil to my worst neighbor. But here is where I leave you."

He picked up his bag and rose from his seat. "I get out now. My compliments to your wife—and a happy and restful leave to you—may we meet again sometime."

He smiled and stepped out on the platform. The train started again and the last Pierre saw of him he was standing there waving his cap.

The afternoon wore on and finally Pierre saw the familiar landmarks—the towers of the distant tree-surrounded chateau—the orchards—the priest's house beside the little church.

Quickly he hurried down the steps and onto the little street. People eyed his ragged uniform—familiar though it be—with respect. The small boys saluted him.

He spied old Jacques, the keeper of the curio shop, standing in his doorway.

"Hulloo, Jacques," he called, gaily. "How are you? Don't you remember me—Pierre Ledouc?"

"O, Monsieur Ledouc," he quavered, touching his sleeve with trembling fingers. "God be praised! Is it you?"

"There is no doubt about it," Pierre declared. "I'm here on leave. How is my little Marie? It's about two years since I've seen her—bless her heart!"

"Yes, O, yes, it must be that long." The old man shook his head sadly. "Dreadful things have happened here, boy, since you went away. There must be a good God in heaven—the Father tells us so—but His eyes were turned the other way during those days. The men and children were lined up and shot—and the women—our pretty girls—!" he raised his outstretched hands toward the heavens and groaned. "But Marie is well, Pierre—she is well—I saw her but today. I must go."

He turned abruptly and hobbled inside the shop.

"The poor old thing has grown childish," Pierre decided, as he went on. "I suppose the invaders killed nearly every one. But thank God Marie is safe."

The setting sun cast long shadows down the street and across the clean yards and spotless homes.

Pierre whistled cheerfully. O, but it was good to be alive!

Old, bent Madam Devoux limped slowly along the roadway. She gave him one glance and then shrieked as she clutched his sleeve.

"Not you, Pierre Ledouc!" she cried.

"Yes, it's Pierre Ledouc, himself—not his spirit," he grinned cheerfully. "It's fine to be back again just even for a visit, though. Everything here looks the same. I can't see that the Germans did much damage here. We got after them too soon and drove them back so they were not here long, were they? Not more than a few months?"

"O, Pierre," she cried, sorrowfully, wringing her knarled old hands. "They were here even less than that—but the trouble they made can never be wiped out."

Pierre patted her shaking head.

"Yes, I know, Madam Devoux," he answered. "But Marie—my little Marie—is still here and that is where my heart is now. She doesn't know that I am coming, so I'll go on; but I'll come to see you before I go back," he promised.

She watched him go down the road, shaking her head and repeating over and over to herself under her breath, "O, Marie, Marie."

Pierre turned in at a flagstone walk that ran back to the trellised door. The evening odors from the earth and gardens were sweet and pungent, and the thick grass was soft and springy under his feet.

He heard a woman singing inside the house. There was the clatter of dishes and he knew she was preparing the supper.

Trembling and shaking with excitement he softly opened the door and stepped within.

Marie stood with her back toward him and he tiptoed up behind her and put his hands over her eyes. She screamed in terror and tred to pull away, but he laughed tremulously and drew her to him.

"Marie—my little girl," was all he could say while the tears streamed down his face.

"O, Pierre, my own blessed Pierre," she sobbed, throwing herself into his arms.

He drew her down beside him on the settle.

The teakettle sang louder and louder over the fire and the shadows grew still longer across the kitchen floor.

He held her tightly clasped in his arms as though loath ever to let her go and brushed back the damp curling hair from her childlike face. Over and over again he kissed the trembling lips and tear-stained cheeks.

"My own little Marie," he repeated, brokenly. "Thank the good God you are unharmed."

A quick thought of the talk with his train friend, Hinton, flashed across his mind. "He was right," he acknowledged to himself. "I could never bear it to know that Marie wasn't all mine."

Then he spoke aloud to her comfortingly.

"Such a little girl to leave here all alone."

"O, Pierre, Pierre," she sobbed in anguish. "You don't know what I have suffered! The loneliness and sorrow and anxiety for you! And then those horrible Germans coming here to the village! I was nearly mad! I thought my mind would leave me. I ran this way and that. I cried! I implored someone to protect me! O, why, why were we ever left here alone! Our men had all gone—not one remained—no, not one!"

She shuddered and her eyes dilated with horror.

Pierre drew her head down on his shoulder as he tried to check the fresh torrents of weeping.

"Don't tremble so, my little girl," he begged, pityingly. "I am here now, all danger is over and you escaped unharmed. Forget it all. You are alive and well and I have ten days' leave to spend with you. So be happy, little sweetheart—be my own gay, laughing Marie."

"Yes, dearest Pierre," she answered smiling unsteadily. "I'll forget all the terror and horror of what has happened—all that I can, anyway. Two years is a long time to be here alone, dearest; but nothing whatever matters or can ever trouble me as long as you love me so—for I adore you. I adore you!"

She threw her arms passionately around his neck and held his head tight against her breast.

"Yes, Marie, dear one, I understand—so don't let anything make you unhappy, loved one, for I am here with you," he said, tenderly. "I'll always love you, dear one."

Then he smiled whimsically. "But, O, I am a hungry man!"

She sprang up and flew around the room preparing the meal while Pierre rested on the settle, watching every move. Like a bird she darted from stove to table and then back to him, where she paused for a moment, perched on his knee to kiss first one tired smiling eye and then the other.

STRAND THEATRE, LYNN

Bebe Daniels, who scored a notable hit in Cecil B. DeMille's "Why Change Your Wife" and is now a star in her own right, will have stellar honors on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday's program at the Strand theatre, Lynn, in her new Paramount-Artcraft production, "The 14th Man." Associated with her will be Robert Warwick, heavy-weight Walter Hiers and light-weight Kid McCoy. The story has strong heart appeal and is beautifully photographed. Elaine Hammerstein will appear in a clever dual role in "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes" and Ford Sterling with Marie Prevost and a host of other Mack Sennett entertainers will be seen in a laugh-making interpretation of "Fresh from the City."

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the widely advertised story of old Spain, with its wonderful color and mystery, "The World and His Wife," will be featured with Alma Rubens as the shining star.

OLYMPIA THEATRE, LYNN

Tabulations of the divorce records of New York County, taking in the cases which are for separation or other suits in which the wrecking of married life is the goal sought, show that the one greatest reason for discord among husbands and wives is jealousy. This does not mean that there is no cause underlying the action when it reaches the court but that the testimony in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred shows that the first rift in the clouds of happiness came through unfounded jealousy by one party to the marriage contract. Best way is "Don't Ever Marry."

Jealousy has its humorous side to those not affected. Innocent escapades or predicaments which cause friction between married couples furnish most of the humor of the world, and it is a delightful humor as Marshall Neilan shows in his latest production for the screen "Don't Ever Marry."

"Don't Ever Marry" will be the attraction at the Olympia theatre, Lynn, three days beginning next Monday, in addition to an extraordinary, splendid vaudeville program.

TONY SARG will put on a special performance for children tomorrow (Saturday) morning, at 10.30, at Horticultural hall, Manchester. The puppets will give the following one-act playlets: (1) "Coco, the Musical Clown;" (2) "Greta and Her Little Dog Fido;" (3) "The Great Indian Juggler;" (4) "The Music Lesson" (Professor Larkspur, Miss Lucy, Tippytoes, the Butler); (5) "Aisha, the Great Oriental Dancer;" (6) "Leo, the Tamed Lion;" (7) "A Night in Delhi" (Macmuh, Smoke, the Tomtom Player, the Snake); (8) "A Strange Dream."

ARITHMETIC is supposed to be a matter-of-fact study, but the school arithmetics now in use are full of romance. They need immediate revision if this most practical and important branch of learning is to be kept in touch with the realities of life.

For example, what respect can a modern boy or girl have for a textbook which propounds so absurd a problem as the following:

If a dozen eggs cost 27 cents, how many may be bought for $1.39?

Or this:

If a quart of milk at 6 cents a quart produces four ounces of butter, what will be the profit on five pounds of butter at 35 cents a pound?

Or this:

If five men, working ten hours a day, earn a total of $75 in six days, how much will seven men working eleven hours a day earn in three days?

An arithmetic that was up-to-date would contain problems like the following:

If gasolene costs 28 cents a gallon and silk shirts $13 apiece, at what rate must a bricklayer be paid, working eight hours a day, in order to support his wife and three children, keep the family flivver running and buy two new shirts a month?—Chicago Evening Post.

MARBLEHEAD and its vicinity has about 100 children working in units for the Children's hospital in Boston. Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield and Mrs. Chester L. Dane called the meeting of the children in the Unitarian church, Marblehead. Mrs. Cummings, of Boston, addressed them. Leaders of some of the units include Miss Martha Houser, Miss Loraine Leeson, Miss Constance Dane and Miss Frances Kemble. Units of very young children are making scrap books. Some interesting events are being planned so that the units can raise their desired amount

The 'Ancient Anchor' tea room held in the Upton playhouse by Marion Upton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Upton, of Marblehead, has closed, after making $33 for the Children's hospital. Marion was assisted by Constance Dane and Fanny Curtis. Some of the girls are now in camp.

"JUNIOR BREEZES" department is planned primarily for the "younger set," between the ages of fourteen and eighteen. Of course, there will be an item now and then about your little brothers and sisters of the tiny "youngest set." But you older ones are specially in mind when we set up news for this department.

And won't you help us by contributing a poem, a story, a joke, a travel letter, or something? We could devote the following page or the one preceding this to your stories.

We hear of you translating French stories, writing poems and original stories and contributing to St. Nicholas. Now let us not forget our home "Junior Breezes."

CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL work in Ipswich is progressing. A benefit for this Boston hospital is a sale today and tomorrow at the Rowley Powley tea house, Rowley Common. Among the young folk interested are Elizabeth Fenno, Sally Dodge, Esther Proctor, Eleanor Mason, Julia Doughty, Margaret Thayer and Theodora and Anne Beekman Ayer.

Luck is not what life is made of. Put p before luck, p-luck, pluck, and you have the essence of life, the thing that makes it worth while.—DR. SAMUEL A. ELIOT.

THE two athletic sons of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Shuman, of Marblehead Neck, Masters Arthur and Francis, ages respectively 14 and 12 years, are very enthusiastic contestants in all of the water sports of Marblehead this season, and both boys bid fair to win many honors for themselves during the summer. Master Arthur, as skipper of his boat, "The Lilian," of the Duxbury Bay Bird class, has already won several prizes in the races arranged by the Corinthian Yacht club, and Master Francis won second prize the past week in the Midget Swim at the club's annual carnival of water sports.

POLO ponies are ridden by many young folk over Hamilton way. Arthur Mason, who trains over the country, is their and sells polo ponies all teacher. Mr. Mason is constantly training ponies for the Myopia Hunt club and one of his best ones has just gone to New Jersey.

Nevertheless Mr. Mason finds time to teach Miss Ellen and Miss Charlotte Taintor, of "Barberry Hill Farm," Topsfield; Miss Berry, also of Topsfield; and Cornelius Crane and his sister, Miss Florence Crane, Ipswich.

Swimming events tomorrow at 3.15 at the North Shore swimming pool, Magnolia, include features among the pupils of Jack Wallace. There will be various swims, diving, plunging and underwater swimming.

THE GLORY OF THE NORTH SHORE is the woodlands that crown the ridge of hills that skirt the coast and which in many places go down to the very edge of the water. The destruction of these wooded areas would be an incalculable loss to our shore. Years would have to pass before there would be a second growth to replace the destroyed forests. Consequently, care will be required to prevent their destruction. The state has made laws that will help keep down the risk of fires. State fire wardens have been appointed and they are bringing to their trust the experience of many years. The coöperation of summer visitors is desirable, as well as the helpful interests of those who live on the Shore throughout the year. There is a temptation to build fires in the open air to prepare out-door picnic lunches. The pleasure is innocent enough and an open air meal is a great out-door treat. Yet this innocent diversion has been the cause of many destructive forest fires. Campers and picnic parties have not put fires out properly, and hours after, woodland fires have broken out and done great damage. Even careful campers have been deceived, for fires have been put out by the picnickers, but unfortunately the undergrowth on the forest floor may have become ignited and slowly burned, after the nature of a slow match, and while the original fire may be extinguished, yet under the forest floor there may be an undergrowth, slowly burning many feet away and out of sight. Now the state of Massachusetts forbids the building of fires out-of-doors during the summer season and the penalties will prove inconvenient and humiliating to well-intentioned vacation parties. Permits may be obtained from fire wardens for open-air fires properly supervised. Every man who is called upon to aid in putting out a forest fire is under heavy penalties if he refuses the service demanded by a properly authorized officer. Laws are helpful, but more may be accomplished by the hearty coöperation of everyone. The laws express the feeling of the people of Massachusetts, and everyone—vacation seekers and permanent residents—should use every precaution to prevent the destruction of the wonderful woods that have proven so valuable. The prosperity and the beauty of the Shore is dependent upon the protection of the wooded areas of the district.

THERE ARE MANY ATTRACTIVE opportunities on the North Shore to enjoy the unusual beaches, the woodland roads and the quiet lakes with their wooded shores. The nature lover may have his opportunity. The student of history also has a privilege that should not be lost. The story of Plymouth and Provincetown are well-known and are being read this year with renewed interest. The North Shore, too, is rich in historical associations from Boston to Rockport. A lifetime would be required to thoroughly study the historic annals of the interesting towns from Cambridge to Ipswich. The best anyone can do is to undertake to become familiar with the story of the village or town or city where he has established his summer or permanent residence. In the center of the district, Salem, the Essex Institute has been established and many relics have been gathered, including the treasured volumes which are preserved. The city of Beverly has an historical society which maintains an historic old house with many relics of old days that are being carefully preserved. There is an opportunity in Essex county to ferret out historical records which will delight the antiquarian; and to read early American history that will entrance the student of history; and historic towns, cities, memorials and institutes that will give pleasure to the transient visitor. But, he who views old treasures with the careless eyes of a passing tourist, fails to gain the full enjoyment which the study of the history of the Shore can reveal. It is pleasant to visit old shrines of the early days, but the searching of records, the ferreting out of old relics and tracing of old family history will yield great opportunities for pleasure. It will be a pleasant summer to him who quietly reads the story of the village or town wherein he has established his residence. Know the history of the stalwart men and noble women who settled and lived on the Shore!

THE INTERNATIONAL YACHT RACE is over and again the American yacht won. Sir Thomas Lipton made a great sportsman's effort to lift the cup, and failed. The races this year have lacked many of the thrilling experiences of other years. Many factors have contributed—the loss of one race by the break in the rigging, the abandonment of races because of too much or the lack of wind, and the drifting matches over a considerable period of time, in some of the races. The last race, however, had the interest of all, for with two races to the credit of each the last would decide whether the cup would pass from America to the Old World. Lipton has been a good loser, a sportsman to the last. His comment on the race is characteristic. If America should have lost by reason of poor seamanship, unworthy design or a poor crew, there is no one that the American people would have preferred to have been the victor than Sir Thomas Lipton. There is satisfaction, however, in knowing that the races were really decisive. Sir Thomas Lipton acknowledges that "We all did our best, skipper, designer and crew, and we have been beaten fair and square. I have been treated throughout with the greatest fairness and sportsmanship by Americans, and I am taking home the very best memories of the contest. I will wait next year to give some one else a chance to challenge and then I will challenge again myself. I have no excuses to offer; the Resolute is the best boat." So another Shamrock—No. 5—will come overseas to contest in 1922. The race has been won and great credit is due to Capt. C. F. Adams for his skill and discipline. His ability undoubtedly was the deciding factor in the race. To him the credit should go unstintedly from the people of America.

THE WAR CLOUDS HAVE PASSED over, but the suffering that has been caused is still being borne by those who have had loved ones killed in the war. The state of Massachusetts has appointed a commission whose task it is to collect such information as it is able concerning the graves of the honored dead of Massachusetts, in France and in Germany. Massachusetts does well in trying to give such comfort as the information will afford to the bereaved. The graves of the men of Massachusetts are to be photographed. There is a larger task ahead of them in identifying those from Massachusetts who may be among the unidentified dead. The commission will also make photographs of the last stand which each warrior made, and arrange records of the last few days' service of every Massachusetts man who fell in the conflict. Massachusetts cannot and will not do less for her noble dead. The purpose is a high one, but the detailed work involved in the plan will require intensive work of the most exacting character. The first task, naturally is the preparation of an accurate list of the names of the men of Massachusetts who are buried in France or in Germany. Individuals and organizations should coöperate with the commission so that an accurate list of the honored dead may be made. The Memorial War commission, at Room 471, State House, Boston, should be notified by individuals having relatives buried in the war zone. Only by the coöperation of all of our people will it be possible to do this important work accurately.

The Address Made by Governor Calvin Coolidge upon accepting the nomination of the Republican party at Northampton was in keeping with his previous record. The speech was direct, clearly expressed, and did not bury ideas under a cloak of words. There was no mistaking the positions which he was taking. One quality of the address is pleasing to his constituency and that is temperateness of his criticism of the opposing party and of President Wilson. He did attack the autocratic tendency of the organized forces of the other party, but placed his argument upon a high plane. His plea for a return to the constitutional administration of our government goes to the heart of the present issues.

"The government of the nation is in the hands of the people, when it is administered in accordance with the spirit of the constitution which they have adopted and ratified, and which measures the powers they have granted to their public officers in all its branches, where the functions and duties of the three coördinate branches, executive, legislative, judicial, are separate and distinct and neither one directly or indirectly exercises any of the functions of either of the others. Such a practice and such a government under the constitution of the United States it is the purpose of our party to re-establish and maintain. All authority must be exercised by those to whom it is constitutionally entrusted, without dictation, and with responsibility only to those who have bestowed it, the people.

"The property of the nation is in the hands of the people when it is under their ownership and control. It is true that the control of a part of the property taken for war purposes has been returned, but there hangs over private enterprise still the menace of seizure, blighting in its effect, paralyzing in its result, to the public detriment. But it matters not whether property be taken by seizure, or through the process of taxation for extravagant and unnecessary expenditures, there should be an end to both operations. The reason is plain. Ultimately the control of the resources of the people is control of the people. Either the people must own the government or the government will own the people. To sustain a government of the people there must be maintained a property of the people. There can be no political independence without economic independence.."

The spirit of the people is with Coolidge in his utterance and when the election returns are in, the Republican party will have been returned to power because the people of the nation have asserted their will and determined upon a government by law and not by persons.

The Newspapers and journals of our country are large factors in our national life. They are the agencies that publish the news, deciding what the people shall read. The standards of our journals are higher than ever before. Now a newspaper man has been chosen as a candidate for the presidency by one of the parties and will probably be elected. He had a vision of the responsibilities of a newspaper to a community by the standards which he set for his men. Each was instructed: "To remember that there are two sides to every question. Get both, be truthful; get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable, but strive for accuracy. I would rather have one story exactly right than a hundred half wrong. Be decent, be fair, be generous. There is good in everybody. Bring out the good in everybody and never needlessly hurt the feelings of anybody. In reporting a political gathering give the facts, tell the story as it is, not as you would like to have it. Treat all parties alike. If there is any political influence to be used leave it to the editorial columns. Treat all religious questions reverently. If it can be avoided, never bring ignominy to an innocent man or child in telling of the misdeeds or misfortunes of a relative. Do not wait to be asked, but do without being asked. Above all, never let a 'dirty' word or suggestive story get into type. I want this paper conducted so that it can go into any home without destroying the innocence of any child." This is a newspaper creed that Warren G. Harding gave to every worker on his paper. The ideal is a good one and reveals the purpose and the vision of the nominee. Little did he realize when he formulated those instructions that they would be published all over the land later in his campaign period.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Nahant, has interested himself in the heroic young man, who, single-handed, captured two hundred and fifty-six Germans on the Soissons front in France in July, 1918. Sergeant Hercules Korgis, who lives on the southern edge of the North Shore not many miles from Senator Lodge's own home, has enjoyed a reputation which his heroic service in France has won for him. The War Department has awarded him a Distinguished Service Medal. The medal will show young Korgis that the American people appreciate the service which he rendered. The incident was one of the most spectacular individual feats of the war. The touch of humor in the success of one man against so many, brought not only a cheer, but a laugh from his comrades when the coup had been executed. Our government is tardy in its award of decorations and too much energy and diplomacy are required to see justice accorded to worthy heroes. If Korgis had been a Frenchman in a French army he would have been decorated on the field shortly after the incident, and by one of his officers. The French have a system of making awards that inspires enthusiasm withal. The awards never can go amiss, for the companions of the man will never overestimate an act of bravery, and when such an award is made it is more usually just than unjust. Korgis deserves his medal of honor. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was as attentive to the details of his great office as ever, but the award is rather tardy. How much better it would have been if that decoration could have gone to him while in service with his associates! Changes are slow in army customs, but eventually the American army must modify its rules, and adjust itself to the more expeditious rules of the French army, in this respect, at least.

The Addison Gilbert Hospital, of Gloucester, has made an enviable record of scervice to the community which it serves, that merits the investments of money, time and talent. For many years the institution has been healing the sick, restoring to health and giving comfort and alleviating the pain of those who have suffered. The need of a new wing to care for the maternity ward has been a long-felt want, that should now be realized. No one who appreciates the value and service of a good hospital can understand why the institution should lack for funds for the new wing. The money should be forthcoming, for fifty thousand dollars cannot be better invested than in providing a community with a thoroughly equipped maternity hospital. So, summer people and the permanent residents are rallying to the aid of the institution. The summer resident who said of the work and the campaign—"we must not forget the real community spirit, and as we receive so we must give; when a city or a town with its citizens is giving to us, to make our summer abiding place pleasant and beneficial, it is our duty to meet them in some way with our good will and our contribution"—has caught and reflected the spirit of the North Shore. It is only as the residents of the Shore coöperate in every good work that such enterprises can be maintained. The esprit de corps of the North Shore is remarkable in this respect, for year after year families have returned to the district, so that it has become as much home, as the city abiding place. To many, the North Shore is home, and the place in the city, a convenience, during the harsh winter weather. The binding of the people together in work for a common cause is worthy of the spirit of the district. The maternity hospital is only another incident in the life of the dstrict that will reveal the community spirit of our Shore.

THE ADDRESS MADE by the Republican candidate, Warren G. Harding, in accepting the nomination, was admirably conceived, carefully prepared and satisfactory in every particular, except one, and that, the League of Nations. He failed to make a definite and intelligible attack upon the present form of the proposed League of Nations and failed to present a formal plan that he could and would champion. He avoided an issue and his address was weakened by that fact. The Democratic party is making a vigorous effort to draw lines upon the issue and it would have been an advantage to the Republican party to have eliminated the question they have tried to raise to the dignity of the deciding factor in the campaign this year. The Democratic party has a slight advantage in having a definite program to defend while Harding has failed to give the opponents, or proponents of the League of Nations, a clear idea of where he stands. He states clearly enough that he believes in a concert of the nations for an arranged peace; but he fails to present a program that he will champion. The issue is not a negligible one, even if the Republican party is unwilling to make it the decisive issue in the campaign. It would have been better, perhaps, if concessions had been made and the League of Nations plan effectively eliminated from the campaign. Harding's undecisive attitude has done no harm, nor good. It is evidently his studied purpose to leave himself free to act in the future. There may be an advantage in maintaining a neutral position that will not alienate the opponents or proponents of any form of a concert of the powers. A skillfully arranged position may be a diplomatic position to assume, yet in the long run the American people admire plain speaking, and honest errors often win more votes than naive political manoeuvering for a position.

Breezy Briefs

Should the Suffragettes give credit where credit is due—and we think they will—there will be no question with which party they will cast their vote at the coming election. Here is what we have reference to: State legislatures which have ratified the amendment, Republican 29, Democratic 6. Legislatures rejecting the amendment, Republican 1, Democratic 7. Governors calling special sessions to ratify amendment, Republican 16, Democratic 9. These are plain statements of facts which speak louder than words during a Presidential campaign.

GOLDEN THOUGHTS

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God—that somehow, true and just
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp—better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not,
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best,
Nor ever murmurs at his humbler lot;
But, with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler. He alone is great
Who by life heroic conquers fate.

5 The hospital provides help for all. Poor patients receive full benefits of the hospital facilities as well as the rich. Last year it treated 1432 cases, of which 409 were free patients and 111 paid only partial fees. You would be unwilling to see these people suffer from lack of care.

6 The hospital provides expert care not possible in the homes. The home cannot provide the facilities for treating surgical cases or serious cases of illness. The expense and lack of accommodations frequently prohibits the employment of nurses in the homes.

7 The hospital places the doctor in a strategic position. It may be that the X-ray machine will instantly tell the doctor the source of your trouble, when without its aid, diagnosis would be uncertain. This is only one of many instances where the resources of the hospital help the doctor to save the patient.

MEMORIAL WINDOW DEDICATED TO WORLD WAR VETERANS

Sacred Heart Church, Manchester, Honors Heroes — Special Service

"Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord. From henceforth now, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; for their works follow them."—Apoc. 14:13.

A Memorial Window erected in the Sacred Heart church, Manchester, in honor of those from the Sacred Heart parish who answered the call of their country in the late war, was dedicated Sunday, July 25, at the 10.30 o'clock high mass. The service was most impressive and was attended by a congregation which taxed to the utmost the seating capacity of the auditorium.

Over thirty soldiers and sailors in uniform attended the memorial service in a body and occupied a section of the church reserved for them.

Solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Francis J. Kiley.

The sermon of the morning was delivered by Rev. John T. O'Brien, of Sharon, who was formerly associated with Rev. W. George Mullin, at St. Peter's church, in Lowell. Fr. O'Brien delivered a masterly and scholarly address, closely holding the constant attention of his hearers. He spoke of the loyalty and patriotism of the men who served in the World war, mentioning particularly those from the Sacred Heart parish, and gave in a most delicate and fine way a tribute to those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Salient points of Fr. O'Brien's address included the idea of one church, a holy church, a church everlasting and the Catholic teachings as to patriotism.

He said in part: "The Church must be holy. It is true that within its fold there is today a Peter who will deny and a Judas who will betray, but the church must continue to endure.

"The Church of Christ stands forth as beacon lights along the pathway of history. She, alone, stands while nations and principalities have tottered and fallen.

"The Catholic church teaches patriotism. She teaches that the country which protects us in time of peace, giving us the opportunity of enjoying the privileges of worship, is entitled to our service in time of war, and if need be, she is entitled to our lives in the defense of the cause for which she is fighting.

"In all the storms which have passed over our country—in 1776, in the Civil war of 1860, and the World war of recent date—our men fought for such a land and such a flag as ours. It was for this that the men of our parish left their homes, and in the trenches, 'mid shot and shell, they gave their best for us.

"The American soldier rose above love of self, rose to love of honor and country. The patriots of the World war fought, bled and died that their ancestors at Saratoga and Gettysburg might not be dishonored.

"Today we dedicate this beautiful tribute to them. We write their names high on the scrolls of this church."

The blessing of the window was by Rev. W. George Mullin, pastor of the Sacred Heart church. Fr. Mullin spoke of the memorial window as a fitting tribute to the World war heroes, and thanked all who in any way had assisted in making it possible.

Among the visiting priests were Monsignor Christopher McGrath, Somerville; Rev. Albert C. Mullin, Somerville; Rev. Nicholas Walsh, Beverly Farms; Rev. Wm. Dwyer, Gloucester; Rev. James Downey, Beverly Farms; Rev. Charles J. Galligan, Lowell; Rev. James Doherty, Rockport; Rev. John F. Burns, South Bos-

Special music for the memorial service was furnished by a choir from Lowell: James E. Donnelly, baritone; James King, tenor; Miss Frances Tighe, soprano; Mrs. Nano Gallagher Leahy, contralto. Miss Emily Ferriera, of Manchester, was soloist. The organists were Mrs. Daniel O'Brien, of Manchester, and Miss Gertrude Quigley, of Lowell.

The roll of honor of the Sacred Heart church includes the following: Frank B. Amaral, Michael J. Coughlin and Joseph McNeary, killed in action; Joseph R. Graves, William Greene, Frank Sweeney, Henry J. Henneberry, Nelson Wood, Charles Marsh, Lewis J. Fritz, Joseph Cogan, Patrick Rowley, Royal A. For the past six months Fr. Mullin has been in charge of all arrangements for the memorial window. He attended to the matter of procuring the $3,300 necessary for this work, and has devoted a large amount of his time to the successful completion of this handsome and artistic window, which will stand for many years as an appropriate tribute from an appreciative people to their heroes of the World war. Subscriptions were received from residents of the parish, summer people, and also many unsolicited contributions from Protestants, who were interested and desired to have a part in this memorial.

Frank B. Amaral, one of Manchester's World War Heroes, for Whom Legion is Named.

The inscription is from Jer. 33:9: "And it shall be to me a name, and a joy, and a praise, and a gladness before all the nations of the earth."

The new memorial window partakes of the Gothic design of the building with unusual fidelity. A window is, frankly, only a detail, and as such must forever remain subordinate to the architecture of the church as a whole. To function properly in the general scheme it must appear, not as an opening, but to maintain the flatness and solidity of the wall; no perspective, no modelling; a flat, rigid, conventional piece of decoration.

Simple as is the rule, and definite and fixed as are the boundaries, ecclesiastical architecture in America violates, all too frequently, these fundamentals of a once glorious art. However, here we find these elements carefully considered, and in studying the window, we must connect it with the future of the church as well as with the present. It must be considered so as to harmonize with the future altar and with all contemplated developments of the entire church.

The story of the glass itself is told by the central and dominant figure of the Sacred Heart with Saint Mary Alacoque, to whom our Lord appeared, and Venerable Claude de la Colombière, who instituted the devotion to the Sacred Heart; these within the circle of the world; below, the faithful in prayer and thanksgiving on opposite sides; the arms of the Pope and Cardinal O'Connell; and above everything the heavenly host with Michael, Gabriel, Uriel and Raphael, — the whole composition blended in glorious harmonies of blue and ruby and gold.

The glass was executed by Walter G. Ball under the direction of Matthew Sullivan, architect.

WANTED—BOARD FOR THE SUMMER

For a vacation we would go
To some place where the rates are low,

Where flies in morning do not bite
Nor skeeters sing around at night.

Where we could rest our weary dome
Upon a bed like that at home.

Where we could get fresh garden stuff,
Where chickens are not old and tough.

And for a lake we also wish
Where we'd be sure of catching fish.

A cool delightful charming spot
Where it is never sizzzling hot,

Where we would hear not, night or morn
The tooting of an auto horn.

Where dogs would not bay at the moon
Or phonographs emit a tune.

Where we could drink from bubbling springs
And not absorb tadpoles and things.

Where ev'ry road was arched with trees,
Where one could always find a breeze.

Where one could on a picnic go,
Where poison ivy does not grow.

To find such place as we've in view
We've looked the catalogues all through,

Alas, we must say with regret
We haven't found the place as yet.

Harry W. Purington left Wednesday for Norway, Me., for the rest of the week.

Henry O. Allen, of South Orange, N. J., was on for a few days' visit the first of the week.

Mrs. E. H. Wilcox and two daughters arrived home from their visit at Franklin, Vt., last Saturday.

M. Talbot Hoare is enjoying a three weeks' vacation from his duties at the Old Colony Trust Co., Boston.

Miss Elsie F. Holden, of Boston, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Chadwick, Morse Court.

George E. Willmonton enjoyed a motor trip with a party of friends to Albany, N. Y., over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Prest are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a baby girl at their home on Brook st., early Sunday morning.

Joseph Cawthorne met with a near fatal accident last Friday while driving his laundry delivery car in Beverly, the machine was struck and overturned by an electric car and Mr. Cawthorne was thrown into the street, receiving a broken wrist as well as minor bruises.

Mrs. Julius F. Rabardy, of Central st., passed the 87th milestone in her journey of life last Tuesday. Mrs. Rabardy quietly celebrated the occasion Sunday at her home with a party of a few of her friends. She is one of the town's oldest ladies and during the past few days has been receiving many messages of congratulation and best wishes.

Manchester Red Men's Picnic a Success

Conomo Tribe of Red Men and Masconomo Council, Degree of Pocahontas, of Manchester, held their annual picnic and outing at Tuck's Point, Manchester, last Saturday. In spite of lowering skies which threatened showers, the affair was well attended and proved highly successful.

One of Frank H. Crombie's famous clam chowders was served at noon, which together with basket lunches made an ideal picnic dinner.

During the day there were various sporting events in charge of the committee, resulting as follows:

Spoon race for ladies, won by Miss Ruth Brooks; for girls, won by Miss Annie Brooks; for boys, won by Nat. Andrews.

Potato race for girls, won by Miss Annie Brooks, Miss Dorothy Sjorlund, second; for boys, won by Russell Peters.

Running race for older boys, won by John Babcock; for younger boys, won by Wm. Peters.

Wheelbarrow race for ladies, won by Mrs. Wm. Roberts; for boys, won by Roland Brooks.

Driving nail contest for ladies, won by Mrs. Charles E. Bell; for boys, won by Roland Brooks.

Throwing baseball for ladies, won by Mrs. Wm. Roberts.

LIBRARY NOTES

New Books in Manchester Public Library

Many good novels were published in the years 1910 to 1915. A number of works of fiction much in demand in 1909 remained popular during 1910. Among these, "The Silver Horde," "Truxton King," "A Certain Rich Man," "The Goose Girl" and "The Danger Mark" may be mentioned.

The "Rosary," by Florence Barclay, was probably read by more people in the United States than any other novel during 1910. This author's second work of fiction — "The Mistress of Shenstone" — was also published that year. At this time the author of "The Inner Shrine" brought out "The Wild Olive" and this good story was much read. Another very attractive work that gave much pleasure to novel readers was "A Modern Chronicle," by Winston Churchill. A charming little story was "Little Sister Snow," by Francis Little, author of "The Lady of the Decoration."

"John Marvel, Assistant," "Lord Loveland Discovers America," "The Kingdom of Slender Swords," "Nathan Burke," "The Foreigner," "Lady Merton, Colonist," "It Can Never Happen Again," "The Man Outside," "The Calling of Dan Matthews" and "The Illustrious Prince" are other good stories.

According to "The Bookman" the three novels most in demand in 1911 were "Molly Make-Believe," "The Broad Highway" and "The Prodigal Judge." "Queed" and "The Long Roll" were much called for.

Other well-known stories were "The Rules of the Game," "Miss Gibbie Gault," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Ne'er Do-Well," "Max," "Mary Carey," "The Miller of Old Church," "The Harvester" and "The Iron Woman."

During 1912 "The Harvester," published the year before, outdistanced all other competitors. It, with three others of the 1911 list—"The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Iron Woman" and "Queed"—were the four books most in demand. Two other attractive stories were "The Street Called Straight" and "The Melting of Molly."

Others were "Money Moon," "Tante" and "The Arm Chair at the Inn." "The Following of the Star" and "The Postern Gate," both by Miss Barclay, author of the "Rosary," were published this year.

The three books most read in 1912 were "V. V.'s Eyes," "The Heart of the Hills" and "The Inside of the Cup." "The Valiants of Virginia" and "The Amateur Gentleman" were two others much liked.

A large number of novels came out in 1913, a few of the best being "The Net," "Mr. Pratt's Patients," "The Mating of Lydia," "The Southerners," "Pollyanna," "The Happy Warrior," "T. Tembarom" and "Stella Maris."

The greatest success of 1914 was "Pollyanna." Next came "Penrod," "The Inside of the Cup," "T. Tembarom" and "Laddie."

There were many others, such as "The Eyes of the World," "Diane of the Green Van," "The Victim," "The Custom of the Country," "The Light of Western Stars," "Cap'n Dan's Daughter," "The Twenty-Fourth of June," "Bambi" and "Saturday's Child."

The six best sellers for 1915 were—"The Turmoil," "A Far Country," "Pollyanna Grown Up," "Michael O'Halloran," "The Eyes of the World" and "K."

There were many other good novels in 1915, but only a few will be mentioned—"Kent Knowles," "Quahoag," "The Pastor's Wife," "Angelo's Business," "Thankful's Inheritance," "Contrary Mary," "Felix O'Day" and "The Story of Julia Paige."

Next week we hope to have some new books. If they do not come in time there will be a note on some books other than fiction published 1910 to 1915. —R. T. G.

TWO HUNDRED SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS A TOWN

Twenty-Five Years Ago Manchester Celebrated Her 250th Anniversary

TWO hundred seventy-five years ago this month — July — the Town of Manchester was founded. It is a matter of historical interest to note that twenty-five years ago on the 18th of July the town celebrated its 250th anniversary with an appropriate observance. An elaborate program was carried out at that time and during the day the town was the mecca of many thousands of visitors.

There are many people living in Manchester today who remember that celebration. It was indeed a red letter day in the history of the town. The night before the celebration there was a mammoth bonfire, nearly 500 barrels being used, forming a pile 40 feet in the air. The blaze was seen for miles around, and it is estimated that fully 5,000 people witnessed the event.

For days the business men and people of the town had been decorating their houses and stores. The town was gaily bedecked in holiday attire when at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 18th of July, 1895, several bands of "Indians" assembled to assist in the observance.

Hansome columns of Doric design were in position on Beach st., and were prettily entwined with evergreen. At the Town hall there were two Doric columns, representing white marble. Historical pictures of an allegorical nature were displayed in front of the building. The national colors, flags and bunting were everywhere in great profusion.

"The Same Tides Flow," the famous Manchester hymn composed by N. B. Sargent, was sung that morning for the first time. Hon. Henry C. Leach was presiding officer and Lieut. Gov. Wolcott was orator of the day.

One of the leading features of the day took place at 9 o'clock in the forenoon when Great Chief Masconomo and his braves extended a reception to Governor Winthrop and party, who had come up the river on the good ship "Arbella." Indian maidens treated the white visitors to wild strawberries, after which the pipe of peace was smoked, followed by the peace dance.

A band concert and banquet were the features at noon. Alfred S. Jewett, chairman of the board of selectmen, gave the address of welcome. There were addresses by Lieut. Gov. Walcott, Richard H. Dana and Rev. D. F. Lamson.

One of the largest and best parades which has ever been seen in Manchester was presented in the afternoon. It was divided into three sections: Military, historical and floral. The several floats and exhibitions were gorgeous and most beautiful.

After nightfall, the town presented an appearance of a fairyland. The electrical displays and fireworks were of a first-class order. In the harbor there was an electric fountain which proved fascinating to thousands, the brilliant electric lights chasing each other in ever-changing design. The flagpole on the Common was decorated with lights and Japanese lanterns. A profusion of fireworks was set off during the evening, bringing to a close one of the greatest days in the history of the town of Manchester.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN LYNN

MANCHESTER WOMAN DIES OF INJURIES — PATTERSON FAMILY RECEIVE SEVERE WOUNDS

Mrs. Annie Woodbury, of Bridge st., Manchester, died yesterday at the Lynn hospital as the result of an auto accident in Lynn, Wednesday night. Mrs. Wm. S. Patterson, of Proctor st., Manchester, is at the hospital on the danger list, although it is reported that the chances of her recovery are favorable.

Wm. S. Patterson is also in the hospital, having received severe abrasions of face and head. His two sons, Chas., aged 10, and Andrew, aged 9, received lacerations of head, face and hands. A nephew, John Smith, aged 10 years, of Wellesley, received cuts on face and body.

Mrs. Woodbury was thrown from the car and three ribs on the left side were fractured. She received cuts on face and head, requiring several stitches, and she suffered from shock. Due to her age, nearly 70 years, and the extent of her injuries, Mrs. Woodbury was unable to recover, and passed away Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The accident occurred at the junction of Summer and Commercial sts., Lynn. Mr. Patterson was driving down Commercial st. towards the Revere boulevard and had started to cross Summer st. when the crash came. When he reached the corner and did not see any vehicle approaching, he started to cross Summer st. at a speed of about 15 miles per hour. An automobile fire truck, responding to an alarm, dashed out of the Commercial st. fire station at a speed said to be 35 to 40 miles per hour when it hit the Manchester car.

The truck struck the left side of the touring car, turned it over and pushed it 30 feet ahead over the pavements. The touring car finally rolled off the side of the fire truck, which crossed the street and struck another car that was standing there.

The Patterson auto was badly wrecked, the entire front being stove in and the engine driven back towards the rear. The top was torn to pieces.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Woodbury will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Crowell Memorial chapel. Rev. F. W. Manning will officiate.

Mrs. Woodbury was born in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, 69 years ago. For 41 years she had lived in Manchester, where she had a host of friends and acquaintances who mourn her tragic death. Of a sweet and lovable nature, she will be greatly missed in the home. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frank G. Cheever, of Bridge st., Manchester, and Mrs. Etta Mead, of Wellesley; also one granddaugher, Miss Helen Cheever.

There will be a dance at Town hall, Manchester, next Friday evening, August 6, given by the local post of the American Legion.

MANCHESTER

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Reid (nee Rust) of Allen Court have gone to Fitchburg to live, Captain Reid's business calling him there.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Winchester and son, Marshall, left last week for Kearsarge, N. H., where they will stop for several weeks. They were accompanied on the trip by Miss Dorothy Blaisdell, who also goes to Kearsarge for a vacation trip.

Miss Mary Moony, who has been coming to Manchester during the summer for a number of seasons to continue her practice as masseuse, is not here this season, as she is taking a complete rest. She will go to Canada for a month's vacation in August.

The Northeastern Massachusetts Red Men's Council meeting to be held tomorrow, Saturday, at Ferncroft Inn, will be attended by a party of the members of Conomo Tribe of Red Men, of Manchester. The program will include a banquet and other features of considerable interest to those affiliated with this order.

Are at Manchester for Vacation and Rest

"Bankers, brokers, lawyers, poets, writers, teachers, soldiers, sons of rich men—everybody in fact, who stop at the cigar counter at Thompson's Spa," says the Boston Post, "have noticed the absence of a familiar face, very much missed, and all have asked the whereabouts of 'Tom' McQuade, a good talker, a good listener, and one possessed of much knowledge of people. 'Tom' is at his home on Hamilton st., Meeting House Hill, recuperating from an operation, and expects to be on the job soon attending to the wants of his patrons."

Mr. and Mrs. McQuade and daughter are now at the Chester L. Crafts cottage, School st., Manchester, for a stay of several weeks.

AN EXCITING GAME

Manchester Odd Fellows Defeat Consort Lodge, of Beverly

After leading their opponents by the score of 6 to 1 and seeing them gradually crawl up until the score was tied in the final inning of playing, the Manchester Odd Fellows succeeded in gaining two more runs and finally defeated Consort lodge, of Beverly, 8 to 6. The game was played Tuesday evening on the Brook st. playgrounds, Manchester, and was one of the most exciting and interesting of the "Sunset league" series.

The third inning and the sixth were the most entertaining. In the third, Beverly filled the bases, due to two errors and one pass. Noyes, pitching for Magnolia lodge of Manchester, struck out three men and retired the visitors without a score. Noyes relieved Gordon Cool in the 6th with one out and the score a tie. This time he struck out the first two to face him and enabled the Manchester fans to breathe easier.

With the score 6-6 and darkness rapidly falling over the field, the local players combined a couple of hits and a pitcher's error, making them count for two tallies and the game was won.

In the 3rd W. Walen and Standley each made a pretty two-bagger which were good for runs.

For the visitors Spiller starred at short, Brown hit safely twice in three times up, and Brown and Eldredge each scored twice in three times at bat.

Russia Cement Co. Defeats Manchester, 6-2

Manchester played the Russia Cement Co., of Gloucester, last Saturday on the Manchester grounds, and the Gloucester boys won the decision by the score of 6 to 2. Wet grounds and wet ball were responsible for costly errors.

The Manchester line-up included several new players who had not been in action together before this game. Chadwick made a couple of timely hits.

Electricians, of Gloucester, vs. Manchester Tomorrow

All roads will lead to Manchester tomorrow, Saturday, July 31, when the Manchester town team meets the Electricians, of Gloucester, in what promises to be a most interesting baseball game.

Much local interest has been aroused in Gloucester and Manchester and a large number of supporters of both teams are expected to turn out to cheer their teams on to victory.

Bets, running well into the hundreds, have already been placed with odds favoring Manchester, who will go into the game a slight favorite, but Gloucester fans are eagerly covering all money in sight and looking for more.

With a poor start at the beginning of the season the Electricians have been coming along fast in the Industrial league and promise to make a hard fight for the trophy donated by the Perkins & Corliss Co., which goes to the team winning the largest number of games.

Walter Brown, the former college star, Bill Davis, Scotty Campbell, Pat Keating and Bill McDermott, who need no introduction to North Shore baseball fans, will be in the lineup for the Electricians and some sensational playing can be looked for when this quintet gets into action.

The Manchester lineup will include: Miguel, c; Twiss or Akerley, p; Semons, 1b; "Cuppy" Gillis, 2b; Ryan, 3b; Francis, ss; Cook, lf; Chadwick, cf; Walen, rf.

Ryan, the third-sacker, is a 3-gold striper, who saw service in France and has been playing ball at Camp Devens. He is making his home in Manchester and will probably be in the local lineup for the balance of the season.

The following week, Aug. 7, Manchester will play the Charlestown Navy yard team.

The game will be called at 3 p. m.

The fire alarm sounded about 12 o'clock last night for an incipient blaze in the roof of the Knight building on Central st., occupied by the lunch room. It was not necessary to turn on the water, the fire being quenched so quickly from a fire extinguisher. It is thought the fire started from sparks from the chimney, or from somebody tossing a cigarette stub on the roof.

Last Friday evening at the Brook st. playground, Manchester, the Gloucester K. of C. baseball team defeated a Manchester team by the score of 7 to 4. The game was arranged with a view to trying out candidates for the town team to play in the exhibition game of Saturday. Mgr. Slade was present to "size up" the baseball material from which he selected the players for the following day.

"TOURISTS' SOCIAL" HELD AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

An appreciative audience enjoyed several "interesting trips" at the "Tourists' Social" held Monday evening in the vestry of the Baptist church, Manchester. The entertainment was given by the Ladies' Aid society and the proceeds will be used for church purposes.

The program opened with a cornet and piano duet by Miss Margaret Henneberry and Edward Henneberry. The first story of the evening was related by Miss Ruth Bullock, who took her hearers on a "trip" to Revere, describing particularly the soldiers' fort at that place.

Miss Beulah Rumrill played a piano solo, after which Miss Ruth Matheson read Miss Bernice Lee's account of a trip to Cape Cod. Dana Younger humorously outlined a ride on the Boston Elevated. Miss Jessie Kehoe related some experiences with seasickness while on a trip to Nova Scotia.

A visit to Maine was very interestingly told by Mrs. Edward Ayers. After another piano solo by Miss Beulah Rumrill, Mrs. Annie Heath told of a trip to her childhood home in New York city. Mrs. William Follett and Mrs. J. Davis Baker described, respectively, "Washington's Birthplace" and "The Beautiful Franciscan Monastery in Washington, D. C."

Rev. H. E. Levoy read a very amusing account of "The Dinwiddies' Wedding Journey." Mrs. Charlotte Brown was very entertaining with a story of her trip to the west.

The evening's program was concluded with a piano and cornet duet. Each number was pleasingly given and received liberal applause, making one more successful presentation of the series of entertainments being given at the Baptist church this summer.

Rev. Frederick R. Griffin, of First Unitarian church, Philadelphia, will preach Sunday at First Unitarian church, Masconomo st. Service at 10.30; communion after regular service.

The August meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congl. church will be held Thursday, Aug. 5, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with Mrs. Washburn, Masconomo street. Topic: "Rest." It is requested that the ladies who did not contribute articles for Miss Wood's Christmas tree, come prepared to aid by paying the parcel post charges on the bundle which was sent to India on Tuesday.

Baptist church, Rev. H. E. Levoy, pastor, Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock and evening at 8, Rev. E. S. Hildreth, of the American Baptist Mission at Bhaoehowfu, China, will speak. Rev. H. E. Levoy will occupy the pulpit at Calvary Baptist church in Salem as it is his custom to preach in that church once every August. This will be a fine opportunity to secure some first-hand information on China, as Rev. Mr. Hildreth is well acquainted with many of the conditions there.

LAWN PARTY AT MANCHESTER FOR SACRED HEART CHURCH

For the first time in the past three or four years the parish of the Sacred Heart church, Manchester, was favored with fair weather for its lawn party, which was held on Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week on the church grounds, School st., Manchester.

The affair was very largely attended, not only by townspeople, but by many summer visitors to Manchester and surrounding towns.

The display of fancy articles, food, vegetables, ice cream and candy was unusually good. The lawn presented, on a small scale, the appearance of a country fair grounds. The "midway" was thronged with purchasers and the various attractions grouped around the enclosure did a thriving business all the evening.

Long's orchestra furnished music for dancing. A program of motion pictures was shown out of doors, a screen and machine having been placed in position for this purpose.

The Manchester table was in charge of Mrs. Augustus Ferriera, assisted by Mrs. Philip White, Mrs. Albert French and Mrs. Ernest Dechene.

The vegetable table was in charge of Miss Teresa O'Neil, assisted by Miss Margaret Gillis and Mrs. John Ferguson.

The fish pond was in charge of Miss Ellen Long. Miss Marie Higgins was the fortune teller.

Mrs. Thomas O'Hara had charge of the Smith's Point table, and was assisted by Mrs. John Coughlin, Mrs. Cornelius Kelleher, Miss Annie White, Mrs. Frank Gavin, Mrs. Henry Bohaker, and Mrs. John McElligott.

The Manchester Cove table was in charge of Miss Katherine Buckley and Miss Teresa McDevitt.

Miss Mary Doherty presided over the West Manchester table, assisted by Mrs. Edward Neary, Mrs. Domnick Flatley, Miss Nora Lean, Miss Nellie Woll, Miss Mary Sullivan, Miss B. Mullin, Miss Margaret Haren, Miss Lucy Carroll and Miss Catherine McHugh.

Village Church Fair is Most Successful Event

The members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Village church desire to thank all who contributed in any way towards making their fair a financial success. All day Wednesday people patronized the tables that were loaded with delicious cakes, candy, flowers, aprons, and useful articles of various kinds. Several of the summer residents were most generous with their donations of money and articles for the tables, and to such generous givers is due much of the success of the fair.

Artistic and skillful hands made the auditorium of the church look especially attractive and inviting. Streamers of various colors were suspended from the electric light fixtures and fastened to the sides of the church. The tables were prettily arranged around the auditorium and in charge of the following ladies: Cake table — Mrs. Ernest Howe, Mrs. E. C. Lucas, Mrs. Wm. Wilkins, Mrs. John May; aprons —Mrs. Wm. McLean, Mrs. Fred Dunbar, Mrs. Charles Wilkinson, Mrs. Henry Butler, Jr.; candy—Mrs. Thos. Harvey; grabs—Mrs. L. Hunt, Mary Boyd and Abbie May; ice cream—Mrs. Frank Abbott; flowers—Mrs. W. R. Boyd, Mrs. Carrie Dunbar; gifts—Susie Symonds, Mrs. Charles Hoysradt; domestic—Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Mrs. Frank Dunbar, Mrs. E. L. Story, Mrs. Leon F. Foster; punch—Susan Lycett and Phyllis Lycett.

In the evening the lawn was illuminated by many electric lights and the tents on the lawn were centers of attraction for the children, who were very good patrons of the "grabs."

The day was ideal, the busy women were a merry and good-natured company, the patrons were many and generous, and those most interested in this little parish are not only grateful for donations, but are also gratified with the outcome of this, another annual fair which means so much to the village folk.

POCKET WIRELESS

Use an Umbrella, a Patent Pocketbook and Telephone

It is now possible to pick up a wireless message from any of the big stations within reasonable distance in this country with the aid of an ordinary umbrella, a patent pocketbook and a telephone.

The umbrella will act as the aerial, the pocketbook contains a miniature receiving set and, of course, the telephone must be a high resistance instrument.

It has even been possible, inventors of the pocket receiving set say, to use an ordinary bedstead as an aerial.

You must not expect with this simple installation to get in wireless touch with Paris, Berlin or Moscow, but if you want the mild excitement of picking up messages from a home station within reasonable distance you must follow these directions:

Take your umbrella with you and the pocketbook, select a nice lofty position, and having earthed one corner of the pocketbook—say to a water pipe or something equally damp and handy, hold your umbrella out at arm's length. There should also be a telephone handy, and it would be more convenient to use the headgear worn by telephone operators.

Having rigged yourself out as a human wireless station all you have to do is to listen. You will be as a rock in a wireless sea with invisible waves of understanding running down the stick of your umbrella.

The invention is the discovery of Captain H. de A. Donisthorpe, of the R. M. Radio, Ltd., of Chancery lane, W. C. It is claimed for this pocket receiving set that it is comparable in sensitiveness with the most expensive and elaborate tuner on the market.

The cost of the pocketbook is about $5.—London News.

Still, It Was Wet

He was from the southwest and had never seen the ocean before he arrived in New York. A friend invited him to one of the nearby beaches and he marveled at the size of the great Atlantic.

"No trouble about your drinking water supply runnin' short, is there?" he mused.

"Drinking water?" questioned his friend. "That water isn't fit to drink. Taste it."

So the southwesterner went up to the water's edge, scooped up a palmfull and put it to his lips. He rolled his tongue around for a moment and spat.

"Got a little alkali in it, ain't it?" he asked.

It is probable that the Beverly Farms Legion ball team will not play any more games this season. Vacations and other causes have taken away from the team some of its best players and the past few games have been played with a substitute line-up. The financial support has also been poor, not nearly enough money being collected at the games to pay expenses.

It is reported that Samuel Knight Sons Co., of Manchester, is planning to establish a coal and wood yard soon at Beverly Farms. The site is the Linehan property, so-called, on West st., which was recently reported as sold to Wm. Till. The plan, it is understood, calls for a sidetrack to the property, the locating of storage sheds and yard in the rear of the lot, the changing of the present driveway and the establishing of scales and an office building on or near the front of the lot on West st.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur V. Wallace, of Southington, Conn., have spent the past week at Beverly Farms, the guests of friends.

Mrs. Howard E. Morgan and son, Howard E. Morgan, Jr., are leaving tomorrow for a vacation period to be spent at Milton, N. H.

Wm. Nolan is another Beverly Farms young man who has recently secured a good position at the U. S. Machinery plant in Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sewall Day (Mollie Davis) have returned from their wedding trip and are housekeeping in their new home at Montserrat.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Drinkwater, Jr. (Anna Lawlor), are being congratulated on the recent arrival of a fine baby girl, their second daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Campbell and daughter, Miss Helen, have been at Kearsarge, N. H., the past week, the guests of Mrs. Mollie Lee, who is spending the summer at this popular resort.

At a recent meeting of the Beverly Republican city committee it was voted to enlarge the committee in all the wards. This is to be done as a mark of courtesy to the women, who are already becoming active in city politics. Ward 6 committee will be increased from 10 to 12 members.

Beverly Farms is the first place this side of Boston to have a special amateur radio station authorized by the government. The station is at the radio testing laboratory at 778 Hale st., and is owned and managed by Wilbur Hardy. Mr. Hardy is treasurer of the Beverly section and district superintendent of the American Radio relay league.

Mrs. Lucy E. Trow, who formerly resided for many years at Beverly Farms, died Sunday last at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ralph E. Meacom, at Medford. She was 79 years old. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Ralph E. Meacom, of Medford; Miss Ann Trow, of Beverly; a son, John H. Trow, of Centerville, Beverly; a half sister, Mrs. Ezra P. Williams, of Beverly Farms, and a brother, Luther Ober, of Beverly. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon in Beverly from the First Baptist chapel and interment was in the Beverly central cemetery.

John M. Publicover has joined the ranks of the "Henry" owners; it is a Ford sedan.

Mrs. James Emo, of Hart st., is enjoying a trip and visiting relatives at Quebec, Canada.

Miss Charlotte Metcalf has gone to Indian Point, Me., where she will spend the next two months.

Miss Ann Connolly, of Waltham, has been a guest the past week of her uncle, Gregory P. Connolly, Everett st.

A line of new granite curbstone is being installed, improving the sidewalk on the north side of Haskell st., commencing at Hart st.

Miss Carrie Davis, employed by Lee, Higginson & Co., Boston, has started on a three weeks' vacation. With her friend, Miss Mary Puttick, of Boston, she is on a trip to Chicago.

A face wall to match that recently built along the front of the St. Margaret church property is now being constructed by Gordon Dexter on the street line of the property recently purchased by him from the city of Beverly.

A second public whist party was held last evening (Thursday) in the Linehan garage, at Pride's Crossing. It was conducted by a party of young ladies for the benefit of St. Margaret's church. The party was well attended and everyone had a most enjoyable evening.

The annual summer dance for the benefit of St. Margaret's court, No. 68, M. C. O. F., not held since the years of the war, will be conducted this year, as usual. Thursday, Aug. 26, is the date selected, and the dance will be held in Neighbor's hall. Long's orchestra will furnish the music.

A Real Artist

Some of the workmen on the new Christian church buildings were complimenting Rev. Brink on his ability to help out in about any place necessary. He gracefully admitted that he was a pretty handy man, but said his skill was nothing compared to that of a stone cutter he once knew. The curious part of it was that the mason was a nigger who had only one arm.

"How does he manage it if he has only one arm?" questioned one of the men.

"Why," said Brink, "he holds his chisel between his teeth and hits himself behind the head with the hammer."—Winamac (Ind.) Democrat.

"Funny thing! My customers are all the time knocking my goods, but they come back for more, just the same."

"That's strange. What's your line?"

"Spikes and nails."

Birds are Essential to the Existence of the Earth

The earth could get along without Man, but not without Birds. Man is not essential to the earth; birds are.

Birds are the flying squadrons of Nature, doing police duty, now north, now south. They follow the seasons, not for comfort, but on duty. As summer comes, danger comes from pests, and so the birds come. As summer goes, danger recedes, and the birds go back to their southern duty.

Wherever there is an abnormal outbreak of insect life, the birds mobilize there to check it. Flying over a country they can tell by the foliage of the trees if they are needed there; withered forests tell them that the enemy has appeared in force.

Birds are the great planters of the earth; they seeded vast spaces of wilderness, and crowned the crests of rocky hills with trees. They are the guardians of our orchards and grain fields. Carnivorous birds, like eagles, vultures, crows, hawks and herons, keep the earth clean of decaying flesh that would otherwise pollute soil and water.

Whenever you look at a bird you see a most wonderful creation. It is a greater traveler and a stronger creature comparatively than you will ever be. To kill it is to affront Nature. The bird has beauty, music, fleetness, wonderful domestic skill and devotion, and these have always appealed to refined natures. To lower natures the economic appeal must also be made. Don't kill birds. If the birds were entirely to disappear tomorrow, human life would not endure long thereafter.

You don't fish for whales in creeks, but many a man thinks the world is all wrong because he does not find the Big Opportunity in a place that a big opportunity wouldn't have room to turn around in.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER

Question and Answer Department Furnishes Amusement

Running a magazine is not without its drawbacks, but running a question and answer column of an agricultural paper has nothing but the drawback if we take the word of a fellow who tried it for three days while the editor was absent. A few of the questions he answered will give you an idea of the variety:

1. Do small cows give condensed milk?—Mabel B.

No, Mabel. Condensed milk is made by trying to get a quart of milk into a pint bottle.

2. Please tell me how hash is made.—W. M.

Hash is not made. It accumulates.

3. Is it all right to feed hogs corn in the ear?—G. K.

No; put it in a trough and let them help themselves.

4. I am in love with a homely girl who works for us, but she doesn't seem to care for me, while a pretty girl with lots of money wants me to marry her. What shall I do?—Will.

Marry the one you love and send me the name and address of the other.

5. My hair is beginning to come out. What can I get to keep it in?—A. B.

A sack.

6. Please tell me how to raise a nice fat hog of about 500 pounds.—Z.

Get a derrick.

7. How can I tell when the water is the right temperature for bathing baby?—Young Mother.

If the child gets red and hollers, the water is too hot. If he gets blue and shivers, it's too cold.

8. I am forty years old, have a nice little farm, and am thinking of taking a wife. What would you advise?—Old Bach.

I would advise you to be careful about whose wife you take.

9. Our red bull is chasing me around a forty-acre field. What shall I do?—Mike F.

I don't know, but don't give up, Mike; the editor will be back in a week.—Exchange.

HORTICULTURAL HALL PICTURES

Tomorrow evening, Saturday, at Horticultural hall, Manchester, there will be a double feature program including William Farnum in "Wings of the Morning" and Shirley Mason in "Love's Harvest." Each feature picture starts at 7, 8, 9 and 10 o'clock.

Tuesday evening, Aug 3, Marguerite Clark in "Easy to Get," Jack Pickford in "In Love."

Thursday evening, Aug. 5, Zane Grey's "The Desert of Wheat," photoplay title is "Riders of the Dawn." This is a 7-reel all star production and is a winner. As this is band concert night in Manchester, the second showing of this Zane Grey feature will be at 9.30 o'clock. The program will include a Ford weekly, Pollard comedy and other reels.

Coming attractions include "The Miracle Man" and "Male and Female," both are high class features and well worth seeing.

PROFESSIONAL AFTER-DINNER SPEAKERS

I have heard that there are in existence professional after-dinner speakers who seek opportunity, men who actually train themselves for such service, memorizing anecdotes, and, like trained newspaper reporters, have on tap a little of the professional patter of all trades and all schools. They are an inevitable product of the system; like the hired social organizers at summer hotels, they must formulate new recipes for spontaneity. Perhaps, since the thing is to be done at all, men should seriously study how to do it well. But I should like my son to choose some other profession.

A colleague of mine tells me that a young man once confessed to her an ambition in this direction. "Do you think," he asked, "I might gain in fluency by practicing, as Demosthenes did, with pebbles in my mouth?"

"Yes, indeed," she answered enthusiastically; "but don't use pebbles, use Portland cement."—BURGES JOHNSON in the Atlantic Monthly.
